RAILWAYS DOOMED.

Higher Pay Swamps Small Roads.

Great Lines Must Absorb Minor Ones, Which Cannot Pay Salaries.

Switchmen's Increase of Ten Per Cent. Raises This New Problem.

Within Two Years Three Chicago Corporations Will Be Crippled.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Nov. 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Railroad men declare the doom of many railways, and a fight among larger ones for the absorption of weaker lines, confronts the financial interests of the country today as the result of the 10-per-cent. increase in wages granted switchmen by the general managers.

The prospects, it is declared, caused managers of many smaller roads to hold out against concessions. The present condition is considered responsible for anxiety in La Salle street during negotiations.

At least three Chicago roads, it is predicted, will find themselves crippled within two years by the advance promised the switchmen and the further concessions which are following to engineers, firemen and other employés.

SAILORS WANT MORE WAGES.

ALASKAN FLEET SEAMEN DEMAND MORE PAY.

Some Are Now Making More Than $100 a Month, Yet Clamor for Ten Cents an Hour Increase for Overtime—Get Better Pay Than First Mates.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SEATTLE, Nov. 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Sailors employed on the Alaska fleet will demand an increase of wages from $45 to $50 per month. At the same time they demand that a stipulation be made by the men working on the dock to receive 50 cents instead of 40 cents for overtime.

By the terms of the "overtime" agreement, it is said in shipping circles that many sailors are already making $100 a month on the Alaska run, or better wages than first mates.

SHORTER HOURS REFUSED.
STRIKE NOT THREATENED.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—President Underwood of the Erie Railroad today refused demands of a reduction of working hours by the firemen employed on that road. The firemen's demands are said to be equivalent to a 10 per cent. increase in wages. Seventeen hundred men are said to be affected.

This afternoon the Erie Railroad Company gave out a statement saying that the published stories that Erie employés were contemplating a strike have no foundation; in fact, that, so far, absolutely nothing has developed that would indicate in the slightest degree that trouble would ensue, and that the differences are being rapidly settled.

INDICTED FOR PEONAGE.
GRAVE CRUELTIES CHARGED.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

PENSACOLA (Fla.) Nov. 10.—Twelve officers and employés of the Jackson Lumber Company of Lockhart, Ala., were indicted by the United States grand jury here tonight for peonage and conspiracy to commit peonage. Three cases of peonage are charged against some of the employés, it being alleged that they went into Walton county (Fla.) and forcibly brought back to the lumber camps foreigners who had left the employ of the company and who were endeavoring to reach other towns.

Beating and ill treatment are charged in the indictments. The offenses are alleged to have occurred last July. W. S. Harlan, manager of the company, was indicted on two counts of conspiracy to commit peonage and Robert Gallagher, who is foreman, was indicted on two counts of alleged peonage and one of conspiracy. Six of the men were held under bonds for trial, which is to be commenced next week. The other six are yet to be arrested.

STRIKE IS AVERTED.
SWITCHMEN ACCEPT TERMS.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

CHICAGO, Nov. 10.—The trouble between the union switchmen and the twenty-three railroads entering Chicago was finally adjusted tonight and all danger of a strike of the 20,000 men has been averted. The switchmen belonging to the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, who refused the advance of 3 cents an hour accepted by the men belonging to the Switchmen's Union, at a conference with the railway managers tonight reached an agreement whereby the brotherhood men are to receive an advance of 4 cents an hour in wages, as all the other demands made by the men had been previously settled. Tonight's action puts an end to the controversy.

Player Is Crushed.

MENOMINEE (Wis.) Nov. 10.—In a football game here between the Stout Manual and High School today, Arthur Olsen, quarterback for the Manuals was crushed in a mass play, and sustained serious injury to the brain.

GEN. SHAFTER WORSE.

Stricken Warrior's Condition Reported as Being More Serious Last Evening.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BAKERSFIELD, Nov. 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The illness of Gen. William R. Shafter took a turn for the worse late tonight. His condition is described as very weak.

A bulletin issued by his attending physician early in the evening said he was slightly improved and was able to take a small amount of nourishment.

LIED TO SAVE FAMILY HONOR.

SCION OF CAMPAUS THEN CONFESSES ROBBERY.

Young Man Breaks Down in Stock Yards Station Where Police Had Escorted Him With Drawn Revolvers Against Mob Howling Imprecations on His Head.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Nov. 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] "I lied to shield a family name."

William Campau, who declares himself a member of the noted Campau family of Detroit, nephew of Daniel J. Campau of Detroit, and direct descendant of John Campau, one of the three French brothers who helped force back the wilderness to found a city, made the above plea for compassion today in a cell in the Stockyards Police Station.

To Capt. Haines he confessed to a part in a sensational robbery of the jewelry store of B. J. Hagamann last night: Then he told of his high family connections and the details of his failure to maintain the family traditions.

Last night when arrested, cowering under the imprecations of hundreds, while policemen protected him with drawn revolvers, he gave his name as Patrick J. O'Brien. The prisoner in the story he told today said that, like other members of the Campau family, he suffered from the depletion of the Campau fortune, which was seriously felt a number of years ago.

JOHNNY CRAPAUD MUST NOT DUEL.

PRIEST INTRODUCES BILL TO CURB PRACTICE.

Clerical Member of French [illegible] Seeks to Enact Law [illegible] for So-called Honor Misdemeanors and to Fine and Imprison Both Principals and Seconds.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PARIS, Nov. 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Now and then in France the voice of righteous reason is raised against duelling, only to dwindle away again, and give place to current gossip on the latest encounter on the not too sanguinary calendar. Abbe Lemir, one of the few priests who are Deputies to the Chamber, has introduced a bill to increase the penalties for duelling.

It declares that duelling shall be classed as a disdemeanor. The second articles provides that any person who fights a duel shall be punished with imprisonment for not less than one month nor more than one year, and a fine of 100 to 1000 francs ($20 to $200.)

A party to a duel who wounds an adversary shall be punished with imprisonment for three months to three years, and a fine of 200 to 2000 francs ($40 to $400.)

For killing an adversary, imprisonment for from one to five years is suggested, together with a fine of 100 to 1000 francs. The bill also provides for the punishment of seconds with imprisonment.

PONTIFF'S GOUT TROUBLES HIM.

HE OFTEN REFUSES TO TAKE PRESCRIBED MEDICINES.

Night Rambles in Vatican Gardens in Malarial Roman Air Also Contribute to Sickness—He Will Soon Be Compelled to Carry Cane on Account of Lameness.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BOSTON (Mass.) Nov. 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] A Rome special cable tonight says the Pope's health is again causing grave concern among Vatican prelates. Not that he is in immediate danger, but frequent recurrences of gout attacks indicate he is far from good health. The principal difficulty is that the Pope is not an easy patient to handle. He does ont obey his physician, Dr. Lapponi, who, although himself ill, comes daily to the Vatican in endeavor to relieve the Pope's sufferings.

Frequently the Pope exposes himself to the unhealthful Roman night air by late walks in the Vatican gardens, when he is able to be out, and often refuses to take prescribed medicines, usually, making the plea that he feels much better and the medicine is unnecessary.

There is perhaps no cause contributing more to the frequency of his attacks than his refusal to submit regularly to curative agencies. It is likely that he will soon have to use a cane, as his affection is making him very lame.

KILLS SCHOOLMATE.

ANDOVER (Mass.) Nov. 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] John J. B. C. Tracy of Mt. Vernon, N. Y., a Phillips-Andover Academy student, was shot and instantly killed this forenoon by a revolver in the hands of Charles E. Riggs of Emporia, Kan., a schoolmate. The shooting is said to have been purely accidental.

STANDARD ON RACK.

President Wants to Indict Oil Men.

He Insists That Example of This Trust Be Made by Criminal Action.

Conference Looking to Prosecution Is Still Continued at Washington.

Syndicate Is Regarded as a Flagrant Violator of Business Decency.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] It is known that President Roosevelt believes criminal action should be brought against the officials of the Standard Oil Company if the testimony gives promise of conviction.

Whether such prosecution of the officials of the Standard Oil Company can be maintained in the courts is the only question still open in the Department of Justice.

Conferences over the testimony gathered and the text of the government's bill of complaint were continued today between Assistant Atty.-Gen. Purdy and Messrs. Morrison and Kellogg, special counsel. Atty.-Gen. Moody was compelled to go out of town, and the final conference was postponed until Monday, which will probably postpone the filing of the suit until the middle of the week.

The case of the Standard company is regarded by the administration to be a far greater violation of the law than that of the Northern Securities Company, because it has been going on for years and a monopoly has been created and maintained that strikes at every householder in the country.

So flagrant have been the operations of this trust in the opinion of the President that he insists that examples shall be made of the men who, in his belief, have flouted the law in the face of the public.

VESUVIUS'S CONE FALLS INWARD.

SLIGHT UNDULATING EARTHQUAKE FOLLOWS FALL.

Great Column of Cinders and Scoria Is Thrown Aloft and Raining Back Over Town Spreads Panic Among Populace Already Frightened by Many Disasters.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NAPLES, Nov. 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] There was an undulating earthquake felt on the slopes of Vesuvius, lasting two seconds, about noon today.

Immediately afterward there rose to a great height from the crater a column of cinders and scoria, which fell over Ottajano, causing great panic among the inhabitants, who suffered so much during the last eruption.

Directors of the observatory telegraph that the phenomena was caused by the collapse of another part of the cone, and that further alarms would be unjustified.

SCHMITZ IN GERMANY.

Is Assured German Insurance Company Will Pay to Extent of Solvency.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BERLIN, Nov. 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Negotiations have taken place between Eugene Schmitz, Mayor of San Francisco, and the German Imperial Insurance Commission with regard to the refusal of some German companies to settle the losses of their San Francisco policy holders. Schmitz obtained a guarantee that the companies would be compelled to meet their obligations to the extent of their solvency.

Schmitz has been inspecting Berlin from an architectural point of view, in order to acquire ideas that may be useful in rebuilding San Francisco. He expresses himself as delighted with the solidity of the buildings in Berlin, and with their uniform height, which he thinks would be a desirable feature of San Francisco. He refers enthusiastically to the Unter-den Linden, which he says he would like to transport bodily to the Golden Gate.

SALARIES INADEQUATE.

President of the Columbia University Thinks Professors Are Not Paid Enough.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of the Columbia University, in his annual report, published today, said in part:

"Despite the heavy burdens of the corporation, it is no longer possible to avoid facing the fact that the salaries paid to the professors of Columbia University are inadequate, and that the effects of this inadequacy are deplorable.

"The budget for 1906-7 shows that there are 119 professors and thirty adjunct professors, in the university. The average salary paid to the professors is $2746.85, and the average salary paid to the adjunct professors is $2126.92."

Capt. Albert R. Couden commands the Louisiana, the battleship chosen to convey President Roosevelt to Panama. The Captain entered the navy in 1863 and was appointed from Utah. He was born in Indiana. Capt. Couden was greatly honored by being placed in command of the powerful fleet and the thousands of marines sent to Havana at the time of the Taft intervention. It was the most important naval command since the close of the Spanish war.

PLAN GREETING TO PRESIDENT.

PORTO RICANS REGRET BRIEF STAY ON ISLAND.

Upon Arrival of Louisiana Governor Will Meet Executive Party, Who Will Be Tendered Breakfast and Auto Ride Over Famous Military Road to San Juan.

[BY THE ASSO[illegible]

SAN JUAN [illegible] people of Por[illegible] intense interest [illegible] coming of the President, but are disappointed at his inability to remain in the island longer than twenty-four hours. The battleship Louisiana, on which the President is traveling, is scheduled to arrive at Ponce early on the morning of November 12.

Gov. Winthrop will meet the warship and after breakfast and a reception at the City Hall the Presidential party will leave at 10:30 o'clock on the automobiles for a drive of eighty miles over the famous military road to San Juan.

Gov. and Mrs. Winthrop will give a dinner in honor of the President and there will be a public reception at the palace in the evening.

The mayors and other officials of the island will come to San Juan to meet the President.

REPORTS BY WIRELESS.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

NORFOLK (Va.) Nov. 10.—A wireless message received at the Cape Charles station from Capt. Couden, commanding the battleship Louisiana on which the President and party are en route to Colon stated that at 11:30 o'clock a.m. today the ship was about 475 miles southeast of the Chesapeake capes at a point opposite Savannah, proceeding at a thirteen-knot rate with smooth water, good weather and all well on board.

The wireless [illegible] station at Baltimore was in [illegible] at 10:30 tonight with the battleship Louisiana, which is conveying President Roosevelt to Panama. The message received reported all well. The location of the battleship was not given.

FIXES THAW'S TRIAL DATE.

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Harry Kendall Thaw, accused of the murder of Stanford White, will be called to the bar for trial during the first week in December. Dist.-Atty. Jerome will prosecute the case in person, and it would not be surprising if former Gov. Frank S. Black, who secured the acquittal of Roland B. Molineaux appeared in court as the senior counsel for the defense.

The date of the trial has been practically agreed upon by the District Attorney and Attorney Clifford W. Partridge, and both sides are ready to go on with what promises to be the most sensational case ever presented in court in this county.

BONAPARTE FAVORS "LEGALIZED BOSS."

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BALTIMORE, Nov. 10.—In a brief interview published today Secretary of the Navy Charles Bonaparte said the establishment of a legalized "boss" in political parties in each of the States and cities "the boss" to be empowered to select the candidates for the various elective offices, would be advisable.

"It is hard, indeed," he said, "often impossible, to get men who are fit to become candidates. Unfit candidates can be secured by the bushel.

"Now, by a 'legalized boss' I mean an individual authorized on behalf of both parties to choose all candidates of that party for elective offices within a designated territory.

"Of course, every facility should be afforded for making 'independent' nominations, whether within the organized parties or without, so that citizens who may dissent, for whatever reason from the 'regular' nominations, may be able to vote effectively according to their convictions."

The reporter asked how Bonaparte would choose his proposed "legalized boss."

"He ought to be elected annually," said the Secretary, "by the legal voters of his party, at a primary held under all the sanctions of law, and at which only this one office, or rather position, should be filled. I likewise think it probable that no one of the persons who have been known as 'bosses' since I have known politics would have been elected at such a primary.

"Perhaps it might be wise to provide that the 'nominator' or 'legalized boss' I have suggested should be himself disqualified to hold public office, but of this I am not sure. There are certainly two sides to the question."

GLEANINGS BY CABLE FROM FOREIGN LANDS.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LA PAZ (Bolivia) Nov. 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] It is rumored here that Speyer & Co., New York bankers, besides having obtained a big contract for the construction of railways in the interior of Bolivia, have taken over from a Chilean syndicate the contract for the construction of a railway from Arica to La Paz.

If the rumor is correct, it is thought that owing to the difficulties of the Lluta route, the railway will eventually pass through Tacna.

THREE NEW CARDINALS.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

ROME, Nov. 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] In the next Consistory on December 6 Pope Pius will create three new cardinals, Mgr. Aristide Cavallari, Patriarch of Venice; the archbishop of Mechlin, Belgium, and Mgr. Samassi, archbishop of Ager, Hungary.

DISCOVERS CRIMINAL GANG.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

MILAN, Nov. 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] As a result of information received by the police, an important association of criminals have been discovered, the members of which have been guilty of very many robberies and three assassinations. Ten persons have been arrested and the police are looking for others.

STRENGTHEN TRIPLE ALLIANCE.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

ROME, Nov. 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] At the Foreign Office here it is stated that Baron Von Achrenthal, new Austrian Foreign Minister, will come to Rome to visit Signor Tittoni to strengthen the ties of the Triple Alliance.

ITALIAN CASHIER FLEES.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

GENOA, Nov. 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The cashier of an insurance company here is reported to have fled with nearly $200,000. It is believed he has gone to America.

SMUGGLE LIQUORS.

Boston Is Base for Canadian Rogues.

One Canuck Dealer Is Now Under Arrest in New Brunswick.

Neighbors Ask American Officers to Assist in Breaking Up Gang.

Whisky Was Sunk in Sea, Buoyed, and Then Recovered at Night.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BOSTON (Mass.) Nov. 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Canadian customs authorities claim that Boston has been made a base for smugglers for many months, and that thousands of barrels of liquor have been brought here in schooners and landed there without paying duty.

One of the most prominent liquor dealers of St. John, N. B., James McCarthy, a wholesaler, is already under arrest and an effort is being made to have the United States custom authorities arrest a number of Bostonians who have managed smuggling operations from this end.

Enormous profits have been cleared, as whisky sold here for $2 a gallon has been sold in St. John and old Canadian places at $4 per gallon, prevailing price.

Ingenious methods are used to land the goods there. Large crates or cases were constructed to hold several barrels of liquor, which could easily be sunk when smugglers arrived off the port of destination. Buoys were used to locate the contraband, and after the vessel had made port and cleared, she would later recover the goods and land them under cover of darkness.

LOMBROSO GIVES MEDIUM CREDIT.

ALIENIST ADMITS SPIRITUAL PHENOMENA ARE REAL.

According to His Latest Contribution He Reverses His Former Opinion and Thinks Now He Saw the Spirit of His Mother at Seance Four Years Ago—Startles Scientists.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, Nov. 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Much interest is aroused by dispatches from Rome, referring celebrated alienist's, Prof. Lombroso's, article in the current number Latettura, dealing with phenomena of spiritualism and the interpretation of the article is that it is a frank recantation of Lombroso's anti-spiritualistic theories, which so far as can be judged, seems to have been brought about by ordinary enough samples of so-called spiritualism. For instance, Lombroso now declares he is convinced of the genuineness of phenomena witnessed by him in 1902 at a seance he attended with a friend.

A spiritualistic medium volunteered to summon the spirit of Lombroso's mother. The medium bade him think intently of his parent, whose form, after a half hour's waiting, emerged through a curtain and said: "Cesaro, my son, put aside your veil," then she kissed him. During all this time Lombroso and his friend held the hands of the medium.

LEHIGH VALLEY DOCK BURNED.

COSTLY WHARF AT CHICAGO GOES UP IN FLAME.

Damage Is Estimated at $757,000 Exclusive of Fifty Thousand Tons of Hard Coal Which Is Expected to Smoulder for Several Days Before It Can Be Extinguished.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

CHICAGO, Nov. 10.—The docks of the Lehigh Valley Coal Company, situated at One Hundredth street and Commercial avenue, were destroyed by fire today, causing a damage, estimated by the officers of the company, of $757,000.

The fire originated from some unknown cause in the engine-room, which was situated in the basement of a coal house, in which 50,000 tons of hard coal were stored. The coal is still burning and it is expected that it will be several days before the fire is entirely extinguished. The company's loss in hoisting machinery is estimated at about $200,000. This amount, however, is included in the total of $757,000.

ONE KILLED IN WRECK.

BLANCHESTER (O.) Nov. 10.—A wreck on the Baltimore and Ohio Southwestern road early today resulted in the death of one man and the injury of nearly a score of other persons, six miles west of here. Fifteen of the injured were taken to Cincinnati and the physicians fear several may die.

UNDERTAKES ARIZONA WORK.

BOSTON (Mass.) Nov. 10.—H. B. Snell, formerly chief engineer of the underground work for the Old Dominion Company, has been engaged as superintendent of the Arizona Commercial Company vice W. S. Sultan, resigned. Snell takes charge November 20.

CLAIM ROADS DISCRIMINATE.

Ventura Company Enters a Big Complaint.

Appeals to Interstate Commerce Commission.

Six Lines Are Accused of Unjust Rates.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON (D. C.) Nov. 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The Interstate Commerce Commission today received a complaint from the Channel Commercial Company of Ventura, Cal., against the Southern Pacific, Union Pacific, Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fé, Northern Pacific, Denver and Rio Grandé and Rio Grandé Western railroads. The complaint sets forth that Ventura is seventy-eight miles north of Los Angeles and 404 miles south of San Francisco, and practically the same distance as a number of California points from Kansas City, Chicago and St. Louis.

Notwithstanding these facts, the complaint states, rates on coal, corn, flour, canned goods and other articles from Kansas City, St. Louis and Chicago to Ventura are much higher than the rates of the same articles to Marysville, San Francisco, Los Angeles, San Diego and Santa Barbara.

The complaint charges that Ventura rates are excessive, unjust, and unreasonable; that other California cities are given undue advantage; that the practice amounts to unjust discrimination and undue and unreasonable preference and advantage to other cities, all of which is in violation of the Interstate Commerce law.

The rate on stuff carried via the Southern Pacific, on the Coast line particularly, is denounced as contrary to section IV of the Interstate Commerce Act, which prohibits higher rates for a short haul than for a long haul over the same road. Therefore complainant asks that the rates be adjudged unjust, and that reasonable rates be substituted for same by order of the commission.

SAYS STRIKE IS PENDING.

FORTY-SEVEN ROADS INVOLVED.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

CLEVELAND, Nov. 10.—The Plain Dealer tomorrow will print a long news article on the different phases of railroad wages in the territories, and one of the most important features of it will be a statement on the authority of Grand Chief Engineer Warren M. Stone of the International Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, that employés of over forty-seven railroads have united in a demand upon the roads for higher wages, shorter hours and different working conditions. Stone is quoted as saying that the demands have been formally prepared, and the roads are given until December 10 to make answer.

Stone left tonight for New York, but before leaving stated that the settlement of the talk of a strike of switchmen in Chicago today had not removed any point that is to be put in issue in the demands to be made by the roads west of Chicago.

These demands, he said, would be presented next week.

BANK COLLECTS BY AUTOMOBILE.

SENDS TRAVELING SAFE TO ALL ITS CUSTOMERS.

Novel Plan to Gather in Deposits is Adopted by Night and Day Bank of New York—Each Patron of House Drops His Coin in Slot on Motor Car.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—The Night and Day Bank of this city has started an innovation which, it is expected, will please business men who make late deposits. To make late collections and to avoid the risk of sending deposits to the bank by messenger, the bank officials have had built a specially-designed automobile containing a huge safe, which will call on all regular depositors.

Each depositor who desires to have his money taken to the bank by the collectors receives a metal dispatch box, numbered and inclosed in a leather case. In this he puts his currency and checks, and when the machine comes around he turns the box, locked, over to the messenger, who gives him a receipt for the box, "contents unknown." On the stub of the duplicate receipt which the messenger is to take back to the bank is a memorandum of the box's contents.

When the messenger gets the box he drops it into a slit in the automobile safe, and as the safe is built like a letter box, the deposit boxes cannot be removed save by some one knowing the combination of the safe. At the bank the boxes are taken out and the receipts checked with the deposit slip that has been placed in the box.

The Night and Day Bank started the new system last night.

CLAIMS ELECTION IS BRYAN VICTORY.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

OMAHA (Neb.) Nov. 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Dr. George L. Miller, one of the "wheel horses" of the Democratic party in Nebraska, in an open letter today concerning the recent election, says:

"The returns are not all in, but enough is known to make it as clear as moonshine that Mr. Bryan has won all kinds of victory in this State and in New York. By speaking night and day for months he has won the following victory:

"First—The return of a Republican Congress by the unexpected majority of fifty or sixty in the House.

"Second—The election of Hughes, by his indorsement of Hearst, by a majority of 52,000. This he hastened to call a 'victory' for Hearst, because the majority for Hughes did not reach 200,000, as his supporters in that State had expected.

"Thirdly—Mr. Bryan made another 'whirlwind campaign' for Shallenberger in his own State, and succeeded in whirling up say 15,000 majority for Sheldon and the Republican State ticket, and in securing a solid Republican delegation in Congress, except Hitchcock, whose bacon was saved by a side issue.

"If there was ever any serious doubt about Mr. Bryan's supremacy as a lawgiver to his own and other nations of the earth, there can be none whatever as to his moral attitude and altitude before the world after his indorsement of an unspeakable character for Governor of the great State of New York, who bought control of the Democratic party in that State by means and methods which drew groans and protests from even Croker himself, from beyond the sea."

GOES TO SANATORIUM.

Dr. Minot J. Savage Is Placed Under Treatment on Account of Unsettled Mind.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

CLEVELAND, Nov. 10.—Announcement was made today by Dr. Minot J. Savage, the eminent clergyman of New York, that by reason of the unsettled condition of his health, he has been placed in a private sanatorium for treatment. Dr. Savage resigned last February as pastor of the Church of the Messiah, New York, and went to California where he remained for several months, but his health showing no improvement there, he returned here.

FISH FOR PRESIDENT.

Policy Holders Advocate Him for Head of Mutual Life Insurance Association.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] It was learned yesterday that several members of the International Policy Holders' Committee and some of the candidates for the Board of trustees of the Mutual Life Insurance Company have been advised by large policy holders of the company within the last few days to advocate the election of Stuyvesant Fish as president of the Mutual Life in event of the success of the policy holders' ticket.

Those who desire to see him president of the Mutual Life say it would be a fine piece of retributive justice for Fish to succeed Charles A. Peabody, who figured so prominently in the fight to oust him from the Illinois Central.

SPEEDILY CONVICTED.

QUICK TRIAL AVERTS LYNCHING.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

GREENSBORO (N. C.) Nov. 10.—Henry Walker, who entered the residence of Col. L. Banks Holt at Graham Tuesday night and shot him through the head, was today convicted of burglary and sentenced to be hanged December 6. Col. Holt will probably recover. The quick trial probably will avert a lynching.

OBITUARY.

John Calvin Wellin.

CHICAGO, Nov. 10.—John Calvin Wellin, first vice-president of the Illinois Central Railroad Company since 1890, died tonight at his home here, aged 66 years.

Ambrose L. Thomas.

CHICAGO, Nov. 10.—Ambrose L. Thomas, president of the firm of Lord & Thomas, known to the newspapers all over the United States, dropped dead today while making some purchases in a retail dry-goods store. Heart disease is thought to have caused his death.

D. O. Smart.

KANSAS CITY (Mo.) Nov. 10.—D. O. Smart, one of the wealthiest citizens in this city, died of apoplexy tonight while participating in a revival service at the Independence Avenue Christian Church. He dropped dead immediately after rising to request that the words of a certain hymn be read as a prayer.

Michael Storms.

DENVER, Nov. 10.—Michael Storms, a pioneer mining man of Idaho and Montana, died of general debility today at St. Luke's Hospital in this city. He was 83 years of age and had been one of the most familiar figures in Denver for forty-seven years. He was secretary of the Colorado Pioneers' Association and had the distinction of being the oldest active miner in this State as well as founder and recorder of Colorado's first gold camp, now Central City.

He was born in Ohio, and joined in the rush of '49 to California, coming from that State in 1853.

ROCK ISLAND BUYS MEXICAN CENTRAL.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

EL PASO (Tex.) Nov. 10.—It was reported here today on reliable authority that the Mexican Central Railroad has been purchased by the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific and is now a part of the Rock Island system. A connecting line will be built from Brownwood to El Paso to be used by the Rock Island in place of the El Paso and Southwestern tracks in entering El Paso.

This is said to be the important announcement which President A. A. Robinson stated in Mexico City would be made within a week. The information is derived from both Mexican and American sources.

The Mexicn Central is the most important line in the republic of Mexico, and is the only road in Mexico that is not largely owned by the government.

At present, the Rock Island enters El Paso via Santa Rosa, N. M., over the El Paso and Northwestern, a part of the El Paso and Southwestern system.

Col. J. L. Bell, who built the El Paso and Northeastern, and who has been here for some time, says that he is here for the purpose of constructing a line, which is understood to be the connection between the Rock Island and its new property, the Mexcan Central. This will be either from Brownville or Amarillo.

ROCK ISLAND BUILDS.

LAYS CONNECTING LINK TRACK.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

FORT WORTH (Tex.) Nov. 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The Rock Island has let the contract for the construction of the eleven miles between Carrollton and Irvine, by which the 'Frisco will connect with the Fort Worth-Dallas branch of the Rock Island, to the Lantry-Sharp Company under hurrp orders. When the line is built the 'Frisco will use the Rock Island line into Fort Worth and Dallas.

Will Retire from Office.

CITY OF MEXICO, Nov. 10.—On the eve of his departure for New York President A. A. Anderson of the Mexican Central Railway announced that within a week he would retire from his office.

LOVE LAUGHS AT DISCIPLINE.

McKinley's Niece Is a Ship Stowaway.

Defies President and Taft, to Accompany Spouse.

Bride Dons Uniform and Secretes Herself on Vessel.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

DES MOINES (Iowa) Nov. 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Defying President Roosevelt and Secretary of War Taft, Mrs. Grace McKinley Heidt, a niece of the late President McKinley, smuggled herself aboard the transport Dix and accompanied her husband to the Philippines.

Miss McKinley was married to Capt. Grayson Heidt of Atlanta last July at Fort Des Moines. Immediately thereafter they started on their honeymoon only to be recalled by a stern order from the War Department for the captain to proceed to Seattle to take ship to the Philippines.

In her dilemma the girl-wife appealed to the captain of the Dix for permission to go along. She was refused. Application to the Quartermaster General and Secretary Taft brought the same result.

The she appealed direct to President Roosevelt. Prominent friends of President McKinley also interceded in her behalf. All met with the same rebuff. The President would not consider her going on the ship.

At the wharf husband and wife of a few months bade each other a tearful forewell.

But the martyred President's niece did not despair. Out of her husband's trunk she dragged an old uniform. Donning it she made her way aboard the transport undiscovered in the excitement of leaving. Three days at sea, half starved, she was dragged from the hold. A happy meeting between husband and wife followed. The girl was forgiven and so continued her journey to the Philippines.

FOUR HURT IN WRECK.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

ROCKY FORD (Colo.) Nov. 10.—East-bound passenger train No. 604 ran into the rear of a freight train on a siding in the yards today, severely injuring four persons, as follows:

A. WHITEHEAR, passenger engineer, hip crushed.

E. M'KEE, passenger fireman, knee crushed.

J. E. NEEDHAM, baggageman, fingers crushed and other bruises.

The passenger engine, baggage car, the caboose and five loaded freight cars were wrecked. A number of passengers were thrown from their seats and bruised. The accident is said to have been caused by the carelessness of a brakeman in leaving the switch open.

SENTENCE BOMB HURLER TO WORK.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

ST. PETERSBURG, Nov. 10.—The man named Schekter, who threw the bomb at Police Captain Samsenoff of Bialystok, one of the Terroristic acts precipitating the Jewish massacre there, was convicted and sentenced to ten years at hard labor.

The prisoner, who is a mere youth, testified that he entered the Terrorist organization as a spy at the instance of the police in 1904 and served the police faithfully for two years. But he became converted by the Terrorists and determined to expatiate his treachery by killing Capt. Samsenoff.

This recalls the famous case of Degdieff, a member of the "inner council" of the Terrorist organization, who, after the assassination of Emperor Alexander II, in 1881, sold himself to Col. Suderkin, chief of the Secret Police, betrayed a thousand of his comrades, and finally confessed his treachery and atoned for it by killing Suderkin in 1883.

Degdieff fled to America, where it was reported he took up his abode under another name.

SUBSTITUTE CRUISERS.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

ST. PETERSBURG, Nov. 10.—The new cruiser Pallada of 7900 tons and designed to have a speed of 23 knots, was launched here today. She is of the type of the armored cruiser Bayan, now in course of construction. The Pallada and the Bayan take the place of the Russian cruisers of those names which were sunk at Port Arthur, refloated by the Japanese and renamed.

WANT GUN BACK.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

ST. PETERSBURG, Nov. 10.—The most recent exploit of the St. Petersburg revolutionists is the theft of a machine gun of the latest model and a large supply of cartridges. It is presumed that an expert gunner is involved, because all the necessary accessories were simultaneously abstracted from the armory. The Prefect of Police has issued an order especially emphasizing the necessity of immediately recapturing the gun.

ROBBERS ELUSIVE.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

ROGOW, Nov. 10.—Large detachments of infantry and cavalry are searching for the men who, on Thursday night, threw a bomb at the mail car of a train, which resulted in the death of several soldiers of the escort, and who fled with a large sum of money. Up to this time the robbers have evaded capture.

SOCIALISTS MURDERERS.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

WARSAW, Nov. 10.—The Socialists have commenced a campaign of murder against those who are opposed to them, and have killed the director of the gas works and wounded several Nationalist workmen.

STATE TROOPS ARRIVE.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

FORT WORTH (Tex.) Nov. 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Reports from Rio Grande City this evening indicate that the State troops have reached that point and no further outbreak has occurred.

The belligerants are reported quiet, and the State Rangers and militia have the situation well in hand. The count of the votes cast in the election Tuesday will be counted Monday and it is believed the presence of the troops will prevent the expected trouble.

PITH OF NEWS FROM THE MIDDLE WEST.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Nov. 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] A tramp "low" that blew into Chicago from the northeast early this morning, bringing with it rain and snow flurries, was blamed for Chicago's defeat on the Midway gridiron this afternoon. The disturber was unexpected, as clear and cool weather was indicated by local conditions. Its force seems to have been spent, although snow flurries and maybe worse are in the list of Sunday possibilities. The maximum temperature today was but 44 degrees at noon. The minimum was 35 degrees at 8 o'clock in the evening.

Middle West temperatures:

Alpena, 32; Bismarck, 28; Cairo, 60; Cheyenne, 50; Cincinnati, 52; Cleveland, 40; Concordia, 46; Davenport, 36; Denver, 58; Des Moines, 38; Detroit, 38; Devils Lake, 26; Dodge City, 54; Dubuque, 36; Duluth, 32; Escanaba, 34; Grand Rapids, 40; Green Bay, 34; Helena, 50; Huron, 30; Indianapolis, 46; Kansas City, 48; Marquette, 32; Memphis, 74; Milwaukee, 40; Omaha, 38; Rapid City, 36; St. Louis, 58; St. Paul, 36; Sault Sainte Marie, 34; Springfield, Ill., 46; Springfield, Mo., 64; Wichita, 56.

A new alignment of freight handling is predicted as a result of the recent opinion given by Commissioner Knapp to the effect that the agreement by which the railroads refused to enter into shipping agreements with the electric roads doing interurban and interstate business, was a violation of the rule relating to common carriers, recently applied directly to railroads under the new rate law.

The first road to act on this opinion is the Illinois Central, which has entered into an agreement with the Chicago & Milwaukee Electric Railroad.

WAR ON FRUIT RATES.

In an effort to supply the poor of the city with cheap fruit the Woman's Improvement Club of Oak Park is pushing its war on high freight rates. The matter is being called to the attention of various farmers' clubs in Michigan, and an appeal for action has also been sent to the Governor of that State. The club has taken the ground that cheap rates would supply the poor children of the city with fruits and promote their health.

CLUB IS DEFUNCT.

Golf clubs and automobile clubs, modern organizations which have been found necessary to keep pace with changing conditions, wrought havoc to the Ashland Club, once the West Side's exclusive and most fashionable organization. Tonight the remaining members held an old-time love feast, subscribed $1800 to square the ledger and then voted the club out of existence.

"MUNICIPAL OWNERSHIP.

"Municipal ownership can never prosper in any city until it is divorced from politics," was the assertion of William Moffat, capitalist and streetrailway manager, of Aberdeen, Scotland, who is stopping at the Auditorium Annex. "Even then, private corporations give the people the best service. London has gone into the business of operating boats with the result that the city is losing $100,000 annually trying to run boats on the Thames at a profit."

COSTLY DEER HUNTS.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

MILWAUKEE (Wis.) Nov. 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Fifteen dead and twenty-two injured is the record of the season for hunting deer, which closes tonight at midnight. This is the record of hunting casualties in Wisconsin and Upper Michigan since September 1.

MINISTER TO PRISON.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

INDIANAPOLIS (Ind.) Nov. 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Rev. William Hinshaw, paroled wife murderer, was today removed to prison as the result of the Freeman scandal. He had an appointment to preach tomorrow. Mr. and Mrs. Freeman have become reconciled.

COPTIC PRIEST DIES.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

KAWANEE, Nov. 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Girgis Melaik, formerly a Coptic priest of Egypt and of royal blood, who was driven from his native land in the rebellion of Rabbi Bashain in 1882, died here today.

MAXINE ELLIOTT'S DENIAL.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

OMAHA (Neb.) Nov. 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Maxine Elliott says there is no estrangement between her and Nat Goodwin and that they will play together again. She says the outrageous stories have worn her out.

MANY WILL ATTEND WESTERN CONGRESS.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

KANSAS CITY (Mo.) Nov. 10.—At a meeting of the officers of the Trans-Mississippi Commercial Congress here today, the official programme for the tenth session, which opens in Convention Hall in this city on November 20, was completed.

Among the speakers who will deliver formal addresses are W. J. Bryan, Secretary of State Elihu Root, Secretary of the Treasury Leslie M. Shaw, John G. Carlisle, Senator William J. Stone of Missouri, E. H. Harriman of New York, Congressman Joseph E. Randall, president of the National Rivers and Harbors Association, H. D. Loveland of San Francisco, John H. Smith of Salt Lake, and John Barrett, American Minister to Colombia.

The following named United States Senators have accepted invitations to participate: James M. Patterson and Henry M. Teller of Colorado, Elmer J. Burket and Joseph H. Millard of Nebraska, Chester I. Long and Senator Benson of Kansas, William Warner of Missouri, Weldon D. Heyburn and Fred T. Dubois of Idaho, Samuel H. Piles and Levi Ankeny of Washington, Charles A. Culberson of Texas.

The following Governors of States have accepted invitations to attend the congress: Jefferson Davis of Arkansas, Joseph W. Folk of Missouri, Edward Hoch of Kansas, John Mickey of Nebraska, Samuel H. CELEBRATES BIRTHDAY.

Mark Twain Jollies Ancient Editor Upon Reaching Years of Discretion at Last.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—In the famous old Harper publishing house in Franklin Square tonight nearly two hundred and fifty men and women prominent in American literary life celebrated with Henry Mills Alden, for thirty-seven years editor of Harper's Monthly, the seventieth anniversary of his birth. During the dinner letters of congratulation from President Roosevelt and Samuel Clemens to Alden were read. Clemens said in part: "Alden, dear and ancient friend: It is a solemn moment. You have now reached the years of discretion. You have been a long time arriving. How often we recall with regret that Napoleon once shot at a magazine editor and missed him and killed the publisher. But we remember with charity that his intentions were good. You will reform now, Alden."

LAND STEALS ARE DISCOVERED.

DENVER & RIO GRAND ROAD IS ACCUSED.

Agents of Interstate Commerce Commission Claim to Have Evidence of Frauds That Make Union Pacific "Grabs" Look Insignificant. Federal Grand Jury Gets Busy.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SALT LAKE, Nov. 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Agents of the Interstate Commerce Commission and of the government are said to have uncovered land steals by the Denver and Rio Grande Railroad Company and by the Utah Fuel Company in this State which make the Union Pacific speculations look insignificant by comparison.

As the result of disclosures the Interstate Commerce Commission is preparing to make an early and searching investigation in sessions to be held in this city, Pueblo and Denver.

A large part of the preliminary work is said to have been done by Fred A. Maynard, special attorney for the government, who has been working on the alleged land-fraud cases for several months.

Former Judge Elmer E. Thomas of Omaha, also special counsel for the commission in the land-fraud investigations, has taken a frequent hand in the matter and both have been in consultation from time to time with J. T. Marchand, attorney for the commission, who directed all of the work in the Union Pacific disclosures.

In connection with the Union Pacific scandal, the Federal grand jury, which meets here next week, is going to take up the matter and indictments will probably follow against many individuals and against two companies involved. Evidence which is said to be sufficient to secure true bills has been marshalled for presentation to the jury.

HEIRESS FLEES WITH COACHMAN.

FOSTER MOTHER AND LABORERS PURSUE ELOPERS.

Girl Who Gives Up Millions Shouts Back Her Defiance and Announced Her Intention to Wed Her Jehu and Escapes Triumphantly—Hope of Catching Her Abandoned.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Nov. 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Chicago and Indiana society was greatly excited today over the reported elopement of Emma Bachman Howe, aged 19, heiress to several millions, adopted daughter of Miss Frances Howe, with her coachman, named Jensen.

Miss Howe, the foster mother, is the owner of the famous Balleytown homestead near Chesterton, Ind. She is a heavy owner of Indiana and Chicago real estate, all of which would have descended to her adopted daughter.

Scant details of the elopement have reached Chicago, but it is said that the coachman and girl fled in a buggy, pursued by employés of a brick yard and her foster mother.

The girl shouted back her defiance of her pursuers and announced that she and the coachman were to be married. She and the coachman easily distanced their pursuers and departed in the direction of Valparaiso, and Miss Howe abandoned hope of catching her adopted daughter.

WOMAN TAKES ACID.

Failing to effect a reconciliation with her husband, Mrs. C. Miller of No. 1448 South San Pedro street took carbolic acid last night with suicidal intent. The woman was found writhing in agony by Mr. and Mrs. C. Denzer, who live in the same house. For some time Miller and his wife have not been living together, according to the statement of friends. It is said that Mrs. Miller went to the city early in the evening and called at a restaurant on Sixth street, between Spring street and Broadway. Finding that her husband had been at work there and was still in the city, Mrs. Miller returned home. On her way she is said by friends to have made threats to take her life if a reconciliation was not effected at once. Mrs. Miller's mother resides at No. 557 Ruth avenue.

The craft of the pewterer was held in high esteem in olden days, and the training was long and arduous, the probationer having to submit his work to the authorities of the craft to be approved by them before he was allowed to set up in business for himself and register his "touch" or trade mark at the company's hall. By these "touches" or marks the various makers and eras can be identified precisely in the same way as the marks on china or silver proclaim their value to the connoisseur, says Home Chat. The chief beauty of the pewter, adds a writer in the Lady, lies in its simple but quaint forms, every piece having had its own individual use.

And Still People Die.

There are 228,234 medical doctors in the world. Of these there are in Europe 162,333, distributed as follows: In England 34,967, in Germany 22,518, in Russia 21,489, in France 20,348, and in Italy 18,245. In England the proportion of doctors is 78 to 100,000 of the population. In France it is 51 and in Turkey 18. In Brussels the proportion is 241 to 100,000 of the population, in Madrid 209, in Budapest 198, in Christiania 181, in Vienna 140, in Berlin 132, in London 128, in Athens 123, in Paris 111, in New York 74, and in Constantinople.—[From L'Illustration.

WASHINGTON.

WOULD BE RID OF VAGRANTS.

Manila Official Wants Them Brought Here.

He Asks the Aid of the War Department.

The President May Visit the Philippines.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON (D. C.) Nov. 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The chief of the Bureau of Insular Affairs has written to the War Department asking if some arrangement cannot be made for the transportation of vagrants and indigent persons from Manila to the United States.

There is much trouble in the Philippine Islands with this class of inhabitants, and it is desirable there that they be brought to this country.

The discretion of the Secretary of War, in authorizing transportation of passengers on army transports to and from ports in the Philippines was very materially restricted by the last army appropriation act.

The people included in the inquiry of the chief of the Insular Bureau are not camp followers, or retainers to camp in the sense that the term is used in the sixty-third article of war. They are simply vagrants without means of support whose presence in the islands is detrimental to the public interest.

It is believed if such people are carried on army transports or commercial steamers, the cost will be fixed by the Secretary of War and many taken out of the Philippine government funds.

BLANCHARD RETURNS.

REPORTS RECLAMATION.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON (D. C.) Nov. 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Executive Officer Blanchard of the Reclamation Service, returned to Washington today, after an absence of several months in the West, during which he visited California, Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Arizona, Colorado, Montana, Utah and other States, inspecting the reclamation projects under way.

Blanchard reports things getting along nicely all along the line. Among other projects he inspected those at Roosevelt and Yuma, Ariz., and at Klamath, Cal. Speaking of his trip, Blanchard said today:

"Work is progressing very well on the irrigation projects, California and Arizona particularly. At Klamath there is a boom on. The town is building up, an electric railway is under construction, etc. Contractors on reclamation work have had little trouble with the labor supply, in spite of the prevailing scarcity of the commodity on the Pacific Coast. They will complete contracts on time.

"I visited Imperial Valley, and found that the Colorado River had been returned to its banks, through the energetic efforts of the irrigation engineers and Southern Pacific Railroad. Salton Sea will now disappear through evaporation, and Imperial Valley will enter upon an era of big development.

"I also stopped at Los Angeles, and inquired about the Owens River. I am informed that Los Angeles city has purchased practically the water rights of that stream, and will proceed apace with the construction of the conduit to furnish a domestic water supply, and to irrigate the adjacent country. We have some hydrographic engineers in Owens River Valley gauging streams, measuring the rainfall, etc., and the information they are collecting will prove of immense value to California."

TRIP A FAILURE.

SECOND TRIAL STOPPED.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—The Navy Department has received a report telling of the second endurance trial of the armored cruiser California, built by the Union Iron Works of San Francisco, the trip being unsuccessful.

Soon after the cruiser started the port-forward, low-pressure-crank pin bearing heated and the trial was stopped.

The contractors have made an application to have another trial, but the department has decided that the third trip of the cruiser shall not be had until the contractors give assurance that the machinery of the California is in all respects ready for a full power forced draft four-hour trial.

MAY VISIT ISLAND.

PRESIDENT WANTED THERE.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The President may go to the Philippines soon after the adjournment of Congress on March 4. It is said that a prominent citizen from Manila called upon him a few days previous to his departure for Panama and urged him to visit the islands. What the President said in reference to the contemplated visit, of course is not known. This citizen insisted that a visit of the President to the islands would have a good effect upon the natives there, and probably stop a lot of trouble which is going on there.

There will be a long recess after the adjournment of the short session, and the President would have plenty of time for a long sea voyage.

SHAW NOT ALARMED.

NO ACTION NECESSARY.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—Secretary Shaw has returned to the city from his campaigning tour. When asked if anything could be done to relieve the financial situation he replied that unless conditions materially changed he would not refund, buy bonds, increase deposits or "do anything else."

The treasury, he said, holds $25,000,000 that can be used as a last resort, but it will not be used until absolutely necessary. What has been done has been done in response to business conditions. Unless business conditions are again disturbed nothing further need be done.

CONSIDER HARBOR BILL.

COMMITTEE MEETS EARLY.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—Representative Burton of Ohio, chairman of the Rivers and Harbors Committee of the House, has caused a meeting of the committee to be held on November 29. It is the purpose of the committee to complete a river and harbor appropriation bill in time to introduce it by the next Congress. The plans of the leaders of the House are for a bill carrying about $50,000,000 or $60,000,000, about two-thirds of which will be in the form of authorizations for improvements for which appropriations will be made for a part of the work.

WASHINGTON BRIEFS.

Declares Tubes Good.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—In connection with the report from Pittsburgh that the grand jury at that place had indicted three officials of the Shelby Steel Tube Company, on charges of illegally tampering with the marks upon steel tubes intended to be used in the boilers of warships, Rear-Admiral Ray, engineer-in-chief of the navy, stated today that not a single defective tube has been placed in any of the battleships.

Conference With Purdy.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—Special Counsel Morrison & Kellogg, having in charge the investigation of the Standard Oil Company, had a conference today with Mr. Purdy, assistant to the Attorney-General. Another conference probably will be held Monday and it is believed that the Attorney-General will be ready, late in the coming week, to announce whether or not he will begin proceedings against the Standard Oil Company for violation of the Sherman anti-trust act.

Castro in Public.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—American Minister Russell in a mail report from Caracas dated October 21, says that President Castro of Venezuela has appeared in public and has been driven about the city to dissipate the impression that he was physically incapable of conducting the government. Minister Russell adds that while the President appeared emaciated, his condition was not such as to warrant the idea that he could not administer the duties of his office.

Parsons of Yale Defeats Sheppard in the Half Mile Event—Sheridan Puts the Twenty-four-Pound Shot Long Distance—Last Day of the Championship Meet.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—The national indoor track field championships of the Amateur Athletic Union of the United States, which began last night in the Madison Square Garden, were finished tonight. One of the night's events was the defeat of Melvin W. Sheppard, the American crack half-mile runner, by E. B. Parsons of Yale, who is the intercollegiate champion half-mile runner.

Harry L. Hillman of the New York Athletic Club, who was injured on the trip of the American athletes to Athens last April, surprised the crowd by making a new world's record in the 300-yard hurdle event. The winners were:

One hundred and fifty-yard run: L. Robertson, Irish American A. C.; time, 1:61 1-5 seconds.

Putting 24-pound shot: M. J. Sheridan, Irish American Athletic Club; distance, 22 feet 1 inch.

Six hundred yard run: E. B. Parson, New York Athletic Club; time, 1 minute 34 seconds.

Three standing jumps: M. J. Sheridan, Irish American A. C.; distance, 32 feet 7 1-4 inches.

Sixty-yard dash: C. J. Seitz, New York A. C.; time, 6 3-5 seconds.

Pole vault, for height: A. C. Gilbert, Yale University; 10 feet 9 inches.

Five-mile run: C. V. Bonhag, Irish American A. C.; time, 26 minutes 2 1-5 seconds.

Point score won by the Irish American Athletic Club, with 87 points; New York A. C., second, 72 points.

DUCK ARITHMETIC.

Shooters Figure Out a Lead About as Definitely as It Can Be Done.

Several duck hunters were riding down to their clubs last week on one of Mr. Huntington's big red track burners, when the question of duck shooting came up, bringing with it the usual query from some of the young gunners regarding the lead necessary to drop a duck at forty yards. Although unanswerable, owing to the different manner in which men handle shotguns, some shooting on the swing and others jerking their guns ahead just at the minute of firing, one of the party indulged in a little mathematical demonstration that should be of interests to the duck-hunting fraternity generally.

Taking the average velocity of a duck load as 960 feet per second, and the flight of a duck at a mile a minute, which certainly is not excessive, the calculation is simple.

It takes the charge of shot one-eighth of a second to fly forty yards. In that length of time the duck is travelling at 88 feet per second, just 10 feet,, consequently the lead should be ten feet if the gun be stopped and trigger pulled with the bird abreast forty yards away.

No good shot leads his birds that much. Most of the best ones shoot with the gun swinging rapidly past the bird, and by the time the impulse to pull has sped from eye to brain and thence to finger, with the brief interval that is required for the hammer to fire the cap primer, and the charge to get out of the gun, the muzzle has described an arc that counts for many feet at forty yards. An inch-muzzle movement is a yard at ordinary shooting range.

This is about as definite as the problem can be worked out. The duck often is going faster than a mile a minute, while many shot charges fly slower than the velocity named.

Police Charge Players.

BELLINGHAM (Wash.) Nov. 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Because the members mobilized in the streets, the crack Seattle High School football team, which defeated the local High School aggregation today, was twice driven to the sidewalks by the Bellingham police tonight. They were just preparing to celebrate the victory with a procession and shouts of triumph when they were charged by the bluecoats. Immediately they scattered, but soon formed again, and defied the police. They met with another charge, and this was so determined that they did not again offend. A large crowd which gathered anticipated a wild meleo. After being driven to the walks for the last time the athletes returned to their hotel and executed an Indian war dance, while the captain of the team delivered an address on municipal ownership.

POLITICAL.

WILSON'S CAMPAIGN.

Union Laborites Holding Largely Attended Tent Meetings—Candidate for Mayor Says He Will Win—McCarthy Down from San Francisco.

FLUSHED with the hope of victory through the division of votes between Republicans and Non-Partisans, Stanley B. Wilson, Mayoralty candidate of the Public Ownership party, addressed an audience that filled a large tent last evening at Sixth and Hill streets.

It was the "warming up" meeting of the union labor campaign for control of the political machinery of Los Angeles, and the large attendance was representative of the various labor unions of the city. Many of the women present are members of the "Label League," which aims to force the sticking of the totem on everything that is made to eat, wear, drink, smoke or read. These women are enthusiastic workers in the Public Ownership campaign and the applause with which they greeted Wilson indicated the support he is to expect from that source.

M'CARTHY BOSSING.

Unusual interest was displayed in last night's meeting because of the presence in Los Angeles of "Pinhead" McCarthy, the union labor boss and political agent of San Francisco, who has been one of the prominent figures in the campaigns and succeeding elections of Schmitz, the laborite Mayor of the northern city who is conveniently absent in Europe during the present stir over graft investigations.

McCarthy failed to appear at the meeting, but he is pulling the strings of the public ownership campaign here, and his present visit is but one of a number that he has made since his fellow-worshipers of the totem have placed their municipal ticket in the field.

The coming of McCarthy is the signal for increased activity on the part of the union labor element in its efforts to gain the upper hand in politics in this city.

The order has gone forth that meetings are to be held every night in some part of the city, and several times each night as election day draws nearer.

McCarthy has been quick to see the opportunity for the success of his party, due to the political chaos that has come about through the presence in the field of Republican, Non-Partisan, Democratic, Socialist and Prohibition tickets. He is egging Wilson and his followers on to greater activity, and already the local unionites declare that they will elect their entire ticket, although frankly admitting that under ordinary conditions they could have no hope of so doing.

Candidate Wilson was slow in making his appearance last night. The audience, a portion of which was obliged to stand, was enetrtained in the interval, however, by moving pictures thrown on a screen by a machine that forms part of the campaign paraphernalia of the propagandists.

The rather startling discovery was made by one of the laborites in attendance that the cards of one of the candidates did not bear the totem. He called an usher and handed it back.

"This card ain't no good," he said.

A group of organization men gathered around to inspect the card, and there was a hasty inspection of other bits of pasteboard to see that they were "true blue."

The slip was attributed to an oversight, and the bedbugless cards were called in.

WILSON CHEERED.

After the moving picture had depicted a story of the killing of a hen (not a goose) that laid a golden egg, a man on the platform, whom no one seemed to know, arose and introduced "Al" Smith as the candidate for Councilman of the Third Ward. Smith spoke briefly and made way for the Mayoralty candidate as he came bustling into the tent. Wilson was greeted with cheers.

"Public ownership is not a mere political fad," he said, launching right into his speech. "It is not the outgrowth of a political freak. It is a basic American idea. We who represent the movement here are not bearded and bloody bandits nor incompetent incendiaries, as some of our opponents would have you believe.

"Public ownership is the fundamental principle of our American Constitution. We believe that the private ownership of public utilities is the source of all political corruption. It is the civic duty of the workingman to vote our ticket.

"A minister of this city expressed himself from the pulpit last Sunday as being fearful that Los Angeles might be overtaken by a reign of political anarchy such as that which he represented as existing in San Francisco.

"Innocent soul that he is, he evidently does not know that his fears long since have been realized here. The political conditions in Los Angeles for years have been worse than those of San Francisco. A local Ruef runs our politics. The Democratic party and the Republican party alike are parts of the machine of this local Ruef.

"Let some great catastrophe strike Los Angeles as it struck San Francisco and you will have a revelation of corruption worse than any that ever existed in San Francisco.

"Ask any man with a grain of honesty in his make-up and who has a knowledge of our political affairs, and he will tell you stories of graft as reeking of corruption as any that ever have been told.

"Ask him how any Councilman drawing a salary of $100 a month can live at a $500-a-month rate and save money. Ask him about some of the jobs that have been put through here and you will find splendid filth fishing.

PLATFORM STOLEN.

"It is true that the Democratic party has stolen our public-ownership platform, but if you wait for Arthur Harper to give you public ownership you will wait a long time. The Democratic party of Los Angeles is the flunky that does the cheap chores of the Republican boss.

"You union men cannot vote for the Republican party or for the Democratic party or for that bunch of hypocrisy connected with the Non-Partisan organization. That Non-Partisan outfit is a sacrilege on civic righteousness. It is an insult to the American intelligence. If you are going to vote for your own good, you must vote for the Public Ownership ticket.

"The 38,000 working people of Los Angeles have it in their power to root Ruefism out of Los Angeles, but you will have to stick together to do it.

"Mr. Gates, the Non-Partisan candidate, says there is no corruption, no graft, in Los Angeles. And if he is elected he will not go looking for it.

"The corporations and the moneyed classes essay to run the politics of the city. They would banish the workingman because he has no money.

"Why, bless you, Battling Nelson in one month made more money than Gates, Dr. Lindley and Harper make in one year. Therefore, according to the reasoning of some of these people, he would make a safer candidate than any of them. That sanctimonious old coyote, Rockefeller, has made more money than Gladstone, Lincoln, McKinley and Roosevelt; therefore long reign Rockefeller. [Cheers.]

THE DEMAGOGUE!

"The only charge against me as a candidate is that I am a man who works with his hands. It is for you union men to stand by me and to see that I am elected—then we shall see who is best able to rule a city.

"This Public Ownership ticket is the only safe one for union men to vote. If we stand together in this fight we can win. If we do not stand together we shall miss our greatest opportunity. With the Republicans divided, this is the chance of our lives."

At the close of Wilson's address the moving picture machine again got into action, part of its function being to throw on the screen the portraits of the Public Ownership candidates, one for each municipal office, including Council and Board of Education.

It was announced that future meetings are to be held each evening until the end of the campaign—several times each evening where possible.

NON-PARTISANS HOLD RALLY.

MEETING LISTENS TO MR. GATES AND OTHER SPEAKERS.

Cheers for Ben Ward and for Candidate for Mayor—Question of the Withdrawal of One of Mayoralty Nominees Touched Upon—Mr. Gates Thinks Dr. Lindley Should Pull Out

There were many empty seats in Simpson Auditorium last night at the opening meeting of the Non-Partisan city campaign. The body of the hall was comfortably filled, but the balcony only partly so and the gallery was entirely vacant. In spite of this, however, there was a strong non-partisan sentiment manifested and considerable enthusiasm.

James A. Foshay presided and spoke of the necessity of preparing to care for the "million people" who will live in Los Angeles within the next few years. Will A. Harris was the first speaker and dwelt upon the sentiment of separation of national and municipal politics, a sentiment which was heartily applauded.

"I would rather follow Elihu Root, Secretary Taft and Theodore Roosevelt in this priciple than J. W. McKinley, Walter Parker and Luther Brown," cried the speaker and there was wild applause.

Then there was a shout for Ben Ward, who was on the platform and he had to get up and make a speech. He told of the opportunities for graft there would be in the Owens River enterprise and the necessity for honest men at the head of the city's government, advocated the election of Walter Mallard—his "right bower" for eight years—as City Assessor and begged all the women to see that their husbands, brothers and sweethearts voted the Non-Partisan ticket.

Judge Lusk, candidate for City Tax Collector, and Niles Pease, candidate for Councilman from the Fourth Ward, also spoke. Then there was a cry for Gates and other speakers scheduled did not speak.

Lee C. Gates, candidate on the Non-Partisan ticket for Mayor, was given an enthusiastic reception and three cheers. He spoke at length and dwelt upon the sentiment for "common honesty" in politics as exemplified by the Non-Partisan movement.

"One of the purposes of this movement," said Mr. Gates, "is to achieve political liberty. There is no power or boss who has the right to dictate to us, that right is with the people and that is the only boss I shall recognize if elected. Is he honest? Is he capable? These were the only questions asked by the committee which nominated the Non-Partisan candidates, and the men measure up."

Continuing, he said: "It has been said that 'Gates should withdraw.' I did not solicit the nomination, but when I was nominated by the Non-Partisan committee I went before the Republican Convention and sought the nomination at its hands, arguing with the same arguments now used to press my withdrawal. But the Republican Convention nominated Dr. Lindley; the responsibility is now with that convention. If any man is to withdraw it must be the candidate of that convention and not myself."

Mr. Gates stated that there was serious danger in wholesale public ownership and that if we made it known that this city was going to enter upon a programme of public ownership of everything it would destroy the credit of the city and we could not sell our bonds.

GILLETT AT EUREKA.

THRONGS WELCOME HIM.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

EUREKA, Nov. 10.—Gov.-elect Gillett arrived today on the City of Topeka. Upon the arrival of the steamer business was generally suspended at the sound of the fire whistles.

The many whistles brought hundreds of people to the wharf to welcome the distinguished passengers. Every automobile in Eureka turned out elaborately decorated.

The houses and public buildings throughout the city were decorated. The shipping on the bay also unfurled bunting. The tugs Ranger, Pomona and Antelope and several smaller craft with bands and hundreds of citizens aboard steamed out to meet the City of Topeka.

As Mr. and Mrs. Gillett stepped down the plank they were placed in automobiles, and, escorted by leading citizens, were taken through the streets. As the procession wended its way along the streets throngs of people from all parts of the country greeted it. All of which was graciously acknowledged by Mr. Gillett.

M'CARREN RESISTS.

DENIES COMMITTEE POWER.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—Patrick H. McCarren, the Brooklyn Democratic leader, whose membership in the Democratic State Committee is questioned as a result of a resolution to investigate his conduct during the recent election, which was adopted by the State Committee yesterday, declared today that the State Committee is without power to depose him or any other member, and that he will take the matter into the courts if necessary to prevent such action.

McCarren contends that a Democratic State convention is the only body which has the power to remove a committee member.

THE POLITICAL WATCH TOWER

Now the "Good Government party" has appeared on the local political horizon, with A. C. Harper as its nominee for Mayor and Dr. Howton as its candidate for Councilman of the Sixth Ward. Petitions of this party were in circulation yesterday, and it is expected they will be filed at the office of the City Clerk before next Wednesday with enough signatures to gain for the tickets a place on the official ballot. Aside from Harper and Howton the ticket is the same as that of the Non-Partisan City Central Committee.

The Good Government party has been launched, it is said, principally for the purpose of preventing the use of voting machines at the municipal election on December 4.

Use of the voting machines is opposed by persons who think the mechanical devices will operate for the success of the straight Republican ticket. There was only one way to make the use of the machines impossible—that was to bring another party into competition for a place at the head of a column. Result—the Good Government party.

No one seems to know who is the father of the Good Government—playfully known as the "goo-goo"—petition, but it is known that Dr. Howton, who aspires to succeed himself as Councilman from the Sixth Ward, was not at all averse to the movement, while Mr. Harper naturally would not object to heading another ticket that might bring him votes.

Should the "Good Government" petition bear the requisite number of signers a place must be given its ticket on the official ballot. As only about one thousand names are required it seems probable that the place will be obtained.

This will mean that at least seven columns will be required on the ballot for the various parties, regular and independent. So far as known, a column each will be required by the Republicans, Democrats, Socialists, Prohibitionists, Non-Partisan City Central Committee, Public Ownership Party and Good Government party. There must be another column for independent nominations and still another for the Constitutional amendments, so it is quite clear that voters may as well reconcile themselves to the use once more of the Australian blanket ballot.

Independent nominations filed to date include those of Dr. Howton and C. E. Benedict, candidates for Councilman of the Sixth Ward; Enoch Hidden, for Second Ward Councilman, and Daniel Ellsworth for Councilman of the Third Ward. Others are likely to appear before the 14th inst., the date at which all applications for place on the official ballot must be filed.

Plans for the Republican city campaign will be mapped out at a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Republican City Central Committee, which is to be held tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock at room 312 Germain building, No. 224 South Spring street. The committee will make its headquarters for the campaign at this new location, just vacated by the Republican County Central Committee.

Chairman D. C. McGarvin, who was chosen again to lead the campaign, announced the names yesterday of the members of the Executive Committee. J. H. Wright, who for two years has acted as secretary, will retain that position, having obtained a leave of absence from his duties as a deputy county clerk.

Members of the committee are as follows: At large, George N. Black, John G. Mott, P. P. O'Brien, H. L. Cornish, Dr. Carl Kurtz, Gavin W. Craig. First Ward, C. O. Winters, John H. Jeffries; Second, Dr. E. H. Garrett, Erwin Dingle; Third, John C. Austin, Dr. T. G. Myers; Fourth, A. P. Fleming, A. J. Morganstern; Fifth, Seth Hart, John H. Nightingale; Sixth, A. M. Cates, Paul J. McCormick; Seventh, R. L. Hazen, W. E. Darby; Eighth, R. O. Bell, J. L. Ford; Ninth, Dr. D. C. Barber, Myers T. White.

Dr. Walter Lindley, Republican candidate for Mayor, has removed his campaign headquarters from the Hollenbeck Hotel and hereafter will direct operations from a suite of rooms adjoining the new offices of the Republican City Central Committee in the Germain building. Maj. Truman Cole will be in charge as chairman of the Lindley Campaign Committee, while the candidate himself will devote his entire time to the needs of his campaign.

TAFT REJOICES IN VICTORY.

DODGES PRESIDENTIAL TALK.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

KANSAS CITY (Mo.) Nov. 10.—Secretary of War Taft arrived here tonight from Fort Leavenworth, and an hour later he left for Fort Riley, where he will spend Sunday.

Asked how he liked the results of the election, he said:

"They were most satisfactory. There were certain spots which might have fared better, but as a whole the result was a Republican victory. I regret that the Democracy has triumphed in Missouri, but I am glad the Republicans have been victorious in Kansas. It was a fight against great odds, and being an 'off year' made it doubly dangerous."

The Secretary refused to discuss the possibility of his own nomination for the Presidency in 1908, and the possibility of President Roosevelt being nominated.

DELEGATES GO TO FISH MEET.

State Association Convenes for Work at Monterey.

Many Important Measures to Come Up This Year.

Evasions of Lobster Law a Menace to Supply.

J. F. Jones and Harry T. Payne, delegates of the Southern California Rod and Reel Club, left Thursday afternoon for Monterey to attend the annual meeting of the California Game and Fish Protective Association, of which Payne is president, and the local club is a member.

The delegates carried with them proxies and credentials authorizing them to represent the local fishermen's club to its full extent of five votes, and bore in their pockets copies of the protective measures adopted by the club at its last meeting and since amplified by its legislative committee.

The annual session of the California Game and Fish Protective Association partakes of the nature of a social event, although it has plenty of serious business to attend to every year, and particlarly true is this of such seasons as the Legislature meets. The session began Friday, and was not concluded until last night, today and part of tomorrow being given over to entertaining the visitors, who comprise delegates from all over the State of California. Shooting trips after quail, pigeons and other birds are part of the fun, and a big banquet is always served.

Southern California's representation is somewhat lighter than usual this year, but several leading local sportsmen, in addition to those named, made the trip. The needs of this section in the way of game laws are already well known, and it is understood an effort to pass a thirty-five bird bag limit on ducks will be made. This is conceded to be a most effective method of protection, as it practically disposes of market hunting if it be enforced.

Of late some amusing methods of beating the duck law have come to light, the ingenuity of the commission dealers being fit to win fame for them in legitimate lines. Thanks to the effort of Deputy Fish Commissioner Pritchard of Santa Monica, the illegal traffic in game has been made rather unprofitable in this part of the State, but no one else than Pritchard has any idea of the lengths to which he has had to go to break up in part, at least, the illegal traffic.

One of the commonest evasions of the bag limit clause, which says no man shall have more than fifty ducks in his possession in any one day, is that worked by some unscrupulous commission men, who have perhaps a dozen firms acting as "stools" and "fences" for them. The commission man simply has ducks shipped to these "stool pigeons," and when he sells, issues an order to them to deliver so many ducks to so and so. Of course the stool pigeons take their trouble out in pay, so the business is not so profitable as otherwise it might be.

COARSE DECEPTIONS.

Of the coarser gas-pipe and slung-shot methods of avoiding the bag limit it may be cited shipping ducks in sacks with rabbits on top; in barrels or boxes sandwiched between rabbits or other game—sometimes geese. Occasionally they come in cases marked "poultry" with chickens either side.

Hunters ship in, each using as many as a dozen different names in the San Joaquin Valley, and in San Francisco some of the commission men organized what they call the "Hunters' Transfer," a quasi-common carrier which was designed to take advantage of certain provisions of the law allowing common carriers to have any number of birds in their possession if properly tagged with the name and address of the hunter. This dodge probably would not have stood a vigorous campaign, but it is a notorious fact that the dealers were never fought vigorously at all in San Francisco under the corrupt Ruef administration. Some of the fish commission deputies claim they were ordered to keep their hands off the duck business up north. This is one of the things that Gov. Gillett will investigate, for he is a sportsman himself, and said to be a stanch friend of game protection.

The need of protection to sea fish is illustrated in the case of the lobster, or crawfish. This fellow is in no sense a game product and the sportsman has no use for him whatever except as bait. It is the old story of the short-sighted market fisherman exterminating his livelihood unless enforced to protect his own best interests by suitable legislation.

Crawfish a few years ago were so common and so cheap that anybody could afford them. This season one man took seventy-five pounds only from over eighty traps, and others did little better, while a crawfish that formerly could have been had for 25 cents cost from 75 cents to $1.

Many crawfishermen are quitting the business and turning to something else. There is a season on crawfish and a size limit of nine and a half inches, but the supply has been decreasing with shocking speed nevertheless.

Deputy Fish Commissioner Pritchard has watched these things closely and argues for an absolute prohibition of the crawfishery for five years.

HOW THE JAPS FISH.

The Japanese are fishing for these fellows with a kind of short net in which the crawfish becomes entangled, and is brought to the surface. The trouble is, small craws become fast in the net; Mr. Jap hits them a wallop over the gunwale, breaks them in two and throws the tails into a barrel to save, thus violating the nine and a half-inch law, and killing perhaps twenty crawfish to get one of marketable size. He uses the smaller ones for baiting his set lines. The Japs often set a series of these short nets around a field of kelp and get every crawfish there going or coming, for the net works both ways. It is therefore small wonder the fish are being exterminated.

Prohibition of catching crawfish in any other way than by trap is the second best thing Pritchard has to offer if the closing of the season were found impracticable.

Clams also demand protection. Just how to go about this is a very difficult matter for the clam traffic is peculiarly hard to regulate. They are being exterminated with surprising swiftness, however, and will be extinct in five years at the present gait. Some of the counties have endeavored to protect them by passing closed seasons and limitations upon the number of clams a man may take in any one day. Other counties limit the traffic by forbidding shipping out of the county. These laws are all violated more or less.

By the text of Judge Frank F. Oster's decision at San Bernardino not long since, it is argued that much of the present game law is inoperative. Oster in his opinion took the stand that inasmuch as the people had voted in favor of the game districting amendment and the Legislature had never fixed the districts, subsequent game legislation was invalid. It is understood these game districts will be fixed at the coming meeting. There will be three of them, and it is believed a fish commissioner will be appointed from each, in which case Southern California will have the representation she so much desires.

ABUSE OF CORPORATIONS.

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 8.—[To the Editor of The Times]: Now that "the bitterest campaign of its size" is over, when will its echoes end? Our wise men should meditate, "lest we forget."

The most unfortunate feature of this campaign has been the exaggeration of the shortcomings of capital incorporated. Men of abundance of wealth and owners of not a few good shares in "honest corporations" have orated on the greed and dishonesty of our corporations until they actually believed them, in a measure, a menace to our development, instead of being the rock on which we have built, furnishing the rocks which have built us, the pride and hope of our future greatness. All such talk from men of influence is disintegrating, and harmful, swelling the ranks of the dissatisfied, and depleting the two great parties, whose wisdom and folly acting on each other have and should safeguard our municipal, State and national institutions.

It is preposterous and a contradiction to assert that a man whose whole life has been devoted to a special line of work on salary becomes more dishonest than the individual who works wholly for himself and gets all the results of his labor and cunning.

The managing or responsible men of of all corporations, getting from $2000 to $100,000 annual salary, for the most part, originally at least, had no interest but salary, and were selected, retained and advanced, first, because they were found to be absolutely honest, and secondly, because they proved to be faithful and competent.

It will never be known how much the efforts of Collis P. Huntington advanced the development of this coast, an almost hopeless task at first, and a task that might have waited years for a champion. Mr. Huntington considered Los Angeles as unjust and ungrateful to him, and said he would "make the grass grow in its streets." Had it not been for the millions of money saved in fuel and paid out in this city by the oil industry there might have been some mossy spots.

Although berated and defamed by demagogues, the name of Collis P. Huntington and his Central and Southern Pacific Railways will yet be blazed on our corner-stone.

It is well known that for forty years past railroads insurance companies and interstate corporations have been compelled to send a strong lobby to each State Legislature, not to secure legislation in their interest but to prevent unbearable legislation. It was a grave mistake, because latterly "blood money bills" have been introduced in every State in multiple, and the money used at Albany, N. Y., is only a pittance that dishonest individual blood-suckers have extorted from corporations.

About ten years ago we had a Psychological Research Club, that met weekly for two years, at which we had several of the best spiritual mediums on the coast. Collis P. Huntington said to us, through the medium, that he had always worked against the interests of Los Angeles, and that he wished to make amends; he asked us to send good thoughts to him and to pray for him; he said that he was influencing certain men who would come to Los Angeles and do for it more than he could have done in his time. After that he spoke to us at every meeting, and since then Mr. Henry E. Huntington has done for Los Angles more than the most sanguine could expect. Call this nonsense or co-incidence, the above are facts; and considering the conditions in Los Angeles, "the tourist town," when Mr. Henry E. Huntington organized his numerous corporations here we have abundant reasons to think well and speak kindly of Mr. Henry E. Huntington.

Many cities, more prosperous than Los Angeles then was, would raise a handsome bonus and give ten years' exemption from all taxes to Mr. Huntington as an appreciation for such development.

If Mr. Huntington has made any money in Los Angeles it has been from his land investments, and every land-owner in the city and county has got a wholesome dividend from the same source.

Let us cultivate better thoughts and comment on our corporations, and thank God that, if our individual taxes are a little more, we have got more to pay them with.

Capital, incorporated or not, is the friend of all men who need money and are willing to do any kind of work for it. Capitalists can live without labor or laboring. Let us who need capital be glad that some are willing to risk their money in developments which require our labor.

Gen. Bell on the Value of Education.

Gen. J. Franklin eBll, while at the head of the artillery and infantry school at Fort Leavenworth, was invited to a dinner given in the cause of education. The educators were called upon and glorified education. Then Gen. Bell said:

"I have been interested in what the speakers preceding me have said about education, and still think that out our yay, in the West, not so much store is set by it as here in the East. I am reminded of the story of the two boys in Omaha who, I regret to say, were playing poker in a doorway, using kernels of corn for chips. During the game one pushed in a bunch of kernels, and said: 'I'll bet you a hundred.' 'I'll raise it a hundred,' said the other. 'I'll raise that a thousand.' 'I'll see the thousand and raise it a million. 'I'll raise that million a billion.' 'I'll see the billion and raise you a trillion.' The other boy was stumped. He thought a long time, but he could not remember what came next, so he said bitterly: 'Take it, you educated son of a gun.'"

Bonaparte Urges Preparedness.

At the meeting of the Spanish War veterans in Washington Secretary Bonaparte said the safety of the American republic will always depend on the readiness of its citizens to remember and to act under the remembrance that every citizen is a soldier in reserve.

"Give us three months," he said, "in which to prepare and we need have no fear of the enmity of any power or any combination of powers. Given six months and there will be no danger at all. But we must have an army and a navy and a national defence which would enable us to ward off an enemy." He urged that influence be brought to bear on public opinion and

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

[illegible] Nov. 5.—The fiercest battle [illegible] fought in the United [illegible] between the advocates and [illegible] of public ownership and [illegible] is to be waged at the polls [illegible] next spring. I may [illegible] half my time [illegible] to public af[illegible] of interest and a sense of duty. My experience tells me that persons who decry the lack of public spirit in the United States and compare that to our discredit with the activity shown in public business by private citizens in Great Britain, fail utterly to appreciate the growing number of Americans who are turning their attention to the betterment of municipal government.

"As yet, this is more true of smaller cities than of our great centers of population. Modern transportation has brought within quick and easy reach of the big cities, many suburban municipalities. There you will find many men, occupied with business during the day 'in town' who reach their suburban houses late in the afternoon and after their home dinners are glad to meet their neighbors and consult about local improvements where their families live and their children are growing up."

Mr. Revell was asked as to the political effect of extended municipal ownership in Chicago. He replied:

"If all the municipal trading that is proposed were to be put into operation in this city, its employés would number somewhere between 40,000 and 60,000. Let us put it at 50,000. It is estimated that the average 'influence' of each municipal employé today includes four voters. In theory, that would mean 200,000 voters 'influenced' by the municipal civil service. As there are not far from 300,000 voters in Chicago, the political power that such a body of municipal servants could wield, if organized and acting together, is portentous. They could put any Mayor in or out of office.

"It is claimed that an efficient civil service law would abate this danger. That is a good theory, but it does not work well in practice. Such a law is always good in operation if the mayor is both upright and strong and if he can say to the Civil Service Commissioners, and mean it, 'Now you gentlemen will be held strictly responsible for any deterioration in the public service.' But everybody knows how difficult that is and how rarely it is done. There are almost countless ways of evading a civil service law, if evasion is desired."

ELECTRIC ROAD'S PROGRESS.

Work on Covina Line Being Rushed. Through Traffic Possible by February.

COVINA, Nov. 10.—The past week has been marked with activity in electric road building on the Covina line. Four hundred and twenty men have been engaged in laying the second track from Vineland to the eastern city limits, and this work will practically be completed by next week. The crossing over the Southern Pacific as Vineland was accomplished Friday, and a large force is now engaged in laying rails from that point to the San Gabriel River, which will be reached on Wednesday of next week. The construction company will then utilize the line for hauling gravel to ballast the track within the city limits.

The bridge across the San Gabriel is nearing completion, and with two large forces of graders working west of El Monte, it is announced that the grading will be completed from Los Angeles to Covina within five weeks. Through traffic seems assured by February 1.

COVINA CULLINGS.

The Frank Snodgrass orange grove of twelve acres, on the San Bernardino road, has been sold for $11,000. The purchaser is Mr. Crowthers, who arrived recently from the East. He is accompanied by his wife and family and has secured the property for a home.

O. B. Evans and F. K. Roth of Los Angeles have leased the Warner storeroom on Citrus avenue for a period of five years. They will conduct a candy, confectionery and ice cream parlor.

PULL FOR ALHAMBRA.

ALHAMBRA, Nov. 10.—At a meeting of the Alhambra Improvement Club, held at Borden's Hall last night, A. O. Weeks was made president; Dr. H. F. Bishop, secretary, and Harry Rose, treasurer. The club appointed committees on street, trees and sidewalk parking, street cleaning, on vacant lots and on school lot flower planting. The club purposes to do much toward tidying up the city and maintaining neatness in appearance generally. The club is to meet fortnightly.

The mass meeting at the High School Auditorium last evening was largely attended, and from the enthusiasm displayed the proposed issue of bonds will carry by an overwhelming vote.

The entire voting strength here at the election two years ago was just half the number who voted last Tuesday.

BIG SWINDLE UNEARTHED.

Son of New Orleans Judge Implicated.

Bold Attempt to Rob Bank Frustrated.

Gang of Six Believed to Have a Record.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW ORLEANS (La.) Nov. 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] One of the boldest and most gigantic bank swindles on record is being unearthed by the police and detective forces.

Six young men, one a lawyer and son of a presiding judge, are now under arrest. They are: Fred Deibel, Jr., attorney and alleged principal in the big Cosmopolitan Bank swindle of a few months ago; John J. Flanagan, John Barret, Louis Armour, Joseph Porter and Alfred S. Mims.

The Commercial Bank and Trust Company had been singled out for the big trick, according to the police. One of the party, Louis Armour, had appeared at the bank, a prepossessing fellow, and made a deposit of $600, representing himself as a big timber man. This was followed by a check for $47,386 on the New York Cotton Exchange Bank.

The check was accepted in deposit, but before the gang could draw on it the bank became suspicious and discovered the rank forgery.

The police now believe it is this same crowd that worked the check swindle on the law firm of McCloskey & Benedict for $16,320, and later on the Cosmopolitan Bank that netted over $20,000.

Flanagan is said to have made a partial confession tonight, implicating Deibel and others as the chief promoters.

NIGHT WATCHMAN SLAIN.

MURDERER ENDS LIFE.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

SALEM (Or.) Nov. 10.—Ben Gholson, night watchman in a livery stable, was shot and killed this morning by Victor D'Anna, an engineer and surveyor in the employ of an electric company. D'Anna had been drinking heavily all night and early this morning went to the stable where Gholson was employed and created a disturbance. Gholson called in a policeman, who took D'Anna in charge, but later he was released on his own recognizance.

D'Anna then went to his room and wrote a note to his father saying that he could not stand the disgrace. He then went to the stable and shot Gholson, who ran across the street to another stable and died before surgical aid could be summoned.

D'Anna escaped arrest and went to the farm of the State Asylum for the Insane, six miles from this city, where he blew out his brains with the same revolver with which he had killed Gholson.

CRIME BRIEFS.

Gets Change of Venue.

SEATTLE, Nov. 10.—Chester Thompson, accused of murder in the first degree for the killing of G. Meade Emory on July 7, will be tried in Tacoma. Judge Frater this morning granted a change of venue, asked for by Thompson. Will H. Thompson, the father of the boy, made an affidavit that his son now is insane.

Unknown Ends Life.

SACRAMENTO, Nov. 10.—An unknown man committed suicide just before 12 o'clock today on the bridge across the Sacramento River in this city. He fired two pistol shots into his head and fell back into the river. The river is being dragged for the body.

Dies from Wound.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 10.—Julius Fauman, a merchant from Stent, Tuolumne county, who arrived in this city several days ago and shot himself yesterday while despondent, died in a hospital today from the effects of the wound.

Slays Wife in Crowd.

HARRISBURG (Pa.) Nov. 10—Jacob Stehman, a boilermaker employed at the Pennsylvania Steel Works at Steelton, near here, shot and killed his wife in the crowded Broad-street market today. Stehman and his wife have been living apart. Stehman shot her after failing to induce his wife to return to him.

Two Slain by Boy.

STOCKTON, Nov. 10.—A verdict was rendered by the Coroner's jury this afternoon, after investigating the means by which John and Louis Raggio, 12 and 14 years of age, respectively, were killed, to the effect that deceased had come to their death from a gunshot wound inflicted by Robert Benson, 15 years of age.

The testimony showed that in a spirit of fun Benson pointed his gun at the other boys and shot them. Benson, who is in jail pending an investigation, claims that he put in an empty shell.

GOOD STUFF.

A Confirmed Coffee Drinker Takes to Postum.

A housewife was recently surprised when cook served Postum instead of coffee. She says:

'For the last five or six years I have been troubled with nervousness, indigestion and heart trouble. I couldn't get any benefit from the doctor's medicine, so finally he ordered me to stop drinking coffee, which I did.

I drank hot water while taking the doctor's medicine, with some improvement, then went back to coffee with the same old trouble as before.

"A new servant girl told me about Postum—said her folks used it and liked it in place of coffee. We got a package but I told her I did not believe my husband would like it, as he was a great coffee drinker.

"To my surprise he called for a third cup, said it was "good stuff" and wanted to know what it was. We have used Postum ever since and both feel better than we have in years.

My husband used to have bad spells with his stomach and would be sick three or four days, during which time he could not eat or drink anything. But since he gave up coffee and took to Postum, he has had no more trouble, and we now fully believe it was all caused by coffee.

"I have not had any return of my former troubles since drinking Postum, and feel better and can do more work than in the last ten years. We tell everyone about it—some say they tried it and did not like it. I tell them it makes all the difference as to how it's made. It should be made according to directions—then it is delicious."

The idea of the thing, according to Mr. McLendon, is a great exposition and a conference of representatives of world powers looking toward the establishment of peace. He gives out a large and imposing list of directors.

EAST WHITTIER NOTES.

EAST WHITTIER, Nov. 10.—Arthur Swain, one of the lemon growers of East Whittier, who has just returned from an automobile trip through the orange and lemon growing sections of Los Angeles county, stated this morning to The Times reporter that the Eeast Whittier orange will be the earliest of any in the county. "Why," said he, "in no other place did I see the fruit beginning to grow yellow, and this state of things is the rule here. East Whittier fruit will almost all of it be picked for the Christmas trade, and should result in fine prices for the growers. The trees are very heavily loaded, props being necessary in many cases, and both trees and fruit are almost altogether free from scale. All these things make East Whittier people more than satisfied with this outlook."

S. W. Benton and wife are entertaining a house party of Los Angeles people, among the number being Mr. and Mrs. Newborn, Miss Newborn, Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Phelps and their little daughter, Mrs. Gossard and Miss Ethel Gossard. Another guest at the same home is Mr. Kennedy of Indianapolis. Sunday these guests and a number of close relatives will enjoy a big turkey dinner, covers being laid for twenty-five.

A party of East Whittier ladies were very charmingly entertained at luncheon yesterday by Mrs. Fred G. Stone of Los Angeles. The ladies attending from this place included Mmes. A. H. Cheney, T. H. Mendenhall, H. L. Marsden, E. N. Thomas, S. W. Barton and J. W. Kirkwood.

New Life To The Old

MR. ZINAH HAWLEY.

Mr. Zinah Hawley, who is eighty-three years of age, says that Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey has kept him young and vigorous. He cannot say too much in praise of this great tonic stimulant and renewer of youth.

"I have just passed my 83rd year and I have always enjoyed good health until about one year ago, when I commenced to feel the effects of old age. During the past six months I have been taking your Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey and I have been greatly benefited. I consider it the means of prolonging my life and at present would not be without it." Zinah Hawley, Edwardsville, N. Y., St. Lawrence County, May 27, 1906.

Duffey's Pure Malt Whiskey

is an absolutely pure gentle and invigorating stimulant and tonic, builds up the nerve tissues, tones up the heart, gives power to the brain, strength and elasticity to the muscles and richness to the blood. It brings into action all the vital forces, it makes digestion perfect, and enables you to get from the food you eat all the nourishment it contains. It is invaluable for overworked men, delicate women and sickly children. It strengthens and sustains the system, is a promoter of good health and longevity, makes the old young and keeps the young strong. Duffy's is the only whiskey that is recognized as a medicine and is guaranteed absolutely free from fusel oil.

BEWARE of dangerous imitations and substitutes. They are positively harmful and are sold for profit only by unscrupulous dealers. Look for the trade-mark, the "Old Chemist," on the label, and be certain the seal over the cork is unbroken. All druggists or grocers, or direct $1.00 a bottle. Doctor's advice and medical booklet free. Duffy Malt Whiskey Co., Rochester, New York.

"The Owl" Makes the Price

In the future, when you see in the advertisement of any other drug house a standard article offered at a special sale price---you can depend upon getting it for less at "The Owl" Stores. Try it and see.

It Works Out Just This Way

"THE OWL" means exactly what it says. To illustrate, if Mennen's Talcum Powder is advertised by some other druggist for 13c, you can get it at "The Owl" for 10c.

Or Absorbent Cotton--there is a standard drug sundry. If you are offered a pound box at 27c, "The Owl" has it for you at 25c.

And so on right down the line--it makes no difference what the commodity is, so long as it's a standard preparation--"The Owl" absolutely makes the price.

There will be no changes in "The Owl's" prices for patent medicines which we already sell at such an extremely low price that no lower quotations are possible.

"Special Sale," "Special Price," or what not--it makes no difference. "The Owl" makes the price--you can depend upon that.

Officers and directors of the Bixby Hotel Company, above, who inspected the collapsed portion of the building. In the center is President Bixby. The second man from the left is Architect Austion; second from the right is D. M. Linard, lessee of the hotel; to the left of President Bixby is Herbert J. Goudge, attorney for the company. The lower picture represents the broken supports, indicating that the fatal break was above the fourth floor.

SUPPOSED CORPSES GO UP TO RESCUE.

Two Men Believed Buried Under Bixby Hotel Ruins Safe—Last of Ten Bodies Out—Coroner Has a Jury for Tomorrow.

NUMBED to sleep by the touch of the wand of death, the gaunt skeleton of the Bixby Hotel stands desolate on the sands of Long Beach, its great heart torn out, while clad in sable garb the pretty city by the sea mourns for its lost.

Crushed almost beyond recognition, the bodies of ten workmen lie in the city morgue. A coroner's jury, hastily impaneled, met in the parlors of an undertaking establishment on First street in the seaside city yesterday morning and rendered a verdict that the workmen were crushed to death in a falling building. Tomorrow morning the jury will reconvene in the City Hall at Long Beach to attempt to fix the blame for the disaster.

Nine other maimed figures lie in the hospital or in homes about Long Beach. Two are so severely injured that they will never handle plummet and square on another building, but in two households there is a great joy. While the workmen delved in the ruins yesterday morning seeking for the bodies of W. A. Mourrer and Fred Collins, the two men walked up to the guards on the picket line and asked for permission to join in the work of rescue. Neither had gone to work Friday morning; and by a grim freak of fortune their truancy probably saved their lives.

Mourrer's gray-haired mother thought he went to work Friday. All that night she kept vigil on the beach waiting by the great cone of debris that she thought contained her boy. At sight of him yesterday morning she dropped in a faint.

The corrected list of dead is as follows:

LOUIS FELKER, carpenter, residence Second and Pennsylvania avenue, Long Beach.

B. A. HUBBELL, carpenter; residence, West First street, Long Beach.

LOUIS PHILLIPS, carpenter; residence, Maple avenue, Long Beach.

CARLTON BRASHEAR, carpenter; residence, Long Beach.

F. NORTON, carpenter; residence, Third street, Long Beach.

ROSCOE COLLINS, tile layer; residence, American avenue, Long Beach.

RICHARD M. PERKINS, stripper; residence, Second street, Long Beach.

AFTON BEJANSON, carpenter; residence, California avenue, Long Beach.

ALBERT HARLEY, carpenter; residence, East Main street, Long Beach.

LAST BODY RECOVERED.

At high noon yesterday the last body was recovered. It was that of Roscoe Collins, who went to Long Beach from Bakersfield as a plumber's helper. Collins was working with four plumbers on the second floor when the crash came. He fled with the rest, but in the wrong direction.

As soon as Collins's body was recovered, Contractor Spaulding asked that the volunteer rescue corps of workers be withdrawn. He notified the Mayor and the Chief of Police that all men at work on the building had been accounted for. Later he issued a signed statement to this effect, and the volunteer crews of the Pacific Electric and Salt Lake railroads retired.

Spaulding said at the time that his men would continue the work of clearing away the debris. But he at once paid them off and dismissed them.

Locked in by hundreds of tons of broken cement, crushed tiles and twisted, broken steel, the footings at the base of the great center columns are still guarding their secret. Whether shifting sands was partially responsible for the collapse of the building will not be known definitely when the coroner's jury meets Monday morning.

WHERE DID IT BREAK?

In the face of the testimony of the architects and experts who have viewed the ruins of the building, Contractor Spaulding and Supt. Behm still insist that the collapse was caused by something giving way below the first floor. The great center columns are crushed and broken. All that remains of them is cracked stubs piercing through the debris. Whether their bases are out of plumb can only be determined by excavating.

Coroner Trout went to Long Beach early yesterday morning and empaneled the following-named jurors, the men being selected by Constable Lynn: M. B. Irvine, real estate dealer; Frank E. Strong, real estate dealer; C. P. Patterson, retired merchant; B. Paine, real estate dealer; W. P. Wilson, retired merchant; W. H. Chandler, real estate agent; W. J. Webb, real estate agent; A. C. Grube, confectioner; E. R. Brown, jeweler; A. Malone, capitalist.

A brief preliminary session was held, and the jurymen formed part of their verdict telling how the men met their death. This was only a formality, in order that the bodies might be removed for burial. The real work of the inquest will commence Monday morning.

FORMS OFF TOO SOON.

During the forenoon a committee of local architects and builders went over the structure making a careful inspection. They will make no report until the Coroner's jury has returned its verdict.

From the comments made by the members of the committee while the inspection was taking place it was easy to judge that they were not very enthusiastic over the manner in which the construction work had been carried on. Some condemned the "mongrel" construction of the hotel. All joined in the opinion that the forms had been removed too soon from the columns supporting the fifth and sixth floors.

During the afternoon the officers and directors of the Bixby Hotel Company visited the ruins and discussed plans for replacing the great center section.

A sudden coolness has sprung up between the owners and the contractor. They unite in condemning him for his haste in stripping the fifth floor.

Architect Austin says there can be no question but that the collapse was caused solely by the too hasty removal of the fifth floor supports. The contract provides that the forms should remain in place for thirty days. Supt. Behm has admitted that they were removed on the eighteenth day. Some of his men say that the supports were not permitted to remain that long.

One fact was easily determined yesterday: there was a great deal of "green" cement in the fifth floor at the time the collapse occurred. The center panel of this floor had not been stripped but from the others the timbers had been removed to be placed on top to support the roof, where cement was being laid.

WINGS DESERTED.

Both wings of the building were deserted yesterday afternoon. Not a workman was employed within the wire inclosure. Hanging to uprights on the fifth floor were coats whose wearers sleep on slabs in the morgue. Swinging from supports were lunch boxes with the contents untouched—lunches prepared for men who would never eat another meal.

Strewn about the roof lay hatchet and saw just as they fell when the owners fled. The tamps for the cement had been carried below in the collapse.

Experts looked the fifth floor over carefully and carried away samples of the damp cement. Some of these samples will be shown to the Coroner's jury tomorrow.

Carpenters employed by Contractor Spaulding have not wavered in their allegiance to him. Those who worked on the top floor when the collapse came—that is, as many of them as escaped to tell the story—cling to their first assertions that the break came from below. In this belief they are evidently sincere; but it has been pointed out that if the fifth floor gave way beneath the weight of cement and the jar of the tamping above, the men on the top could not tell whether the break started in the first floor or the fifth.

But the architects say that if the supports had been left below the fifth floor for thirty days there would have been no story of disaster at the Bixby Hotel to relate.

Long Beach is still stricken with the horror of it all. The little city is now engaged in burying its dead. Later it will seek to fix the blame.

The heroes and heroines of Friday have disappeared—in their place are bruised men and wild-eyed women who tell tales of the horror as improbable as that of the collapse would have sounded an hour before it occurred.

Some experts are inclined to lay the blame for the collapse of the hotel to the use of sea sand in mixing the cement. This has started a discussion which will probably result in a number of practical tests.

TO SEE GRAND SIGHTS.

Chamber of Commerce Party Starts for the Matchless Canyon of the Colorado.

An excursion under the auspices of the Chamber of Commerce, and embracing about ninety-two persons, left last night over the Santa Fé Railroad for the Grand Cañon.

The special car was attached to the Overland Limited, which is the first time that an excursion has been so handled. The party started last night at 6 o'clock and will be gone six days, returning Friday morning of this week. The entire time will be spent at El Tovar Hotel, and in side trips to the many interesting points adjacent.

Each of the guests wore a handsome white silk badge, with a pendant bearing a picture of the Chamber of Commerce building and an inscription.

LONG BEACH PROCLAMATION.

"Proclamation of Prosperity" is the title of the harbor supplement of the Long Beach Daily Telegram. It consists of twenty-eight pages, splendidly illustrated with halftone cuts, and printed on heavy plated paper. The outside cover is a full-page lithograph from original drawings, and every page contains large halftones, clear and beautiful, every one of them a work of art. There is a picture of the ocean front entirely across two pages, and another of the strand, sweeping both directions from the pier. These are suitable for framing, and either one is worth far more than the price of the paper. No paper outside the city has ever placed so elegant and elaborate a number before the public in Southern California.

GOOD SHEPHERD HOME.

The Ladies' Auxiliary of the Ancient Order of Hibernians will present a drama for the benefit of the Home of the Good Shepherd, at the Gamut Club, on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, November 20 and 21. The ladies are doing their utmost to make the entertainment a great success, and the sale of tickets thus far indicates a large crowd on the opening night.

THE WEST COAST.

The West Coast Magazine for November makes its appearance with thirty pages, exclusive of cover. It is finely illustrated and shows an interesting array of literary miscellany, as well as a promising advertising patronage. Among the leading articles is that of Judge Hutton on "Old California Missions;" that of William H. Knight on "The First Prophet of the Panama Canal." There's a lot of good things in prose and poetry.

FORTY THOUSAND CHILDREN REFUSE GERMAN PRAYERS.

Government Takes Measures to Convince Youth and Parents That Struggles Are Futile, but Kosciusko's People Prepare to Fight Obnoxious Order to Bitter End.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

BERLIN, Nov. 10.—Forty thousand Polish children persist in refusing to respond in the German language to religious instruction in the public schools and the Prussian authorities continue to apply measures designed to convince the children and their parents that their resistance will be of no avail.

All Prussian Poland is stirred by the outbreak of race and political hatred. The events in Russia appear to have stimulated the Polish national movement so that the Polish newspapers and Polish agitators have taken a more aggressive attitude against the government.

They have selected the Prussian minister's requirement that religious instruction may be given in German as the principle to combat, because only upon it could the religious feeling of Catholic Poland be consolidated and a certain amount of support be won by the Vatican, while at the same time the government might be weakened by the determination of the German Catholic party to oppose the coercion of their Polish coreligionists.

LIGHT OF INDIA.

The second number of "The Light of India," a small magazine edited by Baba Bharati, has made its appearance. Among the contents are "The White Peril," an X-ray glimpse of civilization, and "Jim," a reply to Kiplyng's "Kim," both by Baba Bharati. The book is published at the Krishna Home, No. 730 West Sixteenth street.

VOLUNTEERS OF AMERICA.

Revival services are being held in the hall of the Volunteers of America, No. 124 East First street, under Evangelist Levi D. Barr. Mrs. B. J. Hofheinz and Miss Ida Zimmerman are assisting with the music. Mr. and Mrs. Herbert E. Green, formerly with the Union Rescue Mission, are now connected with the Volunteers.

CHRISTMAS SHOP.

The ladies of Immanuel Presbyterian Church are preparing for their annual Christmas sale, on December 7 and 8, at the Hotel Westmore. The sale will be conducted as a novelty in the form of an up-to-date department store, with everything complete in the way of attendants. There will be cash boys and cash girls, august floor-walkers and expert society-girl wrappers.

Bowling at Princeton.

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] In order to develop interest in bowling at Princeton a graduate has offered to present a cup to be played for by teams of five from the upper class clubs, and to be won outright this year. This sport has been receiving much attention at Princeton this season and the offer of a trophy has attracted many of the college bowlers to the alleys.

Slap on the Wrist.

PARIS, Nov. 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The Aero Club has decided to penalize Herr Scherle and M. Van Den Driesche, who, respectively, represented Germany and Belgium in the race for the Coupe Internationale Des Aeromautes, for having descended during their runs and having failed to declare the fact to the club. The penalization takes the form of official public announcement of the fact.

WHAT SULPHUR DOES.

For The Human Body in Health and Disease.

COSTS NOTHING TO TRY.

The mention of sulphur will recall to many of us the early days when our mothers and grandmothers gave us our daily dose of sulphur and molasses every spring and fall.

It was the universal spring and fall "blood purifier," tonic and cure-all, and, mind you, this old-fashioned remedy was not without merit.

The idea was good, but the remedy was crude and unpalatable, and a large quantity had to be taken to get any effect.

Nowadays we get all the beneficial effects of sulphur in a palatable, concentrated form, so that a single grain is far more effective than a tablespoonful of the crude sulphur.

In recent years research and experiment have proven that the best sulphur for medicinal use is that obtained from Calcium (Calcium Sulphide) and sold in drug stores under the name of Stuart's Calcium Wafers. They are small chocolate coated pellets and contain the active medicinal principle of sulphur in a highly concentrated, effective form.

Few people are aware of the value of this form of sulphur in restoring and maintaining bodily vigor and health; sulphur acts directly on the liver and excretory organs and purifies and enriches the blood by the prompt elimination of waste material.

Our grandmothers knew this when they dosed us with sulphur and molasses every spring and fall, but the crudity and impurity of ordinary flowers of sulphur were often worse than the disease, and cannot compare with the modern concentrated preparations of sulphur, of which Stuart's Calcium Wafers is undoubtedly the best and most widely used.

They are the natural antidote for liver and kidney troubles and cure constipation and purify the blood in a way that often surprises patient and physician alike.

Dr. R. M. Wilkins, while experimenting with sulphur remedies soon found that the sulphur from Calcium was superior to any other form. He says: "For liver, kidney and blood troubles, especially when resulting from constipation or malaria, I have been surprised at the results obtained from Stuart's Calcium Wafers. In patients suffering from boils and pimples and even deep-seated carbuncles, I have repeatedly seen them dry up and disappear in four or five days, leaving the skin clear and smooth. Although Stuart's Calcium Wafers is a proprietary article and sold by druggists and for that reason tabooed by many physicians, yet I know of nothing so safe and reliable for constipation, liver and kidney troubles and especially in all forms of skin diseases as this remedy.

At any rate people who are tired of pills, cathartics and so-called blood "purifiers" will find in Stuart's Calcium Wafers, a far safer, more palatable and effective preparation.

NERVE-SHATTERING PAINS IN BACK

WARNER'S SAFE CURE

Is the Only Absolute Cure for All Forms of Kidney Disease. A Trial Bottle Will Be Sent Absolutely Free to Every Reader of The Times.

MRS. F. E. ARGYLE.

Mrs. F. F. Argyle, of Denver, Colorado, President of Knights and Ladies of Golden Precept, thanks Warner's Safe Cure for her restoration to health, after a siege of pains in the back caused by diseased kidneys.

"About a year ago my health was completely run down, nerves shattered, had frequent dizzy spells, backache, and had to pass my water frequently and with great irritation. The doctor pronounced it kidney and bladder trouble and I was under his care for two months. Failing of results, resolved to try Warner's Safe Cure, which had come to me very highly recommended. The first bottle helped me considerably, and at the end of three months I was a well woman, without a sign of the many aches and pains that had heretofore been my lot. I feel much better than I have in years and certainly feel grateful to your medicine." MRS. F. E. ARGYLE, 1446 Stout St., Denver, Colo., Pres. of Knights and Ladies of Golden Precept.

EAT STORE IS BULLOCK'S.

Departments and Nine Full Stories.

Garden to Be One of the Innovations.

Grand Old Eagle Will Be Seen Everywhere.

[illegible] great new department [illegible] of which was told in [illegible] a week ago, will occupy the [illegible] building, at the corner [illegible] street and Broadway, hav[illegible] of 140 feet on Broadway [illegible] on Seventh street. In[illegible] basement and the roof [illegible] of which cover the full [illegible] building, it will have [illegible] with a total of more than [illegible] feet of space.

[illegible] will have forty departments [illegible] perfection in detail and [illegible] to make them, and [illegible] outfit himself and his [illegible] without crossing the [illegible] of Bullock's, after having [illegible] garden and children's playground will be unique in America, as a part of a merchandizing establishment. It will be adequately fitted up for the use of patrons of the store, and is so large that one will not realize that he is on the roof of a great building, surrounded by palms and flowers, high above dust and noise and fanned by the choicest breezes from the ocean.

Other conveniences, such as rest rooms, restaurant, lavatories, nursery, will be second to none in this country and on a scale to be found in no establishment west of Chicago.

The first army enlisted for the establishment will consist of about 500 persons, with the prospect of a speedy doubling of the number. These recruits will all be found in Los Angeles, as near as possible, so that the store will start off with a patronage attracted by many well-known people.

The store will have two grand entrances, finished in mahogany and copper, one on Seventh street and one on Broadway, and five immense hydraulic elevators, each capable of carrying forty persons, will connect the basement with the roof.

The interior is finished in a glossy white enamel, making the most perfect lighting possible, while the heating and ventilating plant will be one of the largest in the city. It will be supplied with more than 5000 electric lights.

The structure is of solid steel frame, cased with cream-colored pressed brick, and is absolutely fire-proof. It is anchored on sixty-two immense concrete piers, and provision is made for adding three additional stories to the building any time the business may require, and the contractor says the foundations are capable of carrying twenty stories.

J. G. Bullock, who will be the manager of Bullock's, has been manager of the Broadway Department Store ever since it began business, and is well known by the general public. He is a tactful and able manager and a gentleman agreeable to meet.

It has been so much the fad, here and elsewhere, to adopt the British lion, or some other animal, in the scheme of decoration in large buildings, that it is a refreshing innovation to find each of the large pillars on the main floor of "Bullock's" decorated with a handsome American eagle in staff. It is to be an American establishment, built on American plans, and conducted on American lines.

EX-CONVICT ABSCONDER?

Chittenden Said to Have Disappeared With Insurance Premiums and to Have Forged Checks.

Louis E. Chittenden, formerly a convict at San Quentin but recently paroled, is wanted by the Physicians' Defense Company of California and the Travelers Insurance Company. Both companies have offices in Los Angeles. The case has not been reported to the police, but Chittenden is accused of passing bad checks, and appropriating money.

According to the stories of men who claim to have suffered from his operations, he came to Los Angeles in April and secured a position with the Physicians' Defense Company, which is an insurance concern with headquarters in San Francisco. He also went into the insurance brokerage business.

Late in September, Chittenden is said to have absconded with premiums he had collected and with money he had obtained from local merchants on forged checks. His whereabouts is unknown.

Chittenden was sentenced to five years in San Quentin in 1903 for looting his employer's safe in San Bernardino.

IRON WORKERS QUIT.

They Demand Ten Hours' Pay for Nine Hours' Work and Are Laid Off.

Thirty iron workers, employed by the Baker Iron Works in the construction of the big building at the southeast corner of Fifth and Spring streets, quit work yesterday morning because they were refused ten hours' pay for nine hours' work.

Mr. Blair, who has charge of the work for the Baker Iron Works, said, after the strike, that he was entirely willing to have the men leave, as he was contemplating laying off at least some of them for a few days, while the floor work was being pushed.

HEARS OF BROTHER'S DEATH.

Mrs. J. W. Murphy of No. 411 West Twenty-second street, received word last night of the death of her brother, C. A. Short, who was drowned in the Yazoo River at Redwood, Miss., on October 17. For many years Mr. Short was connected with the R. L. Craig Company of Los Angeles as outside salesman, and he is well known among the wholesale merchants of this city. While crossing the river in a flatboat with a companion both men were drowned by the capsizing of the frail craft.

HURT IN FIGHT.

John Munie became involved in a fight in front of his home at First and Vignes streets last night, and was struck on the head with a dull instrument, which inflicted an ugly wound. He went to the Receiving Hospital, but had nothing to say to the police.

RAILS AND NOT CARS NEEDED.

J. J. HILL DISCUSSES NATION'S NEEDS.

"Lack of Tracks and Terminals a Problem Which Only Money and Experience Will Remedy"—Favors Canal from St. Louis to New Orleans.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

CHICAGO, Nov. 10.—James J. Hill was the guest of honor at the banquet of the Merchants' Club tonight, and delivered an extended address on "Chicago's Interest in Reciprocity With Canada."

Mr. Hill said:

"Today the entire country is suffering from want of transportation facilities to move its business without unreasonable delay. The prevailing idea with the public is that the railways are short of cars, while the facts are that the shortage is in tracks and terminals to provide a greater opportunity for the movement of cars."

The speaker declared that the country is today facing a problem which only time, experience and the expenditure of money will remedy.

Hill asserted that there is a crying need now for the construction of a fifteen-foot canal between St. Louis and New Orleans, and he said that the necessity for this would increase with time.

There was no more important general work for the government to perform, he said, that to construct a canal capable of carrying vessels of fifteen-foot draught. Mr. Hill recited figures showing that the trade with people whom the United States will be able to reach by the construction of the Panama Canal amounts to only about $54,700,000 annually, while the United States' trade with Canada is over $200,000,000 per annum.

Hill further asserted that the conversion and increase of this trade is of greater importance than anything which will accrue to the United States because of the construction of the canal.

Speaking of reciprocity with Canada, Hill said:

"What is the first practical step? The consummation most to be wished is the wiping out of customhouses along the northern frontier, and the establishment there of absolute free trade. If the time is not ripe for that the least that it demands is ample reciprocity."

CHEESE BROKER BREAKS.

Caught Short of Market to Extent of $450,000, Banks Refuse Him Credit.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

UTICA (N. Y.) Nov. 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] William D. Grant of this city, who is said to be the most extensive cheese broker in the United States, has been caught short of the cheese market to the extent of about $450,000 and is unable to cover his losses. His credit at the banks has been temporarily suspended.

DESERTS DYING MOTHER.

The police found it necessary to detain Mable Bahst, who is 15 years old, in the City Jail last night, to induce her to return to her home in San Bernardino, where her mother is said to be dying. Upon telegraphic advice, the officers traced the girl to a rooming-house on South Spring street. The girl's home was formerly in Los Angeles, but recently her parents removed to San Bernardino. The girl is said to be incorrigible.

FIT SO TIGHT IN HIGH SCHOOL.

HARD TO ACCOMMODATE PUPILS IN PASADENA.

Chapel Is Overcrowded and It Is Impossible to Provide Seats for All When All Are Gathered There but Otherwise They Are Cared for With no Great Inconvenience.

Office of The Times, No. 26 S. Raymond Ave.

PASADENA, Nov. 10.—In spite of the crowded conditions of the High School, the authorities have succeeded in arranging the classes so that all of the pupils are being cared for without great inconvenience. The chapel is overcrowded, and it is impossible to provide seats for all the pupils on occasions when they are gathered there, but otherwise no great inconvenience is being experienced.

The crowded condition of the buildings, however, calls attention to the fact that it will be impossible to get through another school year without making arrangements for an addition, and that the matter is at present engrossing the attention of the school authorities. The style of architecture of the High School building is such that it cannot be well enlarged, and a separate building is a practical necessity. Several suggestions have been made, and during the coming vacation the matter will be carefully considered by the Board of Education.

In the grammar schools a crowded condition also exists, but the prospect of immediate relief is brighter, as buildings are now in course of construction, and will be ready for occupancy before long. From the present outlook it appears, however, that the relief can be but temporary, as the prospects are that the attendance at the public schools next year will show such a marked increase as to make further additions imperative.

THIEVERY CONTINUES.

The petty thievery, which has been annoying the authorities at the High School since the term opened, continues to grow worse, and the principal is considerably troubled over the matter. At first the thefts were limited to the boys' cloakrooms, and but small sums of money were missed. Of late the depredations have extended to the girls' section, and articles of considerable value have disappeared.

Principal Ely has warned the pupils not to leave any money or other valuables in the cloaks, and hopes to put a stop to the thievery. A close watch is being kept, and it is thought that the culprit may be detected if he or she continues to keep up the practice.

This is the first year that the authorities have ever been troubled with any such thing, and the faculty is very much worried over the case. At first efforts were made to keep the thing quiet, but as the thief became bolder and did not hesitate to appropriate anything of value that came within his reach, the trouble assumed a serious aspect. It will go hard with the offender if he is caught.

GRIDIRONER TO SPEAK.

An interesting meeting will be held tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock in the Y.M.C.A. auditorium, when Robert Clelland, the crack football player of Occidental College, will address the younger men of the association on "The Strength of the Sure Man." The meeting will be primarily for the older boys of the association, and will be entirely separate from the usual Sunday afternoon men's meeting. Miss True Batterson will render a number of soprano solos, and other excellent music is promised.

The usual men's meeting will be held at 3 o'clock. Sunday being the first day in the "Week of Prayer" observed throughout the entire United States by the Young Men's Christian Association, the services will be under the supervision of the men of the Religious League. The different members of the league will speak on appropriate subjects, and music will be furnished by the Glee Club. All men are invited to attend this meeting.

In the circumstances the authorities of the local Y.M.C.A. have not thought it best to officially observe the week of prayer, here as it would mean driving too many of the members of their association privileges. Arrangements have been made whereby those who desire to do so can observe the occasion, however.

PASADENA POINTS.

Nothing has been done about the Santa Fé tracks on Elm avenue, and residents of the street are beginning to wonder what the company intends to do. The property holders and the railway officials do not agree in regard to the proper grade for the avenue, and the street work has been considerably delayed for this reason. The original grade decided upon by the City Engineer did not meet with the approval of the property owners and the grade wanted by the owners does not meet with the approval of the company. It will be necessary to settle the matter at once, as there are many improvements that are to be made on the street, but which cannot be undertaken until the question of grade has been settled. Another effort will probably be made to reach some understanding, after which, if nothing can be accomplished otherwise, the matter will probably be taken into the courts.

The girls' basketball team of the Pasadena High school met defeat this afternoon at the hands of the team from the Sierre Madre High School by a score of 28 to 10. The game was snappy throughout and, though the final score was somewhat one-sided, the teams were in reality very evenly matched. The game was played on the home courts and was witnessed by an enthusiastic throng made up of the supporters of the two teams. The defeat of today was the first that the Pasadena team has suffered for some time, and it came as a shock to the members of the team, who had expected an easy victory. The defeat is partly attributable to over-confidence on the part of the Pasadena players, who did not realize the metal of their opponents. A return game will be played in the near future, when the Pasadena team hopes to wipe out the memory of the defeat.

A concert has been arranged for November 23 to raise funds for the benefit of the Linda Vista health camp for poor consumptives. The Health Camp Association has secured the services of a number of prominent musicians for the occasion, and it is hoped to raise a substantial sum of money. The concert will be given at the Pasadena Operahouse and will be quite a society function. The work of the association is progressing satisfactorily and the outlook is very promising. In spite of the obstacles that have been encountered the charitably-inclined folk who have undertaken the task of providing a place where indigent sufferers from the great white plague can receive good care and treatment have not despaired, and their efforts seem about to be crowned with success.

A [illegible] faker with a Canadian bill tried to work a little game on a Colorado-street restaurant this afternoon, and but for the watchfulness of the cashier would have succeeded in victimizing the establishment. He went into the restaurant and ate a substantial dinner, after which he attempted to pass the Canadian bill in payment. The cashier refused to take it and, in spite of the protestations of the man that it was perfectly good, declined to have anything to do with it. The man claimed that he had no other money, but said that he would return and pay later. After leaving the restaurant he took up his stand on a neighboring corner and did a thriving trade for a while. He then apparently lost his bearings and went back to the same restaurant for supper. Before he could rectify his mistake the dinner bill was placed before him and he paid up with very poor grace, declining to eat any supper.

Charles W. Carter, who claims to be a preacher and electrician, was arrested on Raymond avenue this evening at 8:30 o'clock by Patrolman Schultz for alleged disturbing of the peace. Carter was delivering a sermon in strident tones to all who would listen to his ravings when the officer took him in charge. When searched at the Police Station a package of "dope" and an outfit was found in his pockets. He seemed to be about half-witted and is evidently a dope fiend. Last night he spent at a cheap hotel and left without having paid his room rent. He appears to be without funds and a charge of vagrancy will probably be placed against him.

Patrolman Favor prevented a serious runaway at Holly street and Fair Oaks avenue this evening by quick action. A large horse hitched to one of Hepner's wagons took fright and, before its driver could get it under control, dashed against a passing street car. The shafts of the wagon were both smashed off short and the horse was thrown to the ground. In an instant the animal was on its feet and started for the crowd, but Favor sprang for the bridle and brought it to a standstill. In the collision with the car the horse was badly scratched and the harness was torn to pieces. The wagon was badly damaged and the shafts totally demolished. There were a number of people standing about and but for Favor's prompt action, some one must have been seriously injured by the plunging animal.

Mrs. William McQuilling and Miss Inez McQuilling of No. 254 Bellevue Drive were the hostesses yesterday afternoon at a unique function when they gave an "at home" for the dolls which are to occupy their booth at the West Side Congregational Church bazaar next Thursday and Friday. The reception hall and parlors were prettily decorated with choice flowers and on a white-draped table in the parlor were the beautifully-dressed dolls. One of the dolls which attracted a large share of the attention was one dressed as a trained nurse by Miss June Chapin, who is herself a nurse.

Last evening the members of the La Crescenta Club held their annual balloon dance at the Shakespeare Clubhouse. Fifty couples were present, and a feature of the evening was the grand march, for which each young lady was given a red or blue balloon with the words La Crescenta printed upon it. The following members of the club were the hosts for the evening: Severy Hibbard, Walter Patton, Joseph Ogier, Edward Ogier, Sam May, Wilbur Allan.

At the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Crowell, No. 341 North Marengo avenue, on November 14, will take place a dual wedding, when Miss Minnie Nickerson will become the bride of William F. Chase and Miss Edna Spinney will become the bride of Franklin Harding. Miss Nickerson is a sister of Mrs. Crowell.

The Rev. and Mrs. D. D. Hill of No. 312 Palmetto Drive today formally announced the engagement of their daughter, Edith, to James MacNish Powers of Pomona.

Miss Augusta Vail of No. 850 North Lake avenue was surprised by a group of her friends upon the occasion of her birthday. The evening was passed with games and music and later delicious refreshments were served.

This morning at 10:30 o'clock Miss Etta M. W. Jones and Fred S. Conger were married at the Conger home on Bruce avenue. The young couple left immediately after the ceremony for an automobile trip to San Diego and will be at home after December 1 at No. 125 Bruce avenue.

Yesterday afternoon the Shakespeare Club enjoyed an open discussion on the "Necessities of Life." The afternoon was in charge of Miss Imelda Brooks, her assistants being Mrs. G. Lavagnino, Miss Carol Coman, Miss Julia Meeker and Miss Olivia Esterbrook of Los Angeles. Miss Frances Sanborn, who recently returned from abroad, presented the club with an exquisite photograph of Sir Walter Scott, artistically framed.

SOLDIERS' HOME ITEMS.

SOLDIERS' HOME, Nov. 10.—Dr. A. C. Keating, whose funeral took place here yesterday, had a large circle of friends. Dr. Keating was born in Monroe county, Mich., in 1843; was educated in the common schools of that place, and afterward took up the study of medicine, but could not resist the call of his country, and in 1862, was made hospital steward of the First Michigan Sharpshooters, then organizing. On his return from the war he completed his course in the medical college, and in the seventies came to California, settling in San Bernardino. In the latter place is where his professional ability received recognition, and secured for him various public offices. He was at one time president of the Board of Health; was elected Coroner of San Bernardino county; was for several years United States government pension examiner, and also Southern Pacific surgeon. His health failing, he removed with his family to Los Angeles several years ago, and in 1900 concluded to come to the home for treatment. Here he made a number of friends through his genial personality, who joined the family yesterday in the march and "military honors" at the funeral.

Under general orders No. 35, just issued, the following named members upon their own application have been honorably discharged from this branch: Robert R. Bratton, James Crimin, Walker S. Holman, Charles. W. Heath, Luther H. Hill, William Laughrey, Niles Marshall, Thomas Needham, Nicholas J. Patterson, John Phillips, Morris Siegel, Thomas Waldron, John Williams and Casper Zerring.

The Woman's Auxiliary of Union Veteran Legion Encampment No. 138, took possession of Assembly Hall Friday and treated their veteran comrades to a chicken dinner and the good cheer that invariably attends these gatherings.

BOY PIRATES IN DISGRACE.

WEST LONG BEACH QUARTETTE IS DISCOVERED.

Series of Depredations Committed on Craft Along the Coast Is Ended When the Officers Investigating the Matter Run to Earth Four Youngsters—Cave of the Jolly Rovers.

LONG BEACH, Nov. 10.—For a month and a half residents and boat owners of West Long Beach have been exasperated by the depredations of unknown thieves, who have stolen lights, rings, pulleys and blocks from private yachts and finally began stealing rowboats and a launch anchored in the west fork of Cerritos River.

The launch stolen was the Edith, and when found stranded on the beach, half a mile away, all of her tackle, side and running lights were missing.

From the McGinty, six decoy ducks and a pair of shotgun barrels were taken, and sold to Ed Rice for $2.50.

The Fannie, a sailboat, was taken from the moorings of her owner, T. Carl, and an attempt was made to sell her for $6.50 in Long Beach, but this failing, she was tied to the pier and abandoned.

The next victim was the Bethel Mission minister, who lost all the oil cups of the engines of a small launch he owns.

Officers Phillips and Taylor were asked to locate the thieves and, after a week's work, they unearthed a quartette of boys, named Nadeau, Parks, Elmer and Howe, who called themselves the "boy pirates," and had fitted out a true pirates' cave in a shack at the foot of Third street.

Two of the boys are owners of a gasoline launch, the Nemo, and in this the quartette would steam up and down the bay, boarding all yachts that were deserted and taking away everything that was not nailed down. Even the yachts owned by their fathers were not immune, but suffered with the rest. Part of their plunder was used in fitting up the cave, and the rest was buried beneath the residence of one of the "pirates," where it has been recovered.

After one of their piratical excursions, the gang would gather at the cave, where they had a stove and all kinds of adventurous literature, and here they would smoke cigarettes and spin yarns. Finally, it became necessary to sell some of their plunder to secure fixings for their cave, and this led to their undoing. Their last theft was taking two punts from the boat club, which were anchored close to the cave.

As the parents of the boys were among the sufferers and have agreed to make good to the other yacht owners, there will be no prosecutions, but there is a quartette of humble, contrite youths at West Long Beach, who shudder when they see a cigarette and don't care to sit down at meal times.

CHILDREN POISONED.

Three young children of Mr. and Mrs. George Redburn were taken suddenly ill on Friday. The symptoms indicated poisoning. Today Delbert, a baby, died. The family physician gave the cause of death as cholera infantum. The other children are still ill but are thought to be out of danger.

HARBOR SEEMS ASSURED.

Citizens of Wilmington Rejoice Over Agreement Made Between Dock Company and Bannings.

WILMINGTON, Nov. 10.—The agreement which has been reached between the Wilmington Dock Company and the Bannings in reference to dredging a channel across the bay from Mormon Island to the Wilmington shore has been received by the people of Wilmington as an indication of the coming of prosperity.

At a meeting of the stockholders of the company on Saturday, all obstacles in the way of coöperative effort were removed and an agreement made by which the Bannings will cede to the government all right and claim upon 1000 feet of the tide lands from Mormon Island to the Wilmington shore. This will include a strip on the north side of the island. It will also extend from Canal street on the Wilmington side eastward toward the mill. From that point the Consolidated Mill Company will continue the dredging of the channel to the mill and will also take a large block of stock in the company.

At the request of the Banning Company a modification of the original plans was made by which the west basin was not to be included, and the bulkhead line along the Wilmington shore was made to conform to a line further in toward the land which had previously been run by the Bannings.

The dredgings will be thrown upon either side of a channel 400 feet wide, and also a fill will be made to the bulkhead line. These plans have been received by the people of Wilmington with great satisfaction, as it assures them of a harbor at an early date. It is said that Mr. Banning has stated that the channel ought to be completed within four months.

DRILL TO START IN LA HABRA.

Union Oil Company Has Thoroughly Exploited the Section for Oil.

LA HABRA, Nov. 10.—The Coyote Hills oil strike made by the Murphy Oil Company of Whittier a couple of months ago is to result in the thorough exploitation of La Habra land for oil. The Union Oil Company has completed its rig on the Bastanchery ranch, and will put down two others. This same company has also made arrangements to drill for oil on the hills just back of the La Habra ostrich farm. The Union people have a force of men at work on a new pipe line to their La Habra property. The line will be used both for water and oil, one being pumped days and other nights.

Among the speakers who will be at the Farmers' Institute on December 6 and 7 are Prof. H. J. Ramsay of the State Pathological Station, Prof. W. H. Matlock of Whittier College, Ernest Braunton and Col. J. J. Steadman of Los Angeles, Mrs. A. Basley of Hollywood, E. G. Ware of Garden Grove, J. A. Bird of Los Angeles and S. S. Twombly of San Luis Obispo.

NEW SCHOOL WANTED.

An effort is being made to establish a school for the benefit of the ranchers living near the Orange county line. In this neighborhood there are sixty children, it is said, whose homes are at least two miles from any school now in session. The practice of the district in former years of sending a 'bus for the youngsters does not seem to meet with the unqualified approval of the parents, who say that it is dark before the driver is able to get all the children home from school. The ranchers concerned are making a concerted effort now, their plans being lagged somewhat just before election, and they feel confident that the new school will be established this winter.

PAC. ELECTRIC TO SANTA ANA

We Sell It For Half

Don't Be Cooped Up

Don't stifle in a contracted apartment. Don't huddle up in the narrow confines of a city lot. Don't breathe the atmosphere of the factory, shop and packing house night and day. Don't raise your children narrow-chested and hollow-cheeked, panting for the ozone of the fields and flowers. Give them a chance to grow up healthy and happy men and women, able to fight the battle of life. Get them out into the open, where the golden sunshine enkindles new life and the saline breezes of the sea become a constant tonic.

Just Like Planting Pennies for Dollar Crops

It is situated in the heart of the most fertile section of Greater Los Angeles. It is only 25 minutes from the Huntington Depot. It is reached by three lines of railway—the Long Beach and the Santa Ana Electric lines the Southern Pacific Railway. It is right in the path of a solid population from the city to the sea. You don't have to go to the seashore for sea air. The salt breeze sweeps Belle Vernon every hour of the day.

WHITTIER'S STREET PROBLEM.

A New Water Main Interferes With a Proposed New Conduit.

WHITTIER, Nov. 10.—All bids for the improvement of Hadley street have been rejected by the members of the City Council, and the preliminary work, which takes a number of weeks, will have to be done over again. The rejection was due to a change in the original plan, and the consequent complaint by the owners of property abutting the western portion of that thoroughfare. An arroyo crosses Hadley street, and the plans for the street improvement called for a cement conduit of five by ten feet, of the rectangular type. It was later found that the big new city water main had been placed too high in the ground to allow of this being done, so a conduit four by ten feet, of the arch type, was planned. This the property owners think will not carry off all the volume of storm water which each winter goes rushing down from the hills, and they foresee danger to their lands by flooding and vexatious damage suits to the city resulting from this. The city authorities are uncertain as to just what is best to be done, Street Superintendent Way urging that the water main be lowered, and Water Superintendent Davis being equally urgent that the conduit be raised above grade, and the main be left undisturbed.

YOUNG LADY DEBATERS.

Misses Grace Brown and Gertrude Cox have been chosen as the representatives of the Union High School in the debate with Harvard Military School on December 14.

EASTERN STAR ELECTION.

Members of the Eastern Star held their annual election last evening, the new officers being as follows: W.M., Mrs. Frank A. Jackson, W.P., W. R. Morris; A.M., Mrs. C. O. Evans; Cond., Mrs. Albert Pearce; A. Cond., Mrs. Frank Powers; Secretary, E. H. Payne; Treasurer, Mrs. Alice M. Butterfield. The newly-elected Matron has the privilege of appointing the remaining officers of the chapter, who, with those elected last night, will be installed next month.

SOPHOMORE RECEPTION.

SANTA MONICA EVENTS.

SANTA MONICA, Nov. 10.—Harriet B. Kling has let the contract for a $7050 residence, to be erected on Montana avenue, at the corner of Second street. It will be a story and a half structure of ten rooms, and is to be completed and ready for occupancy by April 1.

Plans are in course of preparation by a Los Angeles architect for a handsome house, to be built on the hills at the southern end of the city for E. J. Vawter.

There will be a couple of lively baseball games on the local diamonds tomorrow afternoon. At the Southern Pacific Park the All-Merchants will entertain the Alhambras, and at the Polo Park the Santa Monicas will meet the Reliance nine from Los Angeles.

In the court of Justice of the Peace Jenness, this morning, judgment was rendered in favor of H. and A. F. Wildolft against E. H. Willey. The defendant was the former manager of the Pier avenue band, and the suit was brought to compel the payment of musicians' salary.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Cloud have returned from Chicago and will spend the season by the sea.

Louis Herzog is in San Francisco attending the annual State convention of the Game and Fish Protective Association.

Old Ones so Young Have Gathering at Compton—Singing by the Octogenarians.

COMPTON, Nov. 10.—The "Sunset Social" given by the Epworth League in the Methodist Church parlors this afternoon was a unique event. About forty persons were present, twenty-eight of whom were over 70 years old. Of this number eight were over 80, and two over 90. Their combined ages were 2167 years, and the average age 77 years. A dinner was served, after which a brief programme was given. One number was a vocal duet sung by Mrs. E. A. Frew, aged 81, and Mrs. Annie Seely, aged 80. Those present past 70 were J. S. Welch, Long Beach; W. F. Roberts, Missouri; Benjamin Walton, Long Beach; Mrs. Mary Taber, Pasadena; James M. Armstrong, Moneta; S. W. Seely, George Dumond, J. S. Brown, R. H. Dinsmore, Mrs. R. H. MONROVIA WATER STRIKE.

Good Flow Is Developed in Wells Sunk in Tract Southwest of Town.

MONROVIA, Nov. 10.—The Sierra Land Company, which several weeks ago purchased a tract of thirteen hundred acres southwest from Monrovia of E. J. Baldwin, has had excellent luck in securing water. Three wells have been sunk to the depth of 260 feet, and on the center one they made a shaft sixty-six feet deep, tunneled to the other wells and brought the water to this shaft. A 150-horse-power engine has been installed, and a test of ten days is now on. The first day's test showed that a steady stream of 460 miner's inches was raised.

PUPILS TO GOVERN.

The Monrovia High School, under the new superintendent, Prof. E. E. Taylor, has adopted the self-government plan. It will be put in full operation Monday. The board of control will consist of four from each grade, two boys and two girls. Norman Freeze has been elected president of the board of control for the boys and Miss Helen Maddock for the girls. There will be no teachers in the rooms during study hours, no teachers in the halls to preserve order, and the control of the grounds will be in the hands of the board. Some of the parents look upon this innovation with considerable fear and trembling, but those who have made a study of methods of control for young people believe that it will bring about better order than under the old system.

REDLANDS CITRUS EXPERT.

REDLANDS, Nov. 10.—A. Gregory, general manager of the Mutual Orange Distributors of San Bernardino county, is home from an extended business trip which has taken him to all the principal business centers of the East. The trip was made for the purpose of making arrangements in eastern markets for the disposition of the lemons and oranges of his organizations.

"The outlook for a good market this year is excellent," said he. "In fact, the conditions were never better. Every place I visited shows unmistakable signs of prosperity. All the cities seem to be on a regular boom and easy money indicates a good season for oranges, for money must be measurably loose before oranges sell well.

"It is undoubtedly true that the Florida crop is a large one; probably about as large as before the big freeze, but the oranges are now grown farther south and on a kind of soil that demands that they be rushed to market early. The demand is heavy now and so all fruit will no doubt be taken as fast as it can be put on the market.

"Floridas are selling at about $1.65 f.o.b. Florida and the freight rate is 70 cents to most eastern points, making the price $2.35 delivered. The fruit though a little green, is fairly sweet and is giving pretty good satisfaction. The California oranges are favorites both with the dealer and the consumer, with the former because they keep so well and with the latter because of their good color. A customer is always attracted by the color."

Mr. Gregory warns the shippers against shipping green fruit as it will glut and kill the market quicker than anything else.

REDLANDS NOTES.

M. A. Newmark of Los Angeles has purchased 1900 acres in the Yucaipe Valley east of Redlands. The stated consideration is $28,500. The land includes 1500 acres of what is known as the Dunlap ranch and 400 acres of the Wilshire ranch. The tract is one of the choicest in the valley and is on the line of the proposed electric road at Oakglen, where the big tourist hotel is to be erected. The land was bought as a speculation.

Miss Pearl B. Mosher and George R. McIntosh were married this evening at the home of the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. C. McIntosh, in Crafton. The officiating clergyman was Rev. George Robertson. The young couple will reside in Crafton.

UPLAND ITEMS.

UPLAND, Nov. 10.—The Euclid-avenue electric line is to be extended from Twenty-fourth street, north to Mountain avenue. The right of way has been secured from private parties, and the work is soon to begin. This will be a step toward the long-hoped-for road into San Antonio.

The new addition to Hotel Algonquin has now been placed in commission.

Plans are making for celebrating the first anniversary of the dedication of the Methodist Episcopal Church here. It is proposed to have the programme of exercises occupy the entire week, beginning Sunday, November 17.

Mr. and Mrs. M. F. Palmer have returned by auto from a trip to several California points, extending as far north as San Francisco.

The children's masquerade, at the Magnolia rink last evening was marred by a serious accident, little Grace Strunk falling and fracturing both bones of the left arm, below the elbow.

JACKSON WAS ELECTED.

Santa Ana Finally Settles Who Was Chosen Constable After Three Counts.

SANTA ANA, Nov. 10.—It has been in, out, in again with C. E. Jackson, who ran on the Democratic ticket for constable in the Santa Ana township. Wednesday morning it was conceded that Jackson was elected over Jeff Harlin. Thursday night members of the Republican County Central Committee made a recount of the returns and made Harlin winner by three votes—871 to 869.

Then the Democrats began to examine the returns. They protested that certainly by their figures Jackson was elected. Taking their word that a mistake had been made, N. A. Ulm of the Republican committee went over the figures again and now says they show Harlin's defeat by eight votes.

The mistake was made in the Third Ward of the city, where Harlin had been credited with 154 votes, when he should have had only 144. This makes the vote now 897 for Jackson and 871 for Harlin.

SHIPPING ZINC ORE.

The Western Zinc Company, which is operating on a large scale in the Santiago Cañon, has concluded that its property will pay big. Yesterday thirty tons of concentrated ore left the depot at Orange for the company's smelting works near San Francisco. Shipments will be made almost daily from this time on.

The company has just completed the erection of a number of improvements. A thirty-ton mill is running. This mill is 1500 feet from the mine, a train running between the two points. A cook-house, store and office structure and four bunk-houses have just been completed. About thirty men are at work in the mine.

The ore body has proved to be larger than expected, and the richness is good.

STOP ABUSE OF STREETS.

The moving of a store building on Fifth street was stopped today as the result of complaints made to Street Superintendent King by residents of the street. L. M. Edwards, the house mover, was proceeding out Fifth street with the building taken from the Hervey lot on Main street, where a new brick is going to be built. The truck sturned up the oiled road in chunks and a very ragged street is now presented where before was a fine, level surface. The house mover was informed by the street superintendent that he would have to lay boards if he wanted to go further, or else continue with his moving in the night time when the cold hardens the oiled road so that it will allow free passage of the trucks. The house mover has ceased operations and has not yet decided what he will do. The residents and the street superintendent declare that they will not stand for a further abuse of their street.

LOST ELECTION BET.

J. B. Joplin, the veteran chile pepper raiser, declares that no man in the county came closer to winning a bet than he did. Joplin made a wager of a $5 hat with N. A. Ulm, secretary of the Republican County Central Committee, that J. C. Joplin, his father, the candidate for Treasurer on the Democratic ticket, would carry the city of Santa Ana by 200. J. C. Joplin was elected and carried the city by 199 votes, and his son has to buy Ulm a hat.

HOLD-UP IN SALOON.

Armed Robbers Take Away Cash and Valuables in San Luis Obispo Town.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

SAN LUIS OBISPO, Nov. 10.—Two masked men, each armed with a brace of revolvers, entered the saloon of Dempsey & Harris at 2 o'clock this morning and held up R. L. Dempsey, one of the proprietors, and several others who were in the place.

Ed Harris, Dempsey's partner, who entered a few moments later, was lined up with the other victims and all articles of value were taken from them. Harris was then compelled to open the safe, from which $400 was handed over to the robbers, who, after rifling the cash register, taking a drink, some cigars and a bottle of whisky, left the saloon on a run.

The robbers were dressed in new overalls, jumpers and caps, with handkerchiefs for masks.

The clothing store of W. H. Shultz was robbed earlier in the night and articles of clothing taken corresponding to those worn by the burglars. Both desperadoes were young men of light complexion.

STRANGE MURDER IN RIVERSIDE.

BODY FOUND WITH TWO BULLET HOLES IN SIDE.

Was Under Orange Tree Some Distance from Colton Avenue—Robbery Probably Motive as Pockets Were Turned Inside Out—No Clew. Merritt Damage Suit Decision.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

RIVERSIDE, Nov. 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The mystery of a murder is puzzling local officials. Today, while driving out to the orange grove of D. B. Mason on Colton avenue, J. C. Glenn discovered the body of an unknown man under an orange tree about 150 feet from the avenue. Two bullet holes in his right side told the sinister story.

The man's pockets had been turned inside out, indicating that robbery might have been a cause of the crime. At the Coroner's inquest, which was held this afternoon, it was decided that the man must have been shot four or five days ago.

A. L. Chappell, who lives near the Mason ranch, testified that he heard five shots fired last Sunday night, but gave the circumstance no further thought. The jury brought in a verdict that death came from gunshot wounds inflicted by parties unknown.

LOWER COURT UPHELD.

Word has been received from the Appellate Court at Los Angeles that the decision of the lower court in the Merritt damage suit has been affirmed. The decision was against Street Superintendent T. K. Seburn, and in favor of the City Trustees.

Eighteen months ago F. B. Merritt became partly paralyzed as the result of a fall from an embankment on the corner of Seventh and Locust streets, where Seventh street had been cut down, and he brought suit against the Street Superintendent for $12,000 damages and against the five Trustees for $24,000 damages. In the course of the trial Judge Noyes granted a non-suit as to one of the Trustees, George F. Ward, who was not acting on the board at the time Seventh street was graded. A jury trial was had and a verdict was rendered against the Street Superintendent for $1000 and against each of the four Trustees for $20.

MRS. PEQUEGNAT SUES.

Suit for divorce has been brought against Ami W. Pequegnat, a well-known Riverside merchant, by Mrs. Hattie E. Pequegnat. Incompatibility of temper is said to be the cause of the action.

CAPT. ALDERMAN DIES.

CORONA, Nov. 10.—Capt. Edwin B. Alderman, a native of Westfield, Mass., and for many years a resident of Iowa, died here last evening after over a year's illness, aged 81. Capt. Alderman had been a highly respected resident of Corona for fourteen years, was a prominent member of the G.A.R., and of the Masons. The latter conducted the funeral at the home this afternoon. He leaves a widow and four children.

ORANGE NEWS ITEMS.

ORANGE, Nov. 10.—The sophomore class and the boys from the freshman and junior classes played a fine game of football yesterday afternoon; the teams being very evenly matched, neither side was able to score.

Victor Sutton has returned from Oakland.

Two cars of oranges have been shipped from the Santa Fé depot at Orange this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hopkins have returned to Westminster.

ESCONDIDO NEWS.

ESCONDIDO, Nov. 10.—The marriage of Miss Elfreda Hatch of this town to Fred Brown of Highlands has been announced. The announcement created some surprise to the bride's many friends. She is the daughter of Ed J. Hatch, Wells-Fargo agent at Escondido, and has taught school in this valley for a number of terms.

Julius Delphy, against whom a jury returned a verdict of guilty on the charge of selling intoxicants to an habitual drunkard, has been sentenced by Justice Hatch to pay a fine of $100. An appeal has been taken to the Superior Court.

Fred Blethen has been awarded the contract of carrying the mail from this place to Moosa and Lilac.

J. L. Van Derveer, The Times agent in Escondido, was almost unanimously elected Justice of the Peace in this judicial township at the late election.

The last note held against the Episcopal Church of this place has been liquidation. The church was built less than a year ago.

In the absence of a quorum at the last meeting of the City Council, a large number of citizens and ladies took advantage of the occasion to discuss at length the administration of the city's affairs. The outcome of the meeting was a demand for the enforcement of all ordinances, especially the one relating to the sale of liquor. A motion was made and carried to the effect that the Council employ an attorney to assist that body n ithe enforcement of the ordinances.

SANTA PAUL JOTTINGS.

SANTA PAULA, Nov. 10.—The resignation of Rev. A. W. Williams, pastor of the Presbyterian Church, has been accepted, to take place November 30.

The $40,000 iron bridge being built over the Sespe will be finished December 1. The inhabitants intend to celebrate the event with a barbecue.

CHINAMAN IN TOILS.

Charles Jung, who for some time has been rather prominent in local Chinese affairs, was arrested on Sanchez street last night on the charge of violating the lottery ordinance. According to the arresting officers, they have suspected Jung for some time, but have not had an opportunity to secure evidence against him before.

DUCKS FOUND AT IMPERIAL

Whereabouts of Waterfowl Is no Longer Mystery.

Millions of Sprigs Feeding on Vast Overflows.

Local Clubs Still Finding It Hard Picking.

Duck hunters returning from the Imperial Valley and Salton Sink country advance a plausible argument to account for the present scarcity of web-footed sporting material in the seacoast sections of Southern California, and are inclined to believe that the great body of the migrating waterfowl is wintering around the lower Colorado this season rather than in the vast overflows of the San Joaquin.

Gunners familiar with current conditions in both localities may be disinclined to admit the latter part of the statement, but dozens of limit sacks of ducks conclusively prove the presence of the birds about Brawley, local commission dealers having received at least three-quarters of their supply from this source. It is a curious coincidence that the fruit dealers also are going into the duck business and bringing their birds from the same section—a state of affairs that suggests some sort of an "underground railroad" to evade the fifty-bird bag-limit law.

An unparalleled grain crop was raised in the territory tributary to the Colorado River this year—so vast, in fact, that many fields were left uncut, if the reports of returning sportsmen are to be credited at face value. Fall plowing is soon to start, and the situation from a duck's viewpoint is therefore ideal in the Imperial country just now.

Depending very little upon rain, the ranchers about Brawley when ready to break up their ground in the fall, turn an immense head of perhaps a thousand inches of water into their fields, and flood forty or more acres sometimes in a single night, engulfing millions of insects, covering up quantities of grain, and in short, producing exactly the sort of ponds that a sprig might naturally consider made especially for his convenience. At night the ducks resort to these overflows and grain fields in millions; the ranchers say the noise of the birds quacking and squawking is such that often they cannot sleep for the racket, and shooting is only powder burned so far as chasing the hungry fowl away is concerned. Sometimes they will clean up an entire field in a single night, according to the ever-veracious ranchers.

The overflows change constantly; the water is allowed to sink into the earth and soften it, so the water bodies vary, making it difficult indeed for a duck hunter to keep posted on the locality being used by the birds at any given time. Today they are not where they flocked in millions yesterday, and tomorrow they may be a hundred miles away.

During the daylight hours immense bands of sprig, widgeon and other big ducks resort to the broad expanse of that vast inland ocean, the Salton Sea, and rest there undisturbed, there being no way to successfully get at them. When night comes the fowl hie themselves back to the overflow again, and practically all the big bags that are made fall to such methods as no true sportsman would find very enjoyable—pot shooting at night, "browning" flocks as they whizz overhead, and the like. For that reason the returning hunters do not seem very enthusiastic as a whole regarding the shooting.

LOCAL CONDITIONS.

To the Los Angeles duck hunter, whose sport is generally to be found at his club down in Orange county, or perhaps nearer, the Imperial situation is of interest only in so far as it affects his sport, which, during the full of the moon just now drawing to its wane, has been anything but good.

Men experienced in Imperial ranching conditions, and especially those who have observed the workings of the waterfowl thereabouts, declare that with the general resumption of fall plowing in the Colorado overflow, most of the ducks now there will leave for the coast. Last winter, it will be remembered, the birds left in a single night. A hard storm might hasten the migration somewhat, every south wind of the last two weeks having apparently added materially to the local supply of ducks. Large flocks have been seen coming in at a great altitude and flying in the long "V" that the ducks only use when traveling considerable distance. As these birds are coming from the south and east, it is presumptive that they left the Salton country a few hours before.

The speed at which wild ducks travel is computed differently by many authorities, but none attempt to deny that they outrun the fastest express trains. Sprigs doubtless fly sixty miles an hour, and that brings them here from the Colorado River ahead of the severest storms without any apparent fatigue. Only to those unusually familiar with the birds is the marvelous muscular energy and iron endurance of a wild duck fully made clear.

With no material changes in the San Joaquin Valley and such birds as have left it, apparently striking out for the Colorado River rather than the local clubs, southern shooters had very poor sport during the week. A new flight of widgeon came in a little over a week ago, and afforded somewhat better sport that Saturday, the Cerritos and Green Wing clubs having a few thirty-fives last Sunday, but the new ducks were either gone or fully high schooled by the middle of the week. One limit was reported on the Chico Land and Water Company's preserve below Westminster in Orange county, but the hunters have a system of working the ducks there that can only fail from an utter stoppage of the entire bird supply. On each side of the shooting ponds is a big reserve pond where the fowl are allowed to settle undisturbed while the flights are on. In the lulls, the keeper rides around on his horse and chases the ducks out of one side and across the shooting ponds, where toll is taken out of them; after a brief interval he rides around to the other ponds and sends them back again. The result is a continual bombardment on the Chico when the other clubs in its vicinity are mostly taking a rest.

HOPE FOR BETTER SPORT.

With the darkening of the moon, the clubmen are hoping for a better average of sport all around, the bad effect of moonlight nights being quite generally recognized. Without a new flight of ducks, however, this idea is likely to prove an erroneous one, for the fowl now frequenting southern marshes seem to be for the greater part the resident birds which were on hand when the season opened. Any further knowledge on their part as to how far a shotgun will carry is superfluous; they know a great deal more about the range of a fowling-piece than most of the men who are using scatterguns below, and confident in their knowledge, they sail serenely over the ponds at great altitudes, calmly surveying the situation beneath and waiting for the hunters to return to their clubhouses in disgust. After which the flocks come tumbling down as if they belonged there, and refuse to be chased off the marsh by ten men unless they have shotguns or something similar along.

Of late the sport on most of the clubs has been so bad that very few hunters turned out. As good a marsh as the Cerritos saw half a dozen high not long since. As great a crack as Robert E. Ross with malice aforethought missed several duck shoots in succession. Need more be said?

And Frank Hicks, who with his Purdey constitutes one of the most dangerous combinations to ducks now operating in this end of the State, had to take thirty-five as his best shot for a long time.

The clubs below Huntington Beach had very light turnouts as a rule. Organizations with from twelve to twenty members have let days go by with no one afield. Several of the clubs have decided to cut out a shoot a week until the sport improves, so as to give the fowl a rest. Other clubs, more short-sighted, have tried to pick up a few brace in the afternoon, thereby ruining what little sport they might otherwise have had.

TURNING TO SNIPE.

In the scarcity of ducks such of the shooting organizations as have patches of peat bog or other soft mud on their preserves have turned their attention to snipe, of which there are quite a few in Southern California just now.

Snipe shooting is rare sport and the oldest hunters are well satisfied with far less a string of "jacks" than of the bigger birds, a dozen in a morning being accounted an excellent bag. Killings of half that number are not very uncommon, and hunters in general look for an improvement with colder weather.

An unusually large percentage of mallards has been killed on the Orange county marshes of late, and many more of these fine birds have been seen. The spoonbills and teel are still scarce to an unprecedented degree, and gunners are beginning to fear they will give this part of the country the go-by. Probably the first rains will bring south the spooney in full force, however. There were not many until later than this last winter.

PLOVER COMING IN.

HUNTERS FINDING SPORT.

The annual plover migration seems to have set in before the first rains this year, several very nice little bags having been reported by local sportsmen.

Harry Rose, Dr. Hutchinson and several others killed nice strings on the I. W. Hellman ranch east of the Bay City Gun Club last week, and Rose tried his hand again Thursday afternoon. The birds are fat and in the best of condition.

The plover loks [illegible] like his relative the kildeer, both are technically plover, but the bird popularly so called hereabouts is deveid of the distinguishing black collar of the kildeer, and is a much plumper, meatier bird. He does not frequent marshy places to such an extent as the kildeer and is seldom seen except upon the fields where his favorite diet of insects may be picked up. Plover often follow sheep. They travel in big flocks, and have a most bothersome trick of running ahead of a hunter about ten rods, just too far for a good shot when they rise.

Plover stew has a reputation among epicures and needs only to be tasted once. Conversion follows swiftly and surely.

Plover shooting lasts but a short time in Southern California, and those who like it would do well to protect their favorite hunting grounds at once.

SAN DIEGO SPORTS.

Country Club Arranges a Long and Interesting Card of Events for This Winter.

The Coronado Country Club has arranged for a series of outdoor sports which promise to be interesting. Some of the participants will be of national reputation. The annual golf tournament for men will be held February 4 and the annual golf tournament for women February 11. The men's annual handicap will be held March 4, and the women's annual handicap March 11, while bogey handicap tournaments for men and women, approaching and putting contests, driving contests will be held throughout the season, beginning December 18. The links will be in charge of Alex Taylor, who will arrive December 5.

About the middle of March the annual polo tournament will be held, in which six California teams, Frank McKey's English teams and a team brought out from the East by Foxhall Keene will compete. A week's horse racing will be held after the polo tournament, at which some of the fast horses from Ascot Park will be entered. In January an automobile gymkhana, open to all clubs of Southern California, will be held. Dr. H. B. Weston, president of the National Archers' Association, will have charge of the archery club. Clay-pigeon shooting, tennis, paper chases, rabbit hunts any gymkhana games will also be in the list of sports.

No Ball Park Yet.

The ball club directors held a meeting Friday, but did very little business beyond discussing a location for the ball park for next season and after the session were no nearer a settlement of this question than before. An Ascot park site has been injected into the plans now and it is said a number of capitalists stand ready to build a fine grand stand on land in that vincinity if the directors will agree to go there. It is not likely this idea will be carried out however for few fans would go to Ascot park to see a ball game.

Hauerwaas Improving.

Friends of John Hauerwaas will be glad to learn that he is recovering rapidly from his recent severe and painful illness, and will be probably little the worse for the experience. Mr. Hauerwaas suffered about two weeks with a mastoid abscess which was finally operated upon, but says he will be shooting ducks within a week.

Another Big One

The week just past saw the signing of another large contract for our Patented Wall Beds. It calls for the equipment of The Warman, now in course of construction, at 934 West Sixth street, this city. This building will be three stories in height, and when completed will be one of the best and finest of its kind in Los Angeles. The owners of this building are Messrs. Kitchen & Johnson, the well-known contractors.

The majority of the Apartment Houses built in Los Angeles and throughout California are equipped with the Marshall & Stearns Company's Patented Wall Beds and other Fixtures. There are many reasons for this—reasons which everybody should know. It is knowledge which may be of some value to you in the future.

Come in and see us or send for a copy of "The House Ideal," which is descriptive and illustrative of our Patented Fixtures, and contains much valuable information. It is mailed free upon request.

"Perspectives and Floor Plans"

Is a handsome 96-page booklet, showing the front elevation and floor plans, drawn in detail, of a large number of buildings which have been built for and equipped with our Patented Fixtures. It is full of practical designs for Cottages, Homes, Apartment Houses, etc. Mailed to any address upon receipt of 10c to cover cost of postage.

NOTICE.—The Marshall & Stearns Company's Wall Beds and other Fixtures are fully covered by patents. Any infringement upon these patents, either by manufacturer, purchaser or user, will be vigorously prosecuted.

The Value of Charcoal.

Few People Know How Useful It is in Preserving Health and Beauty.

Costs Nothing To Try.

Nearly everybody knows that charcoal is the safest and most efficient disinfectant and purifier in nature, but few realize its value when taken into the human system for the same cleansing purposes.

Charcoal is a remedy that the more you take of it the better; it is not a drug at all, but simply absorbs the gases and impurities always present in the stomach and intestines and carries them out of the system.

Charcoal sweetens the breath after smoking, drinking or after eating onions and other odorous vegetables.

Charcoal effectually clears and improves the complexion, it whitens the teeth and further acts as a natural and eminently safe cathartic.

It absorbs the injurious gases which collect in the stomach and bowels; it disinfects the mouth and throat from the poison of catarrh.

All druggists sell charcoal in one form or another, but probably the best charcoal and the most for the money is in Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges; they are composed of the finest powdered Willow Charcoal, and other harmless antiseptics in tablet form or rather in the form of large, pleasant tasting lozenges, the charcoal being mixed with honey.

The daily use of these lozenges will soon tell in a much improved condition of the general health, better complexion, sweeter breath and purer blood, and the beauty of it is, that no possible harm can result from their continued use, but, on the contrary, great benefit.

A Buffalo physician, in speaking of the benefits of charcoal, says: "I advise Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges to all patients suffering from gas in stomach and bowels, and to clear the complexion and purify the breath, mouth and throat; I also believe the liver is greatly benefited by the daily use of them; they cost but 25 cents a box at drug stores, and although in some sense a patent preparation, yet I believe I get more and better charcoal in Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges than in any of the ordinary charcoal tablets."

The Sure Way to Test Clothes

By A. Frank Taylor.

LOOK at that illustration.

Have a friend hold the Coat you consider purchasing the way that Coat is held.

Then press your finger along the Center Seam toward the Collar.

In 99 cases out of 100 there will be a Fullness of Cloth—

Which will form a wrinkle just below the collar—

And you had better not purchase that Suit.

For that Suit has either been cut improperly or made improperly—

And the Fullness of the Cloth here and the scantiness there—the wrong curve of the Shoulder and the flabbiness of the Collar—when the Suit was being made—had all to be "remedied."

And the way fully 80 per cent. of the tailors, whether Custom or Ready-to-Wear, "remedy" such defects is not by ripping a Suit to pieces and carefully re-making it as they should.

For that would be too expensive a Proposition—

They simply hand it over to the Presser and with the Hot Flat Iron—Old Dr. Goose—the Fullness of the cloth here and the Scantiness there—all the defects with one exception—are shrunken or stretched into a temporary resemblance of a perfectly made Garment.

That one exception is the fullness in the back of the Coat below the Collar.

That fullness or wrinkle may be flattened out temporarily—you might not notice when you look at the coat—

But, if you apply that test in the illustration, you will find it every time in a poorly constructed Suit.

Now, most Tailors won't like you to look for the Wrinkle in a Coat—

They'll pooh-pooh that Test—Say the Wrinkle is due to the weight of Cloth in the Collar—that the Coat has not been properly hung up.

They'll tell you a thousand and one different Things that appear reasonable—

But if you take their word for it and purchase the Suit they try to sell you—you'll be sorry.

For the Collar will soon lay away from the back of your Neck—

The left Lapel will Sag—

The Shoulders will lose their Shape—the cloth in the front will break and become lumpy—

The back will wrinkle under your Shoulder blade—

For these are defects, indicated with absolute certainty by that Wrinkle under the Collar that the Hot Flat Iron treacherously conceals until you have paid for and worn the Suit a few times.

Now, that "wrinkle finding" test is the Expert Tailor's way of judging a suit—

It is absolutely impartial—you can apply it to any suit made.

We give it to you because "Sincerity Clothes" are not cheaply doped into a false fit and shape resemblance by the Hot Flatiron, Old Dr. Goose, as are about 80 per cent. of all other clothes—

But because "Sincerity Clothes" are moulded into permanent and wear-defying shape by sincere, conscientious, expert and expensive hand needle-work—

That wrinkle finding test is a definite sign by which you can tell, before you purchase, not after, when a suit has not had the expert tailoring in its designing and cutting—the care in its constructon—that "Sincerity Clothes" have had.

It enables you to secure extra value for your money—it insures you against the shapeless burlesque, so-called suits, that have been doped into temporary shape by the Hot Flatiron—Old Dr. Goose.

If you want Clothes that will hold their shape and form and style until you want a new suit, see that the label (below) is on your next purchase. Your up-to-date dealer will handle "Sincerity Clothes." Here is the label.

Yesterday's Forecast and Report.

U. S. WEATHER BUREAU, Los Angeles, Nov. 10.—[Reported by A. B. Wollaber, Local Forecaster.] At 5 o'clock a.m., the thermometer registered 53 deg.; at 5 p.m., 68 deg. Relative humidity, 5 a.m., 59 per cent.; 5 p.m., 40 per cent. Wind, 5 a.m., north, velocity 1 mile; 5 p.m., west, velocity 10 miles. Maximum temperature, 80 deg. Minimum temperature, 49 deg.

Weather Conditions.—The disturbance central over the lake region yesterday is now passing to sea through the St. Lawrence Valley. It caused cloudy weather in the Northern States east of the Mississippi River, and some light rainfalls in New York and New England. Elsewhere in the United States fair weather has prevailed, except in the Pacific Northwest, where good rains are reported, due to a storm which is moving eastward over the British possessions. A high pressure area of considerable magnitude now occupies the Rocky Mountain region and a portion of the Pacific Slope, and under its influence fair weather will continue in Los Angeles and vicinity during the next thirty-six to forty-eight hours, with moderately warm afternoons and cool nights and mornings.

LOCAL FORECAST FOR LOS ANGELES and vicinity: Fair tonight and Sunday; no important change in temperature. Variable winds.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 10.—Weather forecast:

San Francisco and vicinity: Fair Sunday, light north wind.

Sacramento and San Joaquin Valleys: Fair Sunday, continued warm, light north wind.

Los Angeles and vicinity: Fair Sunday, continued warm, light northeast wind.

LOCAL PRODUCE MARKET.

Trade was not active yesterday, although the volume of business was satisfactory for the end of the week. Few changes were noted in prices.

No change was expected in the price of butter. Receipts of butter yesterday were 23,986 lbs. Northern cheese has advanced to 16 cents.

Eggs are firm at the quoted prices. Northern candled offerings were quoted at 40 cents, an advance of 2 cents over the previous day. One carload of eastern eggs came in. While the advent of rain would have little effect on the butter market, it would alter the egg situation. Several good rains would cause the grass to grow, and hens begin to lay as soon as they can get green feed. With eggs more plentiful drops in the prices would occur.

Onions are coming in more freely. Potatoes and onions are steady, with no excitement in either one. Owing to a preponderance of poor potatoes on the market yesterday a slight uneasiness was felt.

The fruit market was devoid of special features. Muscat grapes were raised to $1.10 per box. White figs are scarce at $1.10, and black figs bring $1.50 per box.

Tomatoes were in over-supply, and one dealer stated that he had sent 300 boxes of them to the locan canneries. Rhubarb lacks interest at 3c per lb. Fish are scarce. Lobsters were plentiful. Mallard, teal and canvasback ducks are wanted.

The receipts of produce as reported for yesterday's exchange were as follows: Eggs, 270 cases; butter, 23,986 lbs.; cheese, local, 572 lbs.; potatoes, 3248 sacks; onions, 305; beans, 631; sweet potatoes, 30 sacks.

NEW YORK MARKETS.

SHARES AND MONEY.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—Up to within fifteen minutes of the close of today's session the surface of the stock market was quite imperturbed by the showing of the bank statement or by Secretary Shaw's announcement that he had no intention, unless conditions materially changed, of adding to government deposits with the banks or of reducing government bonds to mature next year. Just in the final dealings there was some selling of stocks, which carried prices downward sharply to a weak close. The highest prices of the day were made some time after the bank statement was published. Its complexions had been accurately intimated before the publication, and in time to afford opportunity for operations in the market in anticipation of the weak showing. The recovery afterward seemed to be due to rebuying by professionals who had sold stocks before the statement appeared. An intelligible explanation is to be had regarding the statement, and it is generally assumed to be due to arbitrary shifting of accounts between institutions in and out of the Clearinghouse Association. The further loan contraction cannot be said to have surprised Wall street, in view of the same experience with the two preceding statements, while large transfers of loans from London to this market are going on. It is reported that some loans have been placed in New York for account of interior banks during the week, but the borrowing reported to have taken place by international commission houses would far exceed any possible effect of lending interior banks. The decrease in cash of $8,831,300 compares with the estimates furnished yesterday by the banks of about $3,000,000. The deficit of $1,514,125 compares with a deficit on November 11 last year of $2,428,800. On the Monday following last year call money went to 25 per cent. At the Stock Exchange there was considerable liquidation. Prompt relief resulted from the liquidation and from the offerings of foreign and interior funds attracted by the high rates. The movement of currency also turned from the interior in favor of New York, with large recuperation of cash holdings of the banks promptly following. The exchanges moved strongly in favor London today at all points. The bond market was under some pressure and prices declined quite generally. Total sales, par value, 792,000. Bonds were dull and heavy.

New York Cotton.

[BY PRIVATE WIRE TO FRED DORR.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—The decline yesterday in this market is attributed to liquidation by Price and some of his followers. Sentiment is barely mixed and the market seems to have a bad case of nervousness. We do not believe this crop will prove to be much if any in excess of 12,000,000 bales. The bulls were badly frightened and needed no short selling to break the market. There was a good deal of professional trading on the decline, but not enough to check the break. The big crop idea is gaining a very strong hold again and the financial situation is now such as to encourage the idea that a successful bull campaign can be carried out at this time. Liverpool is due to come down six points. Following is range of prices today:

	Open.	High.	Low.	Close.

Boston Copper Market.

[BY PRIVATE WIRE TO FRED DORR.]

BOSTON, Nov. 10.—Houghton, Mich.: The timbering of the Hancock shaft will be completed next week, shortly after which the mines will be engaged in drilling and sinking. Thomas Cole is making a thorough examination of the mines of the Butte Coalition, and expresses himself as highly satisfied with their condition and prospects for a big output of ore soon. It is reported that Mr. Cole and associates are likely to become interested in the Butte company.

GENERAL EASTERN MARKETS.

GRAIN AND PRODUCE.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

CHICAGO, Nov. 10.—Continued small receipts in the Northwest today and a fair amount of buying by commission houses held the market steady. The total world's shipments and the amount of breadstuffs on ocean passage, it was predicted, will each show a decrease for the week. Receipts at Minneapolis and Duluth were again greatly below those of the corresponding day last year, and the total primary receipts were about 30 per cent. less than for the same date a year ago. These factors had a steadying effect in prices. An increase in winter wheat acreage, as indicated by the report of a local crop expert, induced some selling by pit traders late in the day, and caused a slightly easier feeling. The market, however, closed steady. December opened 1-2 higher at 73 to 73 1-8, sold between 72 7-8 and 73 1-4 to 73 3-8, and closed at 72 7-8, 1-8 net lower. Selling of December delivery by cash houses, against purchases of the country, indicated an easier tone in the corn market, although prices changed but little. December opened unchanged to 1-8 higher at 42 3-8 to 43 1-2, sold off to 42 1-4, and closed 1-8 off at the lowest point. Oats were firm all day because of an active demand by commission houses and local bulls. December opened 1-8 higher at 34 5-8 to 34 3-4, sold between 34 1-2 and 34 3-4, and closed a shade higher at 34 5-8. The feature of trading in provisions was the purchase of 1000 barrels of pork for May delivery by a prominent commission house. This had a tendency to hold prices steady early in the day, but later realizing sales caused slight declines. At the close January pork was a shade lower; lard was 2 1-2 to 5c lower and ribs were 2 1-2 lower.

TRICKED BY DYSPEPSIA

The Doctor Couldn't Tell Where The Trouble Lay.

"For the past seven years I have been a victim of dyspepsia and chronic constipation and have consulted the most noted specialists to be found on diseases of this character. None, however, seemed to locate the difficulty or give relief. In addition to this medical treatment, I have resorted to the use of many remedies and have given them faithful trial, but all to no purpose.

Upon the recommendation of a close friend, I purchased a 50c package of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets and in less than five days noticed that I was receiving more benefit than from any remedy I had used before. I continued to use the tablets after each meal for one month and by that time my stomach was in a healthy condition, capable of digesting anything which my increasing appetite demanded.

I have not experienced any return of my former trouble, though three months have elapsed since taking your remedy."

We wish that you could see with your own eyes the countless other bona-fide signed letters from grateful men and women all over the land who had suffered years of agony with dyspepsia, tried every known remedy and consulted eminent specialists without result, until they gave Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets a trial. Like the doctor above, they couldn't locate the seat of the trouble.

Dyspepsia is a disease which has long baffled physicians. So difficult of location is the disease that cure seems next to miraculous. There is only one way to treat dyspepsia—to supply the elements which nature has ordained to perform this function and to cause them to enter the digestive organs, supplying the fluids which they lack. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets alone fill these requirements, as is shown by the fact that 40,000 physicians in the United States and Canada unite in recommending them to their patients for stomach disorders.

We do not claim or expect Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets to cure anything but disordered conditions of the stomach and other digestive organs, but this they never fail to do. They work upon the inner lining of the stomach and intestines, stimulate the gastric glands and aid in the secretion of juices necessary in digestion.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are for sale by all druggists at 50 cents a box. One box will frequently effect a perfect cure. If in doubt and wish more adequate proof send us your name and address and we will gladly mail you a sample package free. F. A. Stuart Co., 61 Stuart Bldg., Marshall. Mich.

"I had come out to hunt 'possums [illegible] up my mind I was going [illegible] by jingoes, if I did have [illegible] So I started out. I [illegible] aimlessly around for an hour [illegible] looking into the tops of the [illegible] 'possums and falling over logs [illegible] until my legs were [illegible] At last I saw a dark object mov[illegible] the branches of a big [illegible] 'That's a 'possum,' I says to my[illegible] 'I'm going to have him or [illegible]' I threw sticks at it [illegible] I couldn't make any im[illegible] it. It just hung onto the [illegible] didn't utter a sound. 'All [illegible] if you won't come to [illegible] I says, for I had [illegible] one way to get a 'pos[illegible] So I took off my coat [illegible] to shin up the tree. You [illegible] what a pretty figure I cut. [illegible] least fifteen feet to the first [illegible] it took me fully half an hour [illegible] the distance. I was puf[illegible] blowin' like the last man in [illegible] when I reached it [illegible] I got a straddle of that limb [illegible] any farther for a while, [illegible] your life. But the 'possum [illegible] way above and I've always [illegible] a practice to finish a job [illegible] at it. I got under way [illegible] and soon reached the [illegible] my game was hanging. [illegible] good ways out and I tried to [illegible] but it stuck like a porous [illegible] then I lost my head and [illegible] the branch after it.

"[illegible] to it and was reach[illegible] to grab it when there was a [illegible] underneath me and I started [illegible] the ground like a sand[illegible] events of my past life didn't [illegible] me like you read in Sun[illegible] story books, and I didn't [illegible] I didn't have time [illegible] think anything at all. I was [illegible] too fast. But I didn't go [illegible] There was a dead prong [illegible] lowest limb and as I was pass[illegible] went rippin' through the seat of [illegible] got a firm hold under [illegible] there I hung, gen[illegible] a sack o' flour goin' to mill. I couldn't get hold of anything with my hands or my feet, although I pawed the air like a professor of elocution, and kicked like a nervous dyspeptic. There wasn't anything in reach but wind and I had pretty near used up all I had of that before I began to holler for help. By good luck I didn't have to holler long, for a colored gentleman happened to be passing by and he strolled leisurely over to see what the rumpus was about?

"'What yoh doin' up dar, Mistah?' he inquired.

"'Im studyin' astronomy, you darn fool,' I answered, 'what you think I'm doin,' diggin' for worms? Get up here and help me down.'

"'How much yoh give me, boss?' he asked, just as calmly as if he was tryin' to sell me a bushel of corn.

"'Give the devil,' I says, 'can't you see I'm dyin? This ain't a horse trade. Come on and help me down like a good fellow.'

"'Could yoh make it a dollah, boss?' he insisted.

"'Yes, yes, yes, I'll make it five. But hurry up. I'll be dead in a minute.'

"He shinned up the tree like a monkey and was ahold of me in half a minute. He was a big fellow and must have had muscles like Jeffries, for he reached over and hauled me up just as easy as if I had weighed fifty pounds instead of two hundred, and he helped me down as gently as if I had been an infant. After I got to the ground it was fifteen or twenty minutes before I could stand up, I was so weak. But that much rest right side up, and a few drinks, soon put me in fairly good shape again.

"My dusky deliverer had also been possum hunting and he had a fine one with him. I gave him the five I had promised and then I gave another five to let me have his 'possum, show me the way to Owensboro and keep his mouth shut. So I marched into town in triumph and told the empty headed hunters a story of single-handed conquest that made 'em open their eyes with wonder. But that fool nigger didn't stick to his bargain. He gave me away, and now when I have to pass through Owensboro I take a night train. I don't want any more possum hunting in mine, gentlemen, I know when I've got enough."

"Well, your experience was exceptional," said the man from St. Louis, "and I don't blame you much for getting a bad taste in your mouth when 'possum hunts are announced, but all the same it's good sport. You remind me, though, of old Tom Billings, who used to live in the little Missouri town where I was raised. Not that you are anything like Tom. I would probably have a fight on my hands if I made such a comparison, for Tom was about as onery a specimen of humanity as Missouri ever produced. But he was fat and he hated possums. More than that he was too lazy to turn over in bed and he grumbled mightily when his wife forced him to change his shirt once a month. Tom was never known to hunt for anything. He was a practical believer in the theory that things would come to him if he waited long enough, and waiting was Tom's long suit. But there was a tradition that Tom had been persuaded to go 'possum hunting once upon a time. Tom, like our friend from Cincinnati, got left behind at the first scent, but unlike him he didn't worry about it. On the contrary he found a grassy spot and leaning his weary back against a big persimmon tree went fast asleep. It chanced that a possum had selected that same tree for his evening lunch, and when Tom went to repose beneath it he was already in the topmost branches contentedly munching its favorite fruit. After a while the dogs with the hunting party struck the trail of this particular 'possum and in a few minutes there was a circle of excited and yelping hounds surrounding Tom and his persimmon tree. But a little thing like that didn't disturb Tom. He was a good sleeper and his wife used to say that nothing less than an earthquake would wake him before 7 o'clock. Pretty soon the hunters came up with their pine knots ablaze and mingled their shouts with the barking of the dogs.

"Still Tom slept on and when they rolled him over to get him out of the way he only muttered a mild protest to 'Maria' and went on with his nap. It was some time before they discovered the 'possum for he had taken refuge near the tip of a particularly leafy branch, but when they did they commenced to bombard it with sticks, paying no attention to the fact that they had rolled Tom directly under the 'possum's retreat, and the falling missiles were likely to do him serious injury. Luckily, however, none of them struck him, but one well aimed stick finally hit the possum and knocked him out. Down he came kerplunk right on poor Tom's head and fastened his claws in Tom's long hair.

"The sleeper awoke. With a yell that made the trees tremble, Tom sprang to his feet, and seeing the blazing torches and the red open mouths of the baying hounds around him, and feeling the claws of the 'possum in his hair, jumped to the conclusion that he had got into the lower regions and the devil had him in his clutches. Down the road he went as fast as his fat little legs would carry him, the dogs after him and the hunters following yelling with delight. At every other jump Tom let out a fresh yell, alternating with prayers and pleadings, but he never slackened his speed.

"'Oh, Mr. Devil, turn me loose!' he hollered, 'I'll be good. I'll be good, Mr. Devil. Just let me get back to Maria, Mr. Devil. Hoop-ee! Take 'em away! Take 'em away! Please Mr. Devil, let go! Oh, Maria, Maria, the devil's got me sure! You said he would, Maria. Ouch! Don't scratch so hard, Mr. Devil! Help! Help! The devil's got me and all hell's after me! Take him off! Take him off!'

"Well, sir, gentlemen, he kept that up every step of the way to town, and he didn't stop running till he fell in a flat right at his own door, with the 'possum still clinging to him. Maria came out, and when she sized up the situation she gave that crowd of hunters a tongue lashing that was memorable in that town. It was their turn to thing the devil was after them, and they got away as fast as they could, leaving Mrs. Billings to gather up the remains as best she could. It was a week before Tom could venture out again, and for a long time he carried a gun for the benefit of the man who dared to say 'possum in his presence."

"Nevertheless," said the red-headed man in the corner, after a little spell of silence, "'possum and swet potatoes make mighty fine eating," and then he lighted his last cigar.

PILES

Seattle Gentleman Cured With Less Than a Box by The Pyramid Pile Cure.

Anyone Can Easily Test It and Prove It For a Free Sample is Sent By Mail to All.

Seven out of ten readers of this paper are tortured with piles or some form of rectal disease. You are, or you would not be reading this article. Thirty years ago doctors carried a lancet in their vest pocket and bled people for all sorts of diseases and bled them hard—sometimes a quart at a time. It was the fashion then. All that is changed nowadays and a doctor with a lancet would be considered a curiosity.

Five years ago doctors "cut out" Piles wherever they got the chance. All that has been changed since the marvelous soothing healing and curative properties of Pyramid Pile Cure have become known.

By every mail we get letters like this:

"Wishing to give credit where credit is due I feel it my duty to humanity—as well as yourselves to write you regarding your pile remedy. I have not finished my first box and am now well. After the first treatment of Pyramid Pile Cure the soreness left and the swellings have kept decreasing. I also used your pills and am feeling like myself again. Thanking you kindly, I am, yours truly, C. Crowley, 170 9th Ave., Seattle, Wash."

If you want positive proof of the curative value of this remedy send to the Pyramid Drug Company, 61 Pyramid Building, Marshall, Mich. You will receive a free trial package by return mail. Try it, then go straight to your druggist, get a 50ct. box and get well.

Railroad Stock Market.

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—Operations in stocks started in a listless manner and many declines were the rule. A few stocks of first importance showed small gains. Great Northern preferred declined ⅜. Dealings were on a small scale. Declines were extended before the market recovered, but buying became small, and as prices rose Reading and Great Northern preferred were driven down 1¼ and 1½ respectively, but made up nearly all of their losses. In other active stocks the fluctuations did not extend beyond a sharp fraction. Northwestern yielded 2¼, C.C.C. and St. Louis 1½, United States Rubber first preferred 1⅜, and Louisville & Nashville, Pullman, Colorado Southern second preferred and American Car preferred 1. The market closed weak and quite active. The tone was dull and heavy previous to the appearance of the bank statement, but prices hardened after that in spite of a showing of a deficit in the legal reserves. Reading returned to a fraction over last night. Northern Pacific 1¾, and United States Realty 1. Prices ran off rather adruptly in the final dealings. Pullman lost 4, Great Northern preferred 2½, General Electric, Union Pacific 1⅛, and Missouri Pacific, Wabash preferred and Rock Island preferred a point.

The Autumn Girl.

I have no fault to find with the girl
Who comes in the summer time,
With her peekaboo waist and her openworks
And her rig for a torrid clime.
I think she adds to the charm of life,
And I welcome her with a smile;
I wish she would come the whole year round
And stay with us all the while.

But I want to say that the autumn girl
Is as fine as they make them, too,
With the somber tints of her hat and dress
And her eyes that sparkle true.
The summer rose is no whit more red
Than the rosy red of her cheek
When the keen north wind comes by with its frost
And gives her visage a tweak.

Oh, the autmn girl is a sight most fair,
Though somber and warm her rig;
She goes with a grace that is jaunty quite
And she's ever so lithe and trig.
The frost brings fire to her twinkling eyes
And she swings in a healthy way
As she walks through the light, a heavenly sight,
In the glow of the autumn day!

Sale of Greek Canal.

The rare spectacle of an important navigable canal for sale at auction will be witnessed at Athens, on November 14, when the Corinth canal will be offered in satisfaction of a claim of $200,000 lodged by the Empedocles bank. This is the climax to a situation of long standing. The income of the canal has been about 300,000 drachmas a year, every cent of which has gone to its administration. The stockholders became tired of waiting for a dividend year after year and finally forced a crisis.

Buy Butte and Greenwater Copper Stock

The Following Telegram Will Tell You Why

Rhyolite, Nevada, Nov. 8, 1906.

Joseph Ball Company,
Homer Laughlin Bldg., Los Angeles, Cal.

"Have just returned from an inspection of the Greenwater District.

Have been copper mining in Butte for twenty-six years, ever since Anaconda Shaft was ten feet deep.

Was astonished at the surface showings; and have no hesitancy in saying that he surface showings excel anything I have ever seen.

Have made a careful examination of Butte and Greenwater property, comprising Copper Bars and Copper Eagles; and consider it one of the best pieces of ground in the entire camp.

Took many samples from Death Valley and Greenwater, Furnace Creek, Furnace Creek Extension, and Greenwater United, and can see no difference.

Believe Butte and Greenwater developed along the lines laid down will make one of the mines of the district.

In the Investor Group, within two hundred feet of Butte and Greenwater, they have opened up six feet of first class copper ore, and the lead runs right into the Butte and Greenwater property; no way to miss it.

I have advised my personal friends to buy Butte and Greenwater Stock, and have increased my holdings."

(Signed) R. P. KELLEY.

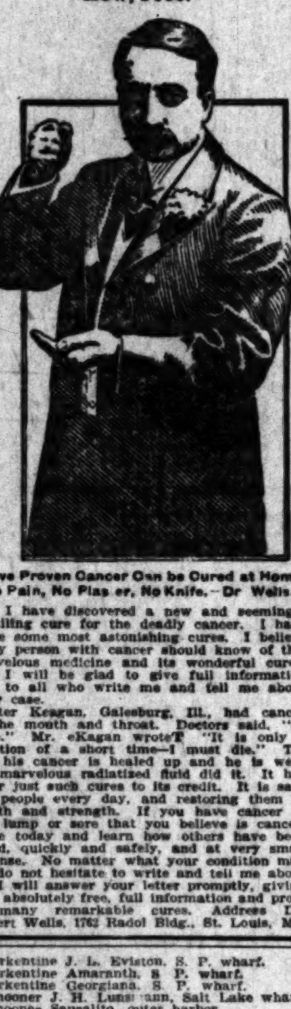
I Can Cure Cancer.

At Home Without Pain Plaster or Operation and I Tell You How, Free.



I Have Proven Cancer Can be Cured at Home. No Pain, No Plaster, No Knife.—Dr Wells.

I have discovered a new and seemingly unfailing cure for the deadly cancer. I have made some most astonishing cures. I believe every person with cancer should know of this marvelous medicine and its wonderful cures, and I will be glad to give full information free to all who write me and tell me about their case.

Peter Keagan, Galesburg, Ill., had cancer of the mouth and throat. Doctors said, "no hope." Mr. eKagan wroteT "It is only a question of a short time—I must die." Today his cancer is healed up and he is well. My marvelous radiatized fluid did it. It has other just such cures to its credit. It is saving people every day, and restoring them to health and strength. If you have cancer or any lump or sore that you believe is cancer, write today and learn how others have been cured, quickly and safely, and at very small expense. No matter what your condition may be, do not hesitate to write and tell me about it. I will answer your letter promptly, giving you, absolutely free, full information and proof of many remarkable cures. Address Dr. Rupert Wells, 1762 Radol Bldg., St. Louis, Mo.

CANCER CURED

Cure Yourself at Home with the New Cancer Discovery in 10 to 20 Days. Mailed Free to All. How To Do It Without Trouble, Without Risk. Fill Out Free Coupon Below Today.

My discovery has startled the medical world. I have cured hundreds of the most horrifying cases in from 10 to 20 days, after celebrated physicians and surgeons had given up all hope of saving them.

Geo. Yost Age 74, of Havana, Ill., Cured of Cancer by Dr. Curry in Twelve Days After 20 Years' Suffering.

There is a certain cure for you. Cancer is your death warrant unless you cure it at once. Don't trifle with it. It grows every day. Your life is at stake. With the great Dr. Curry Cancer Cure you cure yourself at home privately, and quickly. You may save your life, if you send me your name and address on the coupon below.

I have one of the finest sanitariums in the country for those who wish to come and have my personal attention. I will guarantee a cure or make no charge, whatever, for my services or medicine. However, you can cure yourself just as well at home. I gladly refer you to any bank or business firm in Lebanon.

FREE CANCER COUPON.

If you suffer from cancer in any form, simply fill in your name and address on dotted lines below and mail today to Dr. G. M. Curry, 1683 Curry Building, Lebanon, Ohio. You will be surprised how easily you can cure yourself at home without risk or danger.

New Cure for Rupture

New Scientific Appliance, Always a Perfect Fit—Adjustable to Any Size Person—Easy, Comfortable, Never Slips, No Obnoxious Springs or Pads—Costs Less than Many Common Trusses — Made for Men, Women or Children.

I Send It On Approval—You Wear It—If You Are Not Satisfied, I Refund Your Money.

I have invented a rupture appliance that I can safely say, by 30 years' experience in the rupture business, is the only one that will absolutely hold the rupture and never slip and yet is cool, comfortable, conforms to every movement of the body without chafing or hurting and costs less than many ordinary trusses. I have put the price so low that any person, rich or poor, can buy, and I absolutely guarantee it. I make it to your order—send it to you—you wear it, and if it doesn't satisfy you send it back to me and I will refund your money. That is the fairest proposition ever made by a rupture specialist. The banks or any responsible citizen in Marshall will tell you that is the way I do business—always absolutely on the square.

Here is what Mr. Jas. Britton, a prominent manufacturer of Bethlehem, Pa., writes:

"C. E. Brooks, Esq. Dear Sir: I have been ruptured six years and have always had trouble with it till I got your appliance. It is very easy to wear, fits neat and snug, and is not in the way at any time, day or night. In fact, at times I did not know I had it on. It just adapted itself to the shape of the body and clung to the spot, no matter what position I was in. It would be a veritable God-send to the unfortunate who suffer from rupture, if all could procure the Brooks Rupture Appliance and wear it. They certainly would never regret it. My rupture is all healed up and nothing ever did it but your appliance.—[JAS. BRITTON."

If you have tried most everything else, come to me. Where others fail is where I have my greatest success. Write me today and I will send you my book on Rupture and its Cure, showing my appliance and giving you prices and names of people who have tried it and been cured. It is instant relief when all others fail. Remember I use no salves, no harness, no lies. Just a straight business deal at a reasonable price.

CRISIS IS AVERTED.

Extreme Radicals Appeased by Announcement That Certain Church Property Goes to State.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

PARIS, Nov. 10.—Unless the Vatican authorities cause some radical changes in the situation, the fears of a religious crisis, resulting from the enforcement December 11 of the law providing for the separation of church and state, are regarded as dissipated in consequence of the middle course steered by the Clemenceau Cabinet.

The extreme radicals, under M. Combes and M. Pelletan, who insisted that a policy of spoliation and persecution be inaugurated December 11, have been appeased by the announcement that all church property not claimed by cultural associations on that date will pass under the control of the State for distribution to the communes at the end of the present year.

On the other hand the churches, in the meantime, will remain at the disposal of the clergy, and a road for retreat is left open to the Vatican by the admission of the possibility that church property can by State decree be granted to associations formed before December 11, 1907.

SLAYER OF FIVE SURRENDERS.

Carlisle Indian Says Tribe Drove Him to the Wholesale Murder of Redskins.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PRESCOTT (Ariz.) Nov. 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Justin Head, an Apache Indian, who Tuesday shot seven Indians, killing five, at the Indian village of Cottonwood, near here, walked into Jerome today, clothes in rags, greatly emaciated, and gave himself up to the officers. He was brought to this city tonight.

He claimed he had had nothing to eat for three days, but stated that had his ammunition not become exhausted he would never have surrendered.

Head alleges that ever since he was graduated from Carlisle his people have declared him a renegade, and that by acting as interpreter in court in Indian trials he incurred their hatred. He was en route to this city again to act as interpreter when an attempt was made to kill him, he says.

He killed two, started to flee, and claims the other three victims were killed by bullets of his pursuers, but this story is not given credence by the local police.

TOUR ARCHIPELAGO.

MANILA, Nov. 10.—Gov.-Gen. Smith and Commissioner Luzuanaga, accompanied by several native guests, have gone on a two weeks' tour of the southern archipelago to observe conditions in the provinces and formally open the White Syndicate Railroad construction by turning the first sod in Cebu. Gov.-Gen. Smith will also attend the opening of three schools and examine into the cause of the local disturbances on the islands of Samar and Leyte.

FIRE IN BOSTON.

BOSTON, Nov. 10.—Three alarms were turned in for a threatening fire in a five-story brick building 61 to 65 Beverly street, in the North End, early this morning. After an hour's fighting it was confined to the building in which it started. Hosemen Skinner and Lannigan were overcome by smoke. The two upper floors of the structure were ruined and the loss, it is thought, will amount to about $50,000.

FINE CORN AND POTATO CROPS.

ESTIMATES SHOW EXTRAORDINARILY GOOD YIELDS.

Average for Cereal Is Thirty and Two-Tenths Bushels Per Acre and Tubers Run Up to One Hundred and Two and One-Half Bushels for Whole Country.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—The crop-reporting bureau of the Bureau of Statistics of the Department of Agriculture finds, from the reports of the correspondents and agents of the bureau, as follows:

The preliminary returns on the production of corn in 1906 indicate a total yield of about 2,881,096,000 bushels, or an average of 30.2 per acre, as compared with an average yield of 28.8 bushels, as finally estimated in 1905, and a ten-year average of 25.2 bushels. This, and other preliminary estimates of yield made today are subject to such revision and "as may be" proper when the final estimates of the bureau are made next month.

The preliminary estimate of the average yield per acre of potatoes is 102.5 bushels against an average yield of 87.0 bushels as finally estimated in 1905, 110.4 in 1904, and a ten-year average of 84.4. The average as to quality is 90 per cent., as compared with 85.4 a year ago, 93.4 in 1904, and 86.4 in 1903.

The relations between Germany and the Vatican continue to be strained. Germany resents the refusal of the Vatican to disavow the pastoral letter of Mgr. Stablewsk, the archbishop of Posen, written last month, in which the archbishop protests against the German order that children in German Poland be given their religious teaching in German.

Humphreys' Seventy-Seven Cures Grip and COLDS

CHIN IN.—To keep the chin in, means to keep it well drawn back. That causes what physical culturists call "a lifted chest." This insures deep and full breathing and hence perfect circulation. Try keping your chin in and see how your chest will stand out, and improve your bearing.

Most colds are caused by checked circulation; the use of "Seventy-seven" starts the blood coursing through the veins and breaks up a cold.

WOMEN'S CLUBS.

Back Beyond History.

Dr. Anstruther Davidson went back beyond history, Friday, for his topic at the Friday Morning Club, the old ruins or cairns of the Picts shown in the stereopticon views having been the dwelling places of men presumably 20,000 years agone.

His story was invested with present-day interest because of the personal explorations of the speaker who went last summer to his old home in Cathness, Scotland, and spent a month exploring a mound, which has long been a feature of the treeless wind-swept plain.

There he found the remains of the life of the stone age, a life so long ago that not even the remotest legends remain to tell the tale and the history of the little brown men must be read from the ruins which still dot the British Isles.

These homes of prehistoric man, the speaker explained, were successively the fields of actions for the Celt, the Roman, the Saxon and the Norman, and are still mute testimonies in their circles of stone of the habits and the ideas of their builders.

Without mortar the cairns were constructed by placing stone upon stone, the unique way of getting the stone from the quarry to the place of building being described by the speaker. A long line of men evidently covered the entire distance of transportation and each separate stone was passed from hand to hand, there being no beasts of burden, no wagons of any sort, and no instruments for building.

The most interesting study was the construction of those ruined dwellings. Dr. Davidson showed that they were built in a circle for protection, and the staircases were on the inner side that was open to the sky, and so narrow that each enemy who entered could be stoned to death on his way up.

A few human bones and bones of animals, Dr. Davidson said, have been taken from various of the cairns, and the fact has been proved that these men were the Brownies of the past, the rooms of their houses being so tiny that no full-grown person could have dwelt there.

Dr. Davidson's pictures showed places all over the British Isles where these ruins occur, and also several of the lake dwellings in Switzerland.

Ebell Items.

The programme for tomorrow at this club promises to be one of especial interest to the women of Ebell. Mrs. Clara Shortridge Foltz, formerly of San Francisco, who needs no introduction to California Club women North or South, will speak on "Contracts." Prof. N. Hill Nesbitt, M.A. Ph.D. who has had wide experience as an educator will speak on "The Influence of the Child Mind on Civilization." Prof. Nesbitt is a Scotchman by birth, but has spent many years in the Far East and on the continent and brings to his subject a large and varied experience. Miss Emma Guthaus will give two vocal selections.

A large number of women attended the meeting of the Parliamentary Law section this week. The Department of French which meets regularly every Wednesday now numbers over eighty students, who are doing good work under Mrs. W. E. Reed, curator, and Prof. Durnerin as instructor. The Department of Shakespeare studied Henry VIII. at its meeting this week, and several excellent papers were read. Mrs. Edward C. Dieter's paper dealt with "The Historical Wolsey, and that of Mrs. Ida Underhill with "Queen Katherine."

Cambria-street Circle.

The Cambria-street Child Study Circle listened to an excellent afternoon talk from Prof. George L. Leslie on "The Mental, Moral and Physical Development of the Child." The newly-elected officers of this circle are Mrs. Rose Charles, president; Mrs. C. S. Eastman, vice-president; Mrs. F. S. Barnard, treasurer, and Miss Lulu Jahns, secretary.

Business Women.

Miss Elizabeth L. Kenney will speak before the California Business Woman's Association Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock on "The Property Rights of Women," in the directors' room of the Merchants' Trust building. Miss Kenney is an interesting speaker, and men and women alike appreciate her handling of the above subject.

Miss Kenney was one of the first to assist Mrs. Claudia H. White in the organization of the California Business Women's Association, which now numbers over one hundred members, with Mrs. O. H. Burbridge as president. The association has grown steadily since its organization last May, and the women who are members are those whose names stand for something that is worth while. Besides business women, a number of women who are members preside over their homes, but are trying to rear boys and girls to enter the business world with a proper knowledge of business principals and with high standards of commercial honor and integrity.

The objects of the club as officially stated are to provide means of communication between business women, to promote broader fellowship, to encourage stability and accuracy, to maintain high standards of commercial honor and integrity, to inculcate just and equitable principles of trade and business among its members and generally to secure benefits resulting from organized effort. "Any woman," this organization declares, "of good moral character, engaged in any business, art or profession, including homekeeping or housekeeping, is eligible to membership."

Dr. Emma Carson, a member of the association, has arranged for a delightful outing for the members and their friends to Catalina. She has planned a trip to the Avalon, with supper at the hotel and a moonlight voyage to the Isthmus, where a bonfire will be blazing to greet the party, with tents and all conveniences for a night on the beach. The next day Dr. Carson will entertain with a barbecue, and she promises a great spread.

ANNOYED HIS FORMER WIFE.

Howard Metcalf's bondsmen gave up the man yesterday after his persistent efforts to annoy his divorced wife. Metcalf was taken by Patrolman Bottorff to the city prison. Several months ago he was placed under bonds to keep the peace. Several weeks ago his wife complained that he had burglarized her home on Sunset boulevard in an attempt to kidnap her two little children. Since then Metcalf's trial on a charge of disturbing the peace has been pending. And in the interim, Mrs. Metcalf says, he has been going to the house and threatening her.

JOURNALISM IN INDIA.

An open meeting of the Woman's Press Club will be held Wednesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock in Maple Hall, Fraternal Brotherhood building, No. 842 South Figueroa street. A treat is anticipated in a lecture by Prof. N. Hill Nesbitt on "Journalistic Experiences in Burmah and India," where for several years he conducted the Rangoon Times and the Simla Press.

STANFORD'S CARDINAL FLOATS TRIUMPHANT OVER BERKELEY'S RUGBY FOOTBALL FIELD.

GAME'S FEATURE

Score—Stanford, 6; California, 3.

Stanford's points were scored by Fenton on goals from penalty.

California's score was made by Whitman on a try.

Stanford could not cross California's goal line.

Fenton's kicking won the game for Stanford.

Rugby met with more favor than at any time this year and probably will be played again next year.

LANAGAN'S OPINION.

I think Stanford excelled California at all points of the game, with the possible exception of the scrum. The game was ragged as an exhibition of Rugby, being far too fiercely fought to be otherwise. Apparently one of the things that we must expect in the game is that it will become less scientific, as Rugby, the more fighting spirit is put into the contest.—[Coach Lanagan of Stanford.

BERKELEY, Nov. 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Stanford won the first intercollegiate Rugby game this afternoon on California Field in a contest that was as fiercely fought as have been the fifteen previous annual contests of football between the two universities. The score was 6 to 3 at the end of the two 40-minute halves.

California scored first on a try made by Whitman early in the first half. Fenton evened the score for Stanford before the half was over by kicking a goal from a penalty, and then made it 6 to 3 by repeating the performance in the second half.

Fifteen thousand people witnessed the game, and none of the indifference or lack of interest that marked the freshman game was apparent. The bleachers rose to their feet with the old-time roar when a long run was made or a good play resulted, and the pandemonium that reigned when the teams made their scores rivaled that of years gone by.

Rugby stood up better under the big test given it today than had been expected, but as Rugby, the game was not up to the standard of play set by the Vancouver players. In their eagerness the men sometimes passed to players on the opposing side.

STANFORD FAVORITE.

California started off like a winner, and soon had the men in cardinal, who had bet their money 2 to 1, thoroughly scared. For the first fifteen minutes of play, after the initial kickoff had sent the ball far down into Stanford territory, Stanford was unable to get the ball away from the powerful California scrum, and before the cardinal could recover, three points were chalked up against it. The good passing of Stanford's backs became manifest after the second kickoff and the cardinal played a winning game from then on.

Fenton was the particular star of the game, and to his keen eye, sure foot, and clever poise were due both of the goals. Laumeister, the man who was put on the Stanford team at the last moment, proved a great success, playing one of the strongest games on his side. Stott's injury hampered him slightly, but with his team-mates, Holman and Chalmers, he did great work for the Cardinal. Twitchell, Stanton, Budelman, Butler and Fuller did good work for California.

Unmack refereed a great game. The forty-minute halves, eighty minutes of fierce play, required no substitutes on the Stanford side, and only three for California.

CALIFORNIA PLUCK.

The California management, aided by numbers of the students, accomplished a great feat in putting the grounds in shape in time for the game. Up to Friday afternoon the immense bleachers on the east side of the field had not been moved from their original position. They were then moved back a distance of forty-five yards, leaving room for a regulation Rugby field and plenty of space on the side lines. A mound of clay that lay beneath their former resting place had to be leveled and the ground cleared. All this was accomplished by 2 o'clock this afternoon.

Scarcely had the last workers left the field when the rooters of the two colleges began to make their appearance. The picture presented by the bleachers was different than that seen in any of the former games. The distance between the bleachers put the rooters farther apart, and gave them the excuse to yell louder to make themselves heard.

The California rooters, led by Yell-leaders Bingham and Hume, presented one of the most conversed color effects that has been seen at any of the games. They formed a solid block in the east bleachers, and the bright sun burnt down upon their snowy white shirts and blue and gold rooters' caps. The most effective part of the design consisted of large megaphones, which were manipulated with the precision of a well-drilled chorus. Alternate rows waved blue and gold megaphones, respectively, with an effect that was heard.

From the Stanford side of the field the Cardinal answered with the big white rooters' "S," which has been used so effectively in the past. Neither college presented any new songs or yells, but the old favorites were given by both sides.

Stanford appeared on the field first, coming on at 2:30, and was greeted with enthusiasm. California followed at 2:35, and the teams settled down to a last few minutes of practice at passing.

STORY OF THE GAME.

PLAY IN FIRST HALF.

At 2:45 Whitman kicked off for California to Fenton on Stanford's 5-yard line. Fenton kicked into touch on the 20-yard line. Stanford was more successful and carried the ball for 20 yards, when Stanton intercepted a pass. The California scrum obtained the ball and kicked to Chalmers, who muffed the

MINNESOTA GOPHERS DEFEAT CHAMPIONS.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Nov. 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] In a terrific game at Marshall Field, this afternoon, the Minnesota eleven beat Chicago by a score of 4 to 2. The heavy line of the Gophers could not be pierced and the men broke up the Maroon plays before they could get started.

It was a punting duel throughout, but the Minnesotans did not tire out as expected. The first half was fiercely played, and punting occupied a large share of the proceedings. Owing to the slippery grass the Maroons were cautious of trying many open plays, and Eckersall booted the ball whenever possible in an endeavor to tire the heavy Minnesotans.

The Gophers' line showed up like a stone wall from the start. It was almost impossible for Chicago to break through, and whenever the Gophers essayed a punt they had plenty of time to get it off. The Northerners kept whaling away at smashes at the line and reeled off many gains.

The weather conditions were fierce. Rain fell during the forenoon and the earlier hours of the afternoon, making the grounds heavy. This was just suited for the Gophers, with their great weight.

Minnesota scored in the first half. Marshall failed on his first place kick from the thirty-five-yard line after a series of plays which had taken the ball far into the Chicago territoy. A little later he broke through right end for a dash of twenty-six yards. After a couple of cracks at the line, Marshall shot a perfect place kick over the Chicago goal posts from the forty-yard line, making the first score of the day.

Toward the end of the half Eckersall caught a punt and rushed through a broken field of tacklers for fifty yards. The Maroons were getting close to Minnesota's goal when time was called.

Late in the second half a punt from Eckersall sailed clear to the Minnesota five-yard line. Larkin, who seemed to fear the onrush of eleven Maroons, stepped back behind the line and planted the ball, and Chicago was given credit for a safety and two points.

BADGERS RALLY.

DEFEAT THE ILLINII.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

URBANA (Ill.) Nov. 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Wisconsin defeated Illinois in a sensational battle on Illinois Field, this afternoon, by a score of 16 to 6.

Illinois took the honors the first half, clearly outplaying the Badgers, despite the fact that the invaders scored on a piece of luck. But the men from Madison came back hard the second half and outclassed the local eleven, which showed a faint spark when Hodge crossed the cardinal goal.

The Illinois had hopes, but the Badgers were four points ahead with Messmer's place kick, and Howard soon plunged over the orange and blue line for the last score of the game.

Headed by "Coady" Clark, the Badger halfback, the visitors racked and tore the Illinii between tackle and end. Clark was the whole thing for the Badgers.

MICHIGAN HARD LUCK.

CAPT. CURTIS INJURED.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

ANN ARBOR (Mich.) Nov. 10.—Capt. Joe Curtis of the University of Michigan football team sustained a fracture of the left leg this afternoon during the second half of a game between the 'varsity team and a team composed of illegibles and scrubs.

Curtis, who had not played in the first half because of a weak ankle, was running with the ball, when he was tackled by End Langley of the scrub team. The tackle was low, and as Curtis fell his leg was heard to snap. He will be in the hospital for several weeks, and his absence in the important game with Pennsylvania next Saturday will greatly reduce Michigan's chances of victory.

PLAY TIE GAME.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] In a game in which the ball was in their territory nearly all the time, neither Pennsylvania nor Lafayette was able to tally, this afternoon, and the contest ended with a score of 0 to 0. Last season Lafayette played the red and blue a 6 to 6 game.

Fever in de Seuf.

NORFOLK (Vt.) Nov. 10.—The Bucknell-Virginia Polytechnic Institute football game here today broke up in a riot. The police were forced to draw their revolvers to save Referee Sutter from a crowd of Virginia Polytechnic Institute students and friends.

VICTORY WON BY DEATH.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

GREAT FALLS (Mont.) Nov. 10.—In a football game at Fort Shaw this afternoon between the Great Falls and the Fort Shaw Indian team, James Curtis, fullback of the Great Falls team, was killed in a scrimmage, internal injuries bringing about death.

Curtis was 25 years of age and a native of Syracuse, N. Y., where his parents live.

THE MOTOR CAR THE PEOPLE WANT

L. T. Shettler yesterday placed one of the largest auto orders ever given by a local agent. He wired the Reo factory that he would take fifty runabouts and thirty touring cars if the machines were shipped during the month of November, 1906. As there are already twenty cars on the road, this will make an even 100 machines in forty days.—Local Newspaper Item.

STANFORD WINS GAME.

atch. This put the ball on Stanford's 5-yard line. No gain followed, but the California scrum was working well. Through a penalty and a free kick, Stanford worked the ball out of danger.

California obtained the ball and kicked to Fenton, who passed to Holman, Holman booted the ball into touch on Stanford's 15-yard line. Stanford hooked the ball out of scrum and Laumeister passed to Holman, who covered 10 yards to the other side of the field. Presley threw the ball out and California caught it. Her scrum then dribbled for 5 yards to touch.

Tuller threw in and the California scrum worked the ball to Stanford's 0-yard line, where the pigskin went to Stanford. Presley threw in and Stanford kicked to Hugh on her 7-yard line, but no gain followed. With the ball on Stanford's 3-yard line, California's heavy scrum pushed the pigskin to the -yard line, where Fenton got it and kicked into touch on the 25-yard line. Presley threw in.

California, through Stanford's foul, got a free kick from the side line at 40 yards. Whitman punted to Fenton over the back line, and it was Stanford's turn for a free kick. Stanton received the ball for California and passed to Schaeffer. Stanton followed him, received the ball again, and passed to Bell, who was downed on Stanford's 15-yard line. California made 5 yards through dribbling. Fenton kicked out and Stanton heeled a free catch. Whitman then made another try from Stanford's 40-yard line at a difficult angle, Schaeffer holding the ball. Minturn of Stanford blocked the kick, but California picked up the oval and booted to Stanford's 7-yard line.

CALIFORNIA SCORES.

On the throw-out Fenton punted to Bell. Whitman kicked to the side of the field. Stanford dribbled 15 yards along the ground. California obtained a free kick and recovered the pigskin on Stanford's 15-yard line. California's backs got the ball and passed to Whitman, who ran out to the side of the field to within 5 yards of Stanford's line. On the next play Stanton went over the Cardinal line in the extreme corner of the field, scoring 3 for California. The attempt at goal practically was from the side line and was missed by Whitman.

Fenton kicked out 20 yards. Molfino downed Twitchell. Holman punted 40 yards to Chalmers, the ball being in California's territory for the first time. Stanford's scrum got the ball to Edwards, who passed to Laumeister in touch. Presley threw to Stott, who failed to gain. Tuller broke through the scrum and booted the ball to the 0-yard line along the ground to Fenton. The ball was again in Stanford's territory.

Laumeister and Chalmers made 10 yards apiece. Stanford's backs were getting the ball out of scrum better. Schaeffer passed to Cerf. The ball was taken by J. Stanford to the touch line. Presley threw in to Twitchell, who kicked to Fenton. The ball was kicked into touch on Stanford's 20-yard line. Tuller threw out to J. Stanford, who passed to Stott. Stott kicked into Schaeffer's face, stopping the ball. Time was taken out for the first time.

STANFORD'S BRACE.

Stanford's backs passed three times, but made no gain. Stott punted in touch for 5 yards. Tuller threw to Twitchell, who passed to Cerf. Pemberton got the ball and passed to Stott, netting Stanford 10 yards. Chalmers gained on a cross-field run. Edwards kicked to Bell out of play. The ball was in California territory. Owen downed Dyer on California's 15-yard line. Tuller browe up Owen's play and gained 0 yards. Owen passed to Laumeister for a gain of 10 yards. Stott and Chalmers, in a combination, gained 10 yards. Stott, Chalmers and Holman followed for a gain of 5 yards. Chalmers got the ball and ran to California's 2-yard line. The play was not allowed and the ball was taken back to California's 25-yard line on a forward pass by Edwards.

Holman gained 10 yards for Stanford. Stott passed to Presley for 5 yards. Chalmers made 8 yards. Stanford gained a penalty kick and California's 25-yard line, and Fenton, with Stott holding the ball, kicked squarely between the posts for a goal.

Whitman kicked to Fenton, who was downed on Stanford's 15-yard line. Fenton kicked for 50 yards along the side line, including the bound. Stanford made 10 yards. Schaeffer kicked along 15 yards. The half here ended.

Score, California, 3; Stanford, 3.

THE SECOND HALF.

Fenton kicked off to Dyer, who returned out of bounds on California's 0-yard line. Stanton heeled Stanford's return. California punted 30 yards. Cerf punted the ball out of play over Stanford's line. Fenton made the kick out, sending the ball out of touch on Stanford's 25-yard line. Stanton gained 0 yards for California and J. Stanford gained it back for Stanford. On the next play Fenton booted the ball from Stanford's 5-yard line, so that it rolled past the California backs for a gain of 50 yards before it went into touch. California got the ball and kicked into touch for no gain.

The ball was now in the center of the field. Tuller kicked the ball out of scrum 20 yards to Fenton, who ran it in 10 and punted into touch for a gain of 20 more. California made 20 yards on a long end swing by her backs. Stanford recovered 10 yards. Fenton punted out of touch for a gain of 30 yards, sending the play into California's territory. Stanford made 30 yards by a series of running passes between Holman and Edwards that landed the ball across the field and on Californias 20-yard line. Holman made 5 yards and Stanton went five more. Jones got California out of danger by kicking the ball along the round for 30 yards. Bundleman blocked Fenton's kick and the ball was down in the center of the field.

Tuller gained 20 yards, but was sent back. Owen tried to kick, but Whitman blocked it and gained 10 yards, putting the ball into Stanford territory. Stanton was thrown back 10 yards. The Stanford backs gained 10 yards by swift passes, but were sent back. Stanton passed to Chalmers by mistake, and Stanford gained 10 yards. Running and kicking the ball, the Stanford backs got to California's 10-yard line. Stanford got to the 5-yard line on next down, but was held. Switchell booted the ball back 10 yards. Stanford got a chance for a penalty kick on California's 20-yard line. Fenton kicked a difficult goal for the second time.

Score: Stanford, 6; California, 3.

THE LAST KICK-OFF.

Whitman kicked off to Stanford's 30-yard line. California got a free kick from the 40-yard line. Whitman attempted a goal from an angle of the field, Schaeffer holding the ball, but failed a difficult try by a close margin. Fenton kicked out. California returned into touch on Stanford's 10-yard line. Stanford kicked out of touch for 20 yards. Stanton kicked out of the scrum for 15 yards, the ball resting on Stanford's 20-yard line. Stanford punted into touch to her 20-yard line. Stott punted out of scrum for 40 yards, Butler running in for 10 yards but losing the ball to Chalmers, who ran 20 yards. Fenton ran in 60 yards on Tuller's punt over his head, the ball being downed on California's 20-yard line.

Owen kicked into touch for a 5-yard gain. California kicked along the ground for a gain of 20 yards. Chalmers passed to Holman, and Holman to Stott, for a gain of 20 yards. Stott and Chalmers added 10 more, the ball being down on California's 12-yard line. Stanford carried it to the 2-yard line. An off side play gave the Cardinal another try for a penalty goal from the 25-yard line. Fenton failed on his third trial, the angle being difficult. Whitman kicked off from the 10-yard line to Chalmers, who passed to Holman for a gain of 20 yards.

Fenton kicked short on a free kick, and Butler's return gave Fenton another chance for a free kick. Butler returned it, and Fenton ran 30 yards, passing to Holman, who carried the ball to California's 12-yard line. The ball was kicked out of touch on the 20-yard line. Stott carried the ball to the 2-yard line, and the timers' pistol ended the game.

Final score: Stanford, 6; California, 3.

BRAVES OF CARLISLE HOLD HARVARD DOWN.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BOSTON, Nov. 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Forced by the wily redmen of Carlisle into the best exhibition of the "new football" they have given this season, the Harvard eleven, in a spectacular game, defeated the Indians before a great crowd at Soldiers' Field, today, by the score of 5 to 0.

From start to finish the Harvard hearts were in the Harvard throats, for so shifty and fleet and elusive were the braves, led by big chief Exendine, that every instant of play was fraught with danger to the crimson, and it seemed that at any moment some Carlisle back might sweep down the field like Kabeyan, the west wind of Hiawatha's story, and turn the tide of battle from its steady flow toward the toiling and watchful warriors from across the Charles.

Harvard played better, surer faster football than at any other time this season, and with a courage and dogged determination that spells danger for Yale at a later date.

YALE SURPRISED.

NEW HAVEN (Ct.) Nov. 10.—Speed, staying and running power won the day at Yale Field, a victory for the Yale eleven over the Brown team in one of the hardest football battles of the season. The final score was 5 to 0. Yale was unable to enter the Brown line until the second half, and Knox missed an easy goal.

The visitors played all around the Yale team for almost the whole first half, sensational work marking the opening events of the game. Brown started with a rush. Yale's defense was crushed, the line being unable to withstand the attack. Alexander and Forbes, the Yale ends, were broken through repeatedly, and the Brown interference swept past them for gain after gain.

Brown gained on first downs twice and once rushed the ball to Yale's 20-yard line, only to lose it on a fumble by a forward pass.

In the second half Yale showed better form. Brown's offense was held in better check, and the blue began to play more aggressive football, making a touchdown in the first three minutes of play. Long runs by Jones and Knox placed the ball on Brown's 10-yard line. Morse and Knox shortened the distance on line plunges by six yards and Forbes was jammed through Westerveit and Kirley for a touchdown. Knox failed to kick the goal.

CLOSE CONTEST.

ANNAPOLIS, Nov. 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] In a splendid football contest here, this afternoon, the Midshipmen were the victors over Swarthmore by the narrow margin of one point, the score being 5 to 4. Swarthmore has the toe of little quarterback O'Brien to thank for its score, as he dropped a nice field goal early in the first half.

HIGH SCHOOL HOLDS ST. VINCENT'S TO TIE.

Occidental Defeats Polytechnic by Narrow Margin—Scholastic Teams Make Good Showing Against Collegians—Captain Mitchell Hurt.

THOSE among the spectators at the St. Vincent's-Los Angeles High School game at Fiesta Park, yesterday afternoon, who expected that the high school team would be "easy" for the orange-jerseyed warriors had a surprise. The youngsters proved a match for the fiercest onslaughts of Coach Haggerty's men and fought them to a standstill, finishing with the ball near the middle of the field in St. Vincent's territory, with no score on either side.

There were incidents in the contest which were thrilling. Spectacular tackling on the part of St. Vincent's men and brilliant dashes across the gridiron by "Stan" Mitchell, the high school back, relieved the monotony of constant bucking which characterized the greater part of the struggle.

The most exciting moment came near the end of the first half when "Stan" Mitchell signaled for a fair catch. The ball went hurling into the air and as it fell Mitchell gave the accustomed sign and waited. Borg, the S.V.C. full-black, who was playing his initial game, lost his head and plunged down the field toward the blue and white half-back, who stood unsuspectingly watching the pigskin. Straight into Mitchell went Borg at full speed and placed the high school man "hors du combat." Cries of "foul" from the bleachers, and the stampede of spectators onto the field caused excitement. The services of a physician were necessary to get the injured player on his feet, and though he went on with the contest he was obliged to leave the game soon after the opening of the second half.

HEAVILY PENALIZED.

For fouling this player S.V.C. was given the heaviest penalty ever meted to a team in a local game. Referee Roesch, who has coached the high school bunch for several seasons, carried the ball half the length of the field in the direction of the collegians' goal line. The high school failed to profit by this handicap and soon the ball was moving back into their territory. Roesch explained the heavy penalty by saying he had warned the S.V.C man about foul tackling and had imposed the heavy loss because of a second offense.

The usual delays marked the beginning of the game and it was five minutes to 3 o'clock before high school kicked to St. Vincent. The first down showed how evenly the teams were matched as the Catholics could not advance the ball and were compelled to punt after trying twice to buck through high school's guard and tackle.

High school caught the punt and returned the ball twenty yards and Mitchell followed on the first down and broke through end and tackle for a twenty-yard run down the field. Then high school, on three downs, made only seven yards and lost the ball.

Again St. Vincent failed to make distance and Cunningham punted to Berryman who brought the spheroid back fifteen yards. Then high school fumbled and began a series of disastrous mistakes which almost cost her the game. Time and again they allowed the ball to go bounding over the field and the Catholics were quick to take advantage of the costly fumbles of the youngsters.

The game developed into a punting match toward the end of the first half and high school only relieved the monotony by making fifteen yards on a fake play. The half closed with the ball near the middle of the field in scholastic territory.

Cunningham of St. Vincent's opened the second half by kicking forty-five yards toward the high school goal. With the ball in their possession the blue and white men tried hard to gain the coveted distance but failed and on a desperate effort lost the ball behind their own line. Like a flash a St. Vincent back was on the pigskin and with a clear field before him started for the opposite goal. He was tackled before he got well under way and a touchdown was narrowly averted.

Forward passes netted St. Vincent forty yards and brought the ball to within five yards of the high school goal. With three downs to make the distance the orange players attacked the blue and white line savagely. On the first try they brought the ball to within a foot of the last mark, only to lose it on the second try by a fumble which gave the ball to the scholastic players who kicked it out of danger. The half closed with the ball in St. Vincent's territory.

OCCIDENTAL WINS.

SENSATIONAL INCIDENTS.

In the game replete with long runs, hard line bucking and good kicking, Occidental defeated Polytechnic High School yesterday afternoon on the Occidental campus, 12 to 8.

The Poly team was greatly outweighed and was unable to make consistent gains, but two pretty goals from the field, one in the first half by C. Rickershauser from the twenty-five-yard line, and one by Lane from the thirty-yard line, in the second half, netted them their scores.

The game was marred by an incident in the second half. Umpire Raitt ordered C. Rickershauser off the field for using profane language, but Coach Thompson refused to continue the game unless Rickershauser was allowed to play. Raitt was unyielding and Thompson took his men from the field. However, before the required time had expired for the forfeiture of the game, he sent his men back with Crandall substituted for Rickershauser.

Occidental used the open formation, but lost more ground with it than they gained. They gained consistently on line bucks, but the back field was too slow to use the open formations effectively. On two successive plays in the first half the runner was thrown back for a heavy loss, and on no occasion did the runner gain ground.

Capt. Holmes and Lane of Polytechnic played good football. The Polytechnic captain ran his team well and handled punts cleanly. Lane hit the line hard and in the beginning of the second half ploughed big holes in the Presbyterian defense.

In the first half Lane kicked off to Brooke, and Weiman kicked off the first down to Rowell. An interchange of punts landed the ball on Poly's twenty-five-yard line and Merrill and Clark bucked the line for a touchdown, Clarke carrying the ball. Wieman kicked an easy goal.

Goodwin kicked off to Marshall, and Occidental punted at once. Polytechnic kicked, and then followed another exchange of kicks, Gifford securing the ball on Occidental's twenty-five-yard line on Merrill's fumble. Polytechnic was unable to gain in two downs, and Holmes signaled for a field goal. C. Rickershauser made the kick and sent the ball over the bar. The High School section of the grand stand went wild and Poly regained hope.

Marshall kicked off to Rhienschild, who ran back ten yards. The Poly tried a forward pass, but the ball went to Occidental. The Presbyterians lost fifteen yards on their open formation plays and Wieman kicked to Rowell. Both teams kicked on their first down, and on the second exchange Holmes fumbled Wieman's high spiral and Conrad fell on the ball on Polytechnic's fifteen-yard line. With hard line bucks, Merrill took the ball over the line for the second touchdown. Wieman kicked a goal from a rather difficult angle.

Polytechnic took a brace after the Presbyterians had scored the second time, and Wieman kicked on the first and second downs. Brooke, however, got away on a fake line buck for thirty yards, but before Occidental could follow up the advantage time was called.

The opening of the second half was spectacular. Taylor caught Marshall's kickoff and ran through the Presbyterian team to the center of the field. He got away from all the players except Hodge, who tackled him hard. Poly rushed the ball down to Occidental's twenty-five-yard line on hard bucks by Lane and Holmes' fifteen-yard end run, but as the collegians held, Rickershauser tried for another field goal. From the grand stand it looked as if he had made it, but the ball was a foot outside the post. Wieman kicked out from the twenty-five-yard line. Poly put a tandem play into use that netted good gains until the Presbyterians figured out a defense to meet it. A punting duel followed between Wieman and Holmes, with the High School captain slightly bested. It was here that Rickershauser got in trouble with Umpire Raitt, but after play was resumed the embryo mechanics worked the ball down to Occidental's thirty-yard line, whence Lane kicked a beautiful goal from placement.

With but a touchdown needed to win the game, Poly played hard and fast. Goodwin caught Marshall's kickoff and with splendid interference ran through a broken field to the center of the field. Lane made two good gains and the Poly adherents began to yell "touchdown, touchdown," but Holmes fumbled and the ball went to Occidental. Coach Merrill put in several fresh men near the end of the half and the ball was in Polytechnic territory when the game ended.

Rheinschild, Polytechnic's big right tackle, played a good game, and was in every play. Brooke, the Occidental left end, played a strong defensive game, and earned a regular place on the 'varsity.

Occidental played a much better game than last Saturday against Los Angeles High School, the Polytechnic line being unable to stop effectively and consistently the heavy line bucks of Clarke, Merrill and Wieman.

THROOP THE VICTOR.

BEATS SANTA ANA HIGH.

At Pasadena yesterday Throop had an easy time with the Santa Ana High School team, winning by a score of 12 to 0. In the first half, Stoney, who played left half for Throop, made two touchdowns and kicked goals both times. Throop tried out two new men at quarterback in Hunt in the first half, and Brown in the second half, and both give promise of being good men. The game was uninteresting, and few of the spectators stayed until the finish.

UNABLE TO SCORE.

POMONA, Nov. 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] A score of 0 to 0 resulted in the game between the Pomona and San Bernardino high schools' fifteens today. The Pomona team expected a walkover, but the Berdoo boys held them down in a very fast game. Capt. Moore of the San Bernardino team made the longest gain of the day, a 60-yard dribble kick, and his team put up somewhat the better contest, although Pomona played a faster game than with the Los Angeles Polytechnic High School last Saturday.

BOYLE HEIGHTS BOYS.

The Boyle Heights Junior football team defeated the Sixteenth-street school in a football game yesterday by the score of 17 to 0. Two of the touchdowns were made by Clawson, and Pollard made the other. The goals were kicked by Clawson and Getz.

The Boyle Heights lineup was: Decius, left end; Saunders, left tackle; Enders, left guard; Redden, center; Gless, right guard; Sewell, right tackle; Brady, right end; Held, quarterback; Pollard, right half; Getz, left half; Clawson, fullback.

The team will accept challenges from any team in the city averaging ninety-five pounds or less to the player.

SANTA MONICA WINS.

The Santa Monica High School League team defeated the Compton organization in a game of basketball, played here this afternoon, the score being 9 to 8. Santa Monica has played and won two league games this season.

PRINCETON WINNER.

WEST POINT (N. Y.) Nov. 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Princeton defeated the West Point eleven this afternoon, the final score being 8 to 0. Princeton's points were made in the first half on two goals kicked from the field by Harlan. The line-up:

West Point.	Position.	Princeton.
Weeks	left tackle	Phillips
Erwin	left guard	H. Dillon

BALLOON RACE IN ST. LOUIS.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

PITTSFIELD (Mass.) Nov. 10.—Announcement was made by the officials of the Aero Club of America that next year's race for the James Gordon Bennett Cup will be held in St. Louis. Decision was finally reached on the receipt of a telegram from the Business Men's League of that city, announcing that the league would agree to supply 1,500,000 cubic feet of pure coal gas in four hours. Under the terms of the contest, the race must be held some time between May and December of next year.

ENDS SHIFTED INWARD.

Coaches Adopt Harvard Style of Playing Men Close to Tackle to Break Up Plays.

When the present football season opened coaches in the East generally believed the new rules would necessitate a change in the style of game they had been teaching their ends. Experience has demonstrated to them that the defensive end rush can be played in either the Yale or Harvard style, with the ends playing wide or in close to the tackle.

The duties of the end rush are so versatile and so important that coaches spent much time and gray matter figuring out how these players could be placed so as to be of the greatest possible advantage to their teams.

Yale's time-honored custom of playing its ends wide was believed at first to be the solution of the duties of the end rush this season under the new rules. It was figured that end runs would predominate and that the end must be kept wide of his tackle, so as to be in a position to take advantage of misplays by the opponents, to drive the interference and runner with the ball in toward the tackle and defensive half-back, and to watch out for tricks and double passes. Even those coaches who had been using the Harvard-Pennsylvania style of playing the ends in close to the tackle, with the defensive half behind him, had it figured out that they would have to send their ends out after the Yale-Princeton style.

Experience, so far shows that coaches have found the Harvard style effective. Coaches in the Middle West who received their training at Yale, such as Stagg and Williams, have trained their ends after the Yale style, but at Chicago, Stagg has been gradually drawing in those men, until now they play close to the tackle. Williams still plays his ends wide.

Stories Against Rugby Football Said to Emanate from Big Western Universities.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Nov. 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Football coaches in the Middle West have been watching the course of Rugby football at the universities of Leland Stanford and California, imposed on the students of those institutions by their presidents and the athletic councils.

From Berkeley comes a story to the effect that the Rugby game has been a failure and that the students will boycott it after this year if it is foisted upon them another season.

For the balance of this season, it is said, the students will support the teams, for they are made up of fellow-students, and it is desired to give the new game a fair show. But after the season ends they will refuse to play again, will denounce the game and will petition President Benjamin Ide Wheeler of the University of California, who caused the introduction of the game, to erase it from the calendar of sports of both California and Stanford. It is said that if Dr. Wheeler refuses to listen to this petition the players will lay down their football togs and refuse to appear next season, and that they will be backed by a vast majority of the students at the two institutions.

There has been talk and some effort to introduce the Rugby game among the members of the "big nine" in place of the present gridiron game, and for this reason the success or failure of the attempt in California has been watched with more than ordinary interest in this part of the country. But the attempts here to introduce the game have not been successful and now that both California and Stanford are preparing to turn it down it is hardly likely to be urged in this quarter.

"I saw a game of Rugby between a couple of schools when I was in California," said W. K. McCornack, former coach of Northwestern, and well-known football official, "but I cannot say it struck me as the kind of a game we would want to substitute for our game of football. Our American game, to my mind, is greatly superior to Rugby in building up a young man."

Los Angeles Winner.

The Los Angeles team in the Southern California Roller Polo League defeated the team from Venice by the score of 7 to 3, Friday. Harden, an Illinois University star from Campaign, Ill., was the star of the evening, making six of the seven goals for Los Angeles. Turner scored the other for the locals. Darnell was injured and as Los Angeles had no substitute she finished the game with four men. It was then that Venice scored the three points. The line-up was:

Los Angeles.		Venice.
Harden,	First rush,	Chase.
Turnbull,	Second rush,	Perkins.
Knight,	Center.	Jaquess.
Darnell,	Half back,	Landen.
Gordon,	Goal.	Winchester.

Fight at Barstow.

"Happy Jack" Walker of New York has secured a match for Kid Francks of Oakland to fight Tom O'Neal of Barstow at Barstow on Thanksgiving afternoon. They will go twenty rounds for a side bet and the gate receipts. As a preliminary Walker will fight Kid Davis fifteen rounds.

Non-Stop Record of the World Made By The "Maxwell" AUTOMOBILE

A 20-horsepower stock MAXWELL has this week accomplished an officially certified performance never before equaled in the history of motor vehicles. After completing a 2500-mile non-stop run in New England in a little more than 5½ days, the motor was kept running for over two days longer, bringing the mileage up to 3000 3-4 miles in 7 days, 7 hours and 31 minutes, at a total cost of less than $50.

This is the greatest distance ever covered by any vehicle with self-contained power without stopping the motor. The run is equal to the distance between New York and San Francisco and proves beyond a doubt the incomparable endurance of the Maxwell engine and the absolute reliability of the Maxwell car.

The record was made by a regular stock touring car, without any special preparation—the same as the car you buy for $1600.

REFEREE'S WHISTLE ENTHUSES GIRLS.

Captains Line Up Basketball Teams Ready to Dash Into Battle and Fight for the Honor of Their Respective Schools—Many Star Players.

BY LOUISE M. GEORGE.

THERE will be a record-breaking season for girls' basketball. New teams are forming on every hand, new stars are arising in every quarter, and the new blood drawn from the [illegible] ranks of the various grammar schools is giving an impetus to the game never felt before in Southern California.

Miss Shortridge has the advantage of height, poise, and a quickness surprising in one of her substantial build. She is a handsome girl and a goodly sight in play. She should be a formidable opponent and doubtless will live to hear the old shout that used to go up for Mary Plummer, "Give the ball to Mary; she will do the rest," when a goal was needed.

CAPT. WIDDE KENDRICK.

Widde Kendrick is captain at Los Angeles High this season; she is playing forward with Miss Shortridge. Miss Kendrick was in the team last year when the championship was won in the Southern California Woman's Basketball League, and is a popular captain. Ella Winstanley and Margaret Ford are playing the guard positions in the first team, and there are two contestants for the position of center, Anne Shepherd and Lorena Harkness, both girls putting up a fine game.

The Los Angeles High School team will play in both leagues this year, according to its custom, though it makes a number of match games to play at the latter end of the year. This is not always an advantage, for the girls have sometimes lost out through overwork in the two leagues.

Basketball is booming at Girls' Collegiate school, classes are playing against classes, and when the school team is finally picked there will almost be an embarrassment of riches. The physical director, Miss Edan Lewis Smith, a pretty New England girl, fresh from the Sargent School at Cambridge, embuing the girls with her own enthusiasm for the game, L. Lowman being coach. Two star players at the Vermont avenue school two years ago—Helene and Laura McVay, are among the best players at this school, now being especially fine forwards, while Blanche Wheelan, and Charlotte Crane also stand out among the very best.

GIRLS' ATHLETIC MEET.

The team of this school will not join the league, but intends having games with the neighboring schools. An ambitious event has been planned for next spring, which will include basketball. This is an athletic meet arranged with the girls of the University of Southern California. There will be contests in the broad jump, in hurdling, vaulting, the high jump, with dashes and relay races, and every characteristic of the most up-to-date field meet.

Polytechnic High School has never done a great deal in girls' basketball, but the spirit this year is very promising and a number of girls are playing diligently under the instruction of the physical director, Miss Hinneman. Grace Breedlove, a fine looking young player, is manager for the prospective team. Inez Shone, who plays a fast game as forward, and Opal Rogers are trying for the two forward positions, while two promising guards are Mabel Curtis and Alta Gilbreath, the latter being tall and with especial advantages of make-up for a guard. In the final selection of a team these players may be displaced by other ambitious workers at Polytechnic.

Miss Dixon, at Occidental College, has seventy-five girls playing basketball, and her plans for the future are especially interesting. Each class is practicing at this time for the selection of a class team. The girls of the preparatory school playing interclass games for the preparatory championship, and the collegiate classes are working with the same end in view, and finally the "tug-of-war" will come between the champion teams of the upper and lower schools to decide the champion team which will uphold the fame of Occidental on other fields, if the heads of the school decide to have the team enter the league. The county league is separate from the private league and includes the teams of the county high schools.

HOODOO IS DISPELLED.

Miss Georgia Caswell, the originator of the private league still is greatly interested in its welfare. The Marlborough team, under her supervision, will soon be picked and ready to enter the series of games beginning next February. Last year this team suffered many untoward happenings, not through basketball play however, Fate somehow decreed, through broken arms, scarlet fever attacks, and other casualties, that Marlborough's old time glory should be dimmed, one game being played with a girl as member of the team who had never even practiced the position.

The outlook seems much better this season and this team will be ready to make good in great shape. Fanny Grant, who played before as forward, is trying now for center. Elizabeth Ryan will play forward, and Miss Alice Ryan, a quick and sure guard, probably will retain her position. Pretty Gene Long, who has always played forward, is also trying for position as center against Fanny Grant. There are many other promising young players at this school who may forge ahead of those mentioned. The practice games take place twice a week.

A meeting of the directors of the Woman's Basketball League of Southern California, will be held in January, and schedule arranged for the coming season, the rules remaining practically the same.

Eastern Horseman Expects to Clean Up on Molesey When He Reaches Ascot.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Jack Bennet's valedictory was a great success. He put Molesey over, and all the boys got aboard. The Bennet string goes to Ascot Park in a couple of days, and when Molesey gets a few whiffs of salty Pacific air from over Santa Monica way it is expected to put even more speed into him.

"Well, that's my last for this season hereabouts," said Bennet after Molesey had won the third race yesterday. "I leave tomorrow for Los Angeles, and the horses will be shipped Monday."

Mr. Bennet will take eleven head to Ascot Park, and as his lot includes some shifty horses he should more than make expenses. Mrs. Bennet gave a beefsteak dinner on Thursday night, at which Phil J. Dwyer, Mattie Corbett, Frank Billings, and a number of other racing men were guests. At the feast they were advised not to overlook Molesey, and they did not.

FEARED FORDS WILL VANISH.

Bridge Building Progresses on Favorite Routes.

Ventura River no Longer a Bete Noire, 'Tis Thought.

Bonsall Road to San Diego Has Been Opened Also.

Road building progresses slowly but surely in this land of sundown. Bridge building advances likewise here in our automobile paradise, where it is always afternoon.

Fords are not quite as much feared in automobiling as they were, but fords of any depth mean a Waterloo to the average motor car. As yet the automobile is not a motor boat nor an airship.

For some time there have been fords both on the run to Santa Barbara and between this city and San Diego that have been much dreaded by the automobile users. This winter for the first time these fords will no longer worry the man or woman who drives a motor car.

The most hated ford was that of the Ventura River, some six miles north of Ventura city. There were five water channels, where the river spread over the flat cañon floor on its way from the mountains to the sea.

For several winters it was necessary to call on the nearby farmers with their usually ready teams to get through this bunch of fords, and somehow, no matter how much the flow of the river fell, the fords kept deep. It was repeatedly claimed that the honest farmers dug out the fords so as to keep the short haul profitable and lasting. Whether this claim was a fact has been much disputed, but one thing was noticed, and that was that as the water got shallow in the river the fords got less, but the deepest one got deeper, if anything, and that along its lower side was a dam of big rocks that kept the water deeper at the ford than at any point up or down stream.

As a good strong tariff was maintained for the short haul and automobile users were warned at points some distance from the ford and "tipped off" by telephone in time for a farmer to be at the ford with his team ready, it did look suspicious and the automobile public was naturally "sore."

H. L. Smith of Pizmo, an automobile owner with knowledge of bridge building, was the Moses of the motorists. One day last May he landed in that much-discussed ford with a hot engine and broke a cylinder. As he had to stay over night at the Ventura ford, Mr. Smith did a little investigating. He found that in exactly eight minutes spent in rolling down stream the big rocks used for a dam the water was lowered in the ford over ten inches. But a lot of cars would be going to the Pizmo beach races soon, and the dam might be restored, so Mr. Smith sat down on the cool shady bank, while his companion mushed along through the wet fords to find a telephone, and he thought out a temporary bridge that would at least serve the public successfully till winter.

A little figuring on the price of lumber proved to Mr. Smith that a good strong wooden bridge could be built over that deepest ford for considerably less than $75. By the next morning, before the automobile was repaired, part of the lumber was on the way to the ford, and the very farmers who had hauled the water-lodged automobiles of sundry sizes and makes out of this water hole, lo these many months at $5 per, were engaged to haul lumber and move dirt.

The next thing was to get the consent of the Supervisor in that district, Tom Clark of Nordhoff. He was telephoned for and came on the double quick. Mr. Clark was a liveryman, and the past year had done a lot of good-roads work in his district, particularly in Casitas Pass. He saw in a minute how cheaply the bridge could be built, but said that it would never do for the world to learn that Ventura county had left even a temporary bridge to be built by passing automobilists, and that he would have the bridge built at once, at county expense, although the road fund was about empty at that time.

Supervisor Tom Clark made good, and the bridge was completed in less than three days, thus putting a stop to taxing the automobile owners for getting through the Ventura River, and saving to the automobile travelers at least $10 a day if not several times that amount, saying nothing about the cost of repairing such cars as broke down in the ford.

But this temporary bridge, which has done well its work all this summer and fall, is not all. It is but the temporary relief.

The Ventura fords are to end forever. A fine $16,000 cement bridge has been building all these fall months at a point about a mile and a half down the Ventura River from the much-advertised ford. There the channels are all one, and the cañon is narrow and well formed for one big bridge. This will soon be completed and will make Casitas Pass practicable at the times in winter when it has already been closed in the past by mountain torrent after each big rain.

Ventura county has not stopped with this bridge, but is building another to cost nearly $28,000 at Sespe ford, in the Santa Clara Valley, near Fillmore. This will keep open in winter the delightful drive from Fremont Pass up the Santa Clara past far-famed Camulos, through Santa Paula and out into the bean country at Dixie Thompson's on the edge of Ventura.

San Diego county is also doing her duty in bridge building, now completing a good permanent highway bridge over the San Luis Rey River at Bonsall, some twelve miles down stream from the much-dreaded ford at Old Pala. This bridge will be finished in December, and will complete the new route to San Diego by the inland road, through Rainbow, Bonsall, Vista and San Marcos to Escondido. Son Diego is planning to build some permanent bridges along the coast route, too.

Orange county is having the coast road below San Juan by the sea moved inland from the beach to cross over the mesa and thus change two miles of road that is usually but beach sand. This will remove about the biggest barrier to the use of the coast route.

When a bridge is built over the Santa Margarita River in the great ranch of that name, it will be possible to cross the Santa Margarita Valley in winter with an automobile, though the river may be a mountain torrent. A big change at Sorrento, made this past summer by San Diego, has rendered that of the road below Oceanside practicable at all times of the year.

Casitas Pass bridge was built in three days at a cost of seventy-five dollars several months ago, and has saved automobilists from five to fifty dollars a day ever since.

CARNIVAL ON SANDY BEACH.

SPEED KINGS IN PURSUIT OF FATHER TIME AT ORMOND.

Enormously Fast Time Expected in Dewar Trophy Race and Two-Mile-a-Minute Contest for Speed Crown—Tournament Promises to Have Largest Entry List Ever.

The fifth annual international speed carnival on the Ormond-Daytona beach will be held January 22-27, and it promises to be in point of entry the largest of the many tournaments given in this country or abroad. It was the wish of some that the tournament be given later in the season, but the fact that the famous beach has always been in record shape in January, and that January is the only month when hotel accommodations can be depended on, led the board of directors to set the date as given.

Some of the greatest speed creations in automobile engineering will challenge Father Time on this speedy beach. The Ormond-Daytona stretch holds all the world's records from one mile to one hundred miles, and has still another record, for there never has been an accident during tournaments. The only serious accident that ever happened there was two years ago, and occurred before the tournament commenced.

It is also the only course in the world where a driver has made a record on three tires. This happened last year in the 100-mile Minneapolis Cup race, for the trophy presented by the Minneapolis Automobile Club and citizens of the Flour City. Walter Clifford-Earp of London, driving a Napier, had a puncture, after going about fifty miles. He whipped out a knife, cut the tire off the rim, and drove the last half of the century on three tires and a rim. The bare steel suffered no harm from the smooth hard sand, and Clifford-Earp broke the world's record for the 100 miles.

The two-mile-a-minute race for the speed crown will be run again, and if Victor Demogeot is a starter, he will face a better field than ever before. There will probably be several fast foreign cars entered for this race, and at least four American experts will appear. One of these men will drive a New York production, for which is claimed the enormous sped of five miles in two minutes.

The half-mile for the trophy given by Sir Thomas Dewar of London will command attention also, for in the two preceding races the world's record for the mile has been lowered each time. Last year Fred Marriott, in the Stanley steamer, made the fastest time ever accomplished by man, a mile in 28 1-5 seconds—127.66 miles an hour. Men versed in the game expect to see two seconds cut from this record. Few realize what a second means when traveling at this rate. A record of 27 seconds for the distance means a rate of 133 1-3 miles an hour, and a record of 26 seconds nearly 133½ miles.

Many touring-car events have been provided for, and a noteworthy departure in this connection is that each car in many of the events must carry passengers to its full capacity. The Corinthian races are for amaetur drivers, with no trade connection, and several amateurs will settle some mooted differences on the broad speedway.

Facilities will be provided for record trials by all classes of cars at one kilometer, one mile, five miles, and ten miles. In addition there will be gymkhana sports, and it is hoped that there will be included a 300-mile race.

NEW RUNABOUT ARRIVES.

Four-Cylinder Mitchell Shows Good Speed and Control—Fifty of Them Are Coming.

The eighteen horse-power four-cylinder Mitchell runabout has just arrived in town, and is attracting considerable attention. The car is strictly a runabout, and is said to be unusually powerful and well set up.

It shows a speed of about forty-five miles maximum, and can be pulled down from that to about four miles an hour on the high, which shows a good range of control and a flexible engine. The car is roomy, with standard tread and a wheel base of 90 inches. The transmission has a three-speed sliding gear set and final shaft drive.

Manager Greer of the Mitchell agency says that the first ten machines of the type are already sold, but as they have fifty of them coming, they can assure reasonably prompt deliveries.

San Diego Golf.

The annual tournament of the California Women's Golf Association will be held on the links of the San Diego Country Club next Wednesday. Some of the best golf players of the State will compete, including women from Los Angeles, Santa Barbara, Pasadena and Riverside, San Francisco, Oakland, and San Mateo. The tournament will be a handicap match of eighteen holes, nine holes being played in the forenoon and nine in the afternoon. Entries are being received by Miss Ada Smith, 2351 Fifth street. The local and Coronado country clubs will be represented in the event.

PROGRESS MADE IN AUTO SHOW PLANS.

PROGRESS in arranging for the automobile show to be given here in the last of January has been made by the committee having the matter in charge. It has been decided to include tires and automobile accessories in the show, and in every way to make it the most complete exhibition ever seen in the West.

The most important decision of all perhaps is that the Dealers' Association will "go it alone." They will ask no aid from the manufacturers' associations, and stand on their own feet entirely. In other words, it will not be a sanctioned show.

The committee is not yet ready to receive applications for space, but they have decided that every one who applies will get some space at least. After the applications are in, if they exceed the space available, they will be scaled down all around to fit. This will avoid the necessity eastern managers have had to face under their system, that of having to refuse space absolutely.

The decorations will be managed by the association, and they will also prescribe the form of all signs. This will make the decoration entirely uniform, which will add a great deal to the beauty of the occasion. The management will also attend to lighting, and all the other details which make so great a part of the success of a show.

A café will be one of the features of the show, and also a band. Moving pictures of the Vanderbilt race are also promised as an additional attraction.

BEAUTY WAITS IN MOUNTAINS.

CALIFORNIA MOTORISTS HAVE WONDERLANDS AT CALL.

Many Winding Roadways Unfolding Panoramas of the Valleys Afford Pleasure-Giving and Not Widely-Known Automobile Trips—Desert Also Has Charms.

To the automobile user Southern California offers more pleasure and variety than any equal amount of territory on earth.

Our paradise is full of mountains, and yet has plenty of valley and plain. But of the winding roadways where always is unfolded a new panorama, what can be more enticing than the world-famed Mountain Drive at interesting old Santa Barbara! It starts right at the door of the old mission, made famous in picture, verse and story, and in the hearts of all our visitors, and then winds up and on, on and up, in and out, in brilliant sunshine and intense shadow, unfolds all the harbor, a kingdom of vegetation and seacoast, and at last comes out to the shore by sleepy Montecito and ends beside the murmuring sea at beautiful, flower-jeweled Miramar.

Altogether different is the drive to Point Loma, one of San Diego's many mountain drives, and the tour through El Cajon Valley, or over to Warner's Ranch, or up to Julian, all invite the motor car users, and repay the visit to these little known drives.

One of the good trips close to Los Angeles is an automobile visit to Arrowhead, those thirty-four peculiar hot springs on the side of the San Bernardino Mountains, with the seven-acre landmark on the mountain side. The run to Arrowhead from this city is about seventy miles, and, strange to say, over good road all the way after reaching Pasadena, and the poor road this side of Pasadena need not scare any motorist.

Along the foothill boulevard, through Highland Park, South Pasadena, Pasadena, Lamanda, Monrovia, Azusa, Glendora, Claremont, Upland and Cucamonga to San Bernardino, the road is excellent, and well marked all the way with the signs of the Automobile Club of Southern California, so that the stranger need not err therein. Out from San Bernardino the well-built road runs nearly north for some seven miles to Arrowhead Springs and the hotel, constantly rising on an easy grade. All the time it unfolds the panorama of the evergreen San Bernardino Valley, yielding to the eye citrus center on citrus center, each a well-built little town surrounded by the intense green of olive, lemon and orange groves, with here and there the plain cut in two by one of California's rivers, bottom side up.

Since the new hotel was built at Arrowhead Springs the drives have been improved, and in many cases rebuilt for the automobile, as Dr. G. W. Tape, the Nestor of the springs, is an automobile enthusiast, and has made the roads accommodate themselves to his big Thomas. The mountain drive is, first of all, an automobile road, though the patient, long-suffering horse is still tolerated in limited numbers.

In the beautiful view that was taken from the automobile mountain drive a few days ago, a satisfying idea of the topography of Arrowhead country is given. In the foreground Dr. Tape and a party of friends are seen with their automobiles, while Arrowhead Peak looms up in the background with the odd, majestic symbol marked out on the mountain side. The hotel and the 1800 acres about the springs have been made as beautiful as possible by the landscape gardener's art, while the road builders have modeled the mountain drive to negotiate gently the 1000 feet rise from San Bernardino, so that the total distance to cover by the motor car is but nine miles.

Cold Water Cañon, far back into the mountains, can be followed, if desired, also Waterman's Cañon, another inviting drive, and the trails lead on up to the snow-capped peaks, to be followed on foot or on burro when at last the motor car's limit is reached.

Aside from the many mountain passes on our main roads, and the drives above referred to, there are still other mountain fastnesses inviting the motor-car users.

Back from Ventura is the drive of Ojai Valley, and from there through Santa Paula Cañon to the Santa Clara Valley. At Nordhoff, in the Ojai, is a good hotel, as a resting place, and there are drives to Matilija Springs and other mountain retreats.

Always odder than the rest is a run out to the desert. There is the zigzag up the Soledad to Palmdale, and the good road across the desert to Shoemaker's, and then nine miles up the side of North Baldy to about 7000 feet above the sea, probably the highest altitude to be made by motor car in this part of the country. There is also a similar but easier climb from Hemet up to Strawberry Valley.

Another combined mountain climb and desert trip is along the San Fernando road, through rugged old Fremont Pass, and up the San Francisquito Cañon—Little St. Francis—to the desert of Antelope Valley. At Willow Springs is found a delightful oasis in possession of jolly old Sheik Hamilton, where creature comforts for a party of fifty can be found at a day's notice. This is only eighty miles from Los Angeles.

It is impossible to enumerate all the mountain drives of Southern California, there are so many in such variety, and nearly all of them open all the year, as entrancing and satisfying one month as another. On nearly all game abounds, if one desires to superimpose hunting on automobiling, while along some of the mountain drives trout fishing is also an added delight.

Striking view of the Arrowhead, the resort and the mountains from the new automobile road. Note the lights and shadows.

TEST ST. LOUIS GAS.

Aero Club Committee Wants to Determine Mound City Qualifications First.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PITTSFIELD (Mass.) Nov. 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] St. Louis has not been definitely decided upon yet as the place for holding the international balloon races next year. No decision will be reached until a special committee appointed by the president of the Aero Club, Cortland Field Bishop, visits St. Louis, and the committee gives an ascension. Mr. Bishop said tonight:

"We are in favor of St. Louis geographically, but will not decide to go there until we have tested the quality of the gas. The special delegation to go out about Christmas time probably will consist of the Aero Club directors, Homer W. Hedge, Augustus Post, Allan R. Hawley, J. C. McCoy and myself.

"We will take along a balloon for an ascension. If everything is found to be satisfactory then we probably will hold the races the first week of October, next year."

TO PREVENT SIDE-SLIP.

Scotch Engineers Produce Differential Gear for Autos on New Lines. Said to Be a Success.

Liability to side-slip, which causes so many acidents to occur to motor vehicles, is accentuated by the action of the differential gear which enables the rear or driving wheels to rotate at different speeds. This is essential for turning purposes; but it is obvious that if the rear wheels were rigidly fixed to a solid axle they would materially resist sudden deviations from a straight course, such as happen with side-slips.

Two mechanical engineers named Reid and Rickie of Glasgow, Scotland, well known for their improvements in locomotives have patented and practically tested an improvement in the ordinary differential gear, which gives the effect of a solid rear axle so long as the steering gear is set for a straight course. A slight motion of the steering wheel, however, frees the outer radius rear wheel, while the inner radius wheel is still kept in rigid conection with the driving shaft.

The apparatus consists of two locking devices engaging either side of the rotable differential gear case, which slide on keys or projections on the two portions of the axle or shaft. The locking apparatus is operated by a simple arrangement of cams and rods worked from a lever on the steering spindle.

All the practical tests of this improvement in the ordinary differential gear seem to prove that its practical value cannot be doubted, and its general introduction seems likely to greatly lessen the number of accidents caused by side-slipping.

Auto Race for Sale.

PARIS, Nov. 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The Grand Prix automobile race in 1907 may not be managed by the Automobile Club of France which is talking of "farming" it out. The financial question seems to be uppermost. The club wants to avoid this responsibility and therefore is looking for a "contractor" who will assume all risk and trouble.

The negro was successful and created a good impression. After that night Gans entered the preliminary bouts, for which he received the munificent sum of $5, whether he won or lost. Gans had a peculiar style, while even at that time he had a sleep-producing punch which he delivered at random. His best blow then was a wicked drive for the stomach, and when it landed it was usually necessary for the referee to count ten on the negro's opponent.

NELSON AFTER GANS.

Battling Dane Says the Champion Negro Must Fight Him Again for a Side Bet.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

MILWAUKEE, Nov. 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] In a letter sent to a friend here, Battling Nelson, who will appear here for a week beginning tomorrow, says that he expects to meet Gans again, despite all the talk to the contrary.

"I don't care what the colored champion has to say about the matter," Nelson writes. "I do know that he will have to meet me again or give up the championship. He will beat "Kid" Herman without a doubt, and then he cannot avoid another meeting with me. I will deposit at least $5000 forfeit for a side bet of any size he wants up to $10,000 or $20,000, and he will have to either crawl or get down to business. The public is interested in another meeting between us to settle the championship question as I know that the last battle, no matter whether he won on a foul or not, did not show the best man winning."

ERNE AND RUSSELL.

Clever Six-round Fighters Want to Go to a Finish Before Some Big Club.

Two of the cleverest six-round fighters in Philadelphia are Young Erne and "Unk" Russell, and they have been cleaning up all the other little fellows in the East. They have boxed each other twice to six-round draws and so evenly are they matched that efforts are being made to bring them together in a long-distance route.

Erne and Russell want to go to a finish and several clubs are after them; they have sparred together so often that they are on to each others' tricks and short distances no longer serve to show superiority.

JEFF LIKES J. O'BRIEN.

Champion of All Champions Thinks Burns May Lose if Break Is Clean.

"This O'Brien-Burns fight is rather a hard one to guess," says Retired Champion Jim Jeffries, "but if they fight straight Queensberry rules, O'Brien should win, for he is the better boxer. If Burns plays on O'Brien's stomach much, he should win, for I understand O'Brien can't take much punishment there.

"I can't give much of an opinion on the coming fight, for I don't know what the conditions are; but O'Brien has a shade the best of it if they break clean, for I think he is the better boxer. There can be no hitting in the clinches, for it is impossible for any man to hit if he is holding the other man with both hands. The fighter who holds with one hand and hits with the other is committing a foul and runs the chance of being disqualified. It should be a good fight, but O'Brien has no cinch, for Burns is a hard little man to thrash."

Bill Blunt—His Letter.

GANS TO BE A TWO-TO-ONE FAVORITE IN THE MATCH WITH HERMAN—GOSSIP OF THE GAME IN EASTERN CENTERS.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—The proposed match between Joe Gans and Kid Herman is not creating any great enthusiasm in the East. This is especially true in the vicinity of Philadelphia, where Herman fought three times during his recent trip to this section. While in the Quaker City Herman boxed Chester Goodwin and Young Erne twice. All three went the prescribed six rounds without a decision, but Herman didn't have anything to boast about. In that city the belief prevails that there are several lightweights who can defeat Herman. No matter from what angle the match is looked at, it is not attractive. Herman is a good little fighter, and can make most of the "133-pound ringside" lightweights step along rather lively, but he does not seem a fair match for Gans. A man who punches like Herman will have his hands more than full when he stacks up against a fighters of Gans's qualities. He can't jab or hook with Gans and he will find it the hardest task in the world to reach the Baltimore man with those right swings. He is four inches shorter than the champion, his reach isn't so long, he can't hit so hard, hasn't had nearly so much experience, and isn't so clever by a wide margin. He is seven years younger than Gans, and has a wicked punch with his right hand. His only chances for victory seem to lie there. But then, as was observed before, it is a hard proposition to reach Gans's jaw with a right-hand swing. Any time a man lets his right go hard for the colored man's chin he is leaving himself liable to Gans's snappy right-hand cross, which he has a peculiar habit of sneaking in so unexpectedly. He has put it on the best lightweights in the world, so why not on Herman? It doesn't go far, sometimes scarcely a foot after he has stepped in, but it is powerful enough to signal the pay car when it lands.

Personally, Herman whose full name is Herman Landfield, is a quiet, gentlemanly fellow who is anything but loquacious or bombastic and he makes many friends. He has beaten and boxed draws with a good class of boys and in certain parts of the country is considered very capable, but, one should not be blinded to the fact that in meeting the champion he is going against a fighting machine and the greatest lightweight since the days of Kid Lavinge. Gans has everything that any fighter ever had and more than most of them possessed. There is not a trick he hasn't mastered and he excels in all branches. It is the strong boosting Herman has been receiving the last year that has sent his stock so high. He is being handled by wise people and they have gotten for him every ounce of advertising in sight. That shows the power of printer's ink and also the wisdom of being hooked-up right. It is reported that the bout will bring in the neighborhood of $20,000. We hope it does, but it doesn't alter the fact that on paper Herman is outclassed. Possibly, the men won't meet at all but even if they don't, both will receive a lot of advertisement out of it. In case they do meet, it looks like Gans will be a two to one favorite, possibly stronger. There is no possible way, on form, how Herman can be figured to capture the black man. Not at present. In a year or two it may be different. Herman seems to have a long and bright career in front of him but he doesn't seem ripe as yet to negotiate the champion. Were he to be beaten decisively by the latter it might dampen his ardor and effect his future matches. It is easy enough for Herman's friends and backers to say: "Great kid that; he can beat Gans sure," but it is harder to accomplish than to say. Scores of others have found it that way, at least.

It is remarkable how a little turn of chance will often chance the whole future career of a boxer. Today, Young Corbett, is a good card for any club and can command a big purse. This is due to the improved physical condition he showed with McGovern, also the comparatively fast fight he put up. Had his last contest with McGovern not taken place, this state of affairs would not have existed. And it is only a scratch that the bout was not called off three days before it was scheduled to take place. The outlook for a good gate at that time was very blue and, after a conference with Harry Edwards and Frank Hough, Jack McGuigan, the manager of the National Club, decided to either postpone the bout or call it off altogether. However, Young Corbett pleaded so hard and seemed so sincere in his desire to box his old-time opponent, that McGuigan changed his mind and the contest was allowed to proceed. While glowing accounts were printed about the faithful work Corbett was doing at his training quarters down in Connecticut, the public didn't take kindly to them and the advance sale was miserable. When McGuigan told Corbett, the Sunday before the bout, he had decided to wipe the contest off the National's slate, Corbett said he would be willing to go on if there was "only one officer in the house." "All I want is a chance to prove that I have been working on the level and that I still can fight," said Corbett. Monday the sale began to pick up a little and on Tuesday the improvement continued. Wednesday afternoon the tickets went with a rush and the New Yorkers began to pour into Philadelphia in droves. By 6 o'clock at night, most of the choice seats had been sold and the house would have been much larger than it was if the report hadn't gained ground that "everything" had been sold. As it was the gate amounted to $5000 in round figures and everybody received a run for his money. After they had heard and read what an even, interesting bout it was, hundreds kicked themselves for not attending. The bout was a big boost for both men, and when they next meet, a banner crowd will likely turn out. Corbett is already doing light work in anticipation of it and should be in better shape than he was last time.

Some fighters never seem to know when they are beaten. No matter how badly they are bested during a bout, at its conclusion they let out an awful yawp if they are decided against. "I won in every round and was robbed out of the decision," is a favorite alibi, and it is hard to convince them the verdict was just. During a busy, give-and-take fight, it is next to impossible for a contestant to tell just how well or poorly he is doing. When Sharkey fought Jeffries at Coney Island Jeff battered and rammed the sailor's ribs in frightful fashion for at least a dozen rounds. Every time Sharkey would rush in, swinging his left wildly for Jim's head or jaw, the alfalfa man would meet him with a right-arm jolt to the body that loosened all of the plaster in the able seaman's slats. He kept at it so persistently that before the contest was over Sharkey's ribs were free from their moorings. These were the punches that did the business effectively and took most of the fight out of Tom for all time to come. His subsequent record shows it. The day after the contest Sharkey was propped up in bed at Sam Martin's hotel next to O'Rourke's, and he was in bad shape. Very much "indisposed," as the society editress would write it. His body was sore, a couple of ribs broken and he had enough bandages wound around him to reach from here to Frisco. He couldn't raise either hand above his shoulder, and they had to cut his meat for him. A number of newspaper men visited him and one of them said: "You did pretty well, Tom, but Jeff is a big, strong young fellow, and can hit some." "Hit," said Sharkey, "why he can't put a dint in a pound of butter." A little later, out of Sharkey's hearing, one of the mob remarked that is Sharkey was so badly battered up as it was, what Jeff would have done to him had he been able to hit would have been a sin and a shame. Sharkey isn't the only one. They all have the same idea. A game man generally thinks he won after it is all over, and that is what makes the referee's job such a hard and thankless one.

SPORTING COMMENT.

WEEK'S NEWS SIZED UP.

Harness Racing.

Things have come to a pretty pass when one sport has to depend on another to win patronage, and especially is it lamentable when one is diametrically opposed to the other. During the week the Los Angeles Harness Horse Association has called upon its old enemy, the Los Angeles Jockey Club, to help it out in the coming harness meet by consenting to the carding of a few running races, to draw a good gate. Harness racing is a noble sport; so is the racing of thoroughbreds when conducted for the sake of sport and not for gambling purpose alone. Each should have sufficient adherents to make a meet successful for true sport's sake, and it should be beneath the dignity of either to depend on the other to draw money or favor. The Harness Horse Association suffers in the eyes of the sportsmen because of its action. It is stated that the members themselves feel chagrined over their necessity, but argue that they are tired of going down into their own pockets and paying deficits each year. It should be beneath the dignity of harness racing to resort to such measures as in this instance, although it is done occasionally in the East. Better to have no racing at all than to have impure sport. Horsemen demand so much in the way of purses nowadays that it is impossible to pay expenses without a good gate, unless the pool-selling privileges come high, and it is the purpose of horsemen in Los Angeles to avoid extensive gambling features. The solution of the problem seems to be to promote matinées so as to arouse interest in harness racing. Then, when the high-class professional meets are held, there will be a big crowd of enthusiasts in attendance. The Harness Horse Association and the Los Angeles Driving Club have many interests in common and their relations should be of the most cordial. Friendship between common interests pays better than making friends with a natural enemy.

Protect Innocence.

Los Angeles fight fans may be called upon soon to pass sober judgment on the guilt or innocence of a fighter who was a favorite formerly in the boxing game. When the least suspicion of crookedness is breathed against a man the public is ready to jump to impassioned conclusions on snap judgment, and in this time of crooked dealing in many of the sports the public is held blameness to a certain extent. But the scales of justice at some time must hang true in every instance and the guilt or innocence of a fighter must be weighed in the balance. If a man be guilty, only mercy may pardon him; but if he be innocent he is entitled to the renewed confidence of the public. Some time ago a Los Angeles fighter was accused of attempted treachery. Suspicion alone pronounced him guilty in the minds of some. It develops that no decisive evidence so far has been brought out to sustain the suspicion. The fighter claims he can prove his innocence of every charge against him. If he can do that he is entitled to another chance to fight and the confidence of the public. He should be given fair play and justice, whichever way the evidence points.

Value of Courtesy.

Sporting writers generally agree that they would rather deal with half a dozen professionals than one amateur. Most professionals, without being obtrusive, are ready to accommodate a sporting writer either by posing for photographs or furnishing data for a "story." They know the value of advertising and that their best friend in a professional way is a newspaper man after news. The amateur needs yet to learn, apparently, that the development of pure athletics depends largely on the publication of the news to awaken interest. This in no way involves commercialism with amateurism, but it is legitimate development of interest in athletics. It pays the amateur manager to give a newspaper man every facility for producing the best "write-up" of an athletic event, and the one who does it secures the best results for the season. A newspaper man cares nothing for privileges; all he wants is facility in gathering his news, and the "game" owes it to him.

Bury the Hatchet.

Some Los Angeles educational institutions have not been on the best of terms in athletics owing to petty jealousies and differences of opinion. The latter are justifiable if honest, and add spice to sport, but jealousies have no place in college life and ill feeling should not be allowed to develop. Arbitration of most difficulties should result satisfactorily if the contending factions make up their minds to abide by the decisions and control their feelings in a conciliatory channel. Considerable ill will has existed between St. Vincent's and U.S.C., this fall, over the meeting of the respective football teams. Now that the teams have agreed to meet on the gridiron both sides should repudiate spitefulness and replace it by the proper spirit of friendly rivalry. The question of who shall and who shall not play on the respective teams can be settled easily by arbitration before a neutral tribunal, and no matter what the result, both sides should abide by the decision with good grace.

Arrest the Touts.

The town soon will be overrun with the professional touts who advertise that they have "something good" on the horse races. It is one of the strange features of a supposedly civilized city government that this bunch of bunco stiffs should be allowed not only to annoy race goers with their fake tips, but to gull the public with their lottery schemes through the fake newspapers. The new Chief of Police might start himself into office with a resounding bang by ordering all officers to arrest these touts and gather them in for the chain gang. They are a bad lot and should be suppressed. Any man that buys their "tips" shows himself up as a sucker, for if they had any "information" they would try to break the bookmakers with it, instead of skinning the public with it.

Pointed and Pertinent.

What Abe Attell's reason is for making a match with Billy DeCoursey at San Diego cannot be guessed unless it is that Abe wants some excuse for boarding a couple of days at the Hotel Del Coronado and making the San Diego people pay for his meals. You have got to hand it to him for being the wise boy that insists on some one else putting up for his pleasure trips.

Jack O'Brien's disdain of everything "Berger" is fine to see. The other day he ran across a ring picture of two fighters, in McCarey's office. One of the men was Berger. "Huh, fine pair of dubs," sneered Jack, without taking his eyes off Berger's phiz. The likeness of the other man in the photo was O'Brien's, and the crowd gave Jack the laugh.

Just what Sam Berger's opinion is of his ability to thrash Jim Jeffries easily, would be a good thing to know if Sam could be "forced" to give it. What Jeff's opinion of Berger is may contain many dashes when appearing in print.

Jakie Atz, the former Los Angeles shortstop, has made a big hit in New Orleans and is cutting the bases for a home run. Reports say that he will be married before the mosquitoes hibernate.

Lajoie's Fast Bunch.

Napoleon Lajoie will do his prettiest to give the laugh to those who think he was not cut out for a pennant winner. Cleveland will have a very strong team beyond a doubt and it will take some good ball tossing to head this team off. Cleveland is to be stronger in two most essential points—in the pitching and catching departments. There is no doubt at all that Berger, the pitcher secured from Columbus, and Liebhardt, the crack pitcher of the Memphis team, will help the club a whole lot. Then Catcher Howard Wakefield, who has been recalled from Washington, will help the club behind the bat. While Cleveland has been able to present a strong front in seasons gone by, there is little doubt the club will open next season stronger than ever before.

JAY-EYE-SEE WAS KING FOR A DAY.

MAUD S. ROBBER TROTTER OF HIS WELL WON HONORS.

Grand Old Gelding Passing His Days in Peace on Racine Stock Farm — Is Twenty-eight Years of Age and Toothless, but Hangs Tenaciously to Life.

Jay-Eye-See, crowned more than a quarter of a century ago king of the trotting turf, is passing his last days on the Pleasant View stock farm, near Racine, Wis., the only comfort of a lonely woman. For a day only did Jay-Eye-See hold the world's trotting record, but all the harness world remembers the time, August 12, 1884, when the plucky little gelding raced down the home stretch of the Providence track and lowered the world's record. He was worth $50,000 then; today he is worth nothing. Yet twice $50,000 could not buy Jay-Eye-See.

Mrs. Case, widow of J. I. Case, who owned Jay-Eye-See when he trotted his great mile, has had numerous chances to exhibit the horse that made her husband's name a matter of record on the American turf. She has stoutly refused to consider such an offer.

"He has earned his rest and he shall have it as long as I live," said Mrs. Case recently. "The old horse is 28 years of age now, his teeth are all gone, he cannot eat solid foods of any kind, and all his grain I have the men grind for him, and while at pasture he eats grass as any horse would. The old fellow suffers at time from the decayed teeth, for there has never been a vetrinary that has been able to operate on his teeth. Whenever this has been attempted he has fought viciously. It is now more than two years since a harness has been placed on him."

HISTORY OF OLD HORSE.

Jay-Eye-See was foaled in 1878 at Lexington, Ky., and there raised on the blue grass of the State which has produced so many of the most magnificent steppers in the history of the world. He was one of the batch owned by Col. Richard West, and a son of Dictator, a full brother to Dexter, whose strain goes back to Midnight, Pilot, Jr., Daylight, Elinor and Darkness. When the late J. D. Case bought the gelding it was thrown in with a lot of other horses, and little mention was made of him at the time.

Case was a man who always looked for the "fighting chance." He found it in this remarkable gelding, considered but a pony at that time, which was being worked out with the ordinary run of stock that was quartered on the Case farm.

Somehow or other the little gelding began to show remarkable speed at trials on the track, yet none but Mr. Case had the slightest confidence in his staying and fighting powers. He was the "joker" of the entire bunch. A problem to drivers, stablemen and track touts. Yet, when four years of age, he made a record of 2:19. At five years of age 2:10¾ was the mark that astounded the Westerners, and then came the sensational performance at Providence. He was speed king of the world for a day. On the following afternoon at Cleveland, Maud S. clipped a fraction from the record of Jay-Eye-See, dethroning him from his kingdom, yet not taking the title that had come to him at Providence, and lives today.

After his last race at Providence the tendons of one of his legs gave out, and for the sake of saving the speed of the animal, Ed Bilthers changed the gait to a pace, and later sent him a mile in 2:06¼, which made him the fastest combination gelding in the world, a mark and reputation that hangs to the credit of Jay-Eye-See today.

Racers at Garden Show.

While a couple of the foreign racers that were in the contest for the Vanderbilt cup have remained in this country, it is expected that not only these, but also those that were shipped home to Europe after the race will be on exhibition here, January 12-19, at the seventh national automobile show in Madison Square Garden. The foreign racing machines will be displayed at the Paris show in December and under the present plans of the Garden Show Committee, will be shipped from there to New York.

Fortune in Automobiles.

The 200,000 automobiles now in use, including 60,000 motorcycles, worth not more than $200 on an average, will scarcely amount to more than $200,000,000 in value. With a production increasing about 25 per cent. every year, they represent the output of three years' manufacture. The invested capital in automobile building may, therefore, be estimated at about $67,000,000, on the assumption, which holds good, approximately, in similar industries, that the capital reproduces itself, gross, every year. The total valuation of the industry, to date, is about $275,000,000. Yet to buy and operate all the automobiles in the world would cost less than one-fourth of the amount spent for alcoholic liquor in the United States in one year.

BERTHA WILSON, CHAMPION AMERICAN BOWLER.

Bowling is becoming more popular with women in all the large cities and many of them are becoming experts. Miss Bertha Wilson of Philadelphia has been awarded the American championship honors for the best bowling score rolled by any woman in America during the past year. She scored 149 points out of 150 pins.

EDGECOTE PEER, CHAMPION OF BULL TERRIERS.

Edgecote Peer is the champion bull terrier of America, and took first honors at the show of the Bull Terriers' Club of America recently held in Philadelphia. Edgecote Peer is owned by Frank E. Watkins, a millionaire of Portland, Or., and the animal is known throughout the United States as the leading member of one of the best strains of bull terrier blood.

GOLF PLAY.

Jedge Frederickson Again Shows He Is a Winner by Finishing First in Golf Match.

"Jedge" Frederickson ran so well in the City Justice sweepstakes last Tuesday and got such a good and such an early start that he couldn't stop even yesterday and thus came in a winner in the regular Saturday golf-ball sweepstakes at the Country Club. He played from scratch and beat Col. Bogey four strokes by finishing in 75. Bogey is 79 for the 18 holes and Freddie was under four times and over once. Weather conditions were excellent for good scores and a number were made, the results being as follows:

	Gross.	Hndc.	Net.

Fencing at Harvard.

BOSTON, Nov. 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Under the direction of M. Pianelli, the candidates for Harvard's fencing team are hard at work now, and the plans made are for a better showing than hitherto. As not a man of last year's team is eligible this season, however, the strength of the team cannot as yet be determined. H. W. Bliss has been appointed coach, and C. A. Bliss has been elected captain of the university team.

Dumont Couldn't Fly.

PARIS, Nov. 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] So great a crowd collected in the Bois De Boulogne yesterday to witness M. Santos Dumont's attempt to win the Grand Deutsch Archdeacon prize, which requires a flight of more than a kilometer in a machine heavier than the air, that the guardian of the Bois insisted on a postponement of the attempt until better police protection can be arranged.

They even transported a piano to this out-of-the-way place, probably the only one in the United States so far away from civilization.

"A piano so far back in the mountains is quite a novelty," said Mr. Powell, "and we had some pretty good music, too. Some of the Los Angeles friends, who camped near us, were musical. Part of the time we had piano, violin and cornet music, and I tell you it sounded fine out there in the woods. But after all, I believe I am a hunter before a musician, for the finest music in the world to me is the whistle of a blacktail deer or the silver trumpet call of a bull elk.

DEER ARE PLENTIFUL.

"I am delighted," continued Mr. Powell, "to find that big game, so far as I am able to discern, is not diminishing, a state of affairs that is almost miraculous, considering the increase of the sportsmen with their modern weapons and the amount of illegal killing constantly carried on in Oregon. Last year, within a radius of eight miles from my cabin, 120 deer were killed. Fifty of these were slaughtered by a couple of hide hunters, who live a few miles down the creek. They shoot and skin, carrying out the pelts for buckskins and leaving the meat to waste or to feed the carnivorous beasts of the forest; at least that has been their custom for a number of years. Last fall the game warden succeeded in surprising them in their camp and captured one. The other escaped and is still in hiding. The warden seized the fifty deer skins as evidence. There is now and always has been much of this illegal killing in that State. The settlers, all through the mountains, live the year around upon venison, many of the children not knowing the taste of any other kind of meat. So you see that Oregon must be a great deer country to hold her own against this constant drain.

"I began to hunt in Oregon more than thirty years ago, and after hunting in the State, on an average of every other year since, have decided that the Cascade Range of mountains is the breeding place and home of both deer and bear. The deer on the eastern slope never cross the summit. They are the mule deer and do not use the same ground or associate in any way with the blacktail. All the blacktail deer that range, during the summer, on the summit of the Cascades, around Mt. Pitt, Upper Klamath Lake, Pelican Bay, Crater Lake, and as far north as the North Fork of the Umpqua, where they are very plentiful in summer, migrate like the geese, in the fall of the year. They travel in strings of from five to ten, perhaps but a few miles a day, but always to the westward. Many drop out as they reach the lower lands and find a suitable place for winter quarters, the rest trail on, a hundred miles or more, until they strike the Coast Range. In the spring, as the snow recedes from the high western slopes of the Cascades, they return to their summer home.

"Taking advantage of this custom of the blacktail, and standing on a point overlooking these trails, which are as well defined as the cow paths of our childhood days, one can see more deer in a day than a dozen men will see, in the same time, still-hunting through the gulches and over the ridges."

Noted Jockey Dead.

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—L. Sewell, one of the most successful jockeys of the American turf, died last night as the result of injuries received at Aqueduct track yesterday.

Sewell had the mount on Lichtmas and fell with the horse as the result of crowding at the half-mile post. The boy was stunned, but when brought to the clubhouse appeared to recover. He complained of severe pains in his head and body after being taken home, and soon sank into an unconscious state. Physicians who were called could do nothing for him, and he died at 11 o'clock last night.

BASKETBALL IS MORE POPULAR.

HIGH SCHOOL TEAMS LEAD IN PATRONIZING SPORT.

Los Angeles High to Play First Game Thanksgiving Day at Azusa. Polytechnic Takes Brace After Defeat by El Monte—College Teams Busy With Football.

Basketball promises to find more favor among the boys and men in Los Angeles, this season. Since the revival of the sport two or three years ago it has become popular with many.

former champion guard of Los Angeles High School, who will play on U. S. C. team this season.

It has been taken up by the high schools, and nearly every grammar school in Southern California is playing the game. Colleges are falling in line and may adopt basketball as an intercollegiate sport.

The high schools of Los Angeles county are foremost in the sport. The Los Angeles County High School Basketball League for this season is composed of the following High Schools: Glendale, Compton, Polytechnic, Whittier, Pasadena, El Monte, San Pedro, Fernando, Santa Monica, Downey, Hollywood and Long Beach. The last four are new ones to enter the league, while Throop Polytechnic dropped out.

Los Angeles High, though not in the league, has been practicing for about three weeks, and with Lewis Bristol, captain of the second St. Vincent's team last year; Paulin, this year's captain, at guard; Verne Rogers, manager and crack forward; and the new man, Don Goodwin, at center, Los Angeles High expects to put out a winning team. The first game scheduled will be played Thanksgiving Day at Azusa, and the team is open to challenge after that date. Polytechnic was unfortunate in being beaten by El Monte, 35 to 2. The loss of the game was caused by the absence of Poly's two best men, who are playing football. Dutton played guard in the Meteor team, the champions of the Men's Amateur Basketball League, and the new man, Rickerhauser, played last year with Redlands.

Teams of the surrounding towns are practicing, and at the general meeting, to be held in December, the schedule will be arranged.

St. Vincent's, Harvard and U.S.C. are too busy playing football to think of basketball, but assurances are given that the game will be given attention later. U.S.C. has been unfortunate in never having taken up basketball, but Coach Holmes says arrangements can be made for the use of the gym three times a week for practice.

Last year the Los Angeles County High School Basketball League was composed of nine teams. At the end of the season the percentages were as follows:

	Won.	Lost.	Pc.
Pasadena High School	8	0	1.000
Whittier High School	7	1	.875
Glendale High School	4	4	.500
El Monte High School	4	4	.500
L. A. Polytechnic High School	4	4	.500
San Pedro High School	3	5	.375
Throop Polytechnic	3	5	.375
Compton High School	3	5	.375
Fernando High School	1	7	.125

In the Citrus League the Redlands High School won the championship. The Fullerton High School won the championship of the Orange County League, and Ventura High School won the Ventura League championship.

POLO TOURNEY.

Five Teams in This Section of State Will Contest at Santa Barbara Thanksgiving Week.

Local polo players are looking forward with a great amount of interest to the three days' tournament that will be played in Santa Barbara on November 27, 28 and 29, and the winning team will practically be the champion of Southern California. The five teams that will be there are Los Angeles, Riverside, Coronado, Santa Barbara and Santa Monica, and they will spend the most of the time playing team matches. The men who will be in the Los Angeles team are Berne, Harry and Tom Weiss, H. G. Bundrem, H. F. Mossmore and B. N. Smith, Jr.

MINOR BASEBALL.

Southern California League Will Play Double-Header This Afternoon at Chutes Park.

Now that the regular professional ball season is over the fans may decide to take up the semi-professional ball games that will be played every Sunday afternoon at Chutes Park. Some really good baseball is seen, and there is no reason why the fans should not turn out.

The programme today consists of a double-header between the Morans and Hamburgers and the Morans and the Tufts-Lyons, the first game with the Hamburgers to begin at 1 o'clock. The lineup for the games will be as follows:

Morans.		Hamburgers.

A cable dispatch from London says: With regard to the status of Beals C. Wright, the American lawn tennis player, Capt. W. H. Collins, president of the English Lawn Tennis Association, said:

Stahl's Wedding Gift.

BOSTON (Mass.) Nov. 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] It is reported today that Chick Stahl will be given the management of the Boston American League team, next season, as a wedding present. Stahl is to wed Miss Julia Harmon, a handsome Roxbury girl, next Wednesday, and Stahl's friends have been tipped off that he will get the appointment. President Taylor has just returned from Europe, and is to be asked by the fans to make the formal appointment effective on his wedding day.

Fifteen Stake Events.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The rich Fair Grounds Stakes closed today, and the entry list is the best ever known. The batch of entries closing tomorrow will include fifteen stakes, the most valuable being the Crescent City Derby, which has a guaranteed value of $10,000, placing it among the most important of the stake races for 3-years-olds which will be up for decision in this country during the racing season of 1907. Some of the best-known horsemen are already on the ground.

Lipton to Race Again.

NEW HAVEN (Ct.) Nov. 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Sir Thomas Lipton passed through here yesterday on his way to Waterbury with a party of friends and business associates of Mr. Marshall of Bridgeport. Sir Thomas took occasion in the course of an interview to deny that he is in this country to form a "beef trust" holding corporation in England for American concerns. He affirmed his intention to challenge again "in due time" for the America's cup.

WAKE UP, WEAK MAN!

Come Drink of the Spring of Youth, the Source of Happiness. It Is Electricity as Given by Dr. McLaughlin's Electric Belt!

What is the use dragging yourself around among men feeling that you are not like them—that you are not the man you ought to be—when you might as well hold up your head and feel like a 2-year-old.

Dont' you want to feel the vim of life in your nerves as you used to? To see the sparkle in the eyes? To have the spring in your step and the lightness in your heart that go with vigorous manhood? Life is too short to miss any of the pleasures that belong to it, so why don't you enjoy them as long as Nature intended?

We can take any man who has a spark of vitality left in his veins and fan it into a flame and make him feel like a Hercules.

We can help a rheumatic to drop his cane and crutch and hop round like a boy. We had a patient come into our office recently and jump over a chair to show us that he was young again.

How do we do it? By filling the blood, the nerves, the organs and muscles with electric energy—that is what Nature gave them at first; that is what they have lost when you break down.

That is how we cure, and that is why we are so sure that we can cure. You have the body that needs the power and we have the power and know how to use it.

If you have been paying money to doctors and taking nasty drugs for years, and after getting no benefit from it all you find a new lease of life after using our Belt for a month, you will be enthusiastic. You will want to go out on the highways and shout, and you won't care who knows that you were once a weakling, because now you are cured and a man again.

Why say more? Isn't this enough? Aren't you convinced that we can cure you? If you want more proof tell us where you are and we can give you the names of people near you. You can see them and ask them what we have done for them. The word of an honest man cured is worth more than all arguments, and we have thousands of them.

Now, don't delay. Enjoy all the happiness you may in this world. You can have none without health and strength.

Here Is Proof of Our Arguments

I feel 90 per cent better since wearing your belt. The losses have ceased and I am no longer troubled with headaches.
Santa Barbara, Cal. N. W. STRAW.

Your belt cured me and I feel like a new man.
Newcastle, Cal. CHARLES EGAN.

I am perfectly satisfied with the results of your treatment, for it cured me of a bad case of rheumatism.
Long Beach, Cal. W. S. BEERS.

I have worn your belt the prescribed length of time and will say that the treatment is all you claim for it in every respect, for I have no more pain, no more nervousness and the system is much stronger. Yours respectfully.
Bakersfield, Cal. E. J. WAREHAM.

Your belt is all right. I have been seeking a cure for a bad case of rheumatism for years and have at last found it in the McLaughlin belt. Yours truly,
Meridian, Cal. C. CAMPBELL.

I was annoyed for years with rupture, but your belt has completely cured me of this trouble.
East Auburn, Cal. A. E. STEVENS.

We have cured thousands of men who have squandered the savings of years in useless doctoring.

Medicine Is a Progressive Science

The Application An Art

My applications cure because I look after you personally and direct my treatment to the cause of your trouble. I DO not treat you at a distance. My treatment IS only given in person by ME IN my office.

Functional Decline---Termed Weakness By Some

The success I have had in restoring functional derangement has been a great surprise to many who have met with failure in former treatment. It's the right treatment applied in the right way that brings satisfactory results. By my direct method all inflammation is removed and free, healthy circulation is established.

CONTRACTED DISEASES.

Failure to quickly cure these conditions is due to harsh measures, which are the direct cause for chronic conditions. My treatment is most cleanly and perfect.

VARICOCELE CURED 4 TO 6 DAYS.

Many men suffer from varicocele and have many times treated without satisfactory results. I want to say to all such that my treatment personally applied will cure you in 4 to 6 days, and the cure will be permanent.

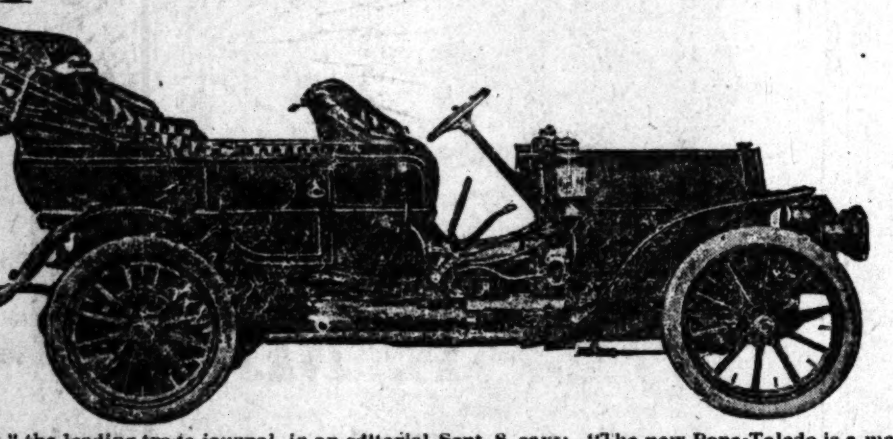
DR. MORTON 316 South Broadway

Pope-Toledo 50 H. P.



"Automobile Topics," the leading trade journal, in an editorial Sept. 8, says: "The new Pope-Toledo is a marvel"

In appearance the new POPE-TOLEDO is handsome and imposing, while the details of its construction have been conceived and executed in a masterly manner. The car marks the height of POPE achievement and will take its place in the first rank of modern automobiles. Following is a summary of its constructional details:

The motor is of the four-cylinder, vertical type; cylinders 4 7-8x5¼; mechanically operated valves located in the cylinder heads and operated by double acting walking beams by means of one set of cams and push rods; three point bearings, CHROME NICKEL STEEL CRANK SHAFT running in DEUTCHE WAFFEN FABRIK bearings of large dimensions. All gears are encased in running oil. Ignition is by jump spark from storage battery and high tension magneto, direct gear driven. Centrifugal pump for water circulation. The motor has a speed ratio of 160 to 1600 revolutions per minute. It will thus be seen that by examining the above construction that THIS IS A REPLICA OF THE FIAT CAR, a product of the famous Italian factory, which Lancia has driven for the past three years so successfully.

Just back of the fly wheel is the multiple disc clutch, working in an oil tight case. This forms the forward compartment of the transmission case, which case proper contains the four speeds forward and reverse, selective type transmission, made entirely from billets of chrome nickel steel, testing 225,000 pounds to the square inch. All bearings are DEUTSCHE WAFFEN FABRIK of large dimension. Gears are six pitch teeth, absolutely noiseless. Cars drives direct on THIRD SPEED. According to the latest foreign practice.

The clutch and transmission are directly back of the fly wheel under the front foot board, therefore extremely easy of access by lifting the footboard. No other car has the clutch and transmission so accessible.

The frame is of channel cold pressed alloyed chrome nickel steel and contains four cross sections. The motor is so mounted that by removing the radiator, it can be slipped forward and taken out without disturbing any other part of the car, in ten minutes' time.

The steering gear is irreversible, worm and segment type. The steering is done on DEUTSCHE WAFFEN FABRIK bearings. Very rakish steering post of large diameter, rigidly supported.

The axles are both of one piece of chrome nickel steel, I-beam cross section. Steering knuckles mounted on DEUTSCHE WAFFEN FABRIK bearings. All brakes are double acting, easily adjusted by hand and equalized; one foot brake on the rear drive shaft back of the transmission. There is an expanding emergency brake of very large surface, acting on the rear wheels, encased in mud and dust proof case.

The wheels are 36-INCH, 10 spokes in the front wheel and 12 spokes in the rear wheels, and all running on DEUTSCHE WAFFEN FABRIK bearings. The tires are 3½-inch front and 4½-inch rear; wheel base 115 inches.

The body is of steel, with very roomy side entrance; seating capacity for seven. The tonneau contains two extra opera chairs, facing forward, which fold up out of the way when not wanted.

By a system of underslinging the rear springs, the car, following the foreign practice, sets very low to the ground, and yet with a maximum clearance.

It will thus be noted by reading the above, that the best foreign practice has been closely followed, it having been the aim of the Pope Motor Car Company to produce a car which is the equal of any foreign car, selling at a much higher price.

We expect our demonstrator to leave the factory this week, which should arrive in Los Angeles about the 25th of November.

Owing to the fact that in building the POPE-TOLEDO, the factory are using CHROME NICKLE STEEL, which is three times as hard to work and takes three times as long to cut as the ordinary steel, with all their great capacity, the factory will only be able to build 500 machines this year, and our allotment is therefore limited. We will only get 15 machines, and as one-third of these are already sold, if you wish an early delivery, it will pay you to take the matter up with us.

We have a considerable bit of interesting literature, describing in detail the new POPE-TOLEDO, which we will esteem it a privilege to be allowed to send to you, or we will explain the matter in detail if you will call on us.

Fifty Mile World's Record Smashed

More Triumph for Pope-Toledo Type XII

This justly famous car in an unsurpassed performance at St. Louis, Sunday, October 14, 1906, established a new world's record for fifty miles on circular track, with privately owned stock car, purchased at Toledo early last spring by the present owner, Mr. Leonard Bradt of St. Louis, making the distance in 1 HOUR AND 2 MINUTES, lowering the record 1 minute and 19¾ seconds.

The 1907 THOMAS "FLYER" has been refined, perfected, simplified, lightened, strengthened and beautified. It will prove smoother, roomier, more comfortable, a still better hill climber, and quicker to get away, i. e., "lighter on its feet" "FLYER," which proved itself one of the most reliable cars ever constructed. It easily earned a place in the front ing cars of the world.

Among the improvements in the 1907 THOMAS "FLYER" are the following: Sixty horse power; larger valves; seats; direct valve lifts; two entirely independent and separate systems of ignition, consisting of a geared Sims-Bosch neto and the Atwater-Kent spark generator; 36-inch wheels, 4-inch tires in front, 5-inch tires in the rear (having larger tires, will minimize tire troubles;) self-starting and easy cranking device, available for women's use; improved I-beam drop-forged radius rods; stronger one-piece I-beam drop-forged axles; simplified transmission control; front seats and dash-board; roomier tonneau; drop-forged sprockets; geared fan drive, discarding belt; completely oil proof transmission and crank case; perfected pan arrangement under engine; space between foot-board and frame, closed, rendering it dust proof; two contracting brakes on counter shaft near sprockets and two on rear hubs, automatic brake on clutch; exceedingly flexible springs; improved radiator; side arms on revolving seats; back step side of rear axle drum; roller bearings on front wheels; larger annular bearings on rear wheels; improved ball bearing clutch features; finer finish and more luxurious upholstering; body slightly changed and beautified.

With the many other refinements the 1907 THOMAS "FLYER" includes in its construction every modern feature bility, safety, efficiency and comfort known to the science of automobile construction—notably four speeds forward disc metallic clutch; cross steering rod in rear of front I-beam axle; anular bearings on rear wheels, sprockets seating seven passengers, with two auxiliary revolving seats; dust proof body, sides and rear; coat rack and package

No "bonds, stocks, etc.," were reported by the savings banks in 1904, but the amount due them by "banks and bankers" was $81,348,174, an increase of $76,600,000 over 1903. Their "loans and discounts" in 1904 were also $15,000,000 in excess of 1903; their deposits were also $10,000,000 in excess, and their total assets $14,500,000 more. State banks did not report any "bonds, stocks, etc." in 1906, but they did report an increase of $52,000,000 in "loans and discounts," indicating more active loaning for business purposes.

The immediately available cash assets, "due from banks and bankers" (less) "due to banks") and "cash in bank," "bonds, stocks, etc.," were:

Behind all this is the "paid up capital" and "surplus and undivided profits:"

1897	52,249,282	27,529,680

Increase 10 years	$39,262,389	$28,053,462

WHAT DOES IT MEAN?

That is a strong showing—80 per cent increase in capital and $1,000,000 more than 100 per cent increase in "surplus and undivided profits," in the ten years. Since President Roosevelt's election in November, 1904, there has been an increase in capital of $22,000,000, and in "surplus and undivided profits" of $2,400,000, a total banking investment increase of confidence in Republicanism, in only two years, and in only one State, and that State 3000 miles from Washington, of $22,400,000. There is no stronger indorsement of a political party than increased business investments during the official life of that party.

Summarized, the gain to California's banking during the past ten fiscal years, nine of which were Republican, and the other one (1897) Democratic, and of little value, has been as follows:

Increased number of banking institutions	266
Increased capital	$ 39,000,000
Increase in surplus and profits	28,000,000
Increase in individual deposits	391,000,000
Increase in U. S. deposits	6,000,000
Increase in circulation	20,000,000
Increase in loans and discounts	123,000,000
Increase in bonds, stocks, etc., owned	102,000,000
Increase in at once available cash	48,000,000
Increase in banking material to handle	$767,000,000
Increase in total bank assets	544,000,000

EVERYTHING GOOD.

With those large and snug banking assets; with its Republican Governor and its protective tariff Republican Congressional delegation; with its spirit of enterprise; with its commanding position in the Union of States; with its constant influx of brains and money from the other side of the Rocky Mountains; with its nearly two millions of American Americans; with its opportunities in the Orient and the Far East and in Mexico; with its large and increasing manufacturing and merchandising interests; with its small State, county and city public debt; with its oil, its lumber, its fruit, its minerals, its climate and its many other natural resources, California, and particularly Los Angeles, will do a vast amount of business, undergo great development, and enjoy unprecedented prosperity (bar labor troubles) till November 1908, when the political operation so satisfactorily completed a few days ago, can be as satisfactorily repeated (only more so), and a further two years of Republican prosperity, extraordinary prosperity, be secured.

Republican prosperity is an endless chain of prosperity, while only sound links are used in the chain. If the day ever arrives, which heaven forbid, that California becomes a weak link in that chain, then "farewell, a long farewell" to the banking and other prosperity of California.

But that day will never come while American Americans dominate the Golden State.

Religion and a 'Possum.

Representative John Sharp Williams tells of an encounter on a Mississippi road one Sunday morning between an itinerant preacher and a darkey, who bore on his shoulder a freshly-killed 'possum.

"Have you any religious feeling, my friend?" asked the minister.

"Shore," replied the darky. "I'se had religious bringin' up."

"Then you ought to know that it is sinful to hunt on the Sabbath."

"Mistah Preachah," returned the darky, "does you expect any black man in Mississippi is gwine to tie hisself to any religion dat allows a 'possum to walk right across de road ahead of him an' git away free? No, sah. A religion dat don't bend a little when a fat 'possum heads you off couldn't be 'stablished round yere by all the preachers in de country."

The famous 300-foot dragon which has graced many a La Fiesta parade in Los Angeles, has been resurrected from its misfortunes of the Portland visit, and in all the glory of thousands of golden spangles and yard after yard of costly silks and broideries, it circles about the large exhibition hall, coils itself after the manner of real, healthy dragons, and lifts its enormous head high above the coils, swaying with serpentine effort and clacking its jaws with eagerness for the child of the Flowery Kingdom who dares enter the hall without "honoring the Golden Dragon."

Hundreds of electric lights are used this year in the decorative effect in the hall, and the walls are hung with gorgeous banners and festoons of silk. Attendants to the dragon are costumed in quaint garb and delicate colorings, and a full Chinese orchestra will send forth the liveliest music known in Chinese festivities.

Each tong will have special nights of celebration at this hall, in connection with their own private celebrations. A special feature will be the birthday of Confucius, which is coincident with the American Thanksgiving Day. There will be frequent processions through Chinatown, and the punk sticks will burn nightly before each citizen's door.

The celebration at the Chinese Empire Reform Association is in charge of a committee of merchants headed by George Lem, one of the best known of the Chinese business men.

Thanksgiving Specials

We direct attention to our Thanksgiving specials and present just a hint here and there of the great values we are offering. Many rooms are in need of new chairs, a new table or other articles conducing to the general comfort of the household or the luxury of the parlor or library. We are prepared at all times to quote lower prices on house furnishings than any other store on the coast. We are especially prepared just now to offer bargains of exceeding interest because in the straightening-up process incident to the opening of this big store we find some lines greatly overstocked and a few orders duplicated. These we must close out, as we need the space, every inch of it, for new goods arriving.

You Don't Have to Ask for Credit---It is Freely Yours

$20.00 Pedestal Tables $13.75

Fine pedestal tables, well worth $20 each. Choice of golden or weathered oak, and a very special bargain at this Thanksgiving special sale $13.75

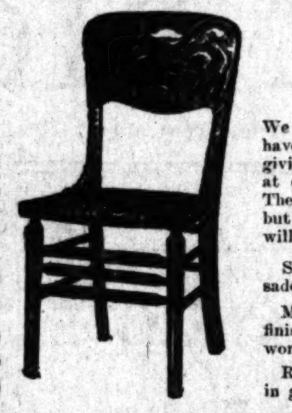
Thanksgiving Sale Tables

Our entire line of fine extension tables is placed on sale at prices so tempting that you cannot afford to eat your Thanksgiving turkey off the old table this year. There is an urgent necessity for genuine sacrifice of these tables, as we have a full carload on the way and must have the needed room. Note the hints of values we offer and come in and see the line. Remember that little as these prices are they are our credit prices, without any addition of 10 per cent. as practiced in other stores. Such is our determination to close out all present stock, that we will save you 25 per cent. on your table if you have the cash.

A long line of fine 6-foot tables, our own quarter saw finish, made for us and made substantially $4.75

Solid oak tables with heavy round legs, full 6-foot extension and handsomely finished. One of the genuine Thanksgiving bargains $6.75

Very graceful dining tables with 4-inch square legs. Made of solid oak; a hard finished quarter-saw and good value at $10.00. .... $8.00



Dining Chairs at Special Sale

We have a duplicate order in these dining chairs and have therefore selected these lots for special Thanksgiving sale. It will pay you to come in and see them at once and make your selections as early as you can. These are credit prices and lower than others at cash, but the necessity to close them out is so urgent that we will save you 25 per cent. if you have the cash.

Solid oak dining chair, substantially built and with saddle seat. Best $1.10 value.

Massive chair, with round Vienna seat. Made in two finishes with choice of golden or weathered oak; well worth $1.75.

HILL TALKS RECIPROCITY.

Railroad Builder Addresses Canadian Audience.

Advocates Closer Trade Relations With Neighbors.

Development of Northwest Demands Agreement.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

CHICAGO, Nov. 10.—The movement to bring about reciprocal tariff arrangements with Canada will be given new impetus tonight, through an address by J. J. Hill, president of the Great Northern Railroad Company before the Merchants' Club on "Canada and Reciprocity." The sudden spectacular development of the Far Northwest, the flow of emigration thence from the United States and the promised cultivation of vast sections of hitherto wild prairie land into rich wheat and corn acreage are said to have inspired the latest crusade for closer and more satisfactory tariff relations with the Dominion.

While looking at the subject as a railroad man, Hill is reported to have given the Canadian tariff question such close and intelligent study that he will bring out many new and important points in his address tonight. Farmers and manufacturers are said to have been converted to the idea that proper reciprocal trade agreements would redound to the prosperity of the people of both Canada and the United States.

TRAIN LEAVES TRACK.

BLOOMINGTON (Ill.) Nov. 10.—The Nashville special on the Illinois Central, north bound, was wrecked early today at Buckley, north of here. The train left the track, but none of the coaches turned over. Fifteen of the passengers and the train crew were more or less injured, none fatally. The cook in the dining car was thrown against the cooking range and severely burned. The accident was caused by a broken rail.

LAND ENTRIES INCREASE.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—The total number of land entries for the first quarter of the fiscal year was 54,626, an increase of 12,388 over the first quarter of the fiscal year 1906. The total receipts for the first quarter of the current fiscal year was $2,153,004, an increase of $789,666 over the first quarter of the preceding year.

PLAN PYTHIAN HOME.

Decatur, Ill., Donates Land and Money, and Grand Lodge Will Erect $150,000 Building.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

CHICAGO, Nov. 10.—The Illinois Grand Lodge, Knights of Pythias, which is holding its thirty-seventh annual convention here, instructed its board of trustees yesterday to proceed immediately with the erection of a $150,000 Pythian Home at Decatur, Ill., for old people and orphans. Decatur donated $25,000 and sixty acres of land for the institution.

FEAR RIOT AT DISMISSAL.

TROOPS ARE SENT TO EL RENO AS PROTECTION.

Citizens Anticipate Trouble When Disgraced Negro Soldiers Are Discharged—Colored Companies Under Severe Discipline Pending Muster-Out Order.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

OKLAHOMA CITY (Okla.) Nov. 10.—Four companies of the Twenty-sixth Infantry, which were started for Fort Reno, Okla., last night on a special train from San Antonio, were sent as a precautionary measure consequent upon dismissal of Companies B, C and D of the Twenty-fifth Infantry by order of President Roosevelt, as a result of the riotous disturbances in Brownsville, Tex., on August 13.

The negro troops are soon to be formally dismissed and the citizens of El Reno, where the three companies are stationed, fear that trouble will follow.

Since their arrival at El Reno, which is two miles distant from Fort Reno, the negro troops have been placed under the strictest discipline, being subjected to a roll call every two hours. The formal order for the discharge of the disgraced troops was issued at Washington today. The date of actual dismissal is not known here.

Wanted the Weight.

A good story is told at the expense of a Wall-street man, who once suddenly evinced a great interest in nautical matters, and who in some manner, despite his inexperience in this regard, was made the commodore of a yacht club in Maine, where the financier spends a short vacation each summer. One day, it is said, the newly fledged yachtsman shouted to an officer of a certain craft: "Have you weighed anchor?"

"Yes, sir."

"Then," thundered the new commodore, "why the deuce don't you announce the weight?"

SELECTS FUTURE AMBASSADOR.

MINISTER TO PERSIA IS SUCCESSOR OF DURAND.

Cecil Arthur Spring-Rice Chosen Because of His Friendship for the President—He Will Be the Youngest Man of His Rank in Diplomatic Service.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—The Times says it was ascertained in this city last night that Cecil Arthur Spring-Rice would probably be the next Ambassador to this country from Great Britain. As far as could be learned the British Foreign Office has not yet definitely decided on the appointment, but of all of those mentioned for the office Spring-Rice is regarded as the most probable appointee.

Spring-Rice is at present in Persia, having succeeded Sir A. H. Hardinge at Teheran. Before that he was first secretary of the embassy at St. Petersburg. He was born in 1859, and was educated at Eton and Balliot, Oxford.

Spring-Rice is comparatively a young man for the post at Washington. If he succeeds Sir Henry Mortimer Durand his promotion will be due, in some part, at least, to the fact that he is on friendly terms with President Roosevelt. In 1904 he married Florence, daughter of Sir Frank Lascelles.

INVENTOR SHOWS TEL-HARMONIUM.

NEW PROCESS FOR TRANSMITTING MUSIC IS FOUND.

At Cafe Martin in New York Wonderful Machine Is Installed Which Produced Sounds of Flute and Horn by Means of Electric Vibrations.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—Dr. Thaddeus Cahill's invention for producing music by electrical vibrations, as one would telephone, called the "Tel-harmonium," was exhibited last night at the Café Martin.

To produce the vibrations a set of elaborate machinery and electric appliances have been installed. There is a set of 145 alternating current dynamos, which make vibrations varying from sixteen to eighteen thousand a second. These currents are passed through "tone mixers," and are released by a keyboard not unlike the keyboard of a pipe organ. The keyboard is played by a musician, and the electric currents give the vibrations required to produce the music desired. At present there are two keyboards which represent a flute and a horn. Two more are to be put on at once, and the effect will be that of four instruments played together. The music can be transmitted through a telephone.

SEEKS A SEA ROUTE.

LONDON, Nov. 10.—Cabling from St. Petersburg, the correspondent of the Daily Telegraph says the Russian Ministry of Marine is considering the desirability of organizing an expedition for the discovery of a sea route to the Arctic.

To Monrovia

It Grows Without Booming

MONROVIA

That's the Difference

Beware of artificial prices sustained by artificial means.

Monrovia has this remarkable distinction. Almost alone among Southern California towns it has grown and developed by the sheer force of superior natural attractions.

Today Monrovia offers you advantages that money, alone, cannot buy.

Elevation, dry climate, pure air, mountain water, magnificent scenery, quick car service, improved streets, especially fine schools, modern stores, prosperous banks, clubs, newspapers, parks, library, gas, electricity, telephones.

Why buy and build in some undeveloped district and wait years for conveniences when you can instantly have them at Monrovia?

Perhaps you do not know that Monrovia is growing more rapidly than any other point in Southern California, and realty investments thereby offer the largest and surest profits.

Queer Tastes in Eating.

"There are some queer tastes seen by waiters. You know the predilection of school girls for cake and pickles. Well, I have seen that beaten often," said a Broadway waiter.

"I've got a customer who puts sugar on white potatoes. Sugar on tomatoes and cantaloupe is pretty bad, but sugar on potatoes—ugh.

"A lady customer, a corset-maker, melts a lump of butter in her cup of tea. Could you go that?

"A pugilist puts vinegar on all his meats and vegetables—vinegar on everything except his dessert. This is not because he wants to reduce his weight; it is because he likes the taste.

"Of course I have lots of customers who drink sour milk and eat high game and cheese—customers for whom we ripen milk and cheese and birds till the aroma of our cellar would cause a turkey buzzard to quail.

"I have never seen any one put sugar on oysters, but I have seen several persons sugar their fish."—[New York Press.

who were not provided with guns declared that they would go along and take their arms from the dead and wounded of the enemy on the field, and that is exactly what they did, time after time. And when the trains were taxed to the utmost in hauling troops to the front, the men who could not get aboard, accompanied by the women, who insisted on going along to cook rations and help with the nursing, set off afoot and tramped all the way to the scenes of active warfare.

FIGHTING WAS FIERCE.

In the short period during which the war lasted there were fought three decisive battles. In the first of these, that of El Jicaro, Gen. Regalado, the idol of military Salvador, was killed at the head of his troops by a bullet from a rapid-fire Colt's gun operated by a former gunner of the Boer army.

Immediately following the death of Gen. Regalado, Gen. Figueroa, Minister of War, now a candidate for the Presidency of the country to succeed Escalon, took active command of the forces in the field, and Gen. Perez led the fighting at Metapan, where 1080 dead of both armies were left on the field.

The final battle of note was that of El Piatanar, in which the heroic Gen. Cristales led the victorious Salvadoreans. The conflict between Salvador and Guatemala was noted for its bitterness and the great losses of men on both sides. Few prisoners were taken and the percentage of killed in action was fully as great as the number wounded, for the fighting was chiefly hand-to-hand in the thick jungles, where it was frequently almost impossible to distinguish friend from foe.

While Guatemala boasted the greater numerical strength, Salvador enjoyed the better military organization, due to the military genius and the courage of its officers, and but for the intervention of the United States, it is believed, would have brought her powerful antagonist to terms.

SEEK MARKET HERE.

But the war is now over, and in the reign of peace which is settling over all the Central American republics, Salvador is looking for a market in the United States for its fine woods, raw sugar, hides, coffee and balsams.

The representatives of the republic who have just visited this country believe that with a direct line of communication with Los Angeles, they could ship such of their fruits as pineapples, bananas, cocoanuts and papayas to this city, and market them at a profit at one-half their present cost to Southern Californians.

With their more staple products finding a market through Los Angeles, the Salvadoreans say that they would in return buy from the merchants of this city their agricultural implements, coffee cleaning and hulling machinery, engines, water wheels, and all kinds of electrical equipment from patent curling irons to the largest generators.

Although at present fuel is scarce in Salvador, there is every evidence of an abundance of petroleum, and Angeleños who have been successful in developing the oil fields of this region have been offered the most liberal concessions to go to Salvador to develop the oil fields there. As a leading banker of the country said in correspondence with capitalists here: "We invite American capital to come to our country and take the lead in the development of these enterprises. We will aid any legitimate enterprise not only morally, but financially, putting in dollar for dollar."

WILL EXTEND RAILROAD.

Prominent Salvadoreans have also been interested in the extension of the Pan-American Railway through that country, and are active promoters of that enterprise, which has already been pushed so successfully in Mexico by Los Angeles capital almost unaided. Arrangements have been made whereby actual construction work on the Salvador division of the road will begin next year immediately following the close of the rainy season.

Rails and ties are to be unloaded from steamer at the port of La Union, from which most southern point the line will extend through San Miguel, San Salvador, the capital city, Sonsonate, and Ahuachapam, to the Guatemala border.

Although California capital is backing the whole enterprise, it is probable that the Salvador and Guatemala divisions of the road will be built under entirely separate company organizations, and possibly operated as a whole by another leasing company, for the sake of avoiding possible international complications. It is also probable that the Salvador division of the road will be operated by up-to-date electric locomotives, as the water power of the country is abundant and easily accessible.

As for the people themselves, they are among the most hospitable and socially inclined of all the Latin-American republics. It is a notable fact that a much larger percentage of the youth of Salvador, both young men and young women, are educated abroad, and especially in the schools of the United States, than of any other nation south of the Rio Grande. And it is a safe suggestion that if more select Los Angeles schools would make a bid for the education of the youth of Salvador they would soon enjoy the patronage of a most desirable class of students.

PRETTY WOMAN OWNS MINES.

LEADS VERY ROMANTIC LIFE AS PROSPECTOR.

By Latest Deal in the Newberry District Her Fortune Is Said to Approximate One Million—Beloved by Miners and Her Advice Sought. Holds Many Claims.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

SEARCHLIGHT (Nev.) Nov. 9.—Mrs. Rose O'Connor, a young woman who has for seven or eight years been one of the most successful operators in this part of Nevada, has just concluded another deal which will bring her a step nearer her ambition, which is to own $1,000,000.

She has succeeded in interesting Salt Lake capital in a group of claims called the North Star, which adjoin the Yellowstone group near Newberry Mountain, a few miles from Searchlight, and a company will be organized at once under the name of the Utah-Nevada Gold Mining Company, with a capital stock of $100,000.

Six weeks ago Mrs. O'Connor went to Salt Lake City and there met R. A. Sermon, of the firm of Buckwalter & Sermon, mining brokers, at the home of mutual friends, and her story of the great wealth of this district so appealed to the young broker that he accompanied her here to investigate. Mr. Sermon was so well pleased with the prospects that he acquired, with J. J. McDonald, a controlling interest in Mrs. O'Connor's property and will return in a few days to Salt Lake to organize a company.

It is contemplated installing a mill as soon as the development work warrants, and, according to Mr. Sermon's statement, some of the most prominent citizens of Utah will be on the directory.

The Yellowstone, of which the North Star is an extension, has ore which assays as high as $200 to the ton, and on the O'Connor property $10 to $40 values have been found, it is said. Theodore B. Comstock of Los Angeles, who examined the Old Roman for Los Angeles capitalists, reported that the property is an excellent prospect, and it is stated that a mill will be installed upon it within sixty days. The Yellowstone and North Star groups are one and a half miles south of the Old Roman, and were pronounced high class by Mr. Comstock.

Mr. Sermon, besides acquiring an interest in the North Star, has taken a bond on another property belonging to Mrs. O'Connor, the Tuck group, just south of the famous Empire mine in the same district.

Mrs. O'Connor's career has been full of romance and she is idolized by the old prospectors who have known her for years. Her childhood was spent in Indiana and she came West with her family while still in her girlhood, residing in San Juan county, Colo., until she was seized with the gold fever and came to the Searchlight district a few years ago. Here she has been unusually successful, not only in prospecting, but in interesting capital in her finds.

She located and developed the Juniper mine, built a ten-stamp mill and afterwards sold it to Rhode Island capitalists, that she might have cash with which to develop the numerous other properties held by her. She developed and sold the Chiquita group in the same manner, and now possesses a fortune that might turn the head of a less sensible woman.

Mrs. O'Connor's home, which is pleasantly situated and almost luxuriously furnished, is a few miles from the Colorado River, at Camp Juniper.

Even the oldest and most experienced miners at Newberry concede that she knows as much about prospecting and developing as any of them, and often consult her regarding their business affairs.

Mrs. O'Connor is pretty, refined, vivacious, and when on one of her trips to Salt Lake or Los Angeles, Searchlight or the Needles, always fashionably dressed.

At home she dresses in accord with the rough work of prospecting, in which she takes the keenest delight. She is able to endure any hardship.

One of the strongest traits of her character, and one which has endeared her to many a rough old prospector who has had hard luck, is that of unostentatious charity. It is said of her that no one has ever appealed to her for aid in vain, and that she has often gone out of her way to favor a soldier of fortune, who might be a bit down in his luck and too proud to admit it.

Mrs. O'Connor declares that she will remain in the Newberry district and will devote all of her energies to the task of making a great mining camp there.

Our Offices Are Open Monday and Saturday Evenings

There is no better-paying industry today in this thriving country than brick-making. Every plant in California is working to its fullest capacity and the output is sold ahead of its manufacture for weeks. Brick stands supreme for building purposes and must always remain in most pressing demand. Other constructive materials come and go, but brick stays forever. Besides the growing demand in this rapidly building co try, the rebuilding of San Francisco renders the want extraordinary for many years t come. The profits on brick are enormous, even under the old and slow process of bu ing. But under our new system, of which we hold the rights and formulas, it takes i mediate rank as one of the greatest and most certain money-making industries of the a

We Can Make 20,000 Brick Per Day—Better Brick at One-third the Cost

We can make 420,000 while the old process is making 20,000. We can make it for one-third the cost. The United States Granite Pressed Brick Company is prepared to make better brick at a cost of $7 a thousand. Ordinary pressed brick ranges in price from $35 to $60 a thousand. Consider the profit to this company in a brick that costs only $7 a thousand and lays faster, that works better, stands more strain, looks better and is wo more money. We have pre-empted the lands in this vicinity that carry the deposit. W have the factory site at Fifteenth and Alameda streets. The machinery necessary is costly. Immediately it is installed we begin the making of brick at the rate of 20,0 day.

Accepted and Indorsed by Two Great Governments

The German government has accepted and indorsed it, and the United States army has used it for its army barracks and recommends it for use in government work in Arizona and other places. It can be made in any size, any color and adapted to any use inside or out for which brick and stone are now used. It can be made in 24 hours, where the process takes three weeks. Every brick is made under a pressure of 350,000 pounds stands a greater strain, has less absorption, makes a smoother surface and a more wall than any other brick. It is the brick of the age.

It Means a Revolution in Brick Making and a Reformation in Building

Every ingredient is here at home. It contains absolutely no cement. It is so cheap that no competition can stand before it. It is so good that no ordinary brick compares with it. Engineers, builders and architects who have examined it praise it enthusiastically as the greatest construction material of the times.

University Place

The Heart of the New Southwest

The natural extension of the Southwest--just beyond the University District--cut by Normandie, Brighton, Halldale and Dalton Avenues--close-in so far as transportation is concerned--yet far enough removed to insure developments along strictly residen tial lines--outside the flat and apartment house sections.

A Good Investment

This property is developing in a really extraordinary way. Although improvements are not yet complete, homes are being built and other buyers are already getting out plans. Considering the fact that the property has just been placed on the market, these developments indicate the demand, and foreshadow sharp advances at an early date. Remember this is city property, well located, lots selling daily. It's merely a matter of good common sense—early buyers in University Place will unquestionably turn their holdings at substantial advances—and that at an early date.

Fine Car Service Makes It Close-in

City car service. The Dalton Avenue extension of the Grand Avenue car line runs directly into the Tract. Cars every eight minutes in the morning and never at longer intervals than fifteen minutes apart during the day. Running time down town from twenty to twenty-five minutes. The ride out Grand Avenue is a beautiful one. You pass through no unsightly sections of the city to reach University Place.

Large Lots $650 Up

Easy Terms

Lots are 50x135 feet. Without a single improvement they warrant even higher prices than are placed on them at present. But improvements are of the finest type—many already installed, the rest going in as fast as the work can be pushed. 5-foot cement sidewalks, cement curbs, good wide streets, thoroughly oiled and rolled, shade trees, and water in plenty piped on to the tract. Building restrictions are reasonable—sufficiently stringent to protect property holders.

Take Dalton-Grand Avenue car. Runs into University Place. 5-cent fares; transfers everywhere.

Full information at our office or at the office on the tract. Take a car and run out today. Get an idea of the substantial development of this desirable property.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

MARYSVILLE, Nov. 10.—A northbound local Southern Pacific train was derailed here this afternoon, the engine, tender and baggage car going off a 15-foot embankment. Engineer McManara was hurt internally and badly scalded. Fireman Ed Allen had his left leg broken, and his body and limbs fearfully scalded. He was pinned in the wrecked cab and could not escape the steam. The men worked with hatchets and axes to cut away the copper pipes holding him before he could be released. No passengers were injured. Express Messenger J. Marston's hand was injured.

PACKING-HOUSES BURN.

Total Loss Reaches $238,600—Thirteen Carloads of Prunes Are Also Destroyed at San Jose.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

SAN JOSE, Nov. 10.—The burning of the Rosenberg Bros. packing-house, near the broad-gauge depot, early this morning, resulted in a total loss of $238,600, as follows:

Main packing-house, with machinery, $100,000; Weber warehouse, $5000; prunes in packing-house and thirteen carloads of prunes on a near-by switch, $105,600; fourteen cars, one loaded with box shooks, $28,000.

SPORTING GOODS BURNED.

Stock of Store to Value of $75,000 Is Wiped Out by Flame in New York City.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—Sporting goods valued at $75,000 was damaged or destroyed by fire at the shop of A. G. Spalding & Co., No. 1348 Nassault street, last night. The police put the damage at $7500, but A. G. Spalding, who hurried to the scene in response to a message, placed the damage at $16,000, and said that the firm was protected by insurance.

JEROME PROCRASTINATES.

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—Former Supreme Court Justice D. Cady Herrick, general counsel for the Mutual Life Policy Holders' Association, received a letter today from Dist.-Atty. Jerome in which that official says that he has determined to postpone consideration of the charges of coercion preferred against the officers of the Mutual Life Insurance Company until after December 18, when the polls for the election of the officers of that company shall have been closed.

Mr. Ponet were in good faith and he regretted that the bank had been unable to get this property.

"Mr. Ponet made us an offer by which the bank could build on this strip. He proposed that the bank give him a lease upon the first floor of the bank extension for ninety-nine years and pay him also at the rate of $150 a month during this time. Why, that would be nearly $200,000 for the strip. Of course we refused.

"It's a shame," continued Mr. Lopizich, "that any man can do this and so prevent the extension of a big institution. The city ought to be able to condemn it."

Mr. Ponet could not be found yesterday afternoon at the Belgian consulate, No. 141 North Spring street, neither was he at his home in the foothills near Sherman. A member of his family stated, however, that Mr. Ponet had refused such an offer as $32,000 for this strip as he thought it was worth more, due to the close proximity of the new postoffice building and of the bank next door.

It was also stated that Mr. Ponet had made some such offer in regard to a lease for ninety-nine years and a certain sum per month for possession of this fourteen feet frontage.

He would keep the property, but rent the space above it at a certain height.

TAFT AT LEAVENWORTH.

Secretary Greeted by Thousands of School Children, Who Make Things Merry at Parade.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

LEAVENWORTH (Kan.) Nov. 10.—Secretary of War William H. Taft arrived here this morning from the north, and after making an inspection of Fort Leavenworth left with his party this afternoon for Fort Riley.

Upon his arrival in Leavenworth, Secretary Taft was met by Col. C. B. Hall and a staff of four troops of the Ninth Cavalry and escorted to the fort. As the Secretary passed through the streets several thousand school children waived flags. Whistles were blown, church bells were rung, and hundreds of cannon crackers were fired. At the fort there was a dress review in his honor.

BULLFROG RUSH MINING COMPANY

GOLDFIELD, Nev., Nov. 6, 1906.

To the Public

We desire to state that the use of our names in the advertisement of the so-called Union Securities Company of Nevada as directors of the Bullfrog Rush Mining Company, in which it is stated that six million dollars worth of ore is already blocked out, in this property, is unauthorized, and that according to our best information the statement is absolutely and unqualifiedly false.

The property is unquestionably a splendid prospect and during the course of its early development held out great hopes of becoming a great mine, but at this time the best average assays obtainable in the lower workings are from sixty cents to one dollar per ton. There is a large quantity of ore that has been opened up in the winze and upper tunnels which gives assays of from fifteen to thirty-five dollars per ton, but this, in itself, after deducting the cost of mining and milling, does not establish for this property a valuation of $825,000, which, on a capitalization of 1,500,000 shares, at the par value of one dollar, offered at fifty-five cents per share, would be the case.

We retain our positions on the directorate of the Bullfrog Rush Mining Company for the present, in order to protect important interests, but we warn anybody who intends investing in the stock of the Bullfrog Rush Mining Company that if he does so it is at his own risk, nor do we in any way endorse any other venture of the United Securities Company of Nevada, of whose responsibility we know nothing.

THE OIL INDUSTRY.

THE OIL BOOM IN FULL FORCE.

Great Activity All Over the Fullerton Field.

New Wells Being Drilled in Los Angeles.

Whittier Companies Preparing for New Work.

The Fullerton oil field holds the center of the stage at present, so far as field operations are concerned, and developments there during the past few months prove that this is not only the most prolific field in the southern part of the State at present, but is destined to be one of the largest and most productive of any on the entire Coast.

The center of attraction in the field just now is the Columbia Oil Producing Company, one of the pioneer concerns in this section. The company has just finished up its No. 13 and, despite the number, it promises to be one of the largest wells ever brought in here. The well is 2380 feet deep, and the last 800 feet is pure oil sand. Drilling was stopped over a week ago, and the hole was filled with water to counteract the gas pressure, and the casing capped to prevent a sudden flow. Profiting by the experience of other operators in this field, who have lost thousands of barrels of oil by an unexpected flow, this company had arranged an apparatus for turning the oil into a reservoir should it flow "when no one was looking," thus making a big saving. Yesterday the gate valve at the top of the hole was opened, and through a side outlet, a solid stream of oil six inches in diameter was thrown into the reservoir, with a roar that could be heard a half-mile away. If continued flowing does not drive the workmen away, the well will be tubed today, and there is no reasonable doubt but that it will make a steady 1000 barrels per day. This is a conservative estimate, and the facts might justify a much larger figure, but there have been so many wells, which were reported as being ten and fifteen thousand-barrel producers, which, in fact, were nothing near it, that it may be refreshing to oil men to learn that the Columbia has only a one or two thousand-barrel well. The fact is, there are very few wells on the Coast that will produce 2000 barrels per day, and a thousand-barrel well is an immense well. The Columbia Oil Company has 100 acres, 80 acres of which, at least, is good for wells similar to the one just finished. It is located in the heart of the field, and the Union Oil Company is drilling on the west, the Santa Fé on the east, and the Fullerton Consolidated on the south. It is said that a contract exists whereby the Union Oil Company takes the Columbia's production at the market price. Rig for No. 14 is completed, and drilling will be commenced at once, and the company proposes to continue drilling until the property is fully developed.

THE WHOLE FIELD.

The Fullerton field, as a whole, is about as busy as any in the State, and the limits of the district are being rapidly extended. In fact, the limits have not been reached yet, and the richest part of the field seems to be that but recently exploited. All the largest wells are located along the southern boundaries, and how much farther out on the plains oil will be found will be seen when it is drilled. The Graham-Loftus Oil Company, is making preparations to drill in this direction about a mile in advance of present developed territory. Should oil be found it will open up an immense stretch of territory and will prove the existence of a sort of blanket formation similar to that at Coalinga.

There are at present twenty-three strings of tools running in the field, which extends from Olinda to Brea Cañon, and there are about a dozen new rigs up. The price of oil is steadily advancing and operators here are fully convinced that they will receive $1 per barrel for their product in the course of two or three months.

The Union Oil Company is making preparations to thoroughly develop their immense holdings here, and their Santa Maria properties will be the only ones receiving more attention than Fullerton. It is expected that the company will be running six or eight strings of tools as soon as the rigs can be built, and crews can be put on. This company is extending its pipe line from Norwalk, which connects with the field at its Brea Cañon pump station, to Los Angeles. The pipe, which is six-inch, has been strung along the right of way, and it will be laid at once.

Altogether, no other field in the southern part of the State has received the impetus from the recent advance in price, that Fullerton has, and the operators are determined to "have the goods" when the price is offered, which they are confident will be in the near future.

THE LOS ANGELES FIELD.

The substantial advance in the price of oil recently has stimulated field work in all the southern districts. New life has been injected into the old Los Angeles city field and the time when that section of the city will be rid of old tumbled-down derricks, tanks and boiler-houses, has been postponed indefinitely. The work of demolition has been suspended, and the work of reconstruction renewed. The cause is seen in the fact that whereas six months ago producers here were receiving 20 or 22 cents per barrel they are now receiving 60 and 70 cents. That's the difference and old wells which were only producing a few barrels per day, and which were practically worthless on 20-cent oil have become money earners. Some of the concerns in the field are even considering the idea of drilling more wells. Small as the production is in this field it helps out in the total, and that the consumption at present exceeds the production there is no doubt.

The Salt Lake field, west of the city, is more active than it has ever been in its history, and there are about twenty-five strings of tools at work there, operated by seven different concerns, all making frantic efforts to increase their production. The largest company in the field is, of course, the Amalgamated Oil Company (Associated,) which has twelve strings of tools going constantly. The company has temporarily suspended new work toward the southwest, and is extending its line of developments in a northeasterly direction, and has a rig built about a mile in advance of any proven territory. It looks like a leap in the dark, but indicates how badly in need of oil the company is. It is reported that a contract has just been closed by the Amalgamated to furnish a large quantity of oil at 90 cents per barrel f.o.b. cars, which means about 85 cents at the well. A new concern, the Brea Ranch Oil Company, has commenced operations in this field on a strip of land east of Clark and Sherman's property. The territory is proven, but the wells will not be large ones, probably 75 or 100 barrels per day.

THE WHITTIER FIELD.

At Whittier, too, there is considerable new work in progress, and more is planned. The Central Oil Company, which, it is said, recently made a contract to furnish oil at 90 cents per barrel, is the most active company in the field, and it is reported that forty more wells will be drilled on this property as soon as possible. This company's acreage of productive territory is so large that it would require a hundred years to drill it all over.

The Murphy Oil Company has received considerable attention on account of its strike in the Coyote Hills, about seven miles southeast of Whittier. What this strike amounts to has not yet been determined, as the well has been shut in since it was finished, and only estimates of its possible output have been made. It is good enough, however, to attract oil men to that district, and all the land that the Murphy Oil Company had not already gobbled up, has been leased and bought. The Union Oil Company has a large tract near the Murphy property, and is already drilling a well on it.

To return to the Whittier field proper, several of the companies there are engaged in or are making preparations to engage in new work. The Warner, Fidelity and Whittier-Fillmore companies are all drilling, and the Home and Whittier Crude are getting ready to drill, and by the first of the year Whittier will present its old-time appearance.

There has been some fear that in the event of a material advance in the price, oil from the northern fields, Kern River, for instance, might find its way into these markets, and keep the price down; but there is little fear of that now, as Kern River is not the field it once was, and probably there is a demand for most of the oil produced there. Again, the producers in that field have determined to give away no more oil, and are now demanding a decent living price for their product. In fact, the outlook at the present time for the industry in this State was never brighter, and "dollar oil" is confidently expected within the next two or three months.

Do Your Kidneys or Bladder Make Life Miserable?

Will You Stay Sick or Get Well?

That is a problem for you to solve yourself. If you do not believe there are any honest physicians in the world, the probabilities are that your disease will continue to increase in intensity. You can judge the future of your suffering from what the past has been, only it is likely, if nothing is done to heal your trouble, your suffering will grow more and more severe, until at last the organs of life can bear it no longer.

I have for over fifteen years been selling a kidney and bladder cure. It never has, since the day of its inception, contained one drop of alcohol or one particle of morphine, opium, cocaine or other habit-forming or poisonous drug. It has never been necessary to prohibit me by law from selling such, as I do not believe in poisoning my American brothers and sisters for the sake of financial gain.

The Williams Treatment, consists of ingredients of a different nature, I think, from any remedy on the market—or any remedy that any physician or specialist will give you. I have sought to perfect a cure as certain in its results as anything human can formulate, and I believe I have been entirely successful.

If you are suffering from Back-ache, aching legs, corruption of any kind in the urine, general weakness, loss of flesh and strength, puffiness under the eyes, swelling of the ankles, inability to pass urine properly, scalding of the urine, etc., etc., the question is whether you want, sufficiently bad, to be cured of your disease, to be perfectly honest with me, and have me perfectly honest with you.

Now I will tell you just exactly what I will do. I will send you a good, generous free trial of the Williams Treatment, if you will agree to give it a fair trial according to directions. I will go to the expense of sending it to you absolutely free of charge and prepaying the postage on it. In addition to this, I will send you a valuable little treatise, and a symptom sheet, which, if you will fill out, and return to me, I will without one penny of cost to you give you my opinion of your disease, and my best advice how to cure it. I do this free, just to prove who I am, and what I can do.

I believe I have perfected the best remedy in the world for these diseases, but of course it is not an absolute cure in every case; for we must all admit that some people let their diseases run too long, and an incurable condition does once in a while arise. The probabilities are, if you commence now, and will be fair to yourself, and fair to me, you can be cured. My advice is, don't hesitate, for I am afraid you will regret it if you do. You must be the final judge of this, though, for you are the one who suffers.

In my practice I have cured hundreds of cases that nothing else seemed to benefit, consequently, no matter how many treatments you have taken, you really owe it to yourself, and to your family, to take this trial which comes to you absolutely without one penny of cost.

I am regularly registered to practice medicine, and no matter what the laws have been, what the conditions have been, or what the competition has been, I have never descended so low as to sell or give anyone a medicine that would injure them in any way whatsoever, but have ever conducted my business in accordance with the great moral precept, "Do by others as you would like to have them do by you."

For free trial treatment, free advice and free literature, send your address today to Dr. D. A. Williams, 21 Postoffice Block, East Hampton, Conn.

NEILSEN'S PICTURE.

A wonderful symphony of color in soft greens and vagrant woodland shadows is the picture that the Polytechnic High School has just purchased from Neilsen, the artist, for $300. It is said to be one of the painter's very best conceptions, and the hanging of the picture in the corridor leading into the auditorium was a proud moment to the school last week. The board of control has made itself responsible for the purchase.

Tuesday at 10:45 a.m., Neilsen will give a lecture in the Polytechnic auditorium. A large number of club women in the city have bought tickets, the pupils obtaining theirs for a very small sum. After the address, the visiting club women will be invited to go through the building and see the work, after which they will be the guests of the school at luncheon.

The visitors will be shown the newest delight at "Poly," the classroom on the roof, which has just been finished and occupied. It is made of canvass in dark colors, and the outlook toward the mountains is open, save for the canvass sides, which can be rolled up or down. Miss Ross holds her classes here, and the joy of the pupils is delightful. "We are going to stay up here even when the rain comes," they declared the other day. Away over the tops of trees and tall houses, the view from this sky parlor rolls out like a softly-painted panorama that God forgot to fold up. Inspiration and uplift come from such surroundings.

DEBATE WITH HOLLYWOOD.

The Assembly Debating Society of the Los Angeles High School will debate with the Hollywood High School at Hollywood on the 23rd inst., the question to be, "Resolved, That the United States government should grant subsidies to the merchant marines." The local school will be represented by Jesse Grow and Archie Reeve.

This week there will be a debate at L.A.H.S. in the assembly room on the question, "Resolved, That Canada should be annexed to the United States." Jesse Grow and Harmon W. Waldeck will take the affirmative and the negative will be supported by Harvey Housh and Lawrence Hill.

SPANISH CLASSES.

The Polytechnic Spanish classes under Miss Geis are learning characteristic songs like the "Golondrina" and some of the "Peteneras," that put one into sympathy with the people, their history, and lives, and that help one to begin thinking in Spanish. Mrs. Parsons, the director of music, is teaching the songs to a large chorus composed of all members of the classes, and mandolin parts have been written by the students, so that the Mandolin Club may accompany the singers.

RELIEF CORPS BAZAAR.

The ladies of Uncle Sam Woman's Relief Corps have nearly completed the arrangements for their annual bazaar, which will be held in Odd Fellows' Hall, No. 220½ South Main street, next Thursday and Friday, day and evening. They hope this will be even more successful than any preceding one has been, and it certainly will be if hard work will make it so. The ladies, profiting by experience of former years, have prepared articles which seem most in demand by their patrons. The booths will be presided over by the following corps members: Fancy work, chairman, Mrs. Mollie Boswell; assistants, Mmes. Blanche Baker, Ida E. Carpenter, June Horton and Miss Minnie Sutton. Bags, chairman, Mrs. Mamie Brown; assistants, Mmes. Etta A. Anders, Alice Pierce and Jennie Gillespie. Handkerchiefs and corset covers, chairman, Mrs. Frances Anderson, assistants, Mmes. Bullfrog Rush Mining Company

To Stockholders:

Recent developments on the Bullfrog Rush property are such that we do not feel justified in further disposing of treasury stock at the original promotion price.

The values reported in the Winze, on which the early great hopes of this splendidly located property were based, have not held out at depth, and in the present workings the assays obtained were so unsatisfactory that we cannot at this time further recommend the purchase of the stock.

To all who have purchased Bullfrog Rush Mining Company shares from the L. M. Sullivan Trust Company we make the following proposition:

Return the stock to us and we will refund you the amount paid for it, or you may select from our new promotions any other stock you like, before it is listed.

Goldfield, Nevada

TRUSTEE CO. Building No. 2

The ownership of this property is divided into 425 Units for investment.

You can buy and have conveyed to you as many Units as you desire at the price of $1000 each.

The property will be managed by TheTrustee Company.

The rental returns and proceeds of the property will be divided in proportion to the number of Units held by investors.

From the net rental returns the owners of Units are paid preferred dividends at the rate of $50.00 per annum in quarterly installments, payable on the 10th day of each March, June, September and December.

Two-thirds of the surplus above the preferred dividends is paid to the Unit owners pro rata, the remainder going to The Trustee Company for its services.

This is an absolutely fair and equitable business arrangement for the ownership of one of the best properties in Los Angeles, which enables investors of moderate means to place their capital in the kind of property chosen by the investors of large capital.

It will pay any investor to investigate this proposition thoroughly before making further investments.

MRS. BENJAMIN NICHOLS was made the recipient of a beautiful picture, Hoffman's "Christ," on Tuesday by the Ladies' Aid of the First Presbyterian Church, in recognition of her work as organizer of the society.

Margaret Fiske, Elliot and Horace Albright, all celebrated their birthdays with a family reunion at the home of Mrs. Dana Fiske on J street, early in the week.

On Monday evening the P.E.O. surprised Mr. and Mrs. Frank Albright with a house-warming at their new home on Orange street. Guests were present from Tropico and Los Angeles.

A week-end event was the birthday party of Miss Birdie Lee Shopshire at her new home on E street.

Mrs. Alexander Mitchell entertained the members of St. Mark's Guild Thursday afternoon at her home among the foothills.

Mrs. Daniel Campbell was hostess for the ladies of the Presbyterian Aid Society Tuesday afternoon at "Ard Bevin."

The juniors entertained the seniors and the faculty on Friday evening at the "Manse," with a Halloween party. The house was lighted only with jack-o'-lanterns, and silent ghosts did the entertaining, which was of a very creepy nature.

The Epworth League entertained with a social in I.O.O.F. Hall Tuesday night.

Placentia.

THE ladies of the Round Table met Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Clara Chapman, with Mrs. Chapman and Mrs. Mary Hatchitt as hostesses. The roll call was answered with ghost stories. This was followed by a general discussion of the two subjects assigned for the day. Music was furnished by Miss Chapman and Miss Gilman. The meeting next Wednesday will be at the home of Mrs. Lottie Morse, east of Placentia.

—o—

Redlands.

MISS GRACE E. HALL, formerly of Redlands, now of Long Beach, who is spending a week with friends and relatives here, was the guest of honor at a musicale given Friday evening by Miss Flora Cook and Miss Miriam Scott. Piano solos and duets, whistling solos and vocal solos were the order of the evening. There were twelve guests present.

Mr. and Mrs. C. T. Ordway celebrated the twentieth anniversary of their marriage Thursday evening and in honor of the event they entertained about forty of their friends. Games, music and the serving of refreshments constituted the evening's pleasure.

The Misses Dennison gave a "five hundred" party Thursday afternoon to meet Miss Fuller of Toledo, O., and Miss Phillips of Berkeley. The prize winners were Mrs. E. A. MacDonald, Miss Fuller and Mrs. M. H. Fitzsimmons. There were twenty-five guests present.

Mrs. N. L. Lelean entertained a few friends Wednesday afternoon with a thimble party. Refreshments were served.

Miss Edith Shorey entertained with a "five hundred" party Wednesday evening. After the game, an old-fashioned taffy-pull was indulged in. There were fifteen guests present.

Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Wilson entertained with a birthday party Tuesday evening in honor of the fourteenth birthday of their son, Alexander. Games were played, after which a supper was served.

Miss Edna Marie Broomhall and Lee Roy Robertson were united in marriage Tuesday afternoon at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. N. S. Broomhall, Rev. J. F. Humphrey officiating. The only attendant was Miss Claire Cowgill, a cousin of the bride. About thirty guests were present. Mr. and Mrs. Robertson will make their home in Redlands.

The home of Mrs. Boucher was the scene of a pretty wedding Wednesday evening, when Miss Ida Maria Boucher and Alfred Clifford Payne were united in marriage by Rev. J. F. Humphrey. Mrs. Boucher gave her daughter away and W. H. Boucher was best man. At the supper which followed covers were laid for seventeen. Mr. and Mrs. Payne will reside in Los Angeles.

Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Hayes entertained a company of friends with a whist party Friday evening at their home on Cajon street. Tables were arranged for twenty players. Refreshments were served. The house was decorated in chrysanthemums.

Dr. and Mrs. W. R. Heacock entertained the members of the Baraca class of the Baptist Church at their home Thursday evening. Fortune telling, ghost stories and refreshments constituted the evening's pleasures.

Wilshire Boulevard

Exceptional Opportunit

Important Statement by the Pioneers of the District:

This announcement is intended especially to notify our clients and others, who may be interested in Wilshire Boulevard, that we are in a position to sell a limited amount of property in the very choicest section of Wilshire Boulevard at prices which practically assure an immediate profit.

We take it for granted that every one acknowledges Wilshire Boulevard as the district where the best homes in Los Angeles are to be built.

Wilshire Boulevard is all good—there is no part that is not good—but naturally that part which lies higher and directly on or near the boulevard itself—that is the class of property which is in most active demand; the property that will always be most sought-after and the property that is more desirable either as building sites or as an investment.

As pioneers in the Wilshire district, it has been our good fortune to secure the control of seven tracts, four of which are directly on Wilshire Boulevard, and three within one block to four blocks of the Boulevard.

In addition to this exclusive control, we have maps, price lists and full details concerning every other tract in the district.

We shall be able to point out definitely and prove to the conviction of every one that certain property is today the most exceptional investment—so evident, indeed, that even an individual who lacks any knowledge of conditions or prices throughout Los Angeles will see by comparison that this opportunity is actually most exceptional.

We can state that of all the many good investments afforded in this district, the particular properties of which we speak are, by far, the most attractive.

Because the property itself is more desirable.

Because the prices are lower.

Because the property is in the exact center where the greatest demand exists.

All those who are interested are invited to call at our office, and we will be pleased to take them to Wilshire Boulevard and show them the entire district, and give them full particulars regarding every tract.

The important development which makes it necessary to act immediately is the fact that the Sixth street car line will shortly be completed, and when the cars are running, no one doubts that every foot of property in the entire Wilshire Boulevard district will be sought after at greatly appreciated prices.

TIPS SPEED "FRONTS."

guests of the Van Nuys. He is stationed at the entrance to the dining-room of the hotel and never makes a mistake as to the headgear of a patron there. He keeps no checks or other indications as to whom the hat belongs, but from years of experience and a peculiar knack he invariably picks out the hat that the guest wore when he entered the dining-room. He says that it is only a habit, but it shows an application to his work that is not often found in other walks.

GUESTS PUT ON FILE.

There is the humorous side also to the bell hop fraternity. They label a new guest of the house within a minute as to his proclivities in giving tips. If no one of the bell boys knows the guest, whch is seldom the case, it requires but a moment or two to have the man or woman labeled and filed away in the archives of the bell boys' memory.

It is a delusion that the guest fondly cherishes to his bosom to think that the beaming and smiling faces that greets his advent into a hotel is owing merely to his prominence. The bell boys have him rated exactly, and if he is a "live one," a veritable phalanx of eager boys descends upon him the moment he enters the hotel. His grips are seized, his top coat is whisked from his arm, and perchance a bell boy who is a little late in reaching the man will even relieve him of his walking stick. The young brigands know exactly that they will secure largess for any service they render him, and therefore he is petted and watched over night and day.

A ring of the bell from his room is followed by a regulation football rush for the clerk's desk. All are eager for the call. There is money in it. A few nights ago a bell boy at one of the downtown hostelries was standing "front," when a call came from the room of a "live one." He started, but was seized by another enterprising bell hop and generously offered "two bits" for his call. The hop refused it and returned smiling with a half dollar.

There is a great degree of free masonry among the bell boys. They all work to keep the crook out of their calling. If a young fellow comes into this city from the East who has a clean record and knows some of the "live ones" who frequent the great eastern hotels, the hops of this city take him to their fold and in a trice he is outfitted with a second-hand uniform, clean collars and money for a meal. These actions were witnessed a few days ago when a young man named Connors came to this city from the East and was "upon his uppers." He knew his business, and before he had been in the city five hours he was enitrely fitted out in a uniform and the necessities of his calling, and by nightfall was tending door on one of the big hotels.

ONE DRAWBACK.

The one drawback to this closed circle which the well-trained bell hop has established is the virtual impossibility of a guest, who through principle or through natural stinginess, refuses to tip to secure prompt and efficient service in the big hotels. There are several hotels in this city at which a guest of the non-tipping variety would be made so uncomfortable that he would leave before the day is out. When the buzzer rings from the room of one of these "dead ones," as they are termed, a remarkable apathy seizes the bell boys. There suddenly appears work for every one of them, and it is generall five or six times the length of time in which other guests receive attention before he secures what he wants.

This method of general apathy and inattention toward a guest either changes him into the tipping variety or drives him from the hotel.

The bell boys are paid a nominal salary. In several of the large hotels those of years of training and mature years receive but $2.50 per week, and out of this sum they have to purchase their own uniforms, which generally cost about $20 or $25 apiece. They are contented, as their tips often total $5 per day, and many times they have received as high as $10 per day.

The bell hops in Los Angeles are unusually proficient. They say that during the last year the sentiment among the bell boys throughout the country, and they are not the unattached fledgling that the public thinks, is that Los Angeles is the premier hotel city of the United States. Up to the last twelve-month the winters have been considered the only really rich harvest worthy of the trained bell hop's attention, but the tide has turned, and the bell hops now only long for a year-around berth in some Los Angeles hotel.

Growth of Bacteria.

Figures give hardly any idea of the minuteness of bacteria. Perhaps the best way to explain how small they are is to say that 25,000,000 could be placed on a penny postage stamp without overcrowding. But their smallness is even less wonderful than their growth. Given favorable conditions, one can, by dividing and subdividing, turn into 16,000,000 in the course of an hour. Within three days the progeny of this one bacterium would require 1600 five-ton railway wagons to carry it away.

A little acorn will grow into an oak whose timber will weigh fifty or sixty tons. But this takes a long time. A turnip seed is something less than a twentieth of an inch in diameter. Under fair conditions, this seed will, in about four months, increase to a turnip 27,000,000 times the seed's original bulk.

In the case of a pumpkin the result is equally startling. A seed weighing one-sixtieth of an ounce will produce within ten or twelve weeks a plant spreading over many yards of ground, and bearing several fruit, each weighing over a hundredweight.

The Earliest Men.

Dr. Ranke, of the German Anthropological Society, has recently undertaken to describe the physical characteristics of the earliest men, as ascertained from the examination of prehistoric graves. They were, according to Dr. Ranke, of a yellowish color, and had coarse hair. Their heads were peculiarly shaped, the part of the skull that contains the brain being large relatively to the face, while the face itself was small. They had other peculiarities, among which was the rudimentary or undeveloped condition of the third molar, or back grinder tooth. The doctor believes that the first men originated in Asia.

then add to this 86 cents, the highest city tax that is now possibly assessable, as stated above, against the territory to be annexed, and Gardena will be paying a rate of $2.67, or 26 cents in addition to the rate that she is now paying, by virtue of annexation.

There is still another contingency to be considered. According to County Superintendent of Schools Mark Keppel, and the County Auditor, the 81 cents school tax at Gardena is divided as follows: Fifteen cents is for the bonds issued against the local school district of Gardena; 18 cents is for the bonds issued against the Jewell Union High School District, and 48 cents for the maintenance of this same High School, the maintenance of the local district school of Gardena being taken care of out of the straight county rate of $1, and is apportioned by the County Superintendent of Schools. Now it has been shown that rate for maintenance of the High School of the district mentioned is 48 cents, and it has also been shown that the maintenance of the city high schools, as well as the other grades of the city schools, is, to be exact, but $.142867. Therefore, by consolidation or annexation to the city of Los Angeles, the tax rate would again be cut the difference in the cost of maintenance of county high school and the city schools (which includes high schools and all other schools in the city) resulting in a 34-cent reduction. Referring to the figures above showing an increase of 26 cents and also to the decrease noted in the cost of school maintenance of 34 cents, this would look like a decrease, from the whole general tax that the outsiders are now paying, of 8 cents.

The instance of Gardena is applicable alike to all school districts, and works out with the same result.

The facts and figures present above are absolutely authentic and will bear investigation by any one so disposed.

RUNAWAY INJURES THREE.

One Man and One Woman Jump from Vehicle, Other Woman May Be Internally Hurt.

In a runaway accident, yesterday afternoon, at Clanton and Paloma streets, Mrs. J. W. Wulff and Mrs. Martha Slaughter of No. 969 East Twelfth street and Louis L. Baker of No. 114 East Twelfth street were all injured. Baker's wounds are slight, but Mrs. Slaughter was seriously hurt about the head and spine, and internal injuries are feared. The trio were driving on Paloma street when the horse suddenly took fright and dashed northward.

Baker and Mrs. Wulff jumped out, but Mrs. Slaughter remained in the buggy until the horse turned into Clanton street, where she was thrown out onto the cement curb. She was carried in an unconscious condition to the home of E. R. Graves on this corner and was cared for by Dr. Cruell. Later, both women were taken to their home.

Mrs. Slaughter, who is a sister of Mrs. Wulff, arrived here from Alexandria, Ind., only a few days ago. Her mother started with her from the East, stopping off to visit a son in Iowa, and word was received Friday that she had suddenly died while there. This double calamity has served to prostrate Mrs. Wulff, although her injuries in the runaway are not considered serious.

IN THE EARTH.

RARE MINERALS, MINES AND METALLURGY.

POPULAR QUERIES AND EXPERT ANSWERS.

[Answers to legitimate questions in mineralogy, metallurgy, chemistry or mining will be given here, but only when of interest to the mining or commercial world. Personal questions from curio dealers and mineral collectors, on ores, minerals, earths or metals of non-commercial value, and assays for metal, will not be answered, but should be written direct to analysts and assayers. Address The Times.]

Molybdenite and Carnotite.

GILA BEND (Ariz.) Oct. 22, 1906.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Some time ago there appeared "In the Earth" column that some parties had a mine of molybdenite, near San Diego, Cal. Would you please state just where this mine is. I have a mine of the same metal, but don't know how to work it. Could you give the price of its ore, carrying 1 per cent. and up? Now, about the ore carrying vanadium and carnotite, in Utah and Colorado, you published, that, if this ore could be successfully concentrated it could be concentrated to 10 or 12 per cent. uranium oxide. I also have this kind of ore, and am anxious to know how to work it. Please answer in Sunday's Times. Yours truly, (MRS.) J. C. R.

ANSWER: There are several deposits of molybdenite in California. All of them are too low grade to be valuable. The molybdenite referred to, as near San Diego, is just over the line in Mexico, and is owned by Mexicans. The gangue matter is a very hard silicate, and hence, it is a difficulty task to break the small scales of molybdenite from the rock. Such a separation is made with the hammer, and is known as "hand cobbing." There is no water near the molybdenite described, and the find was turned down, as of no value, commercially, by one of the partners of the editor of this department of The Times.

Molybdenite when of 25 to 40 per cent. concentrates is worth from $125 to $500 per ton. In other words, "brokers" buy it for the very lowest prices possible. If you have a mine of the stuff from 1 per cent. values up, unless the crystals and flakes are at least one-half inch in size and thickly distributed through the matrix it would be wisdom not to work it. You err in terming molybdenite a metal, it is simply the sulphide of molybdenum (the metal.)

On the subject of carnotite, the publication referred to by you is correctly stated. Low-grade carnotite is scatetred over many miles of territory in Colorado and Utah. Carnotite (in chemical parlance) is a double vanadate of uranium and potassium, and, therefore, carnotite always carries vanadium values.

To work low-grade carnotite into a commercial product is no easy matter. The treatment appears quite simple, and now follows: Break up the ore into fine particles, wash it with water to the extent that all of the clay is washed away. The washed ore is now placed into a vat and heated with a coil of lead pipe containing steam. Handsomely cover the washed ore with a 20 per cent. solution of sulphuric acid (one part of acid to four parts of water.) Heat the mixture to boiling point, and let it somewhat cool. Now add sodium carbonate (washing soda) to the mixture until it has an alkaline reaction, i. e., in excess (when by inserting a strip of red litmus paper into the solution it is instantly turned into a blue color.) Add a little more water to the solution, and bring it to the boiling point a second time. Boil for twenty minutes. Allow the mixture to settle and become a clear, yellow liquid. Siphon off the yellow liquid with a piece of hose into a clean receiver or vat. Precipitate sodium uranate in this second vat with a solution of caustic soda (one pound of caustic soda to seven pounds of water.) Sodium uranate dissolves but little in water. The working method described has been successfully carried on by the editor of this department. It is well to add a very important item on the pasty, earthy residues left in the vat after precipitation: "The pasty residue, which contains much silica, alumina, lime and magnesia and small amounts of iron, serves for the preparation of artificial fuller's earth. It is mixed and ground for that purpose, while moist, in the proportion of four parts of the precipitate to five of the sand, and the mixture heated to dryness, when a substance results which has all the properties of fuller's earth." (Rare Minerals, Ohly.) This answer covers the points asked for by C. T. J., of Provo, Utah, and those of D. B. J. of Pasadena, and is also intended for a reply to their inquiries of recent dates.

Magnetic Iron Ore.

ORANGE (Cal.) Oct. 10, 1906.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Will you—for a fifteen-year reader of The Times—name the inclosed specimen? Please tell me in The Times if it has a commercial value. A. C. E.

ANSWER: The specimen is magnetic iron ore (magnetite) with low per cent. of chronic oxide. Perhaps you will find a better grade near where the sample was obtained. Ore, represented by the specimen would be of little commercial value.

Placer Land.

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 26, 1906.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Will you please give me an analysis of placer sand in small can, which was taken from an old river bed five feet below surface. Does it contain any gold or platinum? Please give answer "In the Earth." Yours truly, C. K.

ANSWER: The sand has values and should be analyzed quantitatively by a competent chemist. Taken from the box and tested, 20 per cent., of magnetite was extracted. Calcium carbonate is present in shells and otherwise. Garnet in quantity is in the sand, with traces of monazite. The sample was panned closer, and the silica rejected. No platinum present, and but a trace of gold.

Calcite.

CUCAMONGA, Oct. 23, 1906.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Please tell me what per cent. of this rock is lime and whether it should be located as quartz or placer claim.

Yours very truly,

J. B. F. (A Subscriber.)

ANSWER: The sample is pure calcite (calcium carbonate,) popularly known as limestone. There being no precious metal present it does not appear that you can locate as stated. You should consult a lawyer for further advice.

Notice.

Correspondents are once more cautioned not to leave ores in packages with no marks of identification thereon at The Times Office. Hereafter, unless samples are properly marked no answer will be given thereon. It required twenty-one letters from this department recently on account of such careless methods on the part of correspondents. If there was but one inquiry a correspondent might be excusable in visiting The Times Office and writing a line or two, leaving the sample unwrapped and not in a package properly marked. Don't do it again.

Mrs. S. J. Bridge's Cancer Cure . . .

This is a remedy which is indorsed by several eminent physicians in regular standing as being a perfect cure.

Few people in Los Angeles, and none who read the SUNDAY TIMES, but have heard of Mrs. Bridge's sensible Cancer Cure. It is a medical preparation, applied without the use of anesthetics or plasters. It s a remedy directly opposed to knife or caustic. The patient does not suffer more from the remedy than the disease. The application of it does not compel retirement or cessation from work. Its efficiency is undoubted, for it has been applied in over 100 different cases with entire success.

Anyone interested who will call at the offices may interview those undergoing treatment or secure a list of names and addresses of those who have been permanently cured. Examination and diagnosis free.

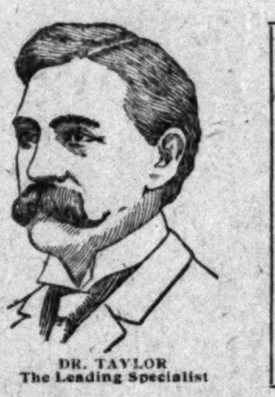
MEN ONLY

My Practice is the Largest Because I Invariably Fulfill My Promises

There is a popular impression that specialists' fees are exorbitant. If such be true, we wish to state that it is not applicable to us. On the contrary, our very large practice and unusual facilities for treating men enable us to offer the very best treatment inexpensively.



DR. TAYLOR
The Leading Specialist

A physician is not entitled to his fee in advance. We are the only specialists in the West who conduct business on these principles.

NOT A DOLLAR ASKED FOR UNTIL A CURE IS EFFECTED.

This is not limited in time or conditional in character.

VARICOCELE

Varicocele interferes with local circulation and the process of waste and repair throughout the organs involved. When neglected it brings total or partial loss of power and may even result in a wasting away of the organs themselves. I cure Varicocele in one week. My method is absolutely painless, no surgical operation is involved, and there need be no detention from business. The lost tone and elasticity is restored, the weakened and dilated veins vanish and normal circulation and health are again established.

CONTRACTED DISORDERS

Every case of contracted disease I treat is thoroughly cured; my patients have no relapses. When I pronounce a case cured there is not a particle of infection or inflammation remaining, and there is not the slightest danger that the disease will return in its original form or work its way into the general system. No contracted disorder is so trivial as to warrant uncertain methods of treatment, and I especially solicit those cases that other doctors have been unable to cure.

STRICTURE

My treatment for stricture is entirely independent of surgery. A complete cure is accomplished without cutting or dilating. All growths and obstructions in the urinary passage are dissolved, the membranes cleansed and all irritation or congestion removed throughout the organs involved.

SO-CALLED WEAKNESS

Perhaps the most prevalent of all ailments peculiar to men yields readily to the mild methods of treatment I employ.

"Weakness is merely a symptom of local disorder, usually an inflamed condition of the prostatte gland. This I overcome by a thoroughly scientific system of local treatment, and the full and normal degree of strength and vigor is permanently restored.

SPECIFIC BLOOD POISON

Until the perfection of my system of treatment, specific blood poison was regarded as incurable, and the limit of medical aid was to keep the disease dormant by the use of strong mineral drugs. I positively drive the last taint of poison from the system. My cures are absolute. Every symptom vanishes to appear no more. I use harmless blood-cleansing remedies only, such as were never before used in the treatment of the disease.

We Warned You

You must come to us sooner or later; who not now? Refuse to suffer any longer on the promises of others

We are ever advancing.

The combined knowledge of the most eminent physicians of the world is ours—and we are still studying.

As specialists to men we acknowledge no superiors. We cure to stay cured.

It is no unusual thing for us to cure cases of nervous debility, varicocele, contagious blood poison and special trouble after the patient has been pronounced incurable by other physicians.

The diseases of men due to the abuses of youth are an open book to us.

We will wait for our fee until patient is cured.

We cover the entire field of private and chronic, deep-seated, complicated, difficult diseases.

We want every man who is suffering from any special disease or condition to come and have a talk with us. No man whose weakened system is crying out for help through contracted disease, or who has been guilty of early indiscretions or later excesses, is safe in life until such time as his errors have been corrected.

Not a Dollar Need Be Paid Unless Cured

You do not pay us until satisfied and you are restored to health. Can we say more? You may consult us free of charge and get our opinion without any cost to you. Call and let us explain our methods of treatment. We cure Varicocele, Hydrocele, Rupture, Stricture, Prostatic Ailments and All Diseases of Men.

PRIVATE DISEASES—Newly contracted and chronic cases cured. All burning, itching and inflammation stopped in twenty-four hours; cures effected in seven days.

KIDNEY, BLADDER AND PROSTATIC DISEASES—We cure all irritation, frequent desire or stoppage, pain in back and catarrhal conditions.

CONSULTATION FREE AND INVITED—Our reputation and work is not of a mushroom growth, nor is it the experience of one man. In complicated cases the entire staff consult without extra charge, thus getting the knowledge of five instead of one. We are incorporated and chartered by the State of California, and our reliability cannot be questioned.

Write if you cannot call. All correspondence strictly confidential and all replies sent in plain envelopes. Inclose two-cent stamp to insure reply. OFFICE HOURS—9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Evenings, 6:30 to 8. Sundays, 9 a.m. to 12 noon.

that again.
rly Hills isn't a section of an endin---it isn't a part of anything else imply and solely a superb district itself.
re had been a better location in all California, the gentlemen behind Beverly Hills would have purchased it.

We say---and note this also---that Beverly Hills is the perfect residential spot in the state, selected for that reason, and wealth has been showered on it as never before on any community.

Prices at Beverly Hills have been purposely made very moderate.

The intention is not to make money so much as to encourage the quick improvement of the property; and by improvement we mean the erection of fine homes.

Never---never for instant did we anticipate quite the demand, however, that has sprung up.

Los Angeles needed just such a suburb ---an elevated district, with wonderful view and natural charms backed by sufficient capital to carry out elaborate improvements.

Consider the miles of street work at $20,000 per mile---the gardens and parks, the sewer system, high pressure water system, electric system, the park ways to be planted with choice shrubbery and trees, the beautiful winding drives, the broad streets, the magnificent estates to be located there---and consider the car service with four lines and a scenic line to be built.

A tenth part of the facts have not yet been told. The important thing is, Beverly Hills is going to be brought to final completion, going to be peopled with the best families of Los Angeles it it requires millions to accomplish it.

The week's experience proves two statements that were made by this company.

First—That Beverly Hills would be an instant success.

Second—That prices were purposely made so low that purchasers were practically guaranteed an immediate profit if they desired to sell.

located in the section devoted to business, is being rushed to completion. If you ever had doubts of the success of Beverly Hills, a visit to the beautiful subdivision will astonish you.

Historic "Twin" Palms Purchased for Beverly Hills

These grand old palms, at a cost of four hundred dollars, will be moved from their position at Arcade Depot to Beverly Hills, as a feature of one of the parks. This illustrates how lavishly money will be spent to make Beverly Hills one of the real show places of the world.

Facts in Brief

Beverly Hills has streets from 60 to 110 feet broad—oil tamped roads, wide sidewalks and parkways.

Business district set off—restrictions guaratnee that private improvements will be in keeping with the tract.

Four car lines, the Santa Monica line, by way of Sawtelle, the Brentwood Park line, the Hollywood "through" line and the Colegrove line. Within six months the new Sunset Boulevard Scenic Road will be running. The property may be reached quickly by automobile, over good roads, by way of Pico or West Fourth streets. LOTS RANGE FROM 80x175 FEET UP TO 2, 3 and 5 ACRES.

PRICES $900 UP—TERMS WILL BE FOUND SATISFACTORY.

Autumn's Swellest Garments

Pick of New York in Suits, Coats, Skirts, Waists

A Little Newer in Style—
A Little Less in Price

Hale's for women's garments. Doubtless you have discovered before this to your own satisfaction that the average store sells women's garments at exhorbitant—almost breath-taking prices. This is due to the high rents that are paid and the inability of small stores to buy economically. The Seven Hale Stores maintain permanent quarters in New York, where a corps of quick, shrewd buyers grasp every favorable offering and express it to Hale's. Try Hale's for women's garments and save 25 to 50 per cent.

City Election Next Month Will Determine the Limit on Franchises.

Proposed Amendment to the Charter Raises Bar That Has Stopped Development of Local Transportation Systems—Right to Carry Freight to Be Decided—Civil Service and Other Changes Planned.

VOTERS WILL DECIDE at the city election next month whether they wish an extension of street railway lines in Los Angeles. By voting in the affirmative on the charter amendment removing the twenty-one-year franchise limit they will remove a barrier that has held back the development of transportation systems.

The people also will be called upon to decide for or against the amendment that will permit the Council to grant freight-carrying privileges to street railway companies.

They will express themselves on a proposal to abolish civil service rules in connection with some city departments.

The will give or deny the Council the right by ordinance to create new wards up to a total of fifteen.

Several other amendments, of minor importance, also will be submitted for decision at the polls.

Eight addition patches in the form of amendments have been proposed for the already dilapidated and moth-eaten municipal charter, of Los Angeles. An attempt will be made to apply these patches at the city election on December 4.

Two of the proposed amendments are drawn to repeal sections added to the charter two years ago. One is a partial repudiation of the civil service scheme, the other provides for the repeal of the twenty-one year franchise law.

A third amendment of general interest is the proposal to grant to the Council authority to create new wards, thus making places for new legislators. But at no time can the number of wards or Councilmen be greater than fifteen.

Under the provisions of the present charter, new wards can be created by charter amendment only. The city has sufficient territory from which to carve fifteen wards, each with a population as great as Ward Eight. At the time the present ward lines were approved the Eighth was one of the most populous wards. That was twenty years ago. Since then the city has grown away from "the Ate" and it now has but one-half the voting strength of some of the more populous wards.

RIGHT TO CARRY FREIGHT.

Considerable interest has been manifested in the proposed amendment permitting the Council to grant freight-carrying privileges to street railway companies. In the East a number of reform organizations and "granges" have petitioned State Legislatures to permit electric companies to carry freight free wherever the electric lines extend. It is by this method that the citizens seek to curb the steam railroad tariff regulation trust. They hope that competition between electricity and steam will bring lower rates.

Cities of Great Britain have tried this plan with varying success. In some cities the plan works well, but in others the authorities have attempted to trade on the good will of the railroad companies, and have made lamentable failures.

Manchester, Eng., has more than one million dollars tied up in a freight-carrying scheme that has been declared illegal by the courts of England. While the litigation is pending the city's purchases for its package delivery are deteriorating and the interest is running on the bonds.

Manchester owns its tramway and its freight-carrying scheme is a municipal one. Like most of the vagaries of the public ownership ring it has proved a practical failure. This is evidenced by the fact that while the city's teams and wagons are barred from the streets by injunction private package companies are making fair rates of interest on their investment.

HEDGE ON CIVIL SERVICE.

Most surprising of all the proposals for charter revision is that for the partial abolishment of the civil service. Water Superintendent Mulholland and the members of the Board of Public Works assert freely that civil service is costing the city a great deal of money yearly.

It is chiefly at their request that the Council has submitted an amendment permitting the heads of departments to hire and discharge laborers at will.

Here is the clause which practically removes the protecting cloak of civil service from more than two-thirds of the present city employés:

> And any of the following persons may be exempted from the provisions of this article, upon the request of the head of the department in which they are employed, by order of the Board of Civil Service Commission, approved by the Council by resolution passed by the vote of two-thirds (2-3) of all its members, to wit: (a) The first and second deputies in any department or either of such deputies where not exempt, as above provided. (b) Unskilled laborers, including drivers. (c) Persons employed on the construction of public works, improvements or buildings. (d) Persons employed to render professional, scientific, technical or expert services of an occasional and exceptional character. Any exemption thus made may be terminated at any time by resolution of the Board of Civil Service Commissioners.

This provides an easy way to evade the civil service, provided the civil service board will "stand in." A deputy at present under civil service can be placed outside by these resolutions. Then his chief can dismiss him and employ another in his place, and the dismissed one has no appeal to the civil service.

ARGUE AGAINST SYSTEM.

This proposed amendment is tantamount to wiping out the civil service list of laborers employed by the city. The request for it comes jointly from the water department and from the Board of Public Works. Members of these boards asserted that civil service is a positive bar to good and efficient service in a department.

They are backed up by no less authority than County Assessor Ben Ward. Mr. Ward has said that he would not accept a position as the head of an office governed by civil service regulations.

During the last four years Ward has had the pick of field men each spring for making an assessment. His force is generally admitted to be more efficient than that of the City Assessor. And both Mr. Ward and City Assessor Lewis say that this is because Ward can choose and dismiss his men as he likes, while Lewis must wait for the unwinding of the bolts of civil service red tape. In a letter to the Board of Civil Service Commissioners last spring Mr. Lewis asserted that civil service cost the city more than $5000 in one year in his department alone.

If this amendment be adopted the Owens River conduit, sewers and other bond work will be placed outside the civil service.

THE FRANCHISE LIMIT.

The amendment affecting franchises is intended to equalize the term of expiration of franchises so that the city shall be in position in 1940 to take possession of all public utilities, provided the municipal ownership fad has not run its course before that time. It may raise the present blockade of street railway traffic by permitting the issuance of street railway franchises for a term of thirty-three years.

Prior to 1904, Los Angeles led the cities of the West in street railway building. Since the adoption of the twenty-one year amendment, not a block of main line has been built. Thirty years ago the British Parliament passed a twenty-one year franchise law. The result was a stagnation of the electrical railway industry in Great Britain similar to the one here during the last two years.

Conditions in Great Britain became so intolerable that, seven years ago, Parliament extended the franchise term from twenty-one to thirty-three years and repealed some of the more obnoxious franchise provisions. The result has been a renewed activity in electrical enterprise all over the country.

When the twenty-one year amendment was adopted here two years ago the railway companies declined to build or operate street railways under that time limit.

A number of outlying sections are clamoring for street railway facilities. Large tracts of land are undeveloped by reason of their comparative remoteness from electric car lines. Residents of the suburban sections hope that the twenty-one year amendment may be repealed and that street railway construction may be resumed. These suburbanites say they have been switched off on a sidetrack for two years by irresponsible charter tinkerers. Now, they want to get back on the main line again.

NEW WARDS IN VIEW.

A general redistricting of ward lines would follow the adoption of the amendment conferring on the Council the power to create new wards by ordinance. The Fourth, Fifth, Sixth and Seventh Wards have outstripped the other wards in population. Each of these now has a population and territory sufficient to form two moderate-sized wards. If the proposed annexation movements should prove successful, the west-end wards would become unwieldy. Redistricting wards is permitted by the present charter, but forming new wards can only be effected by charter amendment.

OTHER CHANGES PLANNED.

Most of the other proposed amendments deal with the departments under the jurisdiction of the Board of Public Works. It is proposed to increase the salary of the engineer from $3000 to $5000 a year, and that of the clerk of the board from $1800 to $2400 a year. The amendment permits the board to employ a disbursing agent and to invest him with powers to pay out money on his own vouchers. This is to expedite payment of men employed on work outside the city. The salary of the "disbursing agent" is placed at $200 a month.

Charter amendment No. 5 provides that "in no event shall any member of any board or commission be removed during his term except for incompetency, neglect of duty or malfeasance in office."

This amendment is intended to prevent a repetition of an attempt to remove an entire board, like that attempted by Mayor McAleer last year during the library squabble. It is not likely to receive unanimous support from the members of the Friday Morning Club.

Six of the eight amendments proposed are intended to correct blunders in amendments adopted at the municipal election two years ago. The faddists appear to realize that to pursue their vagaries a little further would mean to leave the city without any charter at all.

TALE OF WARRING NEIGHBORS.

Mrs. Thomas Strain failed to get a complaint against Mrs. Mullens in the office of the City Prosecutor yesterday, but her allegations were interesting. Mrs. Mullens lives at No. 1144 Mott street, across the alley from Mrs. Strain, whose home is at No. 145 Orm street. According to the complaint of Mrs. Strain, Mrs. Mullens has been calling her names. Into the story of trouble entered the name of Mrs. Webber, who lives close to Mrs. Mullens. It seems that this lady felt compelled to build a high board fence to shut out the view of Mrs. Mullens, who is alleged by her to have persisted in peering into the yard and making invidious comments on the family. And when the fence was built Mrs. Mullens is said to have stood on a chair while she looked over it and talked as before. The City Prosecutor could see no cause for a criminal action.

FORTY "COPS" TO GET OUT.

Police Commission Decides to Drop Many Incompetents for New Men.

A red-hot shake-up in the police department is forthcoming. This is to be the outcome of a long secret session held by the Police Commission on Friday night. At least forty incompetents are to be let out of the force, and they will be replaced by new men.

For months the Police Commissioners have felt that there was need of a weeding-out of the force, and almost three hours was spent on Friday night in discussing details with acting Chief Flammer. No favoritism is to be shown. Every officer who has not been able to "deliver the goods" must get out. That is the ultimatum.

With the additional $90,000 for the police fund which will come in through the collection of the increased liquor license, the Commission will have the means to carry out its plans for the betterment of the service. Immediate action is to be taken. There will be some surprises in store when a list of forty patrolmen who are to be dropped is announced.

In addition to this change, the commission is in favor of placing twenty additional officers in the outside sections the first of the new year.

WITH BOTTLES HE'S A JOKER.

"CHURCH-BUILDING PARSON" IS HARD ON SCIENTIST.

Dr. Johnson, Who Will Help Raise Million Dollars for San Francisco Methodism, Comes Here to Rest and Tells How He Worried Warman.

In connection with the plans for the rejuvenation of the Methodist churches destroyed by earthquake and fire in San Francisco, one of the well-known "church-building parsons" of the Central Illinois Conference, is among those assigned for one year.

DR. J. A. JOHNSON.

Rev. J. A. Johnson of Fairbury, Iowa, is the man, and he arrived here yesterday from San Francisco, where he looked over the ground and acquainted himself with actual conditions before entering upon the campaign, which has been laid out with the idea of raising $1,000,000.

Dr. Johnson is a brother-in-law of Rev. P. H. Bodkin, and is visiting his wife's mother on East Adams street. After a brief rest here he will go to his field of labor for the San Francisco fund. He will cover Nebraska, Illinois and Iowa.

Dr. Johnson is of a scientific turn of mind, and also has a ravenous appetite for a good joke, both of which make him an interesting and entertaining companion.

He recites with zest an experience he once had with Prof. E. B. Warman, the lecturer, who now resides in Los Angeles. Warman was at Fairbury and delivered a lecture, in which he discussed magnetism, hypnotism and kindred subjects.

After the lecture Dr. Johnson got hold of Warman and talked learnedly of all those things of which Warman had treated. He took him to his home, and there they enjoyed a season of scientific discussion. Finally, Dr. Johnson produced his suspended-bottle trick and for two hours mystified and worried Warman almost to desperation, and the latter, in utter despair, offered $100 to learn the secret.

After expatiating upon his powers of magnetism, he stated that while glass is supposed to be a non-conductor, he had made a discovery that he was about to have patented, by which he was enabled to demonstrate that glass was the best possible conductor of electricity from the human body. Dr. Johnson then rubbed his hands briskly together, made a few mysterious passes at the bottle, and the small one slowly moved to the bottom, and at the will of the operator slowly rose again to the top.

This worried Warman beyond measure, for he claims to be something of a scientist in that direction himself.

He rubbed his hands until they were red, and applied them vigorously to the sides of the bottle; he got down on all fours and rubbed his hands on the carpet; he explained that the soles of his shoes were constantly insulated with a rubber inlay, and for the life of him he couldn't understand why there was not sufficient electricity in his body to accomplish what any other living man could do.

NOTHING DOING.

Warman had to give up. His $100 offer for the solution was declined.

SEEKING FOR CLOSER BONDS.

San Salvador May Establish Consulate Here.

Citizens of This Republic Like Los Angeles.

Many of Their Children in Local Schools.

At the sea gates of Los Angeles there comes another insistent knocking for admittance. The republic of Salvador, one of the most progressive and wealthy Latin-American countries, is considering the advisability of establishing a duly accredited consular office in this city.

President Escalon of the Republic of San Salvador, and a view of the Pan American railroad headed for Salvador and Panama.

Representatives of the Salvador government, who have spent some time in Southern California investigating conditions, have just returned to report, and to make their recommendations, based on their conclusions as to the importance of San Pedro as a coming maritime port, and of Los Angeles as a shipping center.

Although Salvador in point of area is the second smallest American republic, its per capita wealth ranks it among the first. The exports average about $1,500,000 per month. Of this but about $500,000 comes to the United States, the remainder going to Europe. On the other hand, the imports of the country amount to about $500,000 per month. Of this amount an average of about $300,000 goes directly from San Francisco.

In the opinion of Salvadoreans, there is no reason why the United States should not have all of that $500,000 per month. In addition to this, it appears logical to them that their trading should be directly with Los Angeles, not only on account of its being nearer, but because of the strong Spanish-speaking element in the city.

Already many sons and daughters of wealthy Salvadoreans are attending schools and colleges in Los Angeles. More are expected to enroll in the local institutions of learning next year. They are visited at times during the year, and especially about the commencement period, by friends and members of their families.

NATURAL-BORN SOLDIERS.

The young men of Salvador are of a decidedly military bent, and it almost invariably follows that their academic studies are either taken with or are followed by a course of training in a military academy. The love of combat flows like wine in their veins, and the youth of the land meet nightly at the gymnasiums, where target shooting and fencing are the order of the evening.

In Salvador patriotism is born with the child, and in the recent war with Guatemala the sons of millionaire hacendados and trained cadets from the military academies fought shoulder to shoulder in the rank and file of the army with the peons from the coffee plantations.

When a call for volunteers was made in a village or town it meant the entire depopulation of the pueblo, for both young and old, the men struggled for the opportunity to go to the front, even against the protests of the military authorities, who had not sufficient arms with which to equip them. SURPRISES AT OPERA.

Two Principals Ill, but Lambardi Is Able to Produce a Pair of Unknowns in Their Stead.

Italian opera companies are almost always fortunate in possessing a surplus of unknown principals, who are ever ready for any emergency.

Lambardi sprung two at once yesterday, at the matinée production of "Aida."

Both Adaberto and D'Ottavi were choked up with recently-contracted colds, and while Mme. Adaberto signified her willingness to sing, her doctor vowed that if she did she would be heard no more in the present engagement. D'Ottavi's throat was swollen and he could scarcely speak.

To their places, accordingly, came Guido Cacotti and Elisa Orelli—wife of the tenor who will make his début in "Rigoletto." Cacotti is a young fellow, with little experience and no acting ability whatever, but he possesses a high voice that ranges easily to C, and evinced fortunate familiarity with all the music in Radames' role. Mme. Orelli has a pure, sweet soprano of equal range and facility, and while her voice lacks the gorgeous coloring of Adaberto's, it was comfortably placed in the Aida music.

Adaberto and D'Ottavi are promised safe and sound for the Tuesday-night production of "Africana."

WILL RENT AIR ABOVE LAND.

VICTOR PONET ASKS GOOD SUM FOR LONG LEASE.

Holds Land Key of Fourteen Feet Frontage on North Spring Street and Would Keep Possession for Ninety-nine Years, but Rent Space Above for Fortune—Refuses Cash.

Victor Ponet, Belgian Vice-Consul in Los Angeles, holds a property key on North Spring street and refuses to unlock.

This little strip of fourteen feet frontage prevents the new International Bank building from spreading over more ground, it forces the building to confine itself to the narrow corner lot at Temple and Spring streets upon which it is now preparing to build.

The board of directors of the International Bank was anxious to get possession of this key to their property, for then they could build a bigger building.

They offered Mr. Ponet $30,000 for his strip. It was refused. Then the board held another meeting and it was decided to increase the offer. It was raised to $32,000, or at the rate of $2356 a front foot. This offer was also refused by Mr. Ponet.

That settled it so far as further offers were concerned by the bank. The board of directors proceeded to go ahead with their scheme for the new bank building as at first planned upon the corner lot.

But President John Lopizich of the bank made one more try. He asked Mr. Ponet for his terms under which the bank might get possession of this coveted strip.

Mr. Ponet wants $168,300 in cash and possession of the first floor of the extension to the bank building during ninety-nine years.

This for fourteen feet frontage on North Spring street.

The Boston Dye Works occupies the little one-story store at No. 221 North Spring street. The rent is nominal.

Mr. Lopizich was seen yesterday afternoon and stated that the offers made

CURSE OF GLASGOW FOR LOS ANGELES?

Twenty-One Year Franchise Law Stopped Progress of Scotch City.

Socialistic Experiments Have Brought Fearful Taxes upon Glasgow and Left It Far Behind in the Race. One of the Most Backward of All Municipalities and on Verge of Great Graft Scandals.

BY S. FRED HOGUE.

[STAFF CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

GLASGOW (Scotland) Sept. 26.—I have visited Frederick Howe's "best city in the world" and I am sick of it. As an awful example of municipal socialism run mad Glasgow stands without a peer.

During my two weeks' stay here I have seen more drunkenness in the streets, more evidences of pinching, death-dealing poverty in the congested slum districts, more deformed, bandy-legged children among the families of the working classes, and more instances of penny-wise-pound-foolish municipal policy than in any other city in Europe or America.

Rose-tinted articles in some of our American magazines had led me to expect a city that had solved some of the social and economic problems of municipal government that are vexing us at home. I have found a city that has failed to comprehend even the rudimentary principles of self-government, a municipality that is as primitive in many of its methods as was Los Angeles before the "gringo" came.

I have found a city where the street cars have no fenders, where municipal telephone pay stations are located in men's water closets, where policemen trundle drunks away to the station in wheelbarrows, where women and children are starving in one-room tenements by reason of discriminating street car fares and where the tax rate is double that of Los Angeles.

A municipal tram car, Glasgow.

I had prepared myself to believe that the proverbial Scotch honesty and Scotch thrift had combined to produce a city in which there would be no politics and no graft. And the day I arrived in Glasgow a Councilor on the floor of the City Council chamber demanded the resignation of Lord Provost Chisholm for making a profit out of coke sold by the gas department. The evidence is apparently conclusive. The Lord Provost is senior partner of a baking firm that secures its fuel from the city at a very favorable price—to the baking firm.

This is but one of a number of sensational accusations made in the Council chamber on the eventful Thursday afternoon of my arrival here. A brawl was in progress in which even our own Spook Howton would have hesitated to take a part.

Angered by a resolution of censure passed by the Council a week before during his absence, Councilor Gibson submitted a typewritten list of charges against the management of certain of the municipal departments, demanding under the rules an investigation of each of them.

For half an hour those in the Council chamber secured a brief panoramic view of the stage setting behind the scenes in municipal socialism.

NEWSPAPERS MUZZLED.

Then came a melee on the floor in the midst of the session, during which a half dozen Councilors advanced on Gibson, tore the typewritten list from his hands and threw it into the fire. The rules of the Council forbade the preferment of verbal charges even by a member of the Council, and the Scotch libel law is so severe that not a newspaper in Scotland dared to publish the charges which were not read.

Apparently this is the Scotch method of stifling an investigation. The scene is one that would not—could not—occur in any but a Scotch city.

Councilor Gibson sought among other things for an official report explaining why the Glasgow gas and electrical departments are paying 50 per cent. more for coal from the Glasgow coal fields than the same coal is selling for 1000 miles from Glasgow.

It was one of the rare occasions when a strong-willed man had torn aside the curtain of Scotch hypocrisy and revealed a socialist-labor union municipal government in its true light.

Conservative business men here have assured me that Glasgow is treading close on the heels of a series of municipal scandals, nearly all of them connected with one or another of the city's municipal trading schemes.

This question of the purchase price of coal involves more than $1,000,000 a year, but it is only one of a number of hitherto undiscussed details of Glasgow's municipal trading administration.

Taken in the concrete they furnish an explanation for Glasgow's abnormally high tax rate. The taxes this year on business property for the municipality alone are 8 shillings 2½ pence on the pound, 30 per cent. higher than those of the neighboring city of Edinburg where the municipality does not reach so far into the realms of private enterprise. The rate is 150 per cent. higher than the maximum rate permitted by the charter of Los Angeles.

Glasgow's rates are based on income, not on capital values. This year's rate on business property is equivalent to $2 on each $5 of income. At home this rate would amount to a tax of $3.20 on each $100 of capital value of the property, assuming that the property rents on an 8 per cent. gross basis.

This $3.20 rate is for municipal purposes only. There are additional taxes for the state and imperial government that amount to about the same as our State and county tax rate.

When one stops to consider that Glasgow gives its citizens nothing free that is not received by the citizens of Los Angeles, and that the city's scale of wages is from one-third to two-thirds lower than that of American cities, then one begins to have a fair realization of what municipal socialism has done for Glasgow.

For the tax rate of this great Scotch metropolis has not always been as high as at present; there was a time when the city was content to regulate; when private enterprise developed the gas, electric and tramway industries. And the rate at that time was from one-third to one-half lower than at present.

TWENTY-ONE YEAR LAW.

Parliament started Glasgow's troubles when it passed a law thirty years ago limiting the life of all franchises to twenty-one years.

I was startled in making my investigations to discover that this twenty-one year clause was at the base of municipal socialism in Glasgow. For the first time I detected the fine Italian hand that had led the pink tea reformers to advocate such a restriction for our city charter at home. The twenty-one year law which we placed in our charter in 1904 is almost a duplicate of the one which paved the way for municipal socialism in Great Britain.

Just as the street railway interests of Los Angeles declined to build or operate lines under such terms, so the tramway and electrical interests all over Great Britain declined to take part in the development of these industries under what they termed unfair legislation.

The objections raised were the ones which have been brought home to us in Los Angeles during the last two years. Under the terms of this law a municipality has the option at the end of the twenty-one years of taking over a line of railway, a gas or an electric plant and operating it, or regranting the franchise.

The companies said that it was too much like the game of "heads I win, tails you lose." If a new line proved a paying investment the city would claim it at the expiration of the twenty-one years; if it was losing money then the city would leave it on the hands of the railway company. This was all very fine for the city; but the railways and electric companies declined to build new lines or to improve and develop the old ones under such conditions.

It was during the twenty years following the passage of this law that the electrical industry lagged in great Britain and that millions of British capital went across the ocean to develop electrical enterprises in America.

Private companies were not willing to electrize horse car lines for the benefit of the municipalities, nor were they willing to make any marked improvements in the service.

Taking advantage of these facts, the socialists followed their campaign by advocating municipal control. It was the natural outgrowth of the twenty-one year law which they had lobbied through Parliament. The evil effects of this twenty-one year franchise law became so apparent, however, that even the combination of socialists and labor unionists could not keep it longer on the statute books. Parliament rose in its might and repealed the obnoxious law.

CURSE FOR LOS ANGELES.

Thus Los Angeles is now experimenting with a law which the municipalities of Great Britain experimented with for twenty years and then cast out as a bar to the growth and development of great industries.

But during those twenty years scores of railway lines and electric plants were foisted on the British municipalities. Glasgow received hers along with the rest.

Glasgow has proved to the satisfaction of its thinking citizens that a municipality cannot conduct a street railway line or supply a gas or electricity plant as cheaply as can a private company. It has found that it is impossible to secure Councilors who will exercise the same economy in transacting the city's business that they apply to their own. And it has demonstrated conclusively that a city cannot go into the market and buy material at as favorable prices as can a private corporation.

Two months ago Glasgow gave up its telephone service to avoid a public scandal. For years it had operated its telephones at a loss to the ratepayers. By unloading on the British government it transferred a portion of this loss; but it is generally conceded that Glasgow's experiments in municipal telephones cost the ratepayers $400,000.

From private sources I have learned that an offer is soon to be made by a private corporation to supply electricity to Glasgow consumers in bulk. It will be chiefly for manufacturing enterprises.

THE PRICE AT WHICH THIS ELECTRICITY IS TO BE OFFERED IS ABOUT 10 PER CENT. LESS THAN THE MINIMUM PRICE AT WHICH THE CITY IS SUPPLYING THE PRODUCT.

It will be fifteen per cent. less than the maximum price now charged by the city. On this issue will come the real test of municipal trading. The municipal socialists have had warning that the offer is coming and they are preparing to fight it in Parliament; for it is from Parliament that the private corporation must secure its franchise. This will be an attack at the monopolistic policy of the city corporations. None of the municipal trading cities will brook competition with private enterprise. They admit that the city cannot compete successfully wth private companies, but they claim for the municipalities that the workmen receive better wages and that the service is on the whole more satisfactory. The theory that the product can be served cheaper by the municipality was exploded several years ago.

Two years ago the twenty-eight boroughs of the corporation of London defeated an attempt of a pricate corporation to secure a franchise there to deliver electricity in bulk at a rate considerably lower than that charged by the municipalities. But the fight was not a popular one and the socialists do not relish the one that is forthcoming from Glasgow.

HOW TO FOLLOW GLASGOW.

I have compiled a list of the things they do differently in Glasgow for the benefit of some of our people that they may know the reforms that are necessary to place Los Angeles on a Glasgow footing.

Los Angeles must:

Remove the fenders from our street cars.

Take off the dollar limit and permit the Council to fix the tax rate at its own sweet will.

Discharge our police court justices and have our councilmen take turns at serving as judges in the police courts.

Forbid the street railway companies to issue transfers to passengers.

Dispose of our patrol wagons and require policemen to trundle drunks and others through the streets to the city prison in wheelbarrows.

Remove the weapons from the police and reduce their salaries to $7.50 a week.

Repeal the section of our charter that limits our municipal bonded indebtedness to $5,000,000, exclusive of water, also the section requiring that all bond issues shall be ratified by the people at a special election, and permit the Council to regulate all these things.

Abolish our entire civil service scheme and permit the heads of departments to employ and discharge men at will.

Compel the street railway companies to remove the air brakes from the cars and to replace them with the old lever hand brake.

Forbid motormen to stop cars at street crossings but require them to stop instead at certain marked stations in the center of blocks, on an average two and a half blocks apart.

Decline to grant franchises to companies seeking to supply gas or electricity at less than the existing price.

Set aside a sum of $250,000 a year to pay for the entertainment by the Council of distinguished visitors and for junketing trips to other cities and countries to get pointers on the proper conduct of municipal trading enterprises.

Abolish our police commission and place the issue of all saloon licenses under the direction of a Council committee.

Repeal the law requiring the city to redeem one-fortieth of its bonds each year and permit the Council to invest the interest and sinking fund in other enterprises.

Maintain our present ward lines but permit a resident of, say the Sixth Ward, to represent the Third Ward in the Council.

Amend our laws so that councilmen can appoint one of their own number to lucrative positions under the city.

Secure the passage of an ordinance requiring that:

"All contractors be compelled to sign a declaration that they pay the labor union rates of wages and observe the hours of labor and conditions recognized by the trade unions in the place or places where the contract is executed."

All Glasgow's municipal trading enterprises are monopolies. Private companies now stand ready to compete with the city in the manufacture and sale of gas, but the city will not permit them to secure a franchise. Private companies are willing to deliver electricity for less than the rates charged by the city. Private companies are ready to compete with the city in street car service, to build new lines and to duplicate the fares charged by the city; but again the municipality will brook no rival. The city could not escape competition in its municipal telephones, and it was never able to meet successfully the rates made by private enterprises.

Glasgow's municipal indebtedness has increased even more rapidly than its tax rate. In 1891 the city's indebtedness was $25,000,000 and its assessable value $15,000,000. Las year the assessable rental had increased to $25,000,000 and the municipal debt to $70,000,000. Glasgow is now bonded for four times the amount of indebtedness which Los Angeles under the State law is permitted to assume.

Thousands of Ostrich Plumes

Entire Output of an Ostrich Farm

Sacrificed at the "Marvel"

Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday

NEVER before has such an opportunity been placed at the command of Los Angeles women.

Never before have such a magnificent variety of genuine South African ostrich plumes suffered such price reduction. It will be an unexpected pleasure--a money-saving opportunity to every woman who visits the Marvel during this three day sale.

Every woman within shopping distance of the Marvel ought to arrange to be here early--tomorrow morning to avail herself of the opportunities offered. The assortment of plumes will be vastly greater and the prices decidedly lower than your most sanquine expectations. Here's the story in brief:

ONE OF THE LARGEST OSTRICH FARMS IN SOUTH AFRICA WHOSE ENtire output the Marvel handles had a big lot or raw stock on hand, and sent us out an over supply--more than we ordinarily need. We must sell them and sell them quick--we've planned a three days sale right in the heart of the season that makes it possible for you to buy these beautiful plumes at but a small fraction of their actual worth.

Hundreds of plumes will be sold--hundreds of women will save money. Its your concern to grasp this opportunity--get here as early as you can, the earlier the better. There will be crowds.

3 Day Bargains; These and Many More

18-Inch Ostrich Plumes in light blue, garnet, gray, pink, white and black. Very rich luster. Regular price $7.50. Sale price $5.00

20-Inch White Plumes. This particular feather comes in white only. Very beautiful. A regular value $8.50. Sale price $6.00

Ostrich Feather Novelties

About one hundred pieces of Fancy Ostrich in all colors, ostrich and aigrettes, ostrich and marabout, uncurled ostrich—not a piece in the lot worth less than $15—some worth $25—sale price your choice $9.85

As an exhibition alone, this sale will be well worth attending. Such a collection of plumes has never before been assembled in this city.

Black and White French Plumes.—The broad kind with heavy head, long fibre and fine curl—black and white only—regular prices $10 and $12. Sale price $7.50

Colored Half Plumes.—All leading shades. Good values at $3.00. Sale price $1.98

Bear this in mind, every price reduction is actual. Not a word of exaggertion has been said in regard to these plumes. Come expecting to save. You'll not be disappointed.

DISCOVERS NEW OPERA.

Libretto by Pueblo Man and Score by Gruendler Will Be Presented in New York.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

SEATTLE (Wash.) Nov. 10.—John Cort, theatrical manager, has returned from the East with the announcement of what he claims to be a rich discovery in light opera, written by P. J. Dugan, a lawyer of Pueblo, Colo., with music by Hermann Frederick Gruendler. It is called "La Cartouche" or "The Vagabonds." The scene is laid in a village near Paris in 1860. Cort says he will put the opera on next season in New York with a cast of sixty people.

MAGNOLIA WHIST CLUB.

The ladies of the Magnolia Whist Club held their opening meeting for the season at the home of Mrs. C. B. McCollum, No. 1117 West Twentieth street, Thursday afternoon. An elaborate luncheon was served at 1:30, the tables being beautiful with a profusion of autumn fruits and red carnations, and the rest of the afternoon was devoted to whist. The prizes of dainty hand-painted china were won by Mrs. M. E. Spinks and Mrs. Harriet Van Horn.

Officers for the ensuing year are: Mrs. C. B. McCollum, president; Mrs. M. E. Spinks, vice-president, and Mrs. F. A. Stephens, secretary. Other members present were Mrs. George Dryden, Miss Dryden, Mrs. H. Arnold, Mrs. Harriet Van Horn, Mrs. S. D. Parker, Mrs. M. M. Symmes, Mrs. Frank Van Horn, Mrs. J. A. Barnet and Mrs. W. C. Thornton.

FOUND HER UNCONSCIOUS.

Neighbors of Miss Bishop of South Pasadena Go to Her Assistance. Growth of Town.

SOUTH PASADENA, Nov. 10.—Miss Cynthia Bishop lies dangerously ill at her home on Diamond avenue. Miss Bishop, who is advanced in years, lives alone. Yesterday some of her neighbors found her in an unconscious condition.

South Pasadena's growth is shown by the report of Building Inspector Packard. In the year 1905 prmits to the value of $264,505 were issued. The 1906 report shows an increase of more than $200,000.

Miss Marie Johnson of Pasadena addressed the South Pasadena Art Club yesterday afternoon. The club will give an exhibit in the west room of the Magnigle block the first week in December.

Mrs. E. Humason of Madorville, Minn., is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Humason of Center street.

Mrs. Nellie Keith, city librarian, who has been ill the past week, is again at her post. During her absence her place was filled by Miss Isa McClure.

Miss Susie Shenk, who recently underwent an operation for appendicitis in the Pasadena Hospital, has been removed to her home.

Business Men Plan Congress to Consider Improvements of Rivers and Harbors.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—The National Rivers and Harbors Congress, which was organized in Washington last January, is preparing to hold a second session on December 6 and 7. Arrangements are being completed and invitations have been sent out. The purpose of the forthcoming convention is to demonstrate to Congress that a sentiment has arisen in favor of increased and regular river and harbor appropriations.

Business men representing commercial bodies, river-improvement associations, maritime exchanges, chambers of commerce and other organized bodies from every city in the union are expected to be present. Congress will be invited to attend the session.

ADVERTISING DIVIDEND.

The Curtis-Newhall Company, advertising contractors, at the annual meeting held yesterday declared a dividend of 6 per cent. on the capital stock of $30,000. In addition to this the company has earned a nice surplus.

"What are you leaving for, Bridget? Haven't I treated you as one of the family?"

"Yes, yer 'ave, mum, and I ain't goin' to stand it any longer."—[Ally Sloper.

Piano for Prominent Musician.

Miss Fanny Dillon, concert pianist, recently from Berlin, Germany, selected the Frank B. Long Piano, for use in the recital, which was given under the auspices of the Young Men's Social, last week, at Wilcox Hall, Hollywood. Score again for "The Unequaled Tone."

Now that the "Whang-Ho" is in port, why wouldn't it be a good idea to turn over some of these local literary pirates for execution?

Election being over and the bean crop all in, Jupiter Pluvius may now turn on the sprinkler just as soon as he can get around to it.

It is extremely dangerous for lovers of nature to venture forth into the wilderness these days. Behind every rock and tree hides an imbecile with a gun.

On the ancient Chinese pirate ship now at San Pedro they have what was called "the starving cage." Doubtless that's the place where the Democrats were kept.

It is rumored that a Greek band has killed several Bulgarians; but by means of which particular tunes they accomplished their diabolical purpose is not stated.

Chauncey Depew and Tom Platt will both return to the United States Senate when it reconvenes, thus leaving New York still without representation in that august body.

Congress will certainly decline to vote $30,000,000 for a canal on Cape Cod. Why, with that much money 1000 miles of the arid West could be irrigated into real farms.

When Abe Ruef construes the Constitution and the statutes to suit his own purposes, we are reminded of what the devil is said to be able to do with the scriptures.

A New York authority on finance says we should do away with paper money. But it was doing away with it that has left some of us in our present lamentable predicaments.

While it is true that the output of gold from the mines is increasing enormously, still we haven't come to the point where the boys on the streets are using nuggets for jackstones.

A tribe of Indians who have never heard of white men has been found in the Arctic regions. Let them now bid farewell to all the peace and happiness they have known in the past.

Those of us who haven't the price of a seat in the Auditorium should remember that the mocking birds are still singing in the moonlight all the way down from Mt. Lowe to the sea.

Japan's revenge on California is to be brought about in rather a unique manner. The Japs are to leave us and go to South America, thus forcing a lot of lazy white men to go to work.

It may be all very well to speak of the philosophy of life, but we can't get away from the fact that a man comes into the world with a cry on his lips and seldom goes out of it with a laugh.

In passing, we don't mind saying that we have grave doubts as to whether it will improve matters much to take the railroads out of politics and to make them an adjunct of social functions.

While not claiming to be a prophet nor the son of a prophet, we are nevertheless willing to hazard the guess that the attempt of Juan Gu and those other Cuban politicians to bulldoze Gov. Magoon will fail.

The announcement that a brass band from Honolulu has been financially stranded in Seattle is perhaps only another proof that, with the exception of Mr. Bryan, nobody can expect to make money on wind in this materialistic age.

Newport's "smart set" will find it necessary to get up rather early in the morning to take the railroads of the country out of the hands of Harriman, Jim Hill and that other smart set that has been running those old streaks of rust for some time back.

"Aunt Hepsey" Cottle, aged 98, who came through the San Francisco earthquake without the quiver of a nerve, is now back East taking century runs in an automobile. A California woman is only as old as she feels, and "Aunt Hepsey" is yet a mere girl in her teens.

A STEP TOWARD CONSOLIDATION.

Careful consideration of all factors in the problem of city and county consolidation leads to the conclusion that annexation of the strip of territory connecting Los Angeles with San Pedro and Wilmington is a step toward the ultimate goal that should be taken at this time.

There are compelling reasons for adopting the plan as it has been presented, regardless of individual opinion concerning its details. The strip might have been made wider with advantage to the territory affected, and it is quite possible that the reasons impelling the Chamber of Commerce committee to fix the lines as they stand were largely imaginary, but the cure for defects of that nature is simple and may be applied later. There is no time now to modify the plan. It is important to make Los Angeles and the harbor towns contiguous now, before obstacles to ultimate consolidation can be interposed, as they will be if opportunity is given to the Southern Pacific and the few cantankerous Long Beach obstructionists to get in their work.

The progressive, far-sighted people of Wilmington and San Pedro realize that the harbor of San Pedro is really the port and gateway of Los Angeles, and that it will not be developed to its full possibilities until the influence and prestige of the larger city are brought to bear in its behalf. Unless Los Angeles has part in the control of the harbor, the full influence of the commercial interests of the city cannot be invoked to secure adequate improvement.

There are a few mentally near-sighted persons who imagine that because the harbor bears the name of San Pedro, it belongs exclusively and in fee simple to that town, and they are "jealous of their harbor" and sit up nights to worry lest Los Angeles rape from them the privilege of playing skittles with wharf franchises and swapping water front for back lots. But statesmen of that caliber are few in number, and San Pedro has recently sent them to the rear. It is believed by the leading business men of San Pedro that a majority of the citizens are in favor of union with Los Angeles, notwithstanding the fact that San Pedro is preparing a freeholders' charter.

In apportioning money for harbor improvements, Congress considers the volume of commercial transactions of the city applying for appropriations, and that consideration actually determines the apportionment. Where San Pedro could get an appropriation of a million, the city of Los Angeles could get ten millions for harbor construction.

When the harbor is actually the water front of the city of Los Angeles and under its control, with assurance that wharf franchises will not be frittered away and corporations will not be permitted to monopolize the benefits of government expenditures, Congress will be disposed to make adequate appropriations for the construction of a great free harbor on the Coast of Southern California. Mere statement of the case is all the argument required to convince the men who are doing things in this country of the necessity of consolidation.

The necessity for immediate action in the line of annexation arises from the steps taken by San Pedro toward the status of a freeholders' chartered city. In less than ninety days a charter may be adopted, and when ratified by the Legislature it will block consolidation for years. Annexation of the strip will make Los Angeles, San Pedro and Wilmington contiguous, and they may then consolidate immediately without legislative action if their citizens so desire and vote so to do.

There are no objections to annexation worth a moment's consideration by any citizen of Southern California in the face of the great public benefit to be secured by extension of the limits of the city of Los Angeles to the water front. No individual worthy of citizenship in this community will permit considerations of temporary private interest to influence his opinion on this question of paramount public importance to control his action. Los Angeles needs the harbor, and the harbor needs Los Angeles. United, they will make this a city from the mountains to the sea, the greatest city of the Pacific Coast.

Annexation of the strip is a necessary step toward realization of the great possibilities lying before the people of Southern California, and The Times earnestly advises every citizen who has a voice in the matter to go to the polls next Monday and cast a vote in favor of annexation. It is infinitely more important to insure the completion of a free harbor than to elect any man to office.

"Lee Gates, our next Mayor," says the cocksure and Democratic Express, famous for its political acumen. A few days ago it was "Theodore A. Bell, our next Governor."

When Schmitz first bobbed up as a candidate for Mayor of San Francisco the wiseacres of the Express type refused to take him seriously. What was the result?

THE "CURLY BOSS" HAS HOPES.

Abe Ruef—although three of the four candidates for Superior Court judgeships whom he had chosen to be his puppets failed of election—still professes to be confident that he will succeed in ousting Dist.-Atty. Langdon and Asst. Dist.-Atty. Heney. His latest claim is that the last provision of Amendment No. 2, adopted by popular vote at Tuesday's election, confirms the power of the Mayor and Board of Supervisors to remove the District Attorney. The clause of the amendment referred to provides that "in the case of any officer or employé of any municipality governed under a legally adopted charter, the provisions of such charter, with reference to the tenure of office or the dismissal from office of any such officer or employé shall control." Ruef declares that "the amendment disposes absolutely of every question concerning the right of the Chief Executive, through authority of the city charter, to dismiss any officer or employé of the administration;" and that "the law is aimed to apply to the so-called county officers, of which the District Attorney is one." He declares that "acting Mayor Gallagher and the Board of Supervisors cannot be prevented from removing an official who has been negligent, and has otherwise failed to perform his duty properly."

The question has been raised whether the office of District Attorney (which Ruef acknowledges to be "a so-called county office") is under the jurisdiction of the city or the county. Asst. Dist.-Atty. Heney is quoted as saying that "the amendment has to do with city affairs and does not refer to county officials." It is difficult to see what basis there is for this contention, inasmuch as the city and county of San Francisco are consolidated, and the affairs of both are administered as one government, the City Council and the Board of Supervisors being one and the same body.

On technical grounds, Ruef and his creatures, the Supervisors, may gain a temporary advantage, even to the extent of placing Ruef in the office of District Attorney. But it is absurd to suppose that the grave crimes of which Ruef and his satellites are accused can be so covered up by technicalities as permanently to defeat the ends of justice. If they are guilty, and the evidence against them is conclusive, as is confidently claimed by Prosecutor Heney, some way will surely be found to reach the malefactors. In case Ruef should succeed in ousting Dist.-Atty. Langdon and having himself placed in charge of the office, Atty.-Gen. Webb of the State administration would at once take up the charges against Ruef and his associates. In the meantime, the courts would doubtless restrain Ruef from exercising the functions of District Attorney; for it would manifestly be improper for him to act in the capacity of public prosecutor while grave criminal charges were pending against him. Justice may be hoodwinked for a time, but it is relentless in its final punishments.

THE CANDIDATES AND THE SORDID MEDDLERS.

There are four candidates in the field for the Mayoralty. It needs no foresight to declare that the vote will fall short of 40,000. This being the case, it is quite possible that 10,000 votes might elect a Mayor. One of the candidates, who should be truly characterized as a labor-unionite Socialist, although he may call himself by any other name, if elected to the office of Mayor, would introduce into our municipal life an element as dangerous, dishonest and fatal as the Schmitz gang has proven in San Francisco. The Democratic nominee is a gentleman of high standing in the community. He is a man of considerable experience in affairs, but none in public life. The great danger in Mr. Harper's case is in his surroundings. While there are great numbers of very intelligent and thoroughly right-minded citizens who will vote for the Democratic nominee for the office of Mayor, there is a preponderating weight of influence around him which certainly is not entitled to be called either intelligent or high-minded. How far he would be able to resist the influences of this rabble it is difficult to foresee. He stands upon a false platform, one in which he probably does not believe. Whether he believes it or not, he is in the same position that Theodore Bell stood in when he accepted the nomination of the Union Labor party. The plank in the Democratic platform referred to is public ownership in a wholesale way of public and semi-public utilities—which means revolution.

There remain two Republican candidates seeking the office of Mayor, and in this competition, with the division of the more just-minded mass of the citizens, lies the great danger. If either of these gentlemen can be elected, it must be largely, almost entirely, by Republican votes. That the party strength can be split in two and either of them be elected is impossible. Neither of them will draw any very great amount of strength from outside the Republican party. If you listen to the four candidates, and to the managers, you will be told that all four of them are cock-sure of election. Now, of course, in three cases this guess must be wrong.

Now either Dr. Walter Lindley or Lee C. Gates would unquestionably give this city a thoroughly satisfactory administration if elected to the office of Mayor. But with the two in the field The Times sees the disruption of the party strength, with the resulting effect of electing a Labor Union or Democratic Mayor, with the "wide-open," strike-promoting, trouble-breeding elements of the population around him, clamoring for everything that is unfair, unjust and likely to fundamentally upset our conditions of prosperity.

What is to be done? Just one thing. One or the other of these competing Republican candidates should get out of the way. It is a problem for the two gentlemen personally. Their managers on each side would probably prove much more obdurate than the candidates themselves. The two nominees should get together, grasp each other's hands, look each other straight in the eye, and arrive at some way to decide which of them shall make the sacrifice.

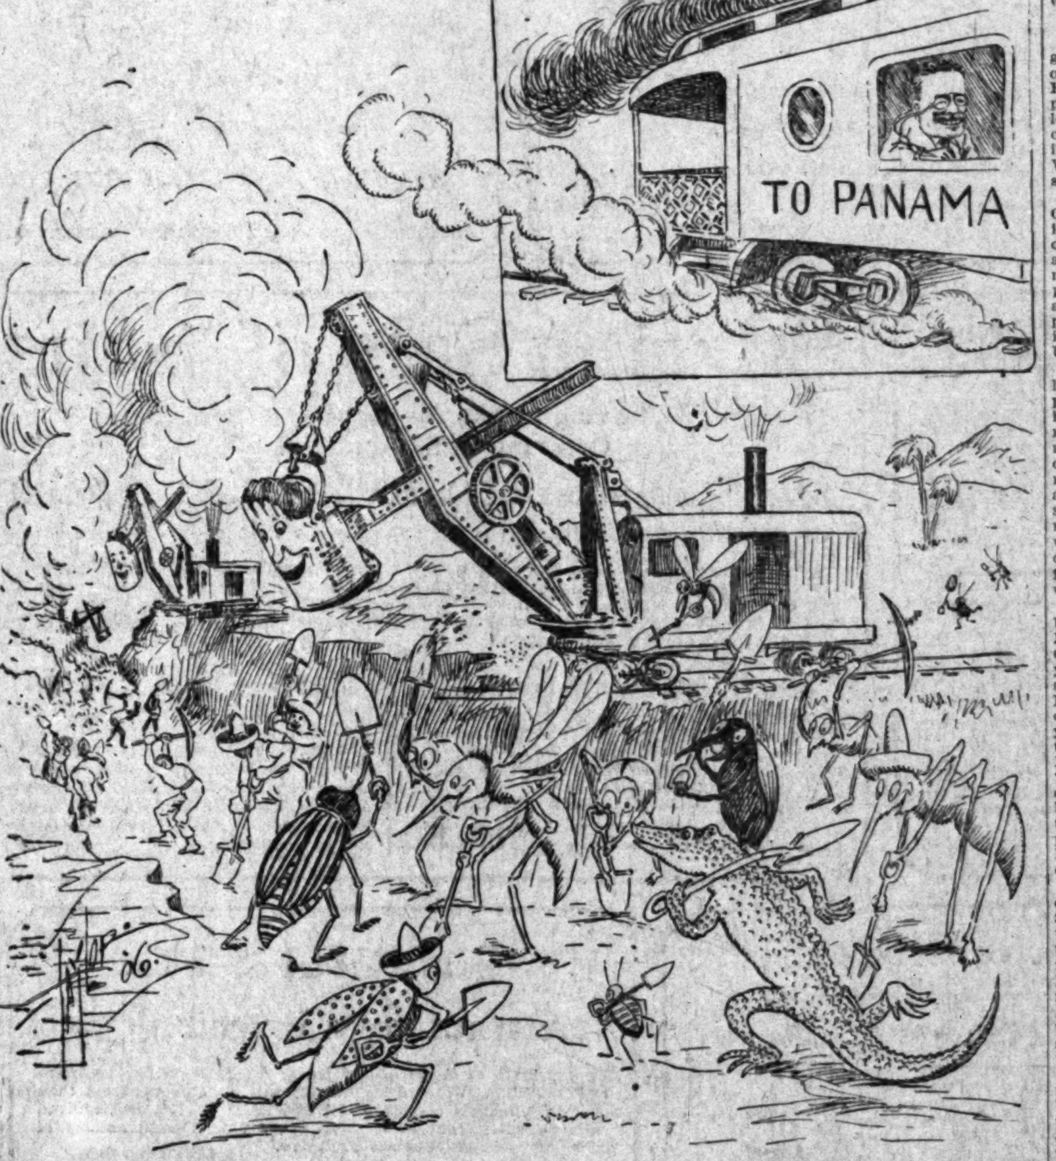
Who is the man of foresight? This State is Republican. This county and Congress district is a Republican Gibraltar. There is a future political day to dawn. There are other conventions to assemble and higher political honors to confer than that of being Mayor of Los Angeles. This honor is a great one, if the trust is greatly administered. But the Republican party in this State has brighter laurels than those surrounding the brow of a Mayor with which to crown her deserving sons. The one of these two gentlemen who shows the greatest self-forgetfulness of his own ambition and self-abnegation of his own present political interests is the man with the most foresight, and the one who will stand "in the way of political lightning" in future campaigns.

The interests of the public at this time are in jeopardy. Whichever one of these gentlemen can first and most clearly see his duty and will do it, will be adjudged the real winner, and worthy of higher honors in the future than the man who insists upon having his own way, gratifying his own personal ambition, clinging tenaciously to his own momentary political interests, and not recognizing the higher interests of the general public.

And the meddlers who, merely to satisfy personal grudges, selfish interests and insignificant fads, stand in the way of the consummation so devoutly wished by the great bulk of the city's business men and taxpayers—these are either lacking in common sense or would sell the city's welfare for a mess of pottage. Such men should arouse their patriotic instincts, if they have any, and let the interests of the whole people outweigh their whimsical notions and selfish schemes. The Times believes Dr. Lindley and Mr. Gates could quickly agree upon means to save the city from impending disaster, if these greedy and purblind obstructionists would step one side and leave the question to the arbitrament of Reason and Fair Play.

Messrs. Business Men and Property Holders, you who are lending yourselves to the scheme of the Labor Union Express (which worked for the election of the Labor Union party candidate for Governor) to place Stanley B. Wilson, strike-promoter, in the Mayor's chair—gentlemen, The Times can stand it if you can!

EVERYBODY'LL DIG.



"HOME SWEET HOME."

The only home that the man who wrote the song of "Home, Sweet Home," ever knew, is to be torn down, and a denominational meeting-house is to be erected in its place. God save us all, what a state of brutal ingratitude we are come to in this cold-blooded, materialistic age in which we live! A denominational meeting-house, to be sure, is a shrine where the soul may worship. But no church should replace the humble rooftree that sheltered John Howard Payne. No altar of marble or wood can be raised that could prove a more deserving shrine than the threshold of the cottage from which went forth the footsteps of the wanderer who sang the homesick song that lingers today on the lips of all the world.

"Home, Sweet Home"—song of the longing heart in every clime! Song of the wanderer, song of the mother who croons above her baby boy, song of the sailor on the wind-swept seas, and of the soldier on the eve of battle. Song of all songs, wrung from the heart of melody of him who never knew but that little home on Long Island which the vandals are now to raze to the ground.

Perhaps it does not matter. And yet it seems strange that in all the waste lands of East Hampton some spot could not have been found upon which to erect this church without destroying the home that inspired the song of songs. Only the people of the village will go to this church to pray. It will be a shrine for the infinitesimal population of the town. Yet, to lift a spire that could be builded on another spot as well, these Goths will tear down a structure that was and would forever be a place of worship for all the universe.

It may be said that time would at last crumble the rooftree in the dust, anyway. This is true, and being true, gives us all the more to think what a wonderful thing it was for John Howard Payne to make the song he made. It is such a simple ballad, such a simple lay, and yet it will never die. Dust are the swords of Marathon and Thermopylae, Blenheim and red Ramilies; the eagles of Austerlitz are but the vague memory of a bloody butcher's ambition; Balaklava, Gravelotte and Plevna, with all their dead captains, are passing into the dim forgetfulness of time. But the song of home—"Home, Home, Sweet Home"—it lives still, and it will ever live while one human heart beats and throbs.

Happy will be that day when monuments shall be builded not to the conquerors and to the brutal worship of Mars, but to the singers and the gentle souls that made music for the wandering steps of the sons of men.

HOW IS BUSINESS?

We have all been so deeply absorbed in politics for many weeks past and are in the same condition to such an extent at the present time that most of us probably lose sight of the great question, How is business?

It is all the better for the result of the elections that have just taken place. The verdict of the people has been that there is to be no disturbance of the conditions under which our present era of prosperity has been developed; and this being so, we have a highly reasonable hope that the same causes will continue to produce the same good effects. Had the election gone the other way, particularly in the States of New York, Massachusetts and California, undoubtedly the business equilibrium, not only of those three commonwealths, but of all the United States, would have been gravely disturbed. This would have been especially true if in addition to the three States named slipping away from their steadfast moorings the national Congress had been changed in its political complexion. All doubt of any change in our administration of public affairs being out of the way, the industries of the country will go along smoothly under the steady hand and confident courage of those who move the springs directing them.

Besides this stability in our political life, we have in the great crops the same conditions that have prevailed during the last five years. The leading crops upon which our agricultural prosperity depend are quite up to the average in all cases, and above the average in nearly all. Moreover, the demand abroad for the surplus of our cotton, corn, wheat and meat products is better than in several years past. The farmers are all realizing satisfactory prices for their products, and the exceeding great success which has lifted the farming population of the whole country to such a high level of well-being during the last six or seven years is to remain stable.

Those in control of the railroad interests of the country are planning extensions more wide in their scope and magnificently greater in their aggregation than ever heard of before. The orders placed with the rolling mills of the country insure the best possible activity during the whole of the coming year. These railroads have also given unheard-of orders for rolling stock and motive power with the various car shops and locomotive factories in all parts of the country.

The building trades all over the great cities of the United States were never busier than at present. Wages are higher than ever known before. Here in our own State the inflow of new population is in a fuller volume than even during the past three or four years. The railroads, in ninety days, while low rates were in force from the Middle West to the Coast, say they brought into California an aggregate of 70,000 new people. The hotels, railroads, and others interested in ascertaining probabilities for the winter all say that the tourist travel during the coming winter will be larger than ever before. Fear has been felt that the terrible disaster around the Bay of San Francisco last spring would deter thousands of people from coming to any part of the Pacific Coast this season. The catastrophe seems to have had no result at all. The widespread influence of the newspapers very soon made, the intelligent people of this country all understand the facts exactly as they were. They realize that the terrible visitation was purely local and that the rest of the Coast north and south of San Francisco and the territory immediately surrounding that country had been as unaffected as any place in the Middle West or on the Atlantic Coast. The disturbance existing at the present time in Cuba and the danger of its recrudescence will undoubtedly prevent the usual winter tourist movement to that semi-tropic island. Many who would have gone to the Pearl of the Antilles will undoubtedly seek our own sun-kissed country to pass the winter in our mild atmosphere.

This insures plenty of business for all the various interests of the country. The building trades will be kept busy and the merchants will all be taxed to meet the demands for all kinds of goods. The outlook is exceedingly bright for a continuance of the present conditions.

THE ELEMENTAL TONE.

Wind of the mountain night—
  Great spirit of the air—
Thou comest with a voice of might
  That bids the earth beware;

Weird and magic power
  Whose force the soul divines
Resounding through the worship-hour
  In organs of the pines.

Rain of the torrent-sky—
  The herald of the cloud—
On silver clarion echoes by
  Your music bold and proud.

Wave of the titan sea,
  Thou moanest on the shore
In one eternal threnody
  Beginning evermore.

Hark to the wind!—whose motion
  Is like the sea's refrain.
And hark!—that roar of ocean
  Is blended with the rain.

Out of the universal
  We hear one voice alone—
The wind and wave and rain have all
  The elemental tone.

RUBY ARCHER.

Some One Needed.

Among the most prosperous citizens of a certain Virginia town are two brothers, well along in years, who are engaged in the retail coal business.

In the early spring of this year a noted evangelist visited the town, and his fervid style of exhortation resulted in the conversion of many sinners, among whom was the elder member of the firm mentioned.

For weeks after his conversion the brother who had lately "got religion" endeavored to persuade the other to join church, but whenever the subject was broached the younger man waived consideration thereof, absolutely declining to discuss the matter. One day, when the elder brother was making another effort to convince the erring one of his mistake, he asked:

"Why can't you, Richard, join church as I did?"

"It's all right for you to be a member of the church," replied Richard, "but if I join, who's going to weigh the coal?"

Clothes Made of Glass.

A Venetian glass manufacturer is turning out glass hats for women, the grass cloth of which they are composed having the shimmer and brilliancy of color possessed by silk. No water can penetrate this cloth.

A peculiarly strong and light material for clothing is found in the paper used by the Japanse for underclothes. It is a thin, finely crisped or grained paper, and the clothing is sewed and hemmed as if it were of cloth. It makes a garment strong and exceedingly flexible.

A French officer has been making reports to his government on the testing of this material, and asserts that it is particularly light and tough. When an effort is made to tear it by hand it offers almost as much resistance as does the thin skin used in glove-making. Even when wet the paper is hard to tear.

"Aunt Hepsey" Cottle, aged 98, who came through the San Francisco earthquake without the quiver of a nerve, is now back East taking century runs in an automobile. A California woman is only as old as she feels, and "Aunt Hepsey" is yet a mere girl in her teens.

A STEP TOWARD CONSOLIDATION.

Careful consideration of all factors in the problem of city and county consolidation leads to the conclusion that annexation of the strip of territory connecting Los Angeles with San Pedro and Wilmington is a step toward the ultimate goal that should be taken at this time.

There are compelling reasons for adopting the plan as it has been presented, regardless of individual opinion concerning its details. The strip might have been made wider with advantage to the territory affected, and it is quite possible that the reasons impelling the Chamber of Commerce committee to fix the lines as they stand were largely imaginary, but the cure for defects of that nature is simple and may be applied later. There is no time now to modify the plan. It is important to make Los Angeles and the harbor towns contiguous now, before obstacles to ultimate consolidation can be interposed, as they will be if opportunity is given to the Southern Pacific and the few cantankerous Long Beach obstructionists to get in their work.

The progressive, far-sighted people of Wilmington and San Pedro realize that the harbor of San Pedro is really the port and gateway of Los Angeles, and that it will not be developed to its full possibilities until the influence and prestige of the larger city are brought to bear in its behalf. Unless Los Angeles has part in the control of the harbor, the full influence of the commercial interests of the city cannot be invoked to secure adequate improvement.

There are a few mentally near-sighted persons who imagine that because the harbor bears the name of San Pedro, it belongs exclusively and in fee simple to that town, and they are "jealous of their harbor" and sit up nights to worry lest Los Angeles rape from them the privilege of playing skittles with wharf franchises and swapping water front for back lots. But statesmen of that caliber are few in number, and San Pedro has recently sent them to the rear. It is believed by the leading business men of San Pedro that a majority of the citizens are in favor of union with Los Angeles, notwithstanding the fact that San Pedro is preparing a freeholders' charter.

In apportioning money for harbor improvements, Congress considers the volume of commercial transactions of the city applying for appropriations, and that consideration actually determines the apportionment. Where San Pedro could get an appropriation of a million, the city of Los Angeles could get ten millions for harbor construction.

When the harbor is actually the water front of the city of Los Angeles and under its control, with assurance that wharf franchises will not be frittered away and corporations will not be permitted to monopolize the benefits of government expenditures, Congress will be disposed to make adequate appropriations for the construction of a great free harbor on the Coast of Southern California. Mere statement of the case is all the argument required to convince the men who are doing things in this country of the necessity of consolidation.

The necessity for immediate action in the line of annexation arises from the steps taken by San Pedro toward the status of a freeholders' chartered city. In less than ninety days a charter may be adopted, and when ratified by the Legislature it will block consolidation for years. Annexation of the strip will make Los Angeles, San Pedro and Wilmington contiguous, and they may then consolidate immediately without legislative action if their citizens so desire and vote so to do.

There are no objections to annexation worth a moment's consideration by any citizen of Southern California in the face of the great public benefit to be secured by extension of the limits of the city of Los Angeles to the water front. No individual worthy of citizenship in this community will permit considerations of temporary private interest to influence his opinion on this question of paramount public importance to control his action. Los Angeles needs the harbor, and the harbor needs Los Angeles. United, they will make this a city from the mountains to the sea, the greatest city of the Pacific Coast.

Annexation of the strip is a necessary step toward realization of the great possibilities lying before the people of Southern California, and The Times earnestly advises every citizen who has a voice in the matter to go to the polls next Monday and cast a vote in favor of annexation. It is infinitely more important to insure the completion of a free harbor than to elect any man to office.

"Lee Gates, our next Mayor," says the cocksure and Democratic Express, famous for its political acumen. A few days ago it was "Theodore A. Bell, our next Governor."

When Schmitz first bobbed up as a candidate for Mayor of San Francisco the wiseacres of the Express type refused to take him seriously. What was the result?

THE "CURLY BOSS" HAS HOPES.

Abe Ruef—although three of the four candidates for Superior Court judgeships whom he had chosen to be his puppets failed of election—still professes to be confident that he will succeed in ousting Dist.-Atty. Langdon and Asst. Dist.-Atty. Heney. His latest claim is that the last provision of Amendment No. 2, adopted by popular vote at Tuesday's election, confirms the power of the Mayor and Board of Supervisors to remove the District Attorney. The clause of the amendment referred to provides that "in the case of any officer or employé of any municipality governed under a legally adopted charter, the provisions of such charter, with reference to the tenure of office or the dismissal from office of any such officer or employé shall control." Ruef declares that "the amendment disposes absolutely of every question concerning the right of the Chief Executive, through authority of the city charter, to dismiss any officer or employé of the administration;" and that "the law is aimed to apply to the so-called county officers, of which the District Attorney is one." He declares that "acting Mayor Gallagher and the Board of Supervisors cannot be prevented from removing an official who has been negligent, and has otherwise failed to perform his duty properly."

The question has been raised whether the office of District Attorney (which Ruef acknowledges to be "a so-called county office,") is under the jurisdiction of the city or the county. Asst. Dist.-Atty. Heney is quoted as saying that "the amendment has to do with city affairs and does not refer to county officials." It is difficult to see what basis there is for this contention, inasmuch as the city and county of San Francisco are consolidated, and the affairs of both are administered as one government, the City Council and the Board of Supervisors being one and the same body.

On technical grounds, Ruef and his creatures, the Supervisors, may gain a temporary advantage, even to the extent of placing Ruef in the office of District Attorney. But it is absurd to suppose that the grave crimes of which Ruef and his satellites are accused can be so covered up by technicalities as permanently to defeat the ends of justice. If they are guilty, and the evidence against them is conclusive, as is confidently claimed by Prosecutor Heney, some way will surely be found to reach the malefactors. In case Ruef should succeed in ousting Dist.-Atty. Langdon and having himself placed in charge of the office, Atty.-Gen. Webb of the State administration would at once take up the charges against Ruef and his associates. In the meantime, the courts would doubtless restrain Ruef from exercising the functions of District Attorney; for it would manifestly be improper for him to act in the capacity of public prosecutor while grave criminal charges were pending against him. Justice may be hoodwinked for a time, but it is relentless in its final punishments.

THE CANDIDATES AND THE SORDID MEDDLERS.

There are four candidates in the field for the Mayoralty. It needs no foresight to declare that the vote will fall short of 40,000. This being the case, it is quite possible that 10,000 votes might elect a Mayor. One of the candidates, who should be truly characterized as a labor-unionite Socialist, although he may call himself by any other name, if elected to the office of Mayor, would introduce into our municipal life an element as dangerous, dishonest and fatal as the Schmitz gang has proven in San Francisco. The Democratic nominee is a gentleman of high standing in the community. He is a man of considerable experience in affairs, but none in public life. The great danger in Mr. Harper's case is in his surroundings. While there are great numbers of very intelligent and thoroughly right-minded citizens who will vote for the Democratic nominee for the office of Mayor, there is a preponderating weight of influence around him which certainly is not entitled to be called either intelligent or high-minded. How far he would be able to resist the influences of this rabble it is difficult to foresee. He stands upon a false platform, one in which he probably does not believe. Whether he believes it or not, he is in the same position that Theodore Bell stood in when he accepted the nomination of the Union Labor party. The plank in the Democratic platform referred to is public ownership in a wholesale way of public and semi-public utilities—which means revolution.

There remain two Republican candidates seeking the office of Mayor, and in this competition, with the division of the more just-minded mass of the citizens, lies the great danger. If either of these gentlemen can be elected, it must be largely, almost entirely, by Republican votes. That the party strength can be split in two and either of them be elected is impossible. Neither of them will draw any very great amount of strength from outside the Republican party. If you listen to the four candidates, and to the managers, you will be told that all four of them are cock-sure of election. Now, of course, in three cases this guess must be wrong.

Now either Dr. Walter Lindley or Lee C. Gates would unquestionably give this city a thoroughly satisfactory administration if elected to the office of Mayor. But with the two in the field The Times sees the disruption of the party strength, with the resulting effect of electing a Labor Union or Democratic Mayor, with the "wide-open," strike-promoting, trouble-breeding elements of the population around him, clamoring for everything that is unfair, unjust and likely to fundamentally upset our conditions of prosperity.

What is to be done? Just one thing. One or the other of these competing Republican candidates should get out of the way. It is a problem for the two gentlemen personally. Their managers on each side would probably prove much more obdurate than the candidates themselves. The two nominees should get together, grasp each other's hands, look each other straight in the eye, and arrive at some way to decide which of them shall make the sacrifice.

Who is the man of foresight? This State is Republican. This county and Congress district is a Republican Gibraltar. There is a future political day to dawn. There are other conventions to assemble and higher political honors to confer than that of being Mayor of Los Angeles. This honor is a great one, if the trust is greatly administered. But the Republican party in this State has brighter laurels than those surrounding the brow of a Mayor with which to crown her deserving sons. The one of these two gentlemen who shows the greatest self-forgetfulness of his own ambition and self-abnegation of his own present political interests is the man with the most foresight, and the one who will stand "in the way of political lightning" in future campaigns.

The interests of the public at this time are in jeopardy. Whichever one of these gentlemen can first and most clearly see his duty and will do it, will be adjudged the real winner, and worthy of higher honors in the future than the man who insists upon having his own way, gratifying his own personal ambition, clinging tenaciously to his own momentary political interests, and not recognizing the higher interests of the general public.

And the meddlers who, merely to satisfy personal grudges, selfish interests and insignificant fads, stand in the way of the consummation so devoutly wished by the great bulk of the city's business men and taxpayers—these are either lacking in common sense or would sell the city's welfare for a mess of pottage. Such men should arouse their patriotic instincts, if they have any, and let the interests of the whole people outweigh their whimsical notions and selfish schemes. The Times believes Dr. Lindley and Mr. Gates could quickly agree upon means to save the city from impending disaster, if these greedy and purblind obstructionists would step one side and leave the question to the arbitrament of Reason and Fair Play.

Messrs. Business Men and Property Holders, you who are lending yourselves to the scheme of the Labor Union Express (which worked for the election of the Labor Union party candidate for Governor) to place Stanley B. Wilson, strike-promoter, in the Mayor's chair—gentlemen, The Times can stand it if you can!

"HOME SWEET HOME."

The only home that the man who wrote the song of "Home, Sweet Home," ever knew, is to be torn down, and a denominational meeting-house is to be erected in its place. God save us all, what a state of brutal ingratitude we are come to in this cold-blooded, materialistic age in which we live! A denominational meeting-house, to be sure, is a shrine where the soul may worship. But no church should replace the humble rooftree that sheltered John Howard Payne. No altar of marble or wood can be raised that could prove a more deserving shrine than the threshold of the cottage from which went forth the footsteps of the wanderer who sang the homesick song that lingers today on the lips of all the world.

"Home, Sweet Home"—song of the longing heart in every clime! Song of the wanderer, song of the mother who croons above her baby boy, song of the sailor on the wind-swept seas, and of the soldier on the eve of battle. Song of all songs, wrung from the heart of melody of him who never knew but that little home on Long Island which the vandals are now to raze to the ground.

Perhaps it does not matter. And yet it seems strange that in all the waste lands of East Hampton some spot could not have been found upon which to erect this church without destroying the home that inspired the song of songs. Only the people of the village will go to this church to pray. It will be a shrine for the infinitesimal population of the town. Yet, to lift a spire that could be builded on another spot as well, these Goths will tear down a structure that was and would forever be a place of worship for all the universe.

It may be said that time would at last crumble the rooftree in the dust, anyway. This is true, and being true, gives us all the more to think what a wonderful thing it was for John Howard Payne to make the song he made. It is such a simple ballad, such a simple lay, and yet it will never die. Dust are the swords of Marathon and Thermopylae, Blenheim and red Ramilies; the eagles of Austerlitz are but the vague memory of a bloody butcher's ambition; Balaklava, Gravelotte and Plevna, with all their dead captains, are passing into the dim forgetfulness of time. But the song of home—"Home, Home, Sweet Home"—it lives still, and it will ever live while one human heart beats and throbs.

Happy will be that day when monuments shall be builded not to the conquerors and to the brutal worship of Mars, but to the singers and the gentle souls that made music for the wandering steps of the sons of men.

HOW IS BUSINESS?

We have all been so deeply absorbed in politics for many weeks past and are in the same condition to such an extent at the present time that most of us probably lose sight of the great question, How is business?

It is all the better for the result of the elections that have just taken place. The verdict of the people has been that there is to be no disturbance of the conditions under which our present era of prosperity has been developed; and this being so, we have a highly reasonable hope that the same causes will continue to produce the same good effects. Had the election gone the other way, particularly in the States of New York, Massachusetts and California, undoubtedly the business equilibrium, not only of those three commonwealths, but of all the United States, would have been gravely disturbed. This would have been especially true if in addition to the three States named slipping away from their steadfast moorings the national Congress had been changed in its political complexion. All doubt of any change in our administration of public affairs being out of the way, the industries of the country will go along smoothly under the steady hand and confident courage of those who move the springs directing them.

Besides this stability in our political life, we have in the great crops the same conditions that have prevailed during the last five years. The leading crops upon which our agricultural prosperity depend are quite up to the average in all cases, and above the average in nearly all. Moreover, the demand abroad for the surplus of our cotton, corn, wheat and meat products is better than in several years past. The farmers are all realizing satisfactory prices for their products, and the exceeding great success which has lifted the farming population of the whole country to such a high level of well-being during the last six or seven years is to remain stable.

Those in control of the railroad interests of the country are planning extensions more wide in their scope and magnificently greater in their aggregation than ever heard of before. The orders placed with the rolling mills of the country insure the best possible activity during the whole of the coming year. These railroads have also given unheard-of orders for rolling stock and motive power with the various car shops and locomotive factories in all parts of the country.

The building trades all over the great cities of the United States were never busier than at present. Wages are higher than ever known before. Here in our own State the inflow of new population is in a fuller volume than even during the past three or four years. The railroads, in ninety days, while low rates were in force from the Middle West to the Coast, say they brought into California an aggregate of 70,000 new people. The hotels, railroads, and others interested in ascertaining probabilities for the winter all say that the tourist travel during the coming winter will be larger than ever before. Fear has been felt that the terrible disaster around the Bay of San Francisco last spring would deter thousands of people from coming to any part of the Pacific Coast this season. The catastrophe seems to have had no result at all. The widespread influence of the newspapers very soon made the intelligent people of this country all understand the facts exactly as they were. They realize that the terrible visitation was purely local and that the rest of the Coast north and south of San Francisco and the territory immediately surrounding that country had been as unaffected as any place in the Middle West or on the Atlantic Coast. The disturbance existing at the present time in Cuba and the danger of its recrudescence will undoubtedly prevent the usual winter tourist movement to that semi-tropic island. Many who would have gone to the Pearl of the Antilles will undoubtedly seek our own sun-kissed country to pass the winter in our mild atmosphere.

This insures plenty of business for all the various interests of the country. The building trades will be kept busy and the merchants will all be taxed to meet the demands for all kinds of goods. The outlook is exceedingly bright for a continuance of the present conditions.

THE ELEMENTAL TONE.

Wind of the mountain night—
Great spirit of the air—
Thou comest with a voice of might
That bids the earth beware;

Weird and magic power
Whose force the soul divines
Resounding through the worship-hour
In organs of the pines.

Rain of the torrent-sky—
The herald of the cloud—
On silver clarion echoes by
Your music bold and proud.

Wave of the titan sea,
Thou moanest on the shore
In one eternal threnody
Beginning evermore.

Hark to the wind!—whose motion
Is like the sea's refrain.
And hark!—that roar of ocean
Is blended with the rain.

Out of the universal
We hear one voice alone—
The wind and wave and rain have all
The elemental tone.

RUBY ARCHER.

Some One Needed.

Among the most prosperous citizens of a certain Virginia town are two brothers, well along in years, who are engaged in the retail coal business.

In the early spring of this year a noted evangelist visited the town, and his fervid style of exhortation resulted in the conversion of many sinners, among whom was the elder member of the firm mentioned.

For weeks after his conversion the brother who had lately "got religion" endeavored to persuade the other to join church, but whenever the subject was broached the younger man waived consideration thereof, absolutely declining to discuss the matter. One day, when the elder brother was making another effort to convince the erring one of his mistake, he asked:

"Why can't you, Richard, join church as I did?"

"It's all right for you to be a member of the church," replied Richard, "but if I join, who's going to weigh the coal?"

Clothes Made of Glass.

A Venetian glass manufacturer is turning out glass hats for women, the grass cloth of which they are composed having the shimmer and brilliancy of color possessed by silk. No water can penetrate this cloth.

A peculiarly strong and light material for clothing is found in the paper used by the Japanse for underclothes. It is a thin, finely crisped or grained paper, and the clothing is sewed and hemmed as if it were of cloth. It makes a garment strong and exceedingly flexible.

A French officer has been making reports to his government on the testing of this material, and asserts that it is particularly light and tough. When an effort is made to tear it by hand it offers almost as much resistance as does the thin skin used in glove-making. Even when wet the paper is hard to tear.

A Missionary of Misrule.

What does Pinhead McCarthy expect to do in Los Angeles? I call him "Pinhead" because I never have seen his other name in print, and don't know what it is, but it may not fit him exactly. He seems to have head enough to keep his job as leader of a turbulent gang of San Francisco toughs and to handle the votes of the labor-union element; so he cannot be altogether a fool. It is not well for Los Angeles to judge the fellow by his nickname and assume that he is not worth noticing. Probably he is keen enough to see that division in the ranks of good citizenship in Los Angeles is the opportunity for his crowd to slip into power and gain control of this city, as it captured San Francisco.

It is a rank impertinence for a San Francisco jawsmith to come down here and meddle with our affairs, but telling him so won't deter him from whatever he has in mind to do. Mr. McCarthy is the sort of man that is not amenable to criticism of that nature. The people with whom he deals conduct debates with coupling pins and close an argument with clubs, and it would be idle to present to him reasons proving that the Los Angeles city campaign is none of his business.

McCarthy represents the maleficent forces that have made San Francisco a welter of misrule and corruption. He and his followers placed Schmitz and Ruef in the seats of the mighty and gave San Francisco over to pillage and political rapine. The dominance of the criminal element in the labor unions has ruined the industrial life of the city, doubled the damage of fire and earthquake, and made the rebuilding of San Francisco a dubious problem. McCarthy and his gang have ruined one city, and now they seek to ruin Los Angeles.

San Francisco is a worked-out claim for grafters and labor-union hold-ups. Schmitz has fled to Europe with a million of loot, and Ruef is desperately squirming to keep out of the penitentiary because he was too swollen with conceit to recognize the signs of coming wrath and fly with the fiddler before the storm. Los Angeles, the chief city of the Pacific Coast, growing by leaps and bounds, humming with industry and offering employment to thousands upon thousands in the building trades, is a rich field for the walking delegate grafter and his kind. The mouths of the wolves slaver as they look upon the fat prize.

Let McCarthy get a foothold here and a hand-grip upon the City Hall, and Los Angeles will have to fight for its civic and industrial life. It is the business of the good citizens of Los Angeles to keep an eye upon the missionary of misrule from San Francisco, and see that he does not slip a Schmitz into the City Hall to do the bidding of his ruffian crew under the pretense of "encouraging labor."

This will square them with the acting Mayor, who was thrown out of a choice seat at a prize fight because a fresh cop took him for a butt in bum and called him a big stiff.

Sensation after sensation occurs in the police department, and it is hourly expected that the boss will fire the Chief on the ground that he is too friendly with the underworld, to wit, one "Kid" Sullivan, a famous "dip," but in reality to get a color tone of reform. Ruef openly controls the police, has them draw up a la military whenever he appears, and he laughs at Chief Dinan's complaint that some wicked crooks from Seattle and other seaports have invaded us. Just at present "The Finest" are worried over a score of dismissals for drinking soda water and being too old, and the whole force was thrown into a great stew because a commissioner had lost his poodle dog, and the detectives, as usual, could not detect it.

The Supervisors, who are working overtime, are coming in for their share of the journalistic persecution which is singling out officials who are only trying to protect the poor from the rich, and in order to find out the plots of the wealthy, are trying to get in that class themselves. One day we read that a Supervisor has skiddooed; another day that one has confessed, and then to cap the climax, we are gravely told that they intend to buy Spring Valley, possibly to keep that soulless corporation from corrupting officials in the future. The week's results for the Supervisors were small, and consisted of closing Ocean avenue at the behest of a realty company. Better things are hoped for when the Geary-street road is changed into a trolley line.

Street-railway arbitration is so slow and the traveling public is suffering so much in the meantime that many wish for the old cable lines again, and they wonder why the United Railways would not let Citizen E. P. E. Troy visit their plant. While the differences between the company and its employés are acute, and still under tedious submission, it is a 10-to-1 shot that a passenger will not reach his destination on time, if he reaches it at all. Somebody is to blame and the buck is passed at a lively rate between the company and the men. A further complication occurs in the appeal of the corporation from the decision of a police judge fining it the paltry sum of $500 for running fenderless cars.

A pleasant little lunch between Cabinet Minister Metcalf and Japanese Consul Uyeda has settled our modus vivendi with Japan, and there is no immediate fear of Togo's fleet knocking at the Golden Gate to ask if a brother-in-law of Boss Ruef will not kindly permit ninety-three Jap children to learn "readin, ritin' and rithmetic" in our schools.

The parks, public places and cheap lodging-houses are no longer conspicuous of centers of infection. Even better results are attainable. If laws were made and enforced requiring all cases where proper sanitation is impossible to be treated at public expense, or by private charities, the dangers could be still further reduced.

As a matter of fact it is found that tuberculosis patients do not go into a charitable institution except a last resort. The Settlement rarely has more than 50 per cent. of its accommodations filled.

All this aside from the inhumanity of neglecting the fearful destitution and suffering with which the West is full, because, forsooth, "others might come!" Away with the effrontery of an opposition that comes in most cases from former sufferers from the same disease, or from the families of those who have suffered.

All honor to the leaders of the fight for humanity in Pasadena and success to them.

Cruiser Newmark to Be Used by New York State for Training of Its Militiamen.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—The protected cruiser Newark was put out of commission in the Brooklyn navy yard yesterday preliminary to her being put into the hands of the New York State authorities. The Newark is to be used by the State for the training of naval militiamen. She is by far the finest ship ever loaned to a State for such a purpose.

The Newark is a steel vessel of 4098 tons displacement. She has twin screws, 8869 indicated horse power, and has twelve guns in her main battery.

Jewel Stoves and Ranges

"Detroit Jewel"

use the name "Jewel" to get the people's money by appropriating the reputation of the

"Detroit Jewel"

If Uncle Sam's money was no go there would be no counterfeiters making that money, and on account of the great reputation of the Detroit Jewels some irresponsible dealers of this city would have you believe their imitation is the Genuine Jewel. Here is our proof:

A WORD OF WARNING

TRADE JEWEL STOVES AND RANGES MARK

Exclusive use of the name "Jewel," as applied to stoves and ranges, was guaranteed to us by United States Letters Patent, No. 4964, dated July 31st, 1877, and No. 6435, dated August 6th, 1878, renewed as No. 29707 and 29708, the name "Jewel" having been used by us years before and continually ever since.

For many years the Detroit Stove Works has identified its wares by casting upon every stove and range of its manufacture the well known "Jewel" trade-mark, which is pictured above. It is known as a mark of quality and economy, and constitutes a protection to stove buyers as well as to our own good name.

Notwithstanding these facts, and without our sanction, some stove manufacturers have temporarily appropriated the name "Jewel," using it generally with prefixes, or affixes, thus attempting to trade upon our name and world-wide reputation. The public should take warning and not be deceived. All genuine "Jewel" stoves and ranges have, in addition to the above well known trade-mark, the maker's name, "Detroit Stove Works," cast upon them. As an additional precaution on gas ranges we have prefixed the word "Detroit" to the name "Jewel."

THE PUBLIC SERVICE.

SUMMARY OF THE DAY.

The Board of Public Works will appoint Earl T. Easley as inspector of garbage collections, and will thus fill a position which has been vacant for eight months.

City Engineer Hamlin says that the pumps will be able to reduce the water flow in Section 3 of the new outfall sewer, so that work can be carried on without unusual inconvenience. No bids have been received, and it is possible the city will have to carry on the work of completion by day labor.

Dist.-Atty. Fredericks' attention has been called to the danger that exists in dangling electric wires, and he purposes to find out whether there is criminal negligence on the part of companies owning the wires.

Detective J. J. Hawley and his wife each claim a lot upon which $3000 has been awarded in the condemnation proceedings of the Salt Lake Road. Judge York yesterday advised them to settle out of court.

C. F. McPherson, who was convicted of appropriating lots which had reverted to the State for taxes, was sentenced yesterday to ten years at San Quentin. He appealed.

In Judge Smith's Court Pablo Moreno was acquitted of the charge of having murdered Pablo Civala.

AT THE CITY HALL.

CITY OFFICE LONG VACANT.

APPOINTMENT OF INSPECTOR OF GARBAGE COLLECTION.

Easley to Get the Position Formerly Held by Fred Sanborn—Police Commission's Secret Session Results in Decision to Weed Out Incompetent Officers.

Here's a surprise. An office under the city administration has gone unfilled for eight months. Only yesterday were formal steps taken to force the office upon a man. The forcing will be successful.

Earl A. Easley will be appointed by the Board of Public Works to the position of inspector of garbage collections, with a salary of $110 a month, which includes the "keep" of a horse. The appointment will be made during the ensuing week.

Easley is employed in the office of the inspector of buildings. Members of the Board of Public Works say he has wide knowledge of garbage conditions and is especially well equipped for the place of inspector.

The Board of Health Friday night indorsed the plan of the public works board to fill this position, which was originally under its own supervision.

The position was created long ago, and was formerly filled by Fred Sanborn. In the course of time Sanborn drifted into a fat political job at Sacramento, and vacated the position of inspector. For a month or so it was filled by a deputy of the Health Office, and then came the transfer of the whole garbage collection business to the Board of Public Works, when that body was instituted.

As the city itself then undertook the garbage and there were no contractors to check up on, the office has gone unfilled up to the present time; but now the board desires a man to stir up the people to better methods of preparing the garbage for collection, and to see that proper receptacles are used, and that they are properly cleansed. He will also map out new collection routes and be of materal assistanc routes and, be of material assistance to the garbage collecton department.

DEMAND HELD UP.

VOTING MACHINE TROUBLES.

Held up in the office of the City Treasurer at the request of Mayor McAleer is th demand for $36,400 for the fifty-two voting machines furnished the city by the United States Voting Machine Company.

The demand bears the rubber stamp signature of the Mayor. The City Attorney several months ago gave the opinion that demands signed with a rubber stamp are neither regular nor legal, and his advice was that such demands should not be paid.

Mayor McAleer yesterday afternoon refused to state how it happens that the demand for this large amount bears his rubber stamp signature.

"The demand was held up by City Treasurer Workman at my own request," he said. "I do not care to discuss the matter at all at present. I expect to take some definite action on it on Monday."

These voting machines have been a source of perplexity to the city officials ever since they arrived in Los Angeles. They were hailed with delight, as a solution of the problem of heavy labor on elections; but it soon proved that in frequent cases the machines cannot be used, as they have not sufficient space to record all the tickets in the field.

At last Monday's meeting of the City Council one of the Councilmen made the motion that the City Clerk be instructed to turn back all the machines to the manufacturers at whatever price could be obained for them. This failed of a second.

It was shown that it costs the city $1.50 per month to store each machine, and that their transporation to the polling place costs $5 each. The charge is also made that the same machines which were sold to this city for $700 each were sold to the city of Detroit for $500.

Section No. 3 Prospects.

It is possible that the city will have to undertake the finishing of the outfall sewer by day labor. The time for receiving bids for the completion of Section No. 3—the water-bearing lands which were abandoned by Stansbury & Powell—expires November 19, and so far not a single bid has been received, nor has there been any indication that bids will be filed.

The Board of Public Works took the precaution to advertise for bids in prominent engineering and construction journals of the East and Middle West, but there has not even been an application from firms in those territories for the plans and specifications.

City Engineer Hamlin is highly pleased with the results obtained in lowering the water flow by the use of pumps, and he declares he is confident that the pumps will be able to keep the water down so that work can progress without unusual difficulty.

Coroner's Chief Deputy.

Coroner-elect Lanterman yesterday announced that he has selected Clyde M. Sage to act as his chief deputy. Sage for the past nine years has been chief deputy in the office of the City Tax Collector, and is one of the most popular deputies in the City Hall. His duties in the new position will begin about the middle of January.

Nominees Withdraw.

W. D. Stephens and W. J. Washburn have filed with the City Clerk their withdrawals from the Republican ticket as nominees for members of the Board of Education. This will require the filling of their places by the Republican Central Committee before November 14.

Street Improvements.

Property owners on Norfolk street have petitioned for its improvement between Griffith avenue and Eastlake avenue. Property owners on Matthews street want the grade of that street, between Fourth and Sixth streets, changed so as to conform to the natural watershed. They have petitioned the City Council for this change.

AT THE COURTHOUSE.

TO INVESTIGATE HANGING WIRES.

IS THERE NEGLIGENCE ON PART OF COMPANIES?

District Attorney Fredericks Wants to Know—His Attention Called to Matter by Recent Death of Boy on Elevenh Street—Is Break Indicated in Power-houses?

Dist.-Atty. Fredericks is to set on foot an investigation to discover whether car and electric light companies are criminally negligent in leaving broken live wires dangling down on the street. The proposed investigation is inspired by the case of young W. F. Flannery, who lived at 1042½ Union avenue, and who was killed by coming in contact with a live wire that was hanging down on Eleventh street. The accident happened at 10:15 o'clock in the morning and the wire had been hanging since 7 o'clock; so alleged witnesses state.

The District Attorney wants to know whether the breaking of a wire so affects the system as to indicate in the power-house that there is a break or whether the companies are dependent upon the good offices of any casual passer-by to make a report.

HUSBAND CLAIMS LOT.

AND SO DOES MRS. HAWLEY.

In the condemnation proceedings of the Salt Lake road against the property owners on Myers street, $3000 was awarded to the owners of lot 17, which stands in the name of Mrs. Mary A. Hawley. Mrs. Hawley is the wife of City Detective J. J. Hawley, but a separation took place some time ago. Mrs. Hawley claims the property as her separate property, while the husband claims it is community property and paid for altogether by him. He desires to get his share for the benefit of the children.

Mr. and Mrs. Hawley were in Judge York's court yesterday to settle the matter. Ex-Chief of Police Auble, who is a friend of both of them and has tried to bring them together again, came into court with Mrs. Hawley. The judge advised that the dispute be settled out of court, but indicated his opinion that, from the terms of the deed, he thought the lot was the separate property of the wife.

TEN-YEAR SENTENCE.

M'PHERSON TO APPEAL.

C. F. McPherson, who was convicted of forging deeds to certain city property, was sentenced yesterday by Judge Smith to serve ten years at San Quentin.

The defendant's counsel interposed a motion for a new trial but was overruled, and then a motion in arrest of judgment was argued but that also was denied. But as soon as sentence was passed, notice of an appeal to the Su[illegible] Court was filed, and a writ o[illegible]le cause being issued, Mc[illegible]erson will remain in the County [illegible] pending the appeal.

McPherson's crime was appropriating lots which had reverted to the State for taxes and disposing of them by [illegible] deeds.

JURY DISAGREES.

THEN ACQUITS MORENO.

Pablo Moreno was acquitted of the charge of having murdered Pablo Civala by the jury in Judge Smith's court yesterday.

After the jury had been out some time, the foreman reported a disagreement. Judge Smith, while not instructing them to acquit the defendant, advised them to do so and a verdict of acquittal was presently returned.

COURTHOUSE NOTES.

BREVITIES MISCELLANEOUS.

SENT TO PATTON. Mrs. James Johnson was yesterday committed to the State Hospital at Patton by Judge Gibbs. The woman imagines that she has sworn falsely against some one, and that some man is chasing her. Mrs. Johnson has lived at No. 338½ East First street and her condition is supposed to have been brought about by taking morphine.

HUSBAND LOVED LIQUOR. Mrs. Marie Sweet-Baker was granted a divorce from Col. F. Baker by Judge James yesterday on the ground of habitual intemperance. Mrs. Baker was a Boston woman when the colonel met her, and he, at that time, held a commission in the regular army. He developed an inordinate fondness for liquor, lost all his money, and finally threatened to shoot his wife. She left him and came to Los Angeles.

SCANDALIZED HER. Charles Fanetti and Honorine Fanetti have begun suit to recover $5000 as damages from Giavani Bozzatti. It is alleged that on September 17 Bozzatti scandalized and ridiculed Mrs. Fanetti in the most shameful way. Giulio Martina and Giulio Domenco are claimed to have heard the derogatory statements of Fanetti.

YOUNGBLOOD DIVORCE. George W. Youngblood was granted a divorce from Estelle B. Youngblood, on the ground of desertion. The parties were married in New York State in May 1883, there being two children, nineteen and fifteen years old, respectively. In December, 1904, the wife left her home.

TWO CRUELTY CASES. Lucy McDonald Burton was divorced yesterday from William W. Burton, on the ground of cruelty which had its foundation in habitual intemperance, and Glennie C. Piercy was divorced from Charles G. Piercy, also on the ground of cruelty.

DAMAGES FOR WIFE. Domenico Pecetto of Las Vegas is claiming $40,000 as damages from G. F. Mills, on the ground that the latter robbed him of his wife.

GLACIER AT NEW YORK.

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—The United States supply steamer Glacier, which towed the big dry dock Dewey to Manila, arrived here today. Owing to the arduous duty incurred in the service, the Glacier's crew was given some leisure on her homeward trip and after leaving Manila, the Glacier stopped at Singapore, Colombo, Port Said, Joppa, Athens Naples and Gibraltar.

FRUIT MARKET IS IMPROVING.

STEADY INCREASE IN EASTERN DEMAND REPORTED.

Four Cars of California Valencia Lates Bring Excellent Figures at Auction—Florida, Jamaica and Porto Rico Oranges Now Bringing Better Prices.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—November has opened with active trading in Florida oranges, and with considerable interest in Jamaicas. The market has ruled firm on all desirable qualities, and sales have increased perceptibly during the past two weeks, and especially during the past week. The holiday incident to election created some disturbance in the market, but it was not serious, and under the influence of good weather, there will be little injurious result from it. Holidays are not liked by the fruit trade here. It is essential that there be no reduction in movement. If there is, the market suffers severely and losses are certain to follow.

The general tendency of Florida oranges last week was upward. Conditions improved, and there was a steady increase of demand. Sales at the auctions, from store and from retail distributors were all heavier and business was done, consequently, at better prices. Under these circumstances receivers of Florida oranges are jubilant, and are confidently expecting a good, active market throughout the season, with prices higher and with a better situation developing all along the line.

At the last auction sale there was an advance of 12½ to 25 cents a box for Floridas. Three cars of Floridas were offered and sold at a range of from $2.05 to $3.10 per box. Most of the fruit was reported in good condition, with fairly satisfactory color and with quality improving.

Porto Ricos have begun to arrive, and most of them are rather better than ever before. Some of the cultivated fruit will begin to come this year, though the quantity will be small. It is not known yet just how the new trees will yield. The sale of Porto Ricos aggregated 1120 boxes, and the range was from $1.15 to $2.15 per box. Under the influence of active demand, business has been good, and retailers are finding it difficult to supply the demand.

Four cars of California Valencia lates were offered, and sold at from $3.10 to $7.12½. Bidding was active, and the demand came from a wide range of territory.

From store there is an active demand for all varieties of oranges, and prices tend upward on fancy stock. Good, well-colored Floridas are selling at from $2.50 to $2.75 per box. Some poor stock is offered as low as $1.25 per box, which barely pays expenses.

A fair business is reported in fancy grapefruit, and some very fancy Floridas are selling at from $3.50 to $4 per box. Some stock is held as low as $1.50 per box.

The citrus market is promising, and dealers are looking forward to even more prosperous times than obtained last year.

RAILROAD WINS BIG LAND SUIT.

UNION PACIFIC GAINS RICH ACREAGE IN KANSAS.

Patents Covering Portions of Road's Right of Way Are Declared Invalid by Supreme Court Thus Giving Corporation Fertile Farms and Valuable Improvements.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

TOPEKA (Kan.) Nov. 10.—Thousands of acres of the most valuable farm land in Kansas, together with a large amount of land located in towns and cities of the State, is given to the Missouri, Kansas and Texas Railroad by a decision of the Kansas Supreme Court today in the case of that railway against Watson.

In July, 1866, Congress granted to the Union Pacific Railway Company's southern branch, now the Missouri, Kansas and Texas Railway Company, a right of way 200 feet wide from Fort Riley, to the south line of the State. Afterward patents were issued to private persons, for land through which the railroad runs without excepting the right of way. These persons have treated the right of way as being only 100 feet wide and in some cases valuable improvements have been erected on the outer fifty feet on each side, which have been occupied and used without disturbance for many years. The railroad company brought suit to oust these occupants and the court decided in its favor.

The land affected by the decision lies in Geary, Morris, Lyon, Coffee, Woodson, Allen, Neosho and Labotte counties.

THESE STAND FIRM.

Best Tailors of City Form Association and Will Not Let Union Run Them.

The merchant tailors of Los Angeles, against whom the Tailors' Union has directed an attack with the object in view of establishing the closed shop in this city, and for compelling the employers to grant impossible demands, have formally organized a Merchant Tailors' Association, which embraces in its membership the best class of tailors of the city.

At a meeting held last week a ringing resolution was adopted pledging the members to the perpetuation of the open shop and a square deal for all working tailors.

The Tailors' Union organization called a strike upon a man named Hardy, who has a little shop on Spring street. They demanded that he plaster the ugly label on every suit of clothes. He at first refused, and immediately received the support of the better class of tailors. About the time the other tailors were thinking of organizing an association Hardy became weak about the backbone and conceded the union's demands. Flushed with this easy victory the union directed an attack against two other shops. Its plan is believed to have been to call strikes at separate shops, one at a time, and focus strength against the individual employer.

The formation of the Merchant Tailors' Association was mainly for the purpose of foiling such plans of the union. Those who have joined the association, and will "stand pat" for the open shop in Los Angeles are:

BOERS CAPTURE POLICE.

Leader of Africanders Raises Flag of Revolt from England in Cape Colony.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

CAPE TOWN (Cape Colony) Nov. 10.—A disturbance has occurred in the northwestern part of Cape Colony. The official report of the affair says that several Boers, led by a man named Fererira, recently employed in German Southwest Africa, entered the Northwestern part of this colony a few days ago, and surprised a police camp in the vicinity of Witkop, wounding two troopers, seizing their arms and ammunition and subsequently capturing a corporal of police.

At Abiquass, Fereira, who is a Transvaal Colony Boer, gained some recruits and marched to Sewartmodder, about twenty-five miles from the frontier, where he is reported to be compelling the farmers to join his forces, asserting that an uprising in the Transvaal is imminent. The colonial government has adopted measures to suppress the disorder.

NO ICE TRUST EXISTS.

Such Is Decision of Kansas City Court Ruling on Combination of Local Companies.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

KANSAS CITY, Nov. 10.—No ice trust exists in Kansas City, according to an opinion filed today in the Circuit Court at Independence by W. S. Flournoy, appointed special commissioner to hear the evidence in an investigation brought last July against eight local concerns which, it was charged, have formed a combination or agreement to control the supply and price of ice contrary to the anti-trust laws.

GREW THIS HAIR
And we can PROVE IT

Testimonial No. 844.

MISS DOROTHY CLARK,
2130 Grenshaw St., Chicago.

Put the scalp in an active and normal condition, and the hair will take care of itself every time. The scalp is the soil in which the hair grows. It, alone, governs the growth of the hair, and it must be kept fresh and healthy to insure a good crop of hair. The hair is a product of the scalp, and all the treatments in Christendom will do no good, unless they are specifically efficacious in the cure of the diseases peculiar to the scalp. NOW at all druggists, three sizes.

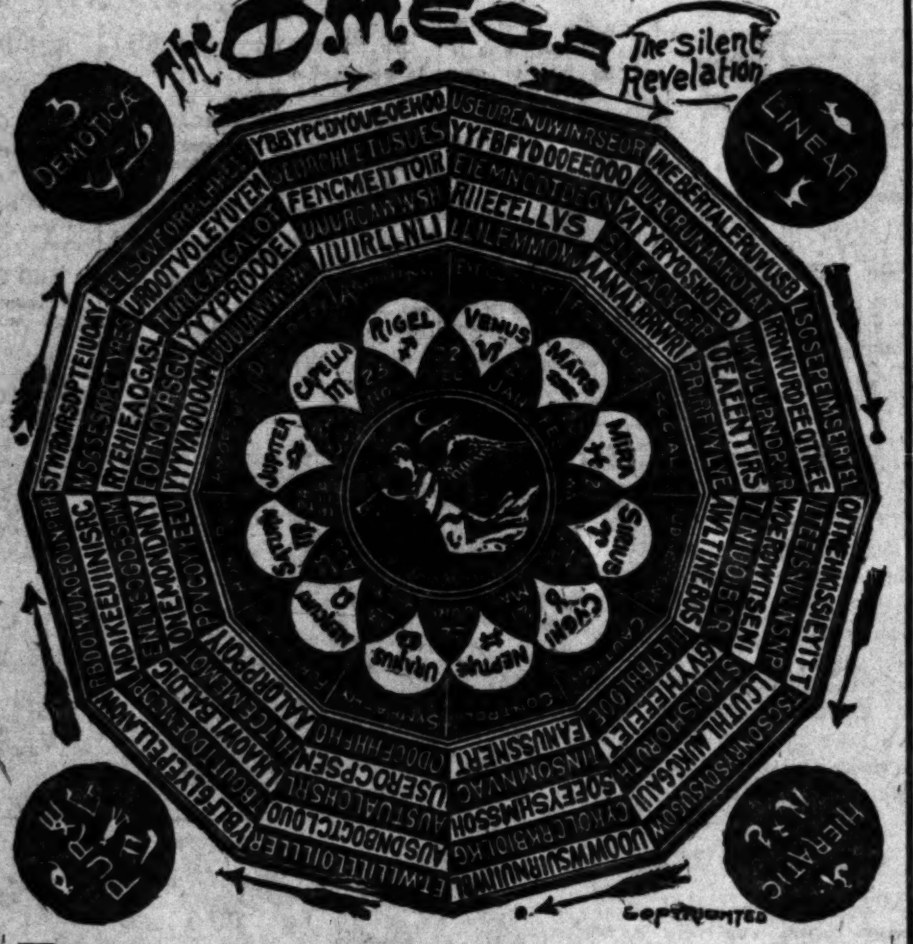
O UT of the dim and dusty past, rich in the forgotten lore of the astrologer—comes to us this marvelous and fascinating OMEGA, by which thousands of horoscopes have been and can yet be cast. It was unearthed by the great Dr. Schurman from ruins of the temple of Zeus on the Libyan Plains and the original is in the British Museum.

The fact that a store whose silent interpretation of the messages of the stars has effected the lives of Kings and moulded the destiny of nations, should find a place in one of our advertising propositions is indicative of the resources of the management of this Fifth Street Store.

Copies of this on heavy paper will be furnished free and particulars of this most fascinating and interesting and profitable event will be disclosed later.

Save your duplicate sales checks. They're a part of the scheme, and don't fail to get an OMEGA.



F IRST ascertain the month and date of birth of the inquirer, select the space between the two dates inquirer's birthday comes in. This shows the ruling planet and a trait of inquirer's character. The FIRST or OUTSIDE CIRCLE gives information upon the subject of business; the SECOND CIRCLE on the subject of LUCK; the THIRD CIRCLE, WISHES; the FOURTH CIRCLE, WEALTH, and the FIFTH or INSIDE CIRCLE, MARRIAGE.

Let inquirer select any letter in space his birthday comes. Write the letter down, and count to the RIGHT, as indicated by arrow points, always commencing to count ON THE NEXT LETTER to the right of the one selected. Count as follows: In first (circle outside, subject, business,) count and write down in a line every EIGHTH letter; for second circle, every SEVENTH letter; for third circle every SIXTH letter; for fourth circle every FIFTH letter; for inside circle, every FIFTH LETTER. EACH CIRCLE GIVES COMPLETE ANSWER IN ITSELF. Only work ONE circle at a time.

Count around the selected circle TO the letter you commenced upon THEN divide the row of letters obtained into words, and these words into a sentence—which will be inquirer's ANSWER.

If the FIRST few letters form an incomplete word, place the LAST letters in front. Count CORRECTLY or no result occurs.

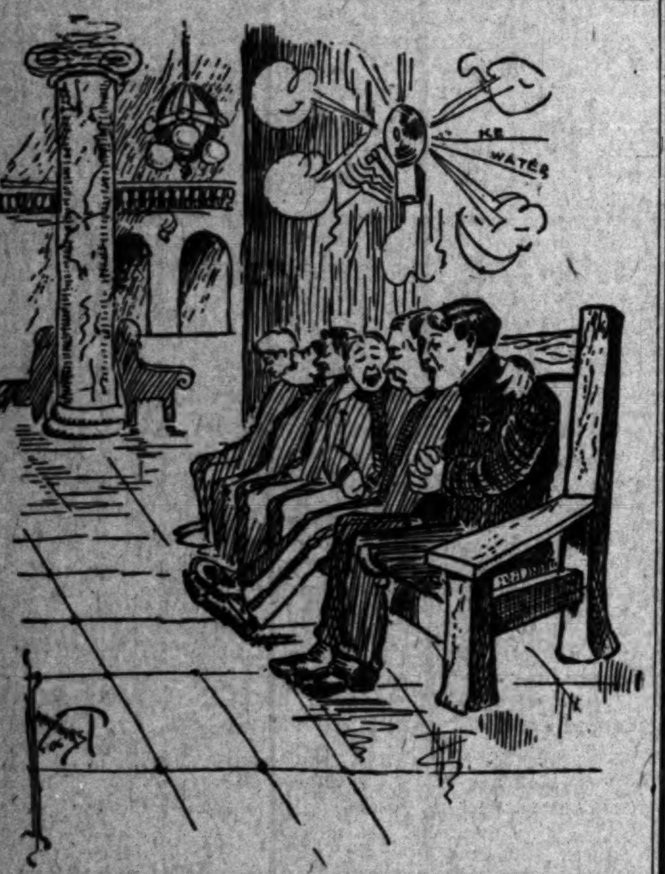
TIP TO "FRONT" RUSHES HOP.

Job of Spry Bell Boy Is Not so Bad After All.

Veterans in the Service Tell of Days of Conkling.

Los Angeles Hotels a Mecca for the Youngsters Now.

Bell boys who are 45 years old, bell boys who have a goodly bank account, bell boys who have encircled the globe once and in some instances two times, bell boys who were "hopping bells" when Grover Cleveland was Governor of New York and when Roscoe Conkling was in his prime, bell boys who are upon terms of intimate acquaintance with the survivors of the famous moneyed men of the bonanza days of the Pacific Coast, and bell boys who consider their calling as much of a profession as an attorney does the practice of law; these boys form the nucleus of the spry young gentry who pay a dancing attendance upon the guests of the city hotels.



When a "dead one" rings.

They deny with vehemence that their calling is generally made the vehicle for crooks to gain entrance to the palatial hotels. They acknowledge that sometimes crooks force their way into their profession, but they maintain strongly that it is the exception.

They have a free masonry among themselves that is wonderful to behold. Seemingly mere boys, eager to answer the beck and call of any guest, they are in reality men, in many instances, of mature years, who look upon their calling seriously and scorn the novice who attempts to break into their ranks.

Their calling is not the illy paid, servile one that it appears upon the surface. They know more "state secrets" concerning the great and near-great men of the day that any other class of men.

It is in the still watches of the night when convention is cast aside by the great man and for once he revels as an ordinary private citizen that the bell boy gains his knowledge of the man at first hand. These secrets are well kept. If a bell boy who has been in the business for a dozen years or so would suddenly start talking there would be many hasty exits of some of the great men. They know the secrets and real character of the patrons, but they never talk.

TALK AS DOES SPHINX.

To interview a bell-hop is somewhat similar to asking the Sphinx to tell who built it. They talk pleasantly of sending ice water to your room or calling a cab for you, but about what they have heard of seen in the wee sma' hours of the morning when the captain of industry unveils himself, or when some of the society folk determine to be real wicked and go a-slumming they assume a monumental ignorance. To tell that they had ears and eyes when they had helped some society idol to find the key for his room after a dinner, or that they knew the name of the sender of certain notes to society's queens, would forever blacklist them with their fraternity.

They have uniformly been looked upon by the general public as a set or class of harmless young fellows who earn a precarious living by rushing ice water and drinks to the guests and calling them in the morning.

For instance, there is J. G. Brown, who is 45 years old, who is now "hopping bells" at the Alexandria. He is married and fairly well-to-do. For the last twenty-five years or more he has been answering the summons of the buzzer. He remembers when he acted as guide to Grover Cleveland and Roscoe Conkling when they were inspecting the then new Fifth-Avenue Hotel in New York, and he stood side by side with the two famous men on the roof of the Fifth-Avenue Hotel when they witnessed the unveiling of Bartholdi's great monument to Liberty in New York harbor. He remembers when he was hopping bells in the Baggs Hotel in Utica, N. Y., when Cleveland was Governor, and he tells many interesting sidelights upon the personal idiosyncrasies of the Sage of Buzzard's Bay.

Brown is a youngish-looking man, who would not be taken for over 28 years old. He responded to the call "front" for twelve years at the Palace Hotel in San Francisco. He is upon terms of intimate acquaintance with the surviving men prominent in the bonanza days. A few days ago one of these wealthy gentlemen was a guest at the Alexandria, and when he called for some small service he was met at the door by Brown, whom he had met in like circumstances ten years ago in the Palace Hotel in San Francisco. Brown returned to his hard bench with a gold eagle jingling in his hand.

PATRON REMEMBERED HIM.

Another recent case of a bell boy being remembered by patrons whom he had served years ago is the case of William P. Derrickson, also of the Alexandria, better known as "Whitey," who has been taken under the sheltering wing of a well-known Goldfield mining man, and left Friday of last week for Goldfield. He is a married man, and both he and his wife are included in the arrangement. Derrickson is about 32 years old and looks 25. He has been hopping bells for the last ten years. He learned his "trade" in the Arcade Hotel, Springfield, O. He "beat" his way across the continent and has been a fixture at the Alexandria since the hotel opened.

He stopped bell hopping only once, and that was to enlist as a volunteer in the Spanish-American War. He served in the Philippine War also. Derrickson is now "fixed." His brother bellboys gave him a tender farewell Friday of last week.

James Pitman, another bell boy, recently inherited $5000. He came to this city from Montreal, Canada. His inheritance was taken as a matter of course, and he is still standing at attention when a guest calls.

There are a hundred other instances that could be cited to show that the bell boy as he is known in Los Angeles is not the irresponsible street arab or unattached youth that he is generally considered to be.

There is a colored lad named James Masse, who cares for the hats of the

We Guarantee to Save You Money

These are strong words, but we mean it, and you know what a Barker guarantee means. We guarantee to give you better furniture for less than you can get in any other store. We carry the best of every grade, and we have all grades. Our prices speak in their own defense when see them on the goods.

The Largest Store on the Pacific Coast Always Has Saved Money For Its Customers

Have You Seen Our Display of Desks?

It is a great one in many respects. First, because of the quantity. We have scores of them—as many as any two stores in the city combined. Second, because of the quality—they are the best. Third, because of the extremely low prices—they are the lowest. We mention a few today:

One at $32.00
A handsome design—one of the very latest. Note the drawers below—a feature you seldom find in desks at this price. The wood is solid oak and the finish is weathered.

One at $13.50
The price is certainly a fair one, for every inch of the wood is solid oak and the cabinet work is perfect. The finish is weathered. There is one roomy drawer.

One at $22
This is a novelty design along the craftsman lines. The desk is extra well made and every piece of the oak is selected. The finish is weathered.

One at $24
Here again you get generous drawer space at even a lower price. Of course the wood is solid oak and selected, too. The finish is weathered.

Oak China Closet $19.50
If you are interested in china closets, here is one for you to consider. It is made of solid oak (weathered finish,) and plate glass, the side pieces being bent. It stands about 5 feet high and 38 inches wide. It is roomy, substantially built and perfectly finished. We guarantee this to be 20 per cent. lower than the price ordinary stores charge for the same grade.
And we have a score of others priced on the same basis.

In The Bargain Basement

$9.50 Cellarette $5
In weathered oak with copper mixing tray on a drop door.

Magazine Racks
In weathered oak. One marked from $13.50 to $7.75. Another from $16.50 to $9.00.

$6 Roman Seats $3.75
Handsome design and rich weathered finish. Two of them alike.

$23 Arm Chair $14
Mission design in weathered oak. Seat is leather upholstered.

$25 Parlor Suit $16.50
Mahogany finish. Upholstered in damask. Three pieces.

$35 Parlor Suit $22.50
Three pieces—a settee and two chairs. Extra good upholstering.

$12.50 Corner Seat $7
Mission style and weathered finish. Seat is of cane.

$19.50 Corner Chair $12
In mahogany and beautifully upholstered. Several different styles.

$60 China Closet $35
Mahogany—the natural color. Plate glass throughout.

$22.50 Mission Buffet $15

Oak Morris Chair $10.7
It is a rare bargain for the wood is solid oak and the finish is golden. The chair is well put together and good service is absolutely sure. This price includes the cushions, which are covered with fine grade velour, and you have your choice of colors.
If you want this for an Xmas gift we will store it free and deliver when and where you say.

McDougall Kitchen Cabinets
We carry a complete stock of these special cabinets and sell them at prices so reasonable that you can't afford to be without one. You can get a good one for $27.50 or $30 and so on. You have heard so much about them through magazine advertising that there is really little use to describe them to you. We know you will want to see them and will make you welcome any time you care to come.

Leather Chairs and Ro ers at Lower Prices
On the fourth floor, Main street have an extraordinary stock of leath holstered chairs and rockers. They best that we can buy and we have priced so low that they are really ury. NEWS OF THE MINES—Review of the Week's Diggings in the Southw

MINERAL WEALTH OF ARIZONA.

LOW-GRADE MINES REVIVED BY RAILROAD PROJECT.

Benson, the Center of the District, Showing Fine Gold and Copper Prospects—Free Gold in the Whetstone Mountains—Deep Working of Old Congress Mine.

PHOENIX (Ariz.) Nov. 8.—Election time is usually made the excuse for a week's holiday by the Arizona miners and prospectors. They have congregated in the towns to talk politics and to vote, and work upon the smaller properties has been materially affected thereby.

From a miner's standpoint, one of the best pieces of information of the past week has been the assurance that the Southern Pacific will build from Phoenix to Yuma. In the White Tank mining district, north of the Buckeye agricultural district on the Gila River, are a number of mines which will become extremely valuable when the railroad is built, only a short distance to the southward. In the desert hills north of Gila Bend and thence eastward to the Colorado River, are scores of mines which have been worked for many years, only the richest ore being treated, however, owing to transportation expenses. One of the properties that will be materially benefited by the building of the new line is the King of Arizona, mainly owned by Epes Randolph, E. S. Ives, Frank Cox and a number of other Southern Pacific officials. Extreme activity is to be expected among the mines of Western Arizona through the construction of this new Southern Pacific road and of the Santa Fé road that is being built to Parker, across the northern end of Yuma county.

LOW-GRADE MINES.

North of Phoenix, from fourteen to forty miles distant, within Winifred and Cave Creek mining districts, are hundreds of mines that have been worked intermittently for a score of years. Most of the ore bodies are of low grade and have failed to repay the cost of working, owing to the necessity of long wagon hauls and the lack of water for the operation of concentration plants. Sixteen miles north of Phoenix the Fortuna Company is sinking a double-compartment shaft, which will be driven to a depth of 500 feet. The property adjoins the Union mine, one of the best-known producers of Central Arizona. It is expected that large bodies of low-grade sulphide gold ore will be developed, similar to those tapped on the Union claims at a depth of 400 feet. Some work is being done at the Phoenix mine in Cave Creek district, a property which is well equipped, with extensive workings and with a large stamp mill, which was a large producer up to four years ago.

Through H. S. Creighton of Phoenix has been sold the Reliable group of gold claims near Quartzsite, in Northern Yuma county. The property has a nine-foot ledge. It is reported that, from 100 tons of ore milled returns of $12.80 per ton have been secured.

One of the coming great copper properties near Globe is the Iron Cap mine, now being worked by a development company, which is spending several hundred thousand dollars, receiving in return about half the stock issued. The owners of the property are M. C. and A. W. Galpin of Phoenix, C. W. Woy of Globe and N. C. Goff of Los Angeles.

BENSON A MINING CENTER.

Benson is becoming a mining center, mainly through development in the hills near the San Pedro River to the northward. Sixty miles north of Benson, near the San Pedro, lately has been located a copper ledge, said to be as wide as a city street, to be traced for eight miles through the country. Rich samples of the ore have been brought to Benson, although it is not alleged that the same grade of value has been obtained entirely across the ledge matter. The discoverers are S. McLaughlin, Ed Land and Andrew Hamm, who believe that they have a property that will rival the Copper Queen.

In the Whetstone Mountains, near Benson, lately has been found on located ground a new dike of free-milling gold quartz, from which samples assay $7 to the ton in gold, besides lead and silver concentrates. Samples run as high as $40. The discovery is on the property of Frank Trask, who has been working on a vein of wulframite, and was made by William Fraesdorf, who had been taken out to examine the workings on other parts of the property.

Near Dragoon Station, east of Benson, a large body of azurite and malachite copper ore has been uncovered on the Teter-Stone property. The discovery was made on the very apex of a range of hills near the Southern Pacific track. The ore can readily be run down to the railroad by gravity tramway.

North of Benson interests identical with those of the Calumet and Arizona of Bisbee have taken under bond the Mammoth mine of Clark and Scanlon, locally considered one of the most promising copper properties in Arizona. The property is not far from the line of the Phoenix and Eastern Railroad which, it is hoped, will be extended during the coming year from Winkleman up the San Pedro to Benson, to connect with the Southern Pacific and Southwestern system.

At Paradise Camp in the Cairicahua Mountains, on the Douglas-Scanlon property, has been found a body of sulphide ore which assays 22½ per cent copper.

SUSPENSION OF WORK.

Work has been suspended on the property of the Oro Maximo and Picacho mining companies in Northern Sonora, near Cananea. It is reported that work on both will be resumed in a few weeks, and that the difficulty is only temporary in character, due to dissension in the management and not to the lack of cash or any lack of value in the properties.

Dr. B. B. Moeur of Tempe has a gold mine, curiously enough, in Texas, lately developed on a farm owned by him. No one had any idea that gold was in the locality, but a deposit of free-milling ore was discovered at a depth of twenty-three feet in the sinking of a well. The deposit is a horizontal one, nearly twenty feet in depth, with flour gold showing in varying quantities throughout. Dr. Moeur believes that it can best be worked by a cyanide mill.

ARIZONA GOLD MINES.

A large working shaft will be started soon on the old Tiger mine, in the Bradshaw Mountains, south of Prescott. The shaft will be sunk to a depth of 1000 feet by a company equipped with ample funds and with faith that at that depth will be developed one of the richest gold and silver mines of Arizona. The mine was worked by means of inclined shafts as far back as thirty years ago.

A tunnel over 1000 feet in length has been driven into the Lucky Boy claim of the Arizona-Birmingham Gold Mining Company at Chloride, Ariz., and is expected within the next month to cut the main vein of the property. Midway in the tunnel, late investigation has shown the presence of gold in considerable quantity in a ledge of soft porphyry, which had been passed through as worthless. It is reported that a carload of thirty tons shipped from this vein returned a value of $13,800.

At Cerbat a large concentrating mill is now practically complete and it will be in operation before the first of the year. The Cerbat Mountain Mining Company is preparing to install an amalgamation and concentration plant, with a daily capacity of thirty tons.

The deepest mineral workings of Arizona are those of the Congress mine, seventy miles northwest of Phoenix. It has a half dozen shafts sunk upon the incline of the Congress and Niagara veins, one of the shafts being 4000 feet in depth. The property has been worked for over twenty years, most of the development being upon the Congress veins. There are two mills, each of forty stamps, which, until lately, were run upon pyritic gold ore that averaged $20 a ton. The ore of the parallel Niagara vein is of somewhat lower grade and carries more silver. For several years past work has been almost at a standstill, although there has been considerable activity in the last few months. It is now told that a fine new deposit of sulphide ore has been discovered in the sinking of shaft No. 5 at the 2000-foot level.

ARIZONA'S COPPER PRODUCT.

More Smelters, More Fuel and More Miners Needed to Keep Up With Demand for Metal.

PHOENIX (Ariz.) Nov. 9.—The production of copper and gold ores has increased to such an extent in Pinal county since the building of the Phoenix and Eastern Railway that a half dozen smelter projects have materialized, enterprises designed to handle on a large scale the ore now going to El Paso and the Humboldt smelters. The latest project is backed by Chicago capitalists, represented by George F. Goerner, who has for several weeks been studying conditions in the mineral districts east of Phoenix. It is understood that he has determined upon a favorable point for the location of a custom smelter upon which $200,000 will be expended. Mr. Goerner has left for Chicago, stating before departure that there is little doubt that a decision upon the project will be reached within a fortnight.

HUMBOLDT SMELTER'S SUCCESS.

The receipts of custom ores at the smelter of the Humboldt company, south of Prescott, now approach 500 tons a day. Still another blast furnace of the largest capacity has been ordered, it being evident that the ore receipts before the winter is over will approximate 1000 tons a day. Last month's production of copper was 600,000 pounds, and fully 1,000,000 pounds will be turned out in November. The popularity of the works is shown by the fact that in the brief period of their operation ore shipments have been received from 144 different mining companies or properties. The smelter now is handling large quantities of gold concentrates from Central Arizona mills.

The Old Dominion property at Globe is getting richer with every foot of depth attained. Great bodies of sulphide ore, of the very character so much needed in the past for economical smelting, have been uncovered lately. On the thirteenth level workings have passed through twelve feet of sulphide running from 8 to 20 per cent. copper, besides fifteen feet of lower grade ore, all of it, however, of the best smelting character. Heretofore the Old Dominion company has been compelled to ship in sulphides from Bisbee or buy them from Pinal mountain miners. Now the company has all it requires upon its own ground.

COPPER ON A BOOM.

Copper never before reached the price it is now selling for in the markets of the East, electrolytic passing the 22-cent mark. As a result, all the reduction works of the Territory are being pushed to their full capacity. It is believed that the price will remain up, but it can be imagined that the copper miner is well content with matters as they are. Twenty-five years ago copper rose to 17 cents a pound, under the manipulation of a French pool, the Credit Foncier, composed of the same men who wrecked the Panama Canal enterprise. When the canal scheme fizzled, so did the copper trust, and copper dropped within a month to 9 cents a pound. Even at that price, however, many Arizona copper smelters kept at work, notably those of the Clifton district, which at that time were working upon the rich carbonate and oxide ores of the Longfellow mine. It is believed that 3000 miners in addition to those now employed could find work in Arizona at the present time. But the demand for labor is participated in by the railroads and by about all of the building trades.

THE FUEL QUESTION ACUTE.

There is complaint in several of the camps at Southeastern Arizona that coal will have to be returned to as a fuel, though discarded in a number of important works only last winter on account of New Mexican storms rendering insecure the fuel supply. Now it is told that both Texas and California oil has been raised in price till coal is cheaper. It has been found also that there is about as much trouble in securing tank cars for the oil as there was in hustling coal along the railroads.

SONORAN MINES.

The Greene smelter at Guaymas, Sonora, is purchasing ore and is getting into readiness for a long run.

A twenty-stamp mill is to be erected soon upon the Monte Vista gold property in Sonora, below Douglas.

There is new activity in the Cieneguita Copper Company, a corporation largely stocked in Phoenix, which has an immense copper property in the Sahuaripa district of Eastern Sonora. The property has been a difficult one to operate in the past owning to its distance from transportation. Soon, however, the Yaqui River Railroad will remedy this condition, when a large output is promised. A small smelting plant has been placed on the property and is to be reinforced by a concentrator, of which the first section lately was shipped from Los Angeles. Many well-informed miners believe that were adequate transportation facilities available, the Cieneguita would soon become one of the greatest copper mines on earth. It has been worked for silver by Spaniards and Mexicans for centuries past.

PIMA COUNTY NEEDS MINERS.

Smelter to Be Built at Silver Bell. New Railroad Opens Up Mining Districts in Sonora.

TUCSON (Ariz.) Nov. 8.—The largest camps in Pima county are Silver Bell, Twin Buttes, Helvetia, Cerro Colorado and Olive. At all these camps recent additions have been made to the force of miners and there is still a demand for more men. At Silver Bell the ore shipments are continuing steadily from the mines of the Imperial Copper Company. The preliminary plans for the big smelter are well under way, and actual work will be begun within a short time on the smelter.

At Helvetia the smelter, which has been shut down, is again in operation, and in addition to taking care of the ore of the Helvetia Copper Company is smelting for the Omega Copper Company, which has 5000 tons on the dump. At Twin Buttes a new ore body was uncovered in the 300-foot level in the King shaft.

The Omega Copper Company, which owns, in addition to its producing mine in the Helvetia district, the Georgia property in the vicinity of Alta, has put a force of men at work on this mine.

A smelter is being built at La Cobriza, which is twenty-five miles southwest of the Llanos station on the Sonora Railroad. This smelter will have a capacity of 140 tons. In addition to the smelter, a new steam hoist and air compressors are being installed to aid in the development work.

The construction of a wagon road from Pedepe, on the San Miguel River, to Huepac, on the Sonora River, across the Aconchi range of mountains, is good news for mining companies operating in that section of Sonora. The building of this road means that the distances from the upper Sonora River, including Huepac, Banamichi and Arizpe, will be much shorter than up the river from Hermosillo, and consequently the cost of freighting supplies and ores will be greatly reduced. With the road finished the new point of departure will be Peza station on the Sonora Railroad.

The Gaviota mine, in the vicinity of Caberca, in the Altar district, has been sold to N. W. Wilson, a New York capitalist, for $21,060. It is a free-milling gold property.

DESERT KING GROUP.

Good Prospects in Gold Claims in San Bernardino County Acquired by Jerome Canyon Company.

The gold excitement, which, for months past has been turning the desert mountains of Southern Nevada into a cluster of the richest mining camps in America, has spread across the State line into California.

Among the discoveries recently made on this side of the State line are the Desert King group of claims in the Leech Mountains and the Florence group in the Avawatz Mountains.

The Desert King claims, sixty-five miles north of Daggett, are owned by the Jerome Cañon Copper Company, and this company has during the present season erected at the mine a stamp mill that has recently been completed and has had a trial run that proved to be very satisfactory, both as to the mill and the ore worked. At the mine there is a good supply of water.

Assay certificates show free milling ore with gold values ranging from $7.25 to $138.07 per ton. A tunnel follows the ore vein, which is about two feet in width and is located on a porphyry contact.

The Florence claims are located in the Avawatz Mountains, about sixteen miles east of the Desert King. One year ago the Jerome Cañon Copper Company took a year's option on this property, and that option has just been exercised and the company has taken the claims and paid for them. These claims make a better showing on the surface than did the Desert King. The new Tonopah and Tidewater Railroad runs within eighteen miles of the Florence group.

A committee of stockholders, consisting of S. E. Davis of Minneapolis, G. B. Tibbot of Fresno county, S. D. Graves of Los Angeles, and W. L. Wharten of Pomona, has recently returned from an examination of the company's mining property and is well satisfied with the prospects. George W. Rose is the superintendent of the Desert King.

BOOM HITS SEARCHLIGHT.

Capitalists Investing in Mines, Working Plants Increasing, and New Townsite.

SEARCHLIGHT (Nev.) Nov. 8.—Many mining men from all parts of the country are daily visiting the district, and many of them are securing mining property, either by cash purchase or on working bonds. Each week shows an increase in number of working plants being installed.

The Searchlight Mining and Milling Company have got their new steam plant at work, generating with crude oil. Their 100-ton cyanide plant, the finest and best equipped in the district, is ready for action, and will shortly be in operation. As to the product of the mine itself, the usual result of development in the Searchlight district, steady improvement, is here very plainly demonstrated.

Mr. Adsit is receiving great encouragement from his work on the Colorado Company's property, which gives promise of becoming a great producer. Mr. Carlsen, from the Wyoming, is also getting a good showing of ore. Work on the "Flat" is being vigorously pushed on all sides. The Boulder is cross-cutting both ways at the 175 and 225-foot levels, and has excellent prospects in both faces. The Searchlight Mammoth Gold Mines, Ltd., is sinking a shaft on its Adolph claim, west of the Quartette, and at twenty feet depth encountered good ore. Many other claims on the flat are producing ore as a result of assessment work performed for the year.

Greater activity than ever before is apparent in all the surrounding camps, and it is confidently felt that the long-delayed boom has made its début in the Searchlight field. Workers and operators are getting possession of the properties—not speculators only.

Onslow Newling, who has up to the last twelve months, engaged in mining operations in British Columbia, has since that time been a resident of Los Angeles; has invested considerably in real estate here, and is largely interested in mining properties in the Searchlight mining district. In connection with those interests he went over to England three months ago and was successful in getting mining operators in London interested in the camp.

The question of the location of the depot and terminal buildings of the Santa Fé Railroad at Searchlight has been settled. The Santa Fé officials have accepted right of way and depot grounds from the Boulder Mining and Milling Company, and will locate the depot at a point about two hundred feet from the shafthouse on the Boulder claim.

The Boulder company has sold the surface rights of four claims surrounding the depot site to the Searchlight Terminal Townsite Company, organized by Fred J. Abbott, the English mining man who has made extensive purchases of mining properties in Searchlight during the past month. Mr. Abbott has a corps of surveyors at work, under direction of Stone and Brown, deputy United States mineral surveyors of Searchlight, plotting and surveying the ground. The depot grounds, 250x900 feet, will be laid out in form of a plaza or park, neatly fenced and planted to trees. Business lots will face the park on both sides. The new townsite will be thrown open about November 12 or 15. A waterworks company has also been formed and will develop water without delay.

A vein of ore sampling $100 in gold to the ton and 18 inches wide has been found at 100 feet depth in the Annie Laurie claim, Manhattan.

NATIVE COPPER AT JOHNNIE.

DISCOVERY OF RED METAL EXCITES THE DISTRICT.

Development of Water for Domestic Use and for Power Progressing. Prospect Work Showing Up Good Ore in Lower Levels of the Mines.

JOHNNIE (Nev.) Nov. 7.—Metallic copper is the latest discovery in the red metal that is causing excitement in this district. George F. Moser, the mining engineer, said that the copper was found in cleavages similar to Bingham, except that in Utah the copper was found in a sulphide and monzonite, while in Johnnie it was in a calcerous shale. The metallic copper was found in a heretofore but little prospected portion of the district about five miles east of the town. In that section about the only mines are the Rainbow, owned by a syndicate at the head of which are Walter Wheat and Fred Bowler. There a shaft will be sunk to a depth of 1000 feet.

In the southwestern portion the Johnnie Wonder is continuing its development work. It was discovered that on one of the claims belonging to the company deep-seated disturbances threw the stratification from a northerly and southerly course to an easterly and westerly. There can be no doubt that these disturbances are very deep seated, because the outcroppings are forced through the formation. The Johnnie Copper Company, at the head of which is Carl F. Schader, acquired some claims which have the extension of the ledge from the Johnnie Wonder.

Many prospectors are going into the copper field. Work has been started on the Sunshine mines and the men are now digging a development shaft. A shaft has been started on the Big Daisy mine.

WATER DEVELOPMENT.

A contract has been let to dig a series of water tunnels on the springs furnishing this town with water. Men have been at Horseshootem and Grape Vine Springs for the past week. Ever since the water passed into the control of the present company only the flow from the surface has been taken out, but the town has increased so in population that it was found necessary to do development work. Several two-inch pipes were being kept filed, but the superintendent of the water company says he will have at least fitfy inches when the work is completed. It has even been proposed to get sufficient water for power purposes, and A. Teal of the Pacific Electric Light and Power Company left for Los Angeles to organize an electric company.

PROSPECTING THE VEINS.

In the lower tunnel of the Globe-Johnnie the men have not yet broken through the step fault recently found, but the superintendent said that he would be through it in a little over a week.

Work is steadily progressing in the main shaft of the Johnny Con. from the 300 level to the surface. Plans and specifications are asked for the new hoisting machinery and also for lumber in laying the tracks for the new shaft. On the 700 level the drift is being advanced to determine the length of the ore body on this level. Here the formation is very flat, and Supt. Mozer thinks that he can get at least 300 feet of stoping ground on this level.

The face of the west drift of the main working shaft of the Bullfrog Johnnie is in three feet of ore that in spots is very rich, but will average clean across the face about $18.

The development work on the Pittsburgh-Johnnie shows the vein to lie very flat. It will assay $20 in gold and twenty ounces in silver.

On the Belmont the vein in the shaft sunk on the Wellington claim has widened out to eight feet and will average $15.

The Battery mines, just north of the Johnnie Con. are showing some good milling ore. The ledge continues to maintain its strength, and Supt. Simmonds is still hunting for the rich vein he expects to find if the formation in his property is the same as in the Johnnie Con.

In the McClanahan mine on Mineral Flat a drift is being run along the ledge on the fifty level, which shows the ore to maintain the strength it showed when first encountered.

GOLDFIELD'S STOCK BOOM.

Haphazard Investors Suddenly Find Themselves Made Rich by the Rise in Value of Shares.

GOLDFIELD (Nev.) Nov. 5.—Stocks which a year ago were being vainly hawked on the streets of Goldfield at 8 to 10 cents a share have sold within the last twenty-four hours as high as $15 per share. The whole country is buying Goldfield stocks to such an extent that the orders pouring in upon local brokers keep thirty operators in this town working day and night.

In every store or restaurant or saloon there s somebody who is richer by just so many hundreds or thousands of dollars than he was a month ago. The bootblack who owns the little stand at Crook and Main streets paid $140 for 500 shares of Silver Pick last August, and sold his holdings last Saturday at a net profit of $350. The barber who can be seen working at the chair nearest the window, a few doors beyond, made what he thought was a daring investment last July by borrowing $370 with which to buy 1000 shares of Combination Fraction. Last Wednesday afternoon he sold his stock, repaid his loan and put $1750 in the bank.

In the office of the big concerns, like those of the Sullivan Trust Company, for instnace, every stenographer, every clerk, every book-keeper, has made a big or little pot of money by investments in the mining stocks of either Goldfield, Tonopah, Fairview or Manhattan; investments, especially some of those made by the young women, of the most haphazard character. Tommy Nugent, the 17-year-old office boy employed by this firm, spent the $100 which he had saved out of the earnings of four years, and another $100 which he received as his share of a dead uncle's estate, for 2000 shares of Mohawk about a year ago. The price per share for this stock when Tommy bought it was 10 cents. Last Wednesday afternon this office boy sold his Mohawk holdings for $30,[illegible]00 in cold cash.

Other reapings in Mohawk recorded in the Sullivan office were those of Mary Ryan, for sixteen years a servant in Larry Sullivan's household, and of Mrs. Peter Grant, whose husband is Larry Sullivan's partner. Mary, who said she had bought Mohawk because she "got such a lot av ut for th' money," sold her little block of 5000 shares yesterday for $75,000. Mrs. Grant, who explained to her friends that she had spent $300 on Mohawk "because it was such a tempting bargain," realized $45,000.

Stories of luck like this could be written around Goldfield by the ream. And this luck is only a part of a big spectacle. What has happened to the Mohawk has happened only in a slightly less degree to the Jumbo, the Red Top, the Silver Pick, the Laguna, the Combination Fraction.

Shoshone Mill Contract.

Ground has been broken for a big mill on the Shoshone-Consolidated property at Bullfrog, and the contract has been let to the Taylor Engineering Company of New York. The mill will have a capacity of 300 tons a day, and will cost about $350,000. The contract calls for its completion in 113 days from October 23. There are about 7000 tons of high-grade ore on the dump. The old shaft is down 400 feet, and the vein has been cut on that level, where it shows the same character and grade of ore as on the upper levels. A new three-compartment working shaft has been started. It is 7x21 feet, and will be sunk as rapidly as possible to a depth of 1000 feet.

Marvelous Mohawk.

The output from the Hayes-Monnette lease on the Mohawk mine for the month of October was $1,125,000. Manager Hayes estimates that shipments for the remaining two months of the life of the lease will exceed $3,000,000, and that the other leases on Mohawk ground will produce as much more, making a total of $6,00,0000 in two months.

A New Comstock.

Ramsey is one of the new mining camps of Nevada, only fifteen miles from the Comstock. The first location was made last June, and there have been several discoveries since. The formation is said to be similar to that of the Comstock, and it is considered strange that it should have been overlooked all these years by the thousands of prospectors who have traversed the ground.

A. H. Mayne, one of the early locators, says:

"The Ramsey Comstock, which was the first of the properties to be located has an ore body which is eighty feet in width. Of this, fifteen feet is shipping ore and the balance milling. We expect to commence shipping from there in two or three weeks, and when the mills are put in the cost of milling and mining will not exceed $2 a ton. The Ramsey Mining Company, which has the property adjoining, is lower down in the gulch, and it has a shaft down which is already in the sulphides, and, from what I can learn, the ore goes better there than it does in the oxides, which is very encouraging to all of us."

Assessment Work.

State Mineralogist Aubury is sending out notices about assessment work on California mines. An impression has been created that owing to the San Francisco disaster assessment work need not be done this year. This is a mistake. Mr. Aubury makes the following statement:

"Tht extra session of the California Legislature requested Congress, in view of the San Francisco disaster, that all assessment work on California mining claims for this year should be set aside. A special committee of Congress took the matter under consideration. Upon investigation that committee came to the conclusion that few persons who are interested in California mines met large losses in San Francisco, and the committee therefore took an unfavorable view of the recommendation of the California Legislature. Assessment work to the amount of $100 on each mining claim must be performed, therefore, as in other years."

Los Angeles Mineral Products.

The quantity and value of the mineral products of Los Angeles county for 1905 are given by the State Mining Bureau as follows:

DIVIDEND PAYERS.

Many Millions of Profit to Holders of Shares in American Mining Enterprises.

According to a careful compilation by the Mining World, dividends of $77,193,336 have been paid by 110 companies during the ten months ending with October, this year. These properties have yielded in profits to their shareholders since incorporation a grand total of $516,531,085 on an issued capitalization of $790,897,237.

At the head of the list stand the copper companies. In the ten months ending with October 25, copper companies declared dividends of $48,517,027, making a total since incorporation of $323,156,077 on an issued share capital of $359,069,050.

Seventy-four gold, silver and lead properties, including the smelter trust, have announced dividends this year of $26,960,063, making a total of $182,061,587 since incorporation on an issued share capital of $411,489,262.

Nine zinc properties declared dividends of $1,081,494 for the ten months this year, and since their incorporation have paid $9,898,669 on a capitalization of $10,926,325.

One California quicksilver mine, owned in the East, divided profits of $100,000 this year on $500,000 stock, and has declared to date a total of $880,000.

The nickel trust, which owns mines in Canada and elsewhere and refines its product in the United States, paid $534,752 in dividends this year on an issued capitalization of $8,912,600.

Fabulous Finds.

Remarkable strikes are reported from Rosebud, a new mining district near Seven Troughs, Nev., about twenty-five miles west of Humboldt House.

The camp was discovered last August, when Phil Blume interested himself in the affairs of the newly-found district. The three first into the district were Ingalls, Thomas and Scotta from Goldfield. They made a few locations on a small stringer of ore and panned free gold on what is now the Anchor claim. But it remained for Phil Blume to make the big strikes. Powhattan was the first, which has been sold for $50,000 to J. W. Rooklidge of Salt Lake, and now comes the

The road will be 750 miles long, and the schedule time between the two terminals will be run at an average speed of 75 miles an hour.

This Is No Dream

Nothing impossible is projected. Most of the saving in time will be made by the shortening of distance. The steam road route via New York Central and Lake Shore railways is 980 miles long. By the Pennsylvania road the distance is 911 miles. The new direct electric road will be over 150 miles shorter than any road now existing.

This is no dream. The road is now being built. Grading began on the first day of last September upon the first section of the road, crossing the state of Indiana to Goshen. Several miles are now leveled. As soon as this section of about 100 miles is completed, it will be put in operation. Earnings will date from that day.

The cost of building and equipping the road will be about $150,000,000, or $200,000 per mile. This liberally allows for right-of-way expenses, as well as construction and equipment.

This money is being raised by the sales of common stock, which is the only form of security which will be issued. Not a dollar in bonds or preferred stock will take precedence or stand ahead of common stock. Every purchaser of a share of stock of the Chicago-New York Electric Airline railroad will be on an equal footing, first, last and all the time. The full par value of each share of stock is $100, fully paid and non-assessable, but, like all gigantic projects, the first stock has to be offered at a big sacrifice in order quickly to get the road into a position where it can begin to earn money.

A portion of the $100 stock of the Chicago-New York Electric Airline railroad therefore is offered at $27 a share. Before the end of a year, it is expected that the shares will go to par, and when the road is finished (in five years' time or less) the stock will be worth many times its par value.

Fortunes have been made in the railroads of this country. The men who made those fortunes, however, owe their success to their foresight and faith that the time would come when roads could be operated at a profit across long stretches of barren and uninhabited land, known only to the bison and the red man. The Chicago-New York Electric Airline will traverse no desert wastes, no trackless prairies, but is being built through the richest and most densely populated part of the country, connecting the two largest cities of the land. THERE IS ENOUGH THROUGH TRAFFIC BETWEEN THESE TWO CITIES ALONE TO CAUSE IT TO EARN DIVIDENDS. Patronage will be awaiting its opening day in eager anticipation, and the golden stream of profits which will fill the pockets of the lucky shareholders will bring about a wonderful shifting of the wealth of the country.

Ownership by the People

This is not theoretical Socialism. This is business. Many humble tradesmen and mechanics who have the courage and the confidence now to invest a few dollars in the new airline road, at the present low price of stock, will be rich men in consequence.

In projecting this road with the idea that it should be built mainly by the savings of small investors—by the people—every safeguard for their money has been considered and adopted. All the loopholes which have made former railroad investments risky except for people of unusual sagacity or extraordinary resources have been eliminated, and the whole proposition is so simplified that anybody can see at once that this is the soundest, safest and most promising investment which has ever been offered to the public. Even a few hundred dollars invested at the price the shares sell for today will almost surely yield such an income five years from now that the holder thereof will never need to toil another day as long as he or she lives. WE PREDICT AN INCOME FOR LIFE.

OFFICERS

The Chicago-New York Electric Air Line Railroad is duly incorporated and chartered under the laws of the State of Maine. Its officers are:

ALEX. C. MILLER, president.

CHARLES T. CHERRY, vice-president.

THERON M. BATES, secretary and treasurer; formerly general superintendent Chicago and Alton Railroad.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS

HARRY H. LATHAM, president of the Latham Machinery Co., Chicago.

ALEX. C. MILLER, former president of Aurora Trust and Savings Bank, Aurora, Ill.

HARRY E. PROCUNIER, president of the Moon Manufacturing Co., Chicago.

HON. CHARLES T. CHERRY, capitalist, Oswego, Ill.

But to fortify our predictions, and to make it absolutely safe that NO MAN CAN LOSE A DOLLAR THAT HE PUTS IN, each certificate of stock which will be issued is given double value, and put beyond the power of man to make it worth less than par by the following clause printed on it:

> This certificate will be accepted in payment for transportation to the amount of the par value of the shares of stock represented hereby, and at the current tariff rates over any part of the road in operation.

This means that no matter how much the certificate is worth as stock, the bearer thereof can step on board a ten-hour train at Chicago and pay his fare and that of his family and friends with it, to the extent of $100, and ALL WITH A CERTIFICATE OF STOCK WHICH COSTS ONLY $27 AT THE PRESENT MOMENT.

You Cannot Lose a Dollar

If you never go back East, and never have a chance to travel yourself on this stock certificate, the transportation is transferable, and any of your friends can take and use it, or you can cash it in at any ticket broker's, at a small discount for brokerage. And you can do this, without waiting for the whole road to be completed, but get your money's worth as soon as the first 100-mile section is in actual operation between Chicago and Goshen, Ind., probably within a year.

All your life, perhaps, you have had to pay railroad fare, while others more lucky than you, got passes, and rode free. Wouldn't you like for once to enjoy the sensation of riding on your own stock certificate over a railroad line of which you were part owner?

There is something very attractive about owning stock in a railroad; it is a real thing. The tracks, the rolling stock, the carshops and palatial terminals are objects which can be seen and their value exactly determined. Railroads are a necessity, the same as food, or clothing, or the air we breathe. They will be here on earth as long as we are, and ELECTRIC RAILWAYS WILL BE HERE LONG AFTER WE ARE GONE.

Reader, we have tried to show you that this is your opportunity to lay aside a nest-egg of fortune, and begin to provide an income for your old age. Whether you have much or little laid by, or are earning great or meager wages, does not matter. It is your judgment, your determination of what is to happen in the future that counts most in this decision. If you have seen the street car lines of this country change from horse power to electric power within the past 15 years, and the telephone come to be an object of common use, and have watched the advent of automobiles, you ought to be able to gauge the future of rapid transit in this country.

WE HAVE NO DOUBT THAT WITHIN THE NEXT 10 YEARS IT WILL BE POSSIBLE TO TRAVEL FROM OCEAN TO OCEAN IN 3 DAYS' TIME. AS SOON AS THE AIRLINE ROUTE FROM CHICAGO TO NEW YORK PROVES A SUCCESS, NO DOUBT ANOTHER, 1000 MILES LONG, FROM CHICAGO TO DENVER, WILL BE PROJECTED.

Something Worth Selling

There may be some fears that this railroad will be bought up by the Morgans, Harrimans, Hills and other railroad kings. BUT YOU NEVER NEED SELL YOUR STOCK UNLESS YOU GET YOUR PRICE. YOU NEED NEVER FEAR BUT WHAT YOU CAN SELL IT, IF EVER YOU NEED THE MONEY. Invest every dollar that you feel you can spare for the next year or two, in this Electric Airline stock. Don't let fears or doubts deter you, but make a careful study of the facts, as they are told in our prospectus, and let your own common sense guide you.

TWENTY-SEVEN DOLLARS BUYS A SHARE TODAY. THE PRICE WILL NEVER BE SO LOW AGAIN, NOR THE TERMS SO EASY.

If you are not prepared to buy for cash this week or month, you may avail yourselves of our partial-payment system, by which you pay $2.70 per share down in cash, and $2.70 per share a month for the next nine months. No interest charges. WE GIVE THE SAME TRANSPORTATION PASSES WITH CERTIFICATES BOUGHT ON TIME AS WITH THOSE BOUGHT FOR CASH; and we give the same attention to a subscription for a single share as to that for a thousand shares.

Fill out either of the two coupons and forward to our address as soon as you can determine your subscription.

Kern River Placers.

Diversion of the waters of Kern River by the Edison Power Company makes possible the working of the old placers below water level and down to bedrock. Lands below the Edison dam have been bought and will be worked for placer gold by a company of which the following named business men of Southern California are directors: G. A. Edgar, Mayor of Santa Ana; W. A. Choate, Los Angeles; D. H. Thomas, Santa Ana; E. J. Stumpf, Los Angeles; Frank Monoghan, Santa Ana. A great deal of gold was taken out of the Kern River placers in the early sixties.

New Mining Journal.

The first number of The Los Angeles Miner, an eight-page, seven columns to the page paper devoted to promotion of the mining industry, has appeared, and after December 1 the paper will be issued weekly. J. M. Reuck, former owner of the Bakersfield Californian and well known in the advertising field, is publisher of the new paper, which is full of interesting matter and well printed.

Tailings.

A new mining camp called Aura has been established in Elko county, Nev., as a result of recent discoveries of rich ore. According to the Nevada State Journal, one of the claims, the Jack Pot, has a three-foot vein of $800 ore, and there are other prospects equally remarkable. Aura has a Chamber of Commerce property is booming and the camp shows evidences of permanency.

A 2-ton nugget of ore, containing more than a ton of silver, was taken out of a mine at Cobalt, Ont., recently.

Los Angeles men operating in Oregon mines have bonded the C. S. Lode near Gold Hill, Or., and begun driving a tunnel to cut a rich ore shoot opened by shaft work some years ago. The vein is a peculiar one, carrying boulders of mineralized quartz in soft gangue between walls that are 30 feet apart. R. E. Doan is at the head of the syndicate.

Fifty thousand dollars cash was paid for two acres of ground in the Bullfrog district on Nov. 1, being the record price paid in Nevada for mining acreage, or any other kind, for that matter. The ground belonged to John McKane, T. L. Oddie and John T. Overbury, and was bought by Volner T. Hoggatt and others. The Fraction property is an unbroken body of ore that is expected to ship pay ore from every foot of ground.

MERGE GOLDFIELD MINES.

With Fifty Million Capital New Corporation Takes Over Four Great Properties.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 10.—The merger of four leading Goldfield mines was announced on the local stock exchange yesterday. The mines absorbed by the new corporation, known as the Goldfield Consolidated Mines Company, capitalized at $50,000,000, are the Mohawk, Jumbo, Red Top and Laguna.

The par value of the shares of the Goldfield Consolidated Mines Company has been fixed at $10. The properties acquired by the company have been taken over on the following basis: Mohawk $20 a share, Jumbo $5 a share, Red Top $5 a share, Laguna $2 a share. These shares will be paid for in shares of the Goldfield Consolidated Mines Company, it is said, on the basis of economy.

TWO TRAINS CRASH.

About Three Hundred Are Aboard but Fortunately None Are Injured. Engines Are Destroyed.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—Train No. 29, east bound, and train 114, west bound, crashed into each other last night half a mile west of Jamaica on the Long Island Railroad. Both engines were smashed.

There were about three hundred persons on the two trains, but none was seriously hurt, which was considered a miracle. Several of the cars were telescoped and others badly damaged.

Both trains were on the same track because of an open switch or somebody's blunder.

ANATOMY OF TEETH.

The biological section of the Southern California Academy of Sciences will hold its session tomorrow evening at the Pacific College of Osteopathy. Dr. William Bebb of the Dental College will give an address on "Comparative Anatomy of the Teeth," and will illustrate his address with microscopic preparations. The public is invited to attend. All Pasadena electric cars pass the college.

Perhaps Mr. Balfour was not terminologically exact the other day in describing Mr. Carnegie as "a metaphysician in spite of himself." The fact is, Mr. Carnegie is a metallurgician in spite of other people.—[London Globe.

[AUTHORIZED ANNOUNCEMENT.]

NEW LEASING COMPANY IN THE FIELD

A brand new leasing company makes its appearance this week under the name of the Tonopah-Goldfield Leasing Syndicate, incorporated under Nevada laws for $500,000 at $1 par. The company has acquired the block of ground 300 feet wide and about 1000 feet long on the Miss Jessie and Last Chance claims of the Laguna Mining Company's ground, and the next block north from the Diamond Drill.

The fact that Laguna is now selling at $2.05, and also on account of the drill having encountered pay ore in the hold, should make this stock attractive to investors. Their lease has a year to run and they have purchased the electric hoist and gallows frame now being used on the Rose-Mohawk, and within the next two weeks same will be installed on the Laguna lease of the company. They are now retimbering the old Miss Jessie shaft and putting it in shape and preparing sink 300 feet perpendicularly.

The officers of the company would warrant confidence and "something good" in the leasing line. B. L. Smith, being president and also connected in various other large mining and business enterprises of this southern section; L. L. Mushett, vice-president, the postmaster at Tonopah; H. B. Tonkin, secretary, a mining engineer of known ability and authority on mining matters, and R. C. Moore, treasurer, assistant cashier of the Tonopah Banking Corporation at Tonopah. These gentlemen, together with C. D. Porter, the well-known mining man of San Francisco, constitute the board. W. H. Whitmore & Co. have been appointed the company's agents in Goldfield, where full information can be had, or a letter may be addressed to the company direct, No. 8 Butler Building, P. O. Drawer No. 28, Tonopah, Nev., and immediate reply will be made.

Make Money While You Sleep

Dividends Guaranteed in Ninety Days

Only 50,000 Shares at 50 Cents Each Will Be Placed on Sale—You Will Have to Hurry

American Amber Mica Company, capital $300,000, has been organized for the purpose of developing the richest mica bearing land in the world, all mineral rights to the 480 acres having been secured by H. L. MILLER & CO., the well-known real estate and investment firm of Los Angeles, with offices at 414 West Seventh St.

Los Angeles people and all others who are bright enough to know the value of a first-class investment proposition are now given an opportunity to secure ground floor stock in the richest mica mine in America.

Guaranteed Dividends

Only 50,000 shares of the stock will be placed on the market offered at the low price of 50 cents a share, with a guarantee of the payment of 2 per cent. dividend within ninety days, guarantee to be made good by H. L. Miller & Co.

This is the chance of a lifetime, and those who want to get in on a paying investment at the very beginning should act at once.

For Eager Local Investors

Every since the announcement of the discovery of this mica scores of local investors have been eager for the formation of a stock company, in order that they might secure shares at any price.

The guarantee by H. L. Miller & Co. that the payment of a 2 per cent. dividend will be made within ninety days will be fully realized, for there is now enough mica on the dump sold at 60 cents to $14 a pound that will create a fund more than sufficient to meet the sum required for the dividend payments to be made. As stated already orders have been received for five tons and they have six tons on the dump.

This will be the only mine ever opened that will go on record as paying dividends out of the product of the mine within 90 days.

Remember this and hasten to secure a good-sized block of the American Amber Mica Company's stock.

Careful Management

These names will insure conservative management. The officers of the company are: H. L. Miller, president; C. D. York, vice-president; T. M. Miller, secretary and treasurer; Davis, Rush & Willis, attorneys. Broadway Bank and Trust Company its depository. Capitalization $300,000, when it should be ten million.

The valuable property is located in Fanning county, State of Georgia, in the range of Blue Ridge Mountains, 175 miles nort of Atlanta, adjoining North Carolina, in which last named State has been worked successfully the only mine in this country.

The lucky discovery of the new mica mine was made by C. D. York, who started from Chicago, accompanied by an expert engineer, to prospect for mica. They located the property and H. L. Miller & Co. immediately acquired all rights to the valuable mineral acreage of 480 acres.

90 Per Cent of Mica Imported From India

It is known that 90 per cent. of the mica used in the United Sates is imported from India, and that the large output of the only other mine in this country in the State of North Carolina is far insufficient to supply the demand.

Mica is a class of silicates having a prismatic angle of 120 degrees, eminently perfect basal cleavage, affording thin, tough scales, colorless or jet black, transparent or translucent, of widely varying composition and crystallizing in the monoclinic system. Mica is sometimes called isinglass.

Value 60c to $14 Per Pound

Mica is used by electric light and other companies for the purpose of high-class insulation, and it is also used for lubricating and other purposes. Good mica runs in value from 60 cents to $14 per pound, and waste or fine mica, which ground up for lubricating use, sells readily at 3 to 6 cents a pound.

Fine samples of the mica taken from the company's Georgia mine may be inspected by calling at the office of

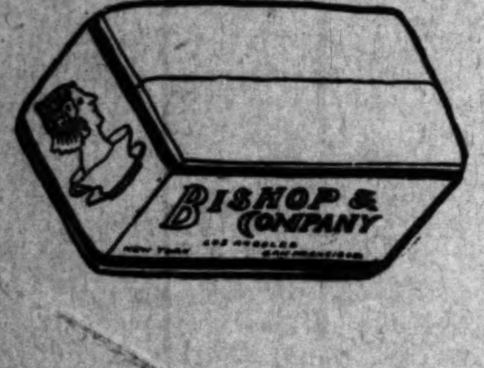
Bishop's Instantaneous Cup Chocolat



Two packages 5c.
One package enough for a cup.

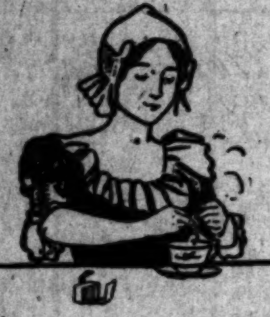
Will Revolutionize The Chocolate Drinking of Today

Think of the convenience of using a chocolate that can be prepared for drinking in a minute's time; a chocolate that is already mixed with milk and sugar; that requires no cooking or boiling, that can be stirred into a cup of hot water by each individual at the table, and is ready for drinking at once. This is what can be done with Bishop's Cup Chocolate, the new chocolate for the American people.



Break the package into the cup.

Boiling Your Chocolate is the Old-Fashioned Way Now

The idea that boiling makes a chocolate better is without foundation. Drink a cup of Bishop's Cup Chocolate, which is instantly made, and you'll recognize this fact. It's in the chocolate itself that the goodness of the cup depends.

Bishop's Cup Chocolate is a preparation of the choicest chocolate. Absolutely pure, rich and delicious. A chocolate that makes a delightful eating chocolate just as it is; that cannot harm the children in the least because of its purity.

Stir with a little hot water until dissolved.

Bishop's Cup Chocolate Will Be Used Wherever and Whenever a Good Cup of Chocolate is Wanted

- For the Picnic
- In the Home
- On Social Occasions
- For the Traveler's Lunch
- For the Camper's Trip
- At the Soda Fountain
- At Restaurants and Hotels
- In the United States Army
- For the Children's School Lunch
- In the Far off Mining Camp

Fill with hot water, then drink.

Its Great Convenience

A cup of hot wiater is the simplest and easiest thing to get wherever one is and with a cup of hot water and a package of Bishop's Cup Chocolate—your cup of chocolate is ready is ready in a minute. No milk or sugar has to be provided for—they're in the chocolate. Put several packages of Bishop's Cup Chocolate on the table each meal and some hot water—and those who want Chocolate can have it at once—and can have it hot.

2½c

The Cost Per Cup

And this cost includes the milk and sugar. Two cakes in a package for 5 cts. Pound packages containing 16 cakes 40 cts.

Contains the Milk and Sugar

After you have provided the packages of Bishop's Cup Chocolate, that's all that's necessary, but the hot water. Hot water is available wherever one is—even in the distant mountains—but milk and sugar is sometimes difficult to get. If you want a cup of something warm, late at night, just a cup of hot water and BISHOP S CUP CHOCOLATE—and you have as fine a drink as possible to get, even if you spend thirty instead of one minute in the preparation.

Bernard Shaw has been talking in his own familiar fashion about his new play, "The Doctor's Dilemma," to a London reporter. He said: "A baby in arms could have written this play of mine as far as the death part of it is concerned. Pathos? Oh, yes, there will be lots of pathos; the court theater will be damp with tears and windy with sniffs; the fourth act will give London rheumatism. The really difficult and interesting part is the handling of that pressing modern problem, the doctor—the man who has a pecuniary interest in mutilation and an absolute license to commit murder. That is what sensible people will come to hear. They will have to bring their brains with them, too. The first act is like 150 pages out of Joyce's scientific dialogues. Did you ever hear of Opsonin? No? Of course not; you spend your life in the theater, and therefore never hear of anything that is going on in the world. Well, 'The Doctor's Dilemma' is all about Opsonin.'" Mr. Shaw knows the value of mystery and advertisement as well as any one.

For pianists to make their own "arrangements" of the compositions of their forerunners has been common enough in musical history: Liszt "arranged" Chopin, Schubert and others; Tausig arranged Bach and many more; Rubinstein arranged Schumann, Chopin, etc., and all recent players have arranged Liszt—in the way of smoothing out the superabundant technical difficulties of his writings. It has been left to Moritz Rosenthal, the Austrian lion of the piano, who will tour America next season, to "arrange" Liszt by multiplying these difficulties. This summer he has been adding to some of the most trying works of the great Weimar master figurations which are said to be the most amazing ever contained in piano scores. Only an unparalleled giant of technique such as Rosenthal would have the audacity to venture upon such hazardous ground. These Liszt arrangements will be included in Rosenthal's programme on his forthcoming visit to this country.

The Drama—Players, Playhouses, Gossip of the Stage.

TOPICS OF THE STAGE.

After a quarter of a century of hard, artistic work, Louis James has, in the eyes of New York audiences, "become somebody."

Now before Mr. James produced "The Merry Wives" at the New Amsterdam Theater in November he was undoubtedly as good an actor as he is today. But he lacked the financially though artistically futile stamp of Metropolitan recognition; "Broadway" did not know him.

Now his career, the events of his life, his early struggles—all these are beginning to interest people.

The village records of Tremont, Ill., disclose the fact that at 3 o'clock upon the morning of October 3, 1842, a healthy and bouncing boy was born to Benjamin F. and Elmira H. James, and upon perusing the register an insertion is observed which states that upon November 13 this self same baby was christened Louis.

From his earliest boyhood he displayed an aptitude for literature, and his mother proudly affirmed that at the age of 4 he would recite his nursery rhymes with an abandon and ability that was the marvel of this staid village.

FALSTAFF AND HIS MERRY FOLK.

Mr. James's production of "The Merry Wives of Windsor," which will be seen at the Mason Operahouse tomorrow night, is direct from the New Amsterdam theater of New York, in which the actor scored an unusual success a few weeks ago. An excellent production is promised, and Mr. James's work as Falstaff is said to be especially effective.

The James family moved to Chicago in the early 50's and the hopeful Louis attended school at the old Garden City schoolhouse on North Clark street. Here he became the moving spirit in all school and church entertainments, and the chroniclers say that he never failed to elicit the most ardent enthusiasm by his rendition of Rienzi's address to the Romans, Marc Antony's oration or Wolsey's "Farewell."

Across the street from the school was a building called "Honore's barn," and it was therein that Louis James first donned the sock and buskin. Here he used to appear in the borrowed tablecloth of his mother and plead the love story of Antony to the Cleopatra of Bertha Honore, whose father owned the barn. Bertha Honore is now the universally known Mrs. Potter Palmer, and many times did he and she divide the pins paid for admission to witness their shows. Leaving school their lives became divided. She was to be a millionaire's wife, he was to be an actor, but the happy days spent together have always been cherished by both.

Now to quote Mr. James's own words: "I was ambitious in my school days to become an actor, a Shakespearean actor, and my two pet characters were Othello and Falstaff. Oh, if I could only play them so successfully as to be acceptable to the public, my cup of ambition would indeed be running over, for I considered then as I do now that the antithesis of conception and execution of these two characters affords such an opportunity for characterization, that the actor who can master them consummates an achievement worthy of the great author.

"But that was not my only ambition. I had always been a great admirer of military life and wanted to be a soldier. I had that ambition gratified, too, for when the Civil War broke out I was wild to enter the army. I was under age, however, and could not enlist in Chicago, so I ran away to Washington in 1861 and enlisted as a private in the Sixteenth New York Light Artillery. I served with my battery two years, first in the Army of the Potomac, and afterward the Department of Tennessee, in Kentucky, Tennessee and West Virginia, and while we were in the thick of some sharp fighting I was fortunate to escape without any serious wounds. At the end of two years my father insisted upon having me mustered out, as the sergeant. After a short visit to my folks, who were then living at Aummit, ten miles out of Chicago, I went to Louisville, Ken., and bothered the life out of dear old Barney Macauley until he gave me a job in his stock company, where I made my début in a very minor role, with Laura Keane in 'Rachel the Reaper,' at $9 per week. This was in 1864."

While there Mr. James first met Lawrence Barrett, who gave him his first opportunity, playing Matthew Leigh in "Rosedale." After this season with Mr. Barrett he became a member of Mrs. John Drew's stock company at the Arch Street Theater, Philadelphia, where for six years he played everything from Uncle Tom to Romeo. In 1871 he became a member of the Daly stock company, then playing at the old Fifth Avenue Theater, New York, the cast including Fanny Davenport, W. J. LeMoyne, Clara Morris, Mrs. Gilbert, Fanny Morant, Daniel Harkins, James Lewis and others. Then followed his successful engagement as leading man at the famous Ford's stock company, Baltimore, where he played Othello to Edwin Booth's Iago; Ingomar to Mary Anderson's Parthenia, and Macbeth to her Lady Macbeth, and supported Barrett, Jefferson and Adelaide Neilson. From there he went to the Boston Theater, Boston, and created all the leading characters in the many big productions made there in the early 80's. Following Boston came his engagement as leading man with John McCullough, the remembrance of which is one of Mr. James's most pleasant memories. He and McCullough were great personal friends, and the well-adorned walls of Mr. James's cottage at Monmouth Beach, N. J., display many of the gifts he received from that grand actor and fine gentleman. His last engagement in support of a star was with Lawrence Barrett, and the memory is yet green of his performance of Pepe in "Francesca di Rimini." The past few years have been devoted to starring in the legitimate and classic drama.

THE LOCAL WEEK.

The Mason Operahouse promises a classical production of the first importance in "The Merry Wives of Windsor," which, with Louis James as the star, will open a week's engagement at that theater tomorrow night.

Mr. James himself, of course, will be seen as Falstaff. He has won fine notices in that part from New York to San Francisco, and has apparently added a creation of importance to his list of successes.

Excellent scenery and fine costuming are also promised. The new James company, especially engaged for this production, includes Nellie McHenry, Norman Hackett, Aphie James, Charlotte Lambert, Lillian Lancaster, J. Arthur Young, and a score of others.

Mary Van Buren will play Milady and William Desmond will appear as D'Artagnan, in the production of Alexander Dumas's masterpiece, "The Three Musketeers," which is scheduled for the Burbank Theater offering this afternoon.

The trio of musketeers will be rounded out by Robert Homans and Arthur Rutledge, as Porthos and Athos, respectively. Harry Mestayer will have an opportunity for splendid character work as Cardinal Richelieu.

Scenic Director Frank King has promised an unusually artistic environment.

The sequel to "The Prisoner of Zenda," which is "Rupert of Hentzau," will be played this week by the Belasco Theater Stock Company.

Count Hentzau attempts to work himself into the graces of King Rudolf by intercepting a letter from Rudolph Rassendyl to Queen Flavia, and the ensuing complications make a plot of great dramatic interest.

Lewis Stone will again have the dual role of Rudolph and Rudolf, Amelia Gardner will be seen as Flavia, and Harry Glazier will enact the dashing Rupert.

This will be a week of old favorites at the Orpheum.

The headline attraction will be Rice and Cady, appearing in a new sketch, "Playing the Ponies." Augusta Glose, pretty and piquant, will present a new musical monologue. Frances d'Arcy will be remembered by Orpheum patrons as a gifted singer of graceful personality. Collins and Hart do a burlesque of the "strong man" act. An artistic number is promised in violin selections by Max Millian, young German virtuoso.

The holdovers are the pretty pair, Hanson and Nelson, Burton and Brooks in "The Limit," and the Glinsereitti troupe of acrobats.

With the departure of the Ulrichs and the opening of the regular season at the Grand Operahouse, melodrama gives place for the moment to comedy.

The new order of things will be inaugurated this afternoon with the matinée performance of "Tilly Olsen," in which Emily Ericson Greene is said to give a capital impersonation of a funny Swede girl.

Unlike most playwrights Henry Arthur Jones has written much and lectured often of the theater. He was little known, comparatively, when he began to tilt, on Sunday evenings in stuffy London halls, at realism on the stage and to plead the cause of a serious and a national drama. He spoke with the ardor and sincerity that were in him, he struck and spared not until his listeners forgot the sharpness of their neighbors' elbows and the wetness of their neighbors' umbrellas. Now he lectures at universities and to royal institutions and writes articles for the monthly reviews. He was one of the spokesmen of the revival of the English drama that began fifteen years ago, as well as one of the playwrights whose pieces were making it. In and out of season he defended it, as in and out of season in later years he has championed the serious drama that should give intellectual as well as sensuous pleasure and reflect the life and spirit of the time. He has reasoned not a little, and asserted more, of subsidized theaters, of the place of the actor-manager, of the art of acting, of the general influence of the stage. And in all this writing and lecturing, Mr. Jones has believed what he said and said it sometimes very dogmatically with unconcealed contempt for opposing opinions and disconcerting facts. He is wiser and more judicial now than he was in those controversial days when the new English drama was a living issue and not as it is to us of 1906 an established fact from which we have gone forward (or backward) to the free fantasias of Barrie and of Shaw, while we take our Pinero and our Jones as matters of course. It has been easy to make smart fun of him—to say write plays but don't talk about them; do your work seriously but let the world discover your seriousness by that work. These are the inevitable gibes at his temperament, his convictions, and some of his heavy-handed and rhetorical deliverances. He has taken them in good part. He has outlived many of them. When every shortcoming in his plays or in his preaching, and every error of his taste in both, has been charged and measured against him, he has made the English-speaking dogma appear "more honorable"—to borrow George Meredith's fine phrase—and "more quick with the blood and spirit of our time."

In the staging of one of his earlier plays, Joseph Jefferson, accompanied by a friend, attended a rehearsal, at which a lively disagreement arose between two of the actresses as to the possession of the center of the stage during a certain scene. While the manager poured oil upon the troubled waters Jefferson sat carelessly swinging his feet from the rail of an adjoining box. The friend could stand it no longer. "Great Scott, Jefferson," he exclaimed, "this will ruin your play. Why don't you settle matters? You could if you only would." Jefferson shook his head gravely, but with a twinkle in his eye. "No, George," he replied; "the Lord only made one man who could ever manage the sun and moon, and you remember even he let the stars alone."

MISS BLANCHE RUBY.

This American soprano, direct from the French opera at Nantes, will be the soloist at the Symphony Orchestra's first concert, which will be given at the Mason Operahouse on Friday afternoon, November 23. Miss Ruby's voice is said to be a soprano of great beauty in colorature work. She will sing a scene and air from Ambroise Thomas's "Hamlet."

The decadance of the German stage was condemned by Dietrich Oertzen at the conference of German associations to promote public morality. He asserted that not one play dealing with pure love was produced in Germany during the last theatrical season. All the plays began with marriage and developed into divorce. "Divorce or suicide seems the only possible consequence of marriage to the playwrights who are most applauded," said Herr Oertzen, deploringly. "For example, this last season Berlin had four classes of theaters; first, the court theaters and a few private ones which produced classical plays; secondly, the modern theaters of which the high priest was Sudermann, who is frivolous when not immoral; thirdly, theaters which traded deliberately in lewdness, and, fourthly, the variety theaters and music halls, open tributaries to the vice of the streets." The members of the conference agreed with Oertzen, but none suggested a method to redeem the stage from its degradation.

Discussion on the effectiveness and propriety of apparitions on the stage probably will be revived by the Marlowe-Sothern production of "Jeanne D'Arc." The supernatural, according to the Public Ledger's review of Percy Mackay's play recently presented in Philadelphia, is a feature of the latest addition to the repertoire of Mr. Sothern and Miss Marlowe. In the English drama's salad days theatric presentation of the supernatural was admittedly popular. Shakespeare, of course, used "visions" with notable freedom; in "Hamlet" the appearance of the murdered King was the basis of the tragedy. In the early stage directions, moreover, the stipulation was expressed that the eerie visitor must be, so to speak, corporally presented. The ghosts in "Hamlet," "Julius Caesar" and "Richard III." have important lines to say. In "Macbeth," however, although the witches must be visible to the spectator, some latitude is admissible in the case of the slain Banquo. The scene admits of the actual omission of the unwelcome gory-headed guest at the banquet table, and in Modjeska's presentation the King of Scotland addressed only the air, "the false creation, proceeding from the heat-oppressed brain." This vision of the original, for Shakespeare stipulated for the entrance of the bloody Banquo, has been directly in line with the modern tendency of leaving something to the imagination of the audience. It was in fact, considered infinitely more effective to picture Macbeth's apparition as non-existent and arising but in the remorse-tortured brain of the murderer than to include the dead Banquo in the list of dramatis personae for "It is the things unseen that terrify."

Dramagraphs.

Langdon Mitchell is writing a play for Henrietta Crosman. This was to have been her vehicle this year, but it was not completed in time. With the success of "The New York Idea," Mr. Mitchell's next play will be watched with interest.

The villa which Edmond Rostand has built in his country retreat of Cambo, in the Pyrenees, is finished and he has taken up his residence there. It is an ideal dwelling, surrounded by a charming garden. Rostand, grown indolent, does not even read any longer the Paris papers, getting his news from two local sheets. His son, who is only fifteen, has already translated from the English over a score of novels and other works.

The Musical World.

MUSIC AND MUSICIANS.

For this week at the opera we are promised three good things

Tomorrow night the week will be ushered in with "La Boheme," which will feature Mmes. Salvaneschi, Bacchetta, Larmbardi, Canetti, Bergami and Reano, and Miles. Georgi and Nunez. The quaintly humorous buffo Bergami will make his first appearance here on this engagement. Mlle. Georgi will make her American début as Mimi, and Mlle. Nunez will do the same as Musetta. Salvaneschi and Bacchetta will, of course, be cast in the principal parts as Rudolph and Marcel, respectively.

"Africana," on the following night, will re-present Mme. Adaberto and M. D'Ottavi.

"Rigoletto," on Wednesday night, will probably find Angelo Antola in the title role, Adelina Tromben singing Gilda, and Emilio Orelli making his bow to us as Il Duca.

The operas will be repeated in the usual arrangement.

Attilo Salvaneschi
Ugo Canetti
Adelina Tromben

STARS OF THE OPERA.

MM. Salvaneschi and Canetti, with Mlle. Tromben, will be features in the grand opera productions of the week at the Auditorium. M. Salvaneschi will sing the exquisite, romantic role of Rudolf tomorrow night, in "Boheme." Mlle. Tromben will be heard as Gilda, in the Wednesday revival of "Rigoletto." M. Canetti will lend his art and beautiful bass voice to at least two of the week's productions.

Ellis First.

The Ellis Club will give its opening concert at Simpson Auditorium on Tuesday evening.

Pity that the club couldn't have set its programme along in the week—after the grand opera first nights. However, this sterling organization sings for art, and is always assured of an audience, anyway. A fine list of numbers will be delivered under the baton of Director Poulin.

Choral Concert.

On Wednesday evening the Los Angeles Choral Association will give its first concert in Gamut Hall.

The baton will be wielded by Julius Albert Jahn, and the quartette of assisting soloists will be Miss Margaret Goetz, Ernest Leeman, Oskar Seiling, and Mr. Jahn himself in a piano selection.

Woman's Lyric Club.

The Woman's Lyric Club will give its first concert Friday evening, December 7, at Simpson Auditorium.

Several soloists will assist in presenting an excellent programme.

Of especial interest wil be two numbers by Frederick Stevenson. They are his "Dance of the Fays" and the charming "Italian Serenade," dedicated to the Lyric Club.

Douglas Concert.

Mr. Douglas's second organ recital will be given in St. Paul's Pro-Cathedral on Thursday evening. Judging by his last concert, the coming one should be enjoyable and artistically profitable.

His programme is made up of selections from Parker, Rheinberger, Sullivan, Thiele, Merkel, Botting, Storer, Salome and Wagner—with an addition of a manuscript sonata of his own, to be played here for the first time.

Philharmonic Changes.

Owing to Mlle. Parkina's enforced absence from the Philharmonic course, Manager Behymer now offers several very satisfactory substitutions.

The list of changes is certainly very complete, and offers the Parkina seatholder an opportunity at the concerts of Ossip Gabrilowitch, George Hamlin, the Chicago Symphony Orchestra under Von Fielitz, the Grace Methodist Episcopal choir of Chicago, the second concert of Schumann-Heink, or the second concert of Rosenthal.

Arrangements may be made at the Behymer ticket office in Birkel's.

Band Programme.

Director Vessella will offer at Long Beach today Suppe's "Morning, Noon and Night" overture, an andante and tarantelle for clarinet, grand selection from "Carmen," the Ave Verum Corpus of Mozart (afternoon), and Mercadante's "Saracen Slave" overture, Mendelssohn's Spring Song, grand selection from "Fra Diavolo," the gavotte from "Mignon," the trio from "Attila," and Bizet's second Suite L'Arlisienne (evening.)

Director Moore has a good afternoon programme for Eastlake, including Weber's "Invitation to the Waltz," Lacombe's "Aubade Printaniere," a selection from Massenet's "Don Caesar de Bazan," Remmer's "Des Cloches de St. Malo," and the overture to "William Tell."

Seidl's Indian Opera.

From London, Frederick R. Burton writes the Boston Transcript:

An art work that might have been of great significance to America was lost in the untimely death of Anton Seidl. It now appears that the general scheme of that work has been undertaken by an Englishman. Seidl was engaged in the composition of an opera based on North American Indian legends. The name of the principal personage in the drama was to be Hiawatha. Indeed, more than one opera was in prospect, for librettist and composer, both ardent disciples of Wagner, had planned a trilogy. The libretto of the first in the series was finished, and it is understood that Seidl had completely sketched the music of one act. His death not only put an end to the work, but apparently it disheartened the librettist from proceeding further with the text, for the second and third "books" have yet to be written.

The first is in the nature of an introduction, for it carries the story only as far as the birth of Hiawatha. It is called "Nanabozho." In structure, style of verse, and method, it is as unlike Longfellow's Hiawatha as could be imagined, but the same mixture of Indian traditions and facts that seem regrettable to many in Longfellow's work, is maintained. The present author, like the former, evidently aims to generalize concerning Indians, regarding them as fundamentally one people with identical mythology. Like Longfellow, he takes his first suggestion from Algonquin sources, and, like Longfellow, he goes to the Ojibways for certain special details of tradition. For example, "Nanabozho," the title of the introductory opera, is the name of the demigod who is the hero of numberless Ojibway stories; he is closely allied to, if not identical with Kuloskap, or Gloskabe, the demigod of the Passamaquoddies and other Algonquin tribes of the East. Longfellow versified the Ojibway legends of Nánabozho and gave to the hero the name of an Iroquois demigod, "Hiawatha," the Iroquois and Algonquin tribes being as foreign to one another as well could be. Their languages, customs and mythology were totally distinct; the only thing they had in common was life in the open on the same continent. The present author dips into Ojibway tradition for Nanabozho, Nokomis, and other personages, and works out the Ojibway conception of the creation to the birth of an Iroquois prophet and redeemer of his people.

Although this is disconcerting ethnologically, it may be justifiable enough from the point of view of art, and the public would be concerned only in the degree of general truthfulness and beauty attained by the author who constructs his picture from aboriginal materials. From this point of view "Nanabozho" is decidedly a promising work. It has all the mysticism—almost vagueness—that characterize both the Wagnerian conception of music-drama and Ojibway tradition. It deals, as does the "Ring," with personages who have human passions and magic powers, and who seem to work with an illogical but fascinating mixture of free will and fatalism for the ultimate advancement of the human race. And "Nanabozho" is dramatic. There are moments in it when a silent reading of the text stirs the blood and fires the imagination, and the climax, the invisible chorus of Nature announcing the birth of the prophet, is remarkably poetic. It leaves the reader with an eager desire to go on with the second book.

The author of this libretto is Mr. Francis Neilson. The little I know about his career leaves me, as does his libretto, with a wish to know more. At one time he was concerned in the stage management of operas at Covent Garden; at another he was associated in some capacity with "Buffalo Bill" in the Wild West show that is better known in Europe than it is in America. Again he was in touch with Seidl in New York, an assistant stage manager at the Metropolitan Operahouse, I am told. At present he is in this country and deeply interested in politics. For some years he has been an effective speaker on socialistic platforms, and during the general election of last winter he "stood" for Parliament in the socialistic interest. He came very close to election, the majority against him being less than two hundred.

Mr. Neilson's scheme for an Indian opera has been taken in hand by one of the cleverest of the younger composers here, Mr. W. H. Bell. He is a boyish-looking man of about thirty, whose compositions for orchestra have already won a high place for him among English musicians. Although he achieved recognition early and is abundantly gifted he is not producing works under the forcing process that brings so much musical talent to grief in this country. A composer's success here usually means an inordinate demand for new works, and under the stimulus of forthcoming productions, and the flattery of publishers and festival managers, many a man has written hurriedly and exhausted his individuality before arriving at artistic maturity. Mr. Bell will not be hurried, and he is not eager to be kept in the public eye. He teaches the theory of music in the Royal Academy of Music, and is organist and musical director in one of the large churches of London. His duties are so systematized that he can give nearly half his time to composition.

Art and Artists.

BY ANTONY E. ANDERSON.

After Albert Cuyp.

A sunset silence holds the patient land;
Against the sun the stolid cattle stand;
Framed hazy, in the gold that slips
Between the sails of lazy ships,
And floods with level, yellow light
The broad, green meadow grasses bright.

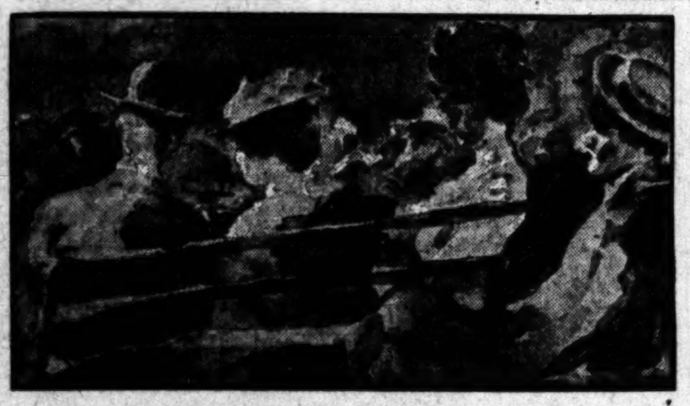
At the Blanchard Gallery.



At the Band Concert, evening, by Charles P. Austin.

One of the most interesting exhibitions of the year is the one now being held at the Blanchard gallery. It is the joint work of two friends, Hanson Puthuff and Charles P. Austin, with a few added canvases from the brush of the late Alexis Compera.

Its great interest arises from a variety of reasons, not the least potent of which is the strength, freshness and spontaneity of the work these two Los Angeles young men have to show. Each is content to look at nature in his own way, and each displays an amazing facility in registering his impressions with paint and brushes. Mr. Austin, indeed, who is fresh from the atmosphere and traditions of Paris, paints in a way that is really brilliant. The curious inquirer after depth will do well to remember that the diamond owes its dazzling luster to many polished facets—and also that Mr. Austin is still very young.

A few of his drawings, however, have much more than the surface quality of great cleverness. They are exquisite in feeling and sentiment, one of them in particular, "Sewing," being subtly true in character and having a sweetness and charm that is very appealing. This drawing, with its few suggestive touches of pastel, shows what we may some day expect from Mr. Austin in the heavier medium of oils.

Notwithstanding his dexterity with the brush, Mr. Austin does not as yet express himself as fully with that as with the pencil, or chalk, or charcoal. These last respond to his touch with wonderful sympathy. Time and experience, however, will undoubtedly induce him to say what he pleases with paint—and we may be sure that he will incline to say only that which is characteristic and beautiful.

Mr. Austin shows five canvases at this, his first exhibition, as well as a number of small drawings in water color, gouache, red chalk and pastel. The chalk drawing, a young girl sitting on a chair, is very fine. "Under the Arc Light," a tiny gouache, is strikingly effective and simple, and "At the Band Concert" is also treated in a broad and free manner.

Among the oils, "The Gray Hat" is strong in character, while "Tete de Danseuse Espagnole" is full of spirit and daring. "Reposing" is another very effective study.

Freedom of outlook and originality of execution have always marked the work of Hanson Puthuff. We have known these traits to be true for the past two years. Yet some of his present work will surprise many of his most ardent admirers, for he has made a very big step forward, more especially in the greater refinement of his color. Even in his decorative instinct—always strong—he has advanced greatly, as witness the beautifully-toned study of sky, sea and shore line which he calls "An Arrangement in Gray," and "Loco," almost equally pleasing in color scheme, though in a very different way. "Loco" is a peculiarly difficult subject, high noon without a shadow, but the values are kept with great skill.

Mr. Puthuff shows, in the present exhibit, several large figure studies and one life-size portrait, all painted with a fine sincerity and absolute fearlessness. "An Old Letter," a young girl in red reading a letter by lamplight, is almost startling in its daring, while "An Idle Afternoon," another young girl, in white, is flooded with sunlight and exhales a delicate sentiment. "Portrait of Mr. A." has many fine passages, shows good modeling, and is an earnest and dignified piece of work. Its main faults seem to be in the drawing of the hands.

Of Mr. Puthuff's landscapes, "Early Moonrise" is perhaps the most satisfying in every way. It reminds one of a Cazin, though the hills and trees are those of California. The poetry of twilight is suggested with truth and tenderness. It has none of the rawness of color that now and then jars one's sensibilities when one looks at other pictures by Mr. Puthuff.

"The Passing of Summer," another large canvas, is unique in its composition and scheme of color. It is splendidly decorative, and the same is true of the long, three-paneled picture called "Morning, Noon and Night." "Creeping Shadows" shows the red earth of hills in the background, with some well-modeled oaks toward the front of the picture.

"Near the Pigeon Farm" vibrates with lavender grays, and has a composition of unusual interest—the old bridge near the farm extending across the middle distance. The foreground shows us the ooze of the Los Angeles River in its most sluggish period.

No painter in Southern California, with the possible exception of Benjamin Chambers Brown, has more versatility than Hanson Puthuff, and none other gives us a more hopeful promise for the future. He has only to pursue the course he has already chosen—refining his harshness here and there, searching yet more diligently for truth—and he will surely arrive before many years have passed. In mere technical dexterity he is already more than proficient; in fact, he might find his road surer if his paint did not flow with such marvelous ease.

There are nine pictures from Alexis Compera in this exhibition. They are gray in tone, yet full of color, breathing, through floating twilight mists, of vague longings and sad regrets. There is never a note of joy and buoyancy in them—and when we remember their author's melancholy fate, we cannot wonder at this. Of the nine canvases, "An October Morning" and "Gray Day on the Platte" are exquisite.

These pictures by Puthuff, Austin and Compera will be shown for one week longer. No sincere lover of art should miss seeing them. The gallery is free to all.

Mrs. Pope's Etchings.

The exhibition of etchings and drypoints by Marion Holden Pope, which opened at Steckel's on the 1st, will continue to the 14th of the month.

It comprises some forty plates, many of them of great charm and beauty. The Italian set, which is composed almost entirely of street scenes and canal scenes in Venice, with a few bits from Rome and vicinity, is especially attractive. Some of them are in pure line, clean and vigorous.

The Monterey set, as well as some of those which come under the head of "Later Etchings" in the catalogue, are also exceedingly attractive, both in tone and line.

With her portraits and figure studies, it seems to me, Mrs. Pope is not quite so successful, her construction being sometimes decidedly weak and lacking in decision. This fault is due, no doubt, to the fact that she has been compelled to forego all art work for several years.

The character studies of Constance Crawley, while both delicate and sympathetic, lack vigor because of the same indecision that I have just mentioned.

The showing as a whole, however, is so good that one can easily forgive and forget a few shortcomings like these, which, when all is said, are by no means insistent.

The Painters' Club.

The Painters' Club will meet next Saturday at the Art Students' League. All members are requested to bring one or more framed pictures for the club's inspection.

The small gallery in the art store of Ford, Smith & Little Co., No. 313 Broadway, will hereafter be turned over to the club for its exclusive use. Their pictures wil hang there the year round for Angelenos—and outsiders, too—to see and to buy. These pictures will be changed from time to time (in all probability every two months,) so there will be no dearth of new pictures from the facile brushes of our own home painters. Drawings in black and white will also be shown, and everything, it is promised, will be of the best.

Fine Arts Association.

After the Puthuff-Austin-Compera exhibition closes in the Blanchard, the Fine Arts Association will take the hall for a year, holding a continuous and changing exhibition.

A number of authentic and interesting old masters are promised us, and many pictures by well-known American painters. Among the native contributors will be: Edward Gay, Frank Vincent Du Mond, Guy C. Wiggins, George H. McCord, Louis Akin, A. R. Poore, Robert C. Minor, Bruce Crane, R. Swain Gifford and E. S. Hamilton.

ART NOTES.

The Wachtels are busily at work in their new studio on West Avenue Forty-three. Elmer Wachtel has just finished one of his most important canvases, a magnificent stud yof hills toward sunset. Another beautiful recent picture shows a misty morning over the sea. It has the rhythmic quality of a perfect lyric. Marion Wachtel, too, has just painted two exceedingly strong and beautiful landscapes, water colors, and has begun an oil portrait of a man, which promises much in the way of truth and characterization.

Benjamin Chambers Brown will hold an exhibition in Music Hall, Blanchard's, beginning November 19 and continuing to the end of the month. This will be followed by a showing of Joseph Greenbaum's recent portraits, marines and landscapes, to be given for two weeks.

Carl Oscar Borg will show his recent landscape work in oils and water colors at the Little Corner of Local Art on November 19 and for two weeks after that Mr. Dorg has entered a new phase of his art development, and his later canvases are sure to excite much interest.

C. P. Neilson sold a goodly number of the water colors which he showed recently at Steckel's. The Ruskin Art Club bought one, and another went to the Polytechnic High School.

Norman St. Clair's exhibit at the Little Corner of Local Art went through with flying colors. Thirty-one pictures were shown, and twenty-one were sold. Angelenos, it would seem, are at last waking up to the fact that they need good pictures in their beautiful homes.

Hobart Bosworth was here on a flying visit last week. He is working hard at sketching in Tempe, Ariz., and expects to bring many canvases with him in May, when he will settle down with us permanently—and a very welcome addition he will prove to be, as painter, actor, lecturer and writer.

Leonard Lester has taken Granville Redmond's old studio on North Sichel street, and Mr. Redmond has moved to the Pacific Electric building, where J. W. Clawson also has a studio.

Raymond Gould, formerly with Gump in San Francisco, has opened a most attractive gallery and artscrafts display room on Fifth street, between Broadway and Hill. He will handle the work of our home painters, as well as canvases by other California artists. He is now showing excellent pictures by Eugene Torrey, Leonard Lester, L. F. Latimer, Benjamin Chambers Brown, C. Chapel Judson, Theodore Wores, Alex F. Harmer and others.

Theodore Wores has returned from Santa Barbara, and now has a temporary studio in Hotel Alexandria.

Martin J. Jackson has sent the pictures which remain over from his recent show at Blanchard's to San Francisco. From there they will go to Oakland.

The exhibition of paintings by Rob Wagner, scheduled at Steckel's for November, will be postponed till January.

Dr. T. W. McArthur has begun a course of twelve lectures on artistic anatomy at the School of Art and Design. All art students are cordially invited. The lectures will be given on Saturday afternoons.

The Army Canteen.

Brig.-Gen. Charles Bird, U.S.A., made a statement concerning the army canteen before the Presbyterian Synod of Baltimore, October 23, which is earnestly commended to those whose influence brought about the enactment of the present law prohibiting the sale of beer and light wines at army post exchanges. Gen. Bird, while reading a report on religious work in the army and navy, was interrupted by a question as to the use of liquor in those organizations, to which he replied with much feeling: "I am opposed to drinking in every form, but my observation would indicate that the canteen as an attachment to the army furnishes a better method of influencing against intoxication than the unrestricted drinking which must obtain in places conducted by private interests in the vicinity of army posts. The abolition of the canteen has meant a loss of many thousands of dollars in the amount of money saved by the enlisted men."—[Army and Navy Journal.

Reluctant Confession.

"Maybelle, has Harry ever kissed you?"

"Just once, Gladdy; but he begged so hard I couldn't refuse him."

"When was it?"

"Last Thursday night."

"Where did he kiss you?"

"In this town, of course."

"That doesn't answer the question. Where did he kiss you?"

"At home."

"That isn't what I want to know. Where did he kiss you?"

"In the conservatory."

"That's another evasion. Where did he kiss you?"

"Er—in the dark."

"You may just as well tell me the straight truth. Where did he kiss you?"

"On the back of my hand, if you think it's any of your business!"

Must Take Off Their Hats.

By contract with the management of the Astor Theater, women patrons of the house will remove their hats during a performance. Wagenhals & Kemper having experienced considerable trouble with women who enter the playhouse bearing upon their respective marcel waves lovely New York and Paris creations and who refuse to remove them, ordered new tickets, upon the reverse side of the seat coupon being printed: "This ticket is sold with the understanding and agreement that if the lady uses the same she will remove her hat upon request of an employé of the management." The New York courts have recently decided that a theater ticket was a contract entered upon between the purchaser and the management, so when a woman buys a ticket to the Astor she contracts to remove her hat.

Needless Alarm.

"Wait a minute till I get my clothes off!" called a shrill voice from the back end of the cable car.

All the strap-holders turned their heads as one man.

It was a small boy striving to drag off the hamper containing his mother's washing.—[Judge.

Mr. Mixup (to his son at a concert, during the performance of a duet:) D'ye see, Tom, now it's getting late, they're singing two at a time so as to get done sooner.—[Dublin Freeman.

On Friday a delightful affair was the card party given by Miss Mary Widney in honor of Miss Nina Perry of Napa, who is visiting her. Another pleasant affair that afternoon was the musicale and tea given by Mrs. W. J. Variel of No. 1236 Arapahoe street, in honor of women who assisted in making the S.P.C.A. ball a success. In the evening, the Philolethia Club gave their dancing party at Kramer's Hall.

One of the pleasant affairs of the week was the luncheon at the California Club, given by Miss William Mead, followed by an opera party. Miss Eva Kerns gave a shower that afternoon for Miss Mary Holmes.

—o—

Miss Hubbell, Another Debutante.

Safe to say, Miss Mary Hubbell, daughter of Hon. and Mrs. Stephen C. Hubbell of No. 972 Arapahoe street, will be one of the most attractive and popular of young débutantes. Her mother is planning to entertain with a tea on Friday afternoon, November 23, at which Miss Hubbell will make her formal début. She is a bright and vivacious girl, with a tall, svelte beauty, which is fascinating. Miss Hubbell attended school for several years in Washington, and before that was a pupil of Marlborough School, where she was a favorite.

—o—

Miss Chamberlain's Debut.

That pretty brown-eyed Miss Lois Chamberlain is another of the season's débutantes is a nice piece of news, for Miss Chamberlain is already most popular in society. Her mother, Mrs. Lee Chamberlain, is planning to entertain on Friday, December 7, at the Ebell Clubhouse with a large reception at which Miss Chamberlain will formally come out, and also in honor of Mrs. Paul Mellen Chamberlain, sister of Mrs. Chamberlain, who is here from Chicago on a visit.

—o—

Miss Perry Honored.

In honor of Miss Nina Perry, whose engagement to Herbert Howard was recently announced, and who is visiting here from Napa, Miss Mary Louise Widney of No. 623 West Jefferson street entertained on Friday afternoon with a hearts party.

The house was artistically decorated with chrysanthemums and ferns, and in the hall pink and white chrysanthemums were used together with strings of hearts and tulle bows. In the dining-room red and green were the colors used, carnations, geraniums and ferns being effectively combined. The young hostess was assisted in receiving by her mother, Mrs. W. W. Widney, and her sisters, Mrs. Paul Widney and Miss Katherine Widney.

Besides the hostess [illegible] receiving party and guest of hon[illegible]re were present: Mmes. Frank [illegible] of Redondo, W. T. Schneider, [illegible]k Simmonds, Ross R. Russell, Charles Northup, J. W. Gillette, Pemberton, W. W. Widney and Paul Pauly and Misses Ethel Shrader, Hannah McDonald, Grace Norton, Anabel Owen, Sophie Laing, Lillian Montague, Grace Pirtle, Agnes Barnwell, Ollibel Hutchinson, Geraldine Parry, Carrie Lenz, Nellie Mohr, Bess Woollacott, Ollie White, Clara Condee, Italja Bowers, Ada Heinzeman, Laura Blanche Goodwin, Maude Merryweather, Grace Van Alstyne, Virginia Scott and Edytha Marchant.

For Miss Allen.

Miss Emma Filbert is planning to entertain about forty guests on the coming Wednesday afternoon with a hearts party, at the home of her mother, Mrs. J. P. Filbert of No. 2511 Romeo street, in honor of Miss Vera Allen, a little Southern beauty, whose engagement to Hugo Burgwald was recently announced.

The affair is also a compliment to Miss Zollinger of Indianapolis, who is wintering in Southern California.

Miss Filbert will be assisted in receiving by her sisters, Mrs. A. W. Crippen, and Miss Bess Filbert. McVey's stringed orchestra will be in attendance and Mrs. Reynolds is to cater.

Invited guests include Mmes. Charles Freedman, Armedia Connon, Schultz, A. W. Crippen, Martin, O. O. Cozad, Lil McKewn, Leland Bagley, Lois V. Pelton, Delia Price, Elwood de Garmo, Wallace Spinks, Clarence Rundel, Byron Erkenbrecher, Thomas, Hammond, Brooks, Elva Crippen, E. L. Grenville, William Harrison, Evans, Lockman, Taggart, Kennser, Seeber, Jack Connon, E. H. Crippen, Edmund Locke, Tizzard and Misses Vera Allen, Zollinger, Katherine Widney, Estelle Heartt, Griswold, Opal McCleary, Anna Powers, Margaret Quinn, Clara Casey, Mary Newkirk, Grace Harvey-Elder, Julia Witman, Mary Widney and Bess Filbert.

Xopeia.

On Friday evening, November 16, the Xopeia Club will give the third of the series of dances to be given during the winter season, at Kramer's Hall. At a recent meeting it was decided to give but one more guest dance this season, and that the last of the series.

—o—

Taylor-Lawton.

In Long Beach, on Wednesday evening, at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Amelia V. Lawton, Dr. Raymond G. Taylor of Los Angeles was united in marriage to Miss Amelia Frances Lawton by Rev. F. A. Field. After congratulations, refreshments were served.

Dr. and Mrs. Taylor will be at home to friends at 1344 Toberman street, Los Angeles.

—o—

Entertain Miss Chew.

Mr. and Mrs. James T. Fitzgerald are entertaining as their [illegible] the talented little English violi[illegible]t, Miss Otie Chew, who is winteri[illegible] here. Mr. and Mrs. Fitzgerald are [illegible]ning many pleasant social doings f[illegible]eir young friend.

—o—

Los Angeles Woman Winning.

Mrs. Bertha Penning-Amet, a talented Los Angeles woman, whose splendid voice won many plaudits for her here, is now winning them in Europe. She is at present studying in Germany and is advancing with remarkable success. Though studying hard, Mrs. Amet has found time to do much other work, and among other things, she has written a number of pretty stories gathered during her season abroad. She will probably remain abroad another year.

—o—

Mrs. Goucher Home.

Mrs. S. Grant Goucher of No. 1237 Magnolia avenue, a popular young matron, has returned home after a six months' visit in New York, Washington and Philadelphia. Mrs. L. P. Menanam, a sister of Mrs. Goucher, from "Sunny Bank" on Hudson, returned with Mrs. Goucher, for a winter in Monrovia. She is accompanied by her mother, Mrs. Elizabeth H. Coe, and family. Mrs. Goucher, while in the East, spent several months with her sister in her handsome home.

—o—

Orphans' Home Reception.

The Board of Managers and residents of the Los Angeles Orphans' Home will receive informally on Tuesday afternoon. The building is on the corner of Yale and Alpine streets, and the Griffin or Garvanza car will take visitors there.

The Board of Managers and residents of the home are especially anxious that the gathering should be large on this occasion, as they have been trying to raise money to improve it, and in order to do so wish to give patrons opportunity of seeing the real work done in this most beneficial of charitable organizations. The children of the home will show the visitors about and also display their work, which is remarkably good.

Annual membership tickets for $2 entitle the holder to a vote at the election held in May, and also form a welcome addition to the income of the home. On this occasion no donations or subscriptions will be solicited, as it is given for the purpose of showing the pleasant life within these hospitable doors.

Ladies who will pour tea include: Mesdames Nathan Cole, Jr., Eggelhoff-Rundell, Richard W. Pridham, Lawrence Nordhoff and Misses Edith Cliff, Edna Wyman and Zella Fay.

Students' Reunion.

Mrs. Frank B. Rush entertained the former students of Fort Edward Institute, N. Y., last week at her handsome new home on South Grand avenue. It was decided by the hostess and guests to form a permanent organization to be known as the Pacific Branch of the Fort Edward Alumnae Association.

Many pleasing incidents of school life were related by S. V. Landt and others. Rev. J. P. Lee gave a short sketch of the life of Dr. Joseph E. King, president of the institution, and Miss Rush charmed every one with her excellent music. Light refreshments were served. Among those present were: Rev. and Mrs. T. S. Wrenn, Dr. and M[illegible] Luther Trimmer, Mrs. A. C. Rose[illegible] Ebbie McNeil Sabine, Mrs. Aug[illegible] Dunlap, Mrs. Belle Russell S[illegible] Mary Barnes Eckstrom, M[illegible] Brill Whittier, Mrs. E. A Little Talk on "Beauty"

The person who declared "beauty is only skin deep" was probably afflicted with a poor complexion. Beauty is a wonderful POWER in the world and it is every woman's duty to make herself as attractive as possible.

Kosmeo is a great aid to beauty for the reason that its judicious use will make the complexion clear, soft and white, eradicating all marring influences. The application of Kosmeo is simple. Its ingredients are pure.

About every popular style is represented in the collection. Pony and Prince Chaps, Etons and Long Coat styles.

Plaids, mixtures, stripes, checks and plain colors in the whole range of popular cloths are exhibited. It's a chance you'll not likely get again this season to pick up really good suits for so little money.

Choice of the lot $19.50 TOMORROW MONDAY

Jewelry and Leather Goods Novelties.

In this new showing of belts, bags, combs and French jewelry novelties there is so much that is new, odd and exclusive in design—so many pretty conceits that differ in every feature from past seasons' styles—that one must see them in order to gain any idea of their beauty. Take a peep at the front showcase tomorrow.

Plaid silk belts with gold buckles enameled in plaids to match. Separate plaid enameled buckles. Moire silk belts with fancy buckles and keyhole fastenings. Veronique buckles and buckle sets. Buckles and bracelets in new designs with Japanese jade settings. Jade bracelets with gold mountings. Pearl and jet necklaces with cross pendants. Fancy barrettes in a hundred novel styles.

Shopping and opera bags in entirely new shapes, new leathers and new mountings. Buffed alligator, lizard calf, levant, pig skin and pin seal. Many are shown with watch and other settings. Among them you will see novel styled vanity bags; card cases and French opera bags of the most elaborate character. We might fill the page with the many interesting things on display at this counter. But you had better come and enjoy looking them over yourself.

New Plaid Ginghams 25c

Fifty spick and sp[illegible]n new plaid ginghams go on sale at opening time tomorrow. Among them all the pretty, bright Scotch colorings and designs are shown, together with the softer, light pastel tones. The cloth is especially fine and highly finished—a finish that the laundry cannot destroy. Besides the large plaids this same goods comes in checks from the pin-head variety on up through the whole list of checks; every color; yd. 25c.

Rich Austrian Suitings

This is most likely the last shipment of these handsome woolens we can get this season, so those after the very best in novelty dress goods had better see these new twenty pieces.

There are indistinct plaids and checks, overplaids and herringbone stripes, fine mixtures and all styles that fashion approves. The dark rich colorings predominate; reds, greens, blues and browns. The Austrian suitings are the finest goods made for tailor suits and dressy gowns. These types will not be seen elsewhere. $1.75 a yard and $1.50.

Long Gloves in Abundance

The best grade of suede and glace gloves; sixteen-button lengths. Black, white, street and evening shades.

Adler's gloves for men. English reds, tans and browns. Pique seams. Pair $1.50.

Entre Nous Initiation.

The Entré Nous Sorority girls enjoyed a hilarious time over Friday, Saturday and Sunday at Long Beach, where they initiated into the mysteries of their sorority ten pretty young coeds from the University of Southern California. The mysterious ceremories commenced on the college grounds on Friday afternoon and ended Saturday afternoon amid much jollity.

Girls who safely passed through the initiation and are now members of this same society include: Misses Nina Chadwick, Clesa Kelly, Alice Smith, Louise Rush, Flora Robinson, Nell Vail, Cora Russell, Edna Augur, Hazel Hill, and Miss Vanderpool, one of the teachers of the college, chaperoned the girls.

At Mrs. Peyton's.

The Woman's Auxiliary of the McKinley Home are planning to give a bazaar on the afternoon and evening of November 23 at the home of Mrs. Valentine Peyton of No. 857 Westlake avenue. The general committee for the affairs is made up of Mrs. G. Alexander Bobrick, Mrs. Valentine Peyton and Mrs. Arthur L. Hawes. A specially interesting feature will be the musical programme to be furnished both afternoon and evening by Mrs. William John Scholl.

Many pretty booths are being planned, and those who have them in charge are as follows: Refreshment table, Mrs. W. J. Variel and Mrs. I. N. Peyton; doll table, Mrs. F. B. Elberson, Mrs. C. For Miss Bretherton.

In honor of Miss May Bretherton, whose engagement to Thomas J. Douglas, Jr., was recently announced, Mrs. Joseph Kingman Ellison and her sister-in-law, Mrs. Clarence W. Douglas, entertained on Thursday afternoon at their home, No. 1031 West Seventh street, with a five hundred party.

The home was made attractive with flowers; and in the drawing-room and library pink roses and ferns were gracefully arranged. In the hall palms and ferns and great chrysanthemum baskets were effective. The prizes included a hand-painted jar for crackers and the second a Chinese lamp of brass. The draw prize was a charming pastel picture, framed. Assisting the hostess in entertaining were: Mrs. Charles P. Ensign, Mrs. Jack Lashbrooke, Mrs. Walter L. Bretherton, Mrs. T. J. Douglas, Mrs. George Bretherton, sister-in-law of the bride, and Miss Maude Bretherton of Redding.

Mrs. Variel's Affair.

It was a fair company of women who gathered on Friday afternoon at the home of Mrs. William J. Variel to enjoy a programme of excellent music, and the soothing nectar and ices also served by daintly-gowned ladies.

The affair was given for women who assisted in making the recent S.P.C.A. ball a success, and every one present was enthused with the scheme for furthering the interests of that society. It was planned at that meeting to give a series of affairs, all in the interest of this work, to go toward supporting a downtown office.

Mrs. W. W. D. Turner of West Adams street is planning to entertain with a charity card party at her home soon, and at this a small admission will be charged. These affairs are to be monthly ones.

Yesterday the Variel home bloomed forth with yellow and white chrysanthemums arranged with charming discretion, these being the colors of the S.P.C.A. Society.

Mrs. Variel was assisted in receiving and serving tea by Mmes. G. Alexander Bobrick, George Bowman, A. W. Remnitz and Miss Harlow.

The programme, a delightful one, included "Elevation" (Chaminade;) minuet (Seeboeck;) "Valse Caprice" (Mozkowski,) Mrs. M. Mennion Robinson, all piano numbers and songs by Mrs. Mary J. Schallert, whose sweet soprano voice has not been heard often of late. Mrs. Schallert's numbers included "Beloved, it is Morn" (Allitson;) "The Rose" (Noel Johnson;) "The Shoogy Shoo" (Paul Ambrose;) "The Rosary" (Nevin.)

Guests for the afternoon included: Mmes. L. E. Giese, W. J. Scholl, C. L. Wilson, Frank Hudson, R. H. Farquhar, Curtis, J. M. Kelly, W. C. Martin, H. W. Crowden, M. Hennion Robinson, S. Yslas, W. W. D. Turner, J. W. S. Taber, Wayland Trask, Frances J. Holmes, G. W. Signor, J. H. Harris, F. W. Bowles, W. B. Ames, Dromgold, H. P. Warner and Misses Maltby, Joanna Kinsinger, Pauline Howard, Hawks, Vernia Kercheval, Kercheval, Genevieve Faulkner, and Miss Morse.

Mrs. Mead's Luncheon.

Mrs. William Mead, Vine and Franklin streets, Hollywood, was hostess yesterday afternoon at a charmingly pretty luncheon at the California Club, followed by a box party at the opera.

The affair was given in compliment to Mrs. William T. Burke, who, with her husband, has come to Los Angeles to make her home. Mr. Burke has come here from San José, and is the vice-president of the Central Bank, of which Mr. Mead is president, and the Burkes have taken a pretty home at the corner of Sixth and St. Paul streets.

The luncheon table was decorated with pink carnations and ferns, and each place was marked with a single carnation fastened with pink tulle bow. Beside Mrs. Mead and Mrs. Burke, covers were laid for Mmes. John M. Gilbert, W. C. Patterson, Henderson Hayward, James C. Kays, S. S. Salisbury, G. Aubrey Davidson, James H. Adams, E. S. Rowley, Thomas Phillips and C. J. George.

Brings Bride Home.

Hugh McFarland and his pretty bride from Grand Rapids, Mich., have returned home from their wedding tour. They are at present occupying the home of Mr. Farland's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles McFarland on West Twenty-eighth street, while they are traveling in Europe.

—o—

Wankowskis Back.

Gen. and Mrs. Robert Wankowski returned home from their honeymoon yesterday morning, after enjoying a three months' trip through the East. They visited Washington, New York, Chicago, Cincinnati, and all the large cities and also attended the bankers' convention in St. Louis. Gen. and Mrs. Wankowski will be at home for the present with Mrs. Wankowski's mother, Mrs. J. M. Davies of No. 2711 Ellendale Place.

—o—

Miss Lindley Honored.

On Tuesday evening Misses May and Myrta E. Turk of No. 4317 South Grand avenue, entertained in honor of Miss Cressie Lindley. The house was beautifully decorated with roses and ferns, and a three course luncheon was served. The favors were little Dutch steins, a larger one being presented to Miss Lindley with an original toast by Miss Barager. The guests were: Dr. Kate Buck, Mrs. Charles Coulter, Misses May Turk, Myrta E. Turk, Cressie Lindley, Aimee Barager, Alta Bean, Eva Davies, Grace Buck, Blanche Gosney, Viola Baker, Percy Gosney. Prizes were won by Misses Baker and Barager.

Entertains Metaphysical Club.

Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Davis entertained at their home, No. 555 South Grand avenue, Tuesday evening, the "Metaphysical Club." There were thirty-five members present. The evening was rich with short addresses and good music. Dainty refreshments were served. A profusion of flowers was everywhere in evidence. The entertainment was voted by each and all, a grand success.

—o—

Birthday Party.

Mrs. H. H. Francisco of No. 472 Lake street, gave a very enjoyable birthday party on Wednesday afternoon from 3 until 6 o'clock in honor of her youngest daughter, Miss Florence's tenth anniversary. A delightful time was spent in games, singing and dancing. Dainty refreshments were served at 5 o'clock. The table was prettily decorated for the occasion, the color scheme being of red and white flowers, and ferns. The favors were fancy candy boxes. Those present were: Misses Florence Francisco, Anna Murphy, Juanita Hamilton, Hazel Grundy, Helen Fowler, Hilda Brown, Tillie Granis, Irean Finnegan, Genevive Dorn, Marie Pirce, Ora Cary, Katherine Haywood, Fearn Rummage and Masters Cliff Castro, Wayland Auger, Arthur Grundy, A. D. Engelhard, Elma Finnegen assisting Mrs. Francisco in receiving the guests, was Mrs. Otto Rummage of West Eighth street. Miss Florence received many gifts and her only regret is that birthdays come only once a year.

Miss Heittman Is Honored.

In honor of Miss Alma Heittman, a pretty Sacramento belle, who is her house guest, Mrs. M. W. Everhardy of No. 1401 Alvarado Terrace opened her handsome new home with a most enjoyable card party on Thursday afternoon.

The entire house was aglow with brilliant blossoms and ferns and in the dainty green drawing-room pink and white roses and Maman Cochet roses mingled with dainty grace. In the hall great baskets filled with ferns and snowy chrysanthemums and tied with tulle bows were effective. Chrysanthemums also graced the living-room and in the charming Delft dining-room the gold of many chrysanthemums proved a pleasing contrast.

Score cards were marked with dainty pen drawings and the prize for the guest of honor was a dainty pink pincushion embroidered and adorned with lacy ruffles and ribbons. The other prizes were all hand-painted and were drawn by Mrs. Glasscock, Mrs. Detmers, Mrs. Boyle and Miss Bradshaw. The hostess was assisted by Mrs. Fred Beaton, Mrs. C. A. Boyle and Miss Bess Allen. On the cosy rustic side porch, amid a glow of palms and ferns and bright flowers, Misses Marian Allen, June Eskey and Ada Seeley in dainty light gowns served punch.

Those who enjoyed the happy afternoon were Mmes. Warren Gillelen, Leah J. Seeley, J. V. Vickers, McAllister, George Lichtenberger, George Ragland, Wankowski, Mayberry, Mellier, Betkowsky, Fred Beaton, R. W. Kenney, Harry Lamb, Adolph Brauer, Charles Loomis, Kubach, Viven, Patterson, H. Wallace, Alfred Bayer, Detmers, and Misses Bess Allen, Bradshaw, Ada Seeley, Clark, Margaret Woollacott, Everhardy, Patterson, Thompson, Schamminger, Howell, Wynette Bailey, Kie Christian, Rose Zobelein and Adele Brunne of San Francisco.

An enjoyable feature of the afternoon was the whistling of Mrs. Ragland and the vocal solos, contributed by Mrs. Elmer Woodbury of Pasadena, Mrs. Frank Bryson, Mrs. Everhardy and Miss Rose Zobelein. Mrs. Robert Heffner gave enjoyable recitations.

—o—

Mrs. Cohn's Luncheon.

Mrs. Sam Cohn of No. 1037 Arapahoe street will entertain on Tuesday afternoon with an informal luncheon for Mrs. Levy and Mrs. Jackson of England, also in compliment to Mrs. Lowe and Mrs. Wolff of Brownsville, Tex. Covers will be laid for twelve.

—o—

Honor Young Debutante.

Miss Hildreth Maier of No. 1377 South Grand avenue was hostess on Tuesday at a smart luncheon for fourteen pretty belles, given in honor of Miss Margaret Woollacott, one of the season's débutantes.

BERTHA PENNING AMET, talented Los Angeles girl, who is winning laurels abroad.

A huge basket of nodding yellow chrysanthemums occupied the center of the lace spread table and places were marked with hand-painted cards adorned witth dainty girls' figures. Unique favors were the tiny yellow parasols, containing a souvenir. A handsome guest prize fell to Miss Germaine Fusenot, and after luncheon a fortune teller disclosed rose-colored futures to the bright young gathering.

Besides the hostess and guest of honor, covers were laid for: Mmes. Will Maier, Albert Woollacott and Misses Germaine Fusenot, Violet Ball, Bertha Ducommun, Mamie Maier, Mamie Young, Troconiz, Andrietta Glassell, Jessie Bowden, Lucy Ward and Louise Macey.

To Claim Syracuse Girl.

Interesting news here is the engagement of handsome Miss Pauline Griswold Hurd of Syracuse, N. Y., to William D. C. Smith of this city. Miss Hurd visited here a year or so ago, and while here was widely entertained. During the time she met Mr. Smith, who was completely captivated with her graces, and so they have been engaged, though the fact has been kept secret. The bride-elect is a charming and talented girl, being possessed of an excellent voice, and accompanies herself delightfully when singing. She is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence G. Hurd of Syracuse, N. Y. Mr. Smith is known in business and social circles of the city, where he is popular. No date has as yet been set for the wedding, but it will probably take place the latter part of January.

Rau's Mandolin Club.

Mrs. Emil Rau of No. 3334 Dayton avenue entertained her club members at her home on Wednesday evening. After several popular selections were rendered by the club, everybody got together and had a good old-time Virginia reel, which was made very exciting and enjoyable by the assistance of the violin. After that two-steps and waltzes were danced until a late hour in the evening, when light refreshments were served. Those who took part were: Mesdames Emil Rau, Odenthal, Browning, Holland, Misses Ada Street, Stella Rau, Odenthal, Fairbairn, Browning, Edna Robinsteen, Ellen Nelson, Linceford and McGarry, and Messrs. Browning, W. H. Street, Harley Street, Lewie Lewis, Frank Lewis, H. E. Schmolske, Chester Cosna, William Carlson, C. H. Moore, Fred Kna

OUT-OF-TOWN SOCIETY

Pasadena.

THE functions which have entertained the elite of Pasadena this week have been numerous, although most of them have been small and to some extent informal, unless the gathering of seventy-five members of the Valley Hunt Club, Thursday evening, for the opera of "Aida" be construed into a social meet. It was such, in a way, as the party attended the opera in a body, made the trip to Los Angeles by special cars and enjoyed a buffet supper on their home journey.

The most elaborately appointed affairs were given in honor of Mrs. William Kimball of Palo Alto, a former Pasadenan, here on a visit. Mrs. W. D. McGilvray gave a unique afternoon entertainment in her honor Tuesday, which was called "a memory test." The first line of old songs were given and Miss Alice Gwynn softly played the musical accompaniment, while the guests racked their brains to supply the words of verses with which everyone is supposed to be familiar. There were twelve of Mrs. Kimball's old friends present, and afternoon tea was served. Mrs. Kimball was the guest of honor at an elegantly appointed matinée card and luncheon party Thursday, given by Mrs. Walter S. Wright at her picturesque home on North Orange Grove avenue. Five hundred entertained the guests from 11 until 1 o'clock, and a course luncheon followed. The prizes were won by Mrs. Emil Kayser and Mrs. B. Marshall Wotkyns. Those present were Mmes. Trowbridge, F. Bruce Wetherby, Walter L. Wotkyns, Henry T. Fuller, J. Dawson Thomson, H. H. Sinclair, I. B. Winslow, B. M. Wotkyns, W. S. Fletcher, Misses Wotkyns, Lutz and Watson.

Mrs. Louis Blankenhorn of Palmetto Drive gave a daintily-appointed tea Friday afternoon in honor of Mrs. A. W. Armstrong and her mother, Mrs. Swanwieder of Philadelphia, who is her guest. The drawing-room and library were gay with chrysanthemums and the eighteen guests present were all old friends of the guests of honor.

Mrs. William St. John Ranney of North Euclid avenue gave a pretty luncheon Friday afternoon complimentary to Miss Anne Goodwin, whose marriage with Julius Nissen of Los Angeles occurs early in January. The table ornamentation was a center decoration of yellow chrysanthemums and a long-stemmed blossom at each plate. Those present were Mmes. Hiram Barlow, Jack Bragdon, Charles Coleman, Misses Ethel Warner, Harriet Norton and Lute Bogge.

Miss Elizabeth Grinnell of North Marengo avenue entertained the "As You Like It" Club Friday afternoon. This is a new club of young girls who meet weekly for improvement and mental culture. This week operas were discussed and studied. Those present were Misses June Chapin, Clara Vaughn, Elizabeth Sargent, Augusta Gould, Elizabeth Baird, Daisy White, Cora Hill and Maizie Lynch.

Mrs. W. A. Baldwin of South Lake avenue gave a very pleasant card party early in the week in honor of Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Coffman of Indianapolis. Music added to the pleasure of the occasion and there were thirty guests present.

Miss Gladys Gardner and Miss Mabel Love entertained the Fortnightly Tuesday Bridge Club at the home of the former. The next meet will be at the home of Miss Emily Hibbard on Bellefontaine avenue, and Miss Elizabeth Speer will be the assisting hostess.

The Pasadena Country Club is the scene each Saturday morning of a bridge party, which is followed by a "Dutch" luncheon. Those who made up the game last week were Mr. and Mrs. Walstein Root, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Russell, Mr. and Mrs. Robert

Sapphire Corsets

America produces no better corsets than the Sapphire—in materials, in modeling and in make-up they are faultless.

Although they cost $7.50 to $25 their long service and shape-retaining qualities make them truly economical.

Rear of Annex

"Elysee" linen correspondence paper is made for us by the Geo. B. Hurd mills and put under our own brand; by getting it this way, and in enormous quantities, we get values that are never duplicated when the mill's own brands are taken. Full pound of paper and fifty envelopes to match for 50c.

Wool Dress Stuffs

Southern California's foremost Dress Goods Store --- nobody even CLAIMS greater varieties in the strictly high-grade fabrics.

These few price-ranges are quoted simply to hint of the varieties---cold type can give no idea of their beauty or tone value:

56 and 58-inch Coatings, $2.25 to $4.50.

Single pattern lengths of Scotch suitings—absolute exclusiveness assured—$15 to $50 a pattern.

Fancy mixed cheviot Panamas, Vigoreaux, Shelmas and serges in every suitable weight and coloring, for shirt waist and jacket suits, $1.25 to $3.50 a yard; widths 44 to 58.

Fancy mixed herringbone suitings in browns, greens, greys and blues, $1.75 a yard; 48 inches wide.

Cream ground suitings in a broad variety of colored checks—immensely popular for jacket suits—$1 to $3 a yard: 44 to 56 inches wide.

Ribbons Away Under Half

Ridiculously low prices on the richest ribbons brought out this season.

French hand embroidered ribbons—indescribably beautiful things in 10 and 12-inch widths, at

$3.50 A YARD; WORTH $8 TO $12.

7 to 10-inch Dresden ribbons in designs particularly desirable for making opera bags, fine waists and skirts, at

$1 A YARD; WORTH $2.50 TO $3.50.

Toilet Articles

Our Toilet Articles Department is stocked to meet all requirements of the most fastidious women—the finest perfumeries France produces; manicure sets, combs and brushes of unusual excellence; face, powders and creams of many famous makes.

Facing Main Entrance

Housekeeping Linens

The valuations quoted below are fair and exact---not exaggerrated in the least.

The price concessions come through fortunate purchases of what the importers termed "short lots" at liberal reductions.

LONDON'S JUNGLE EXPOSED BY A WOMAN.

Wife of an American Consul Does the Work of an Upton Sinclair and Lays Bare Iniquities Worse Than Anything in America.

[STAFF CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

LONDON, Nov. 1.—London has its "Jungle," as full of beasts, as foul and degrading a product of human greed and cruelty as Chicago's, and London has found an "Upton Sinclair" to expose its heroes in the person of a woman—Olive Christian Malvery.

Like Upton Sinclair, she has obtained by personal experience, her knowledge of the revolting and brutalizing conditions underlying much of the preserved food trade of the modern Babylon. She shared the toils and lived the lives of the victims of rapacity and fraud whose cause she champions. She worked in jam factories where rotten fruit is converted into table dainties; she labored in meat preserving establishments where putrid messes are sufficiently disguised by chemical processes to serve as canned food; she slaved for slum sweaters at starvation wages; she lived in the most wretched of cheap lodging houses; and that she might drain poverty's cup to the dregs, she became a homeless wanderer and passed some nights on the Thames Embankment with a bench for a bed. What she learned in this way, the British public is to be told before long, and judging by the account of her experiences which Miss Malvery has just given me, the result will be a storm of popular wrath in this country only less vigorous than that which swept over the United States after Upton Sinclair made his famous exposure of some American packing-house methods.

OLIVE CHRISTIAN MALVERY,
the Hindoo woman who has exposed the horrors of London's "Jungle."

When I first heard of Olive Christian Malvery I figured her in imagination as a woman of the masterful, masculine type, hard, thick-skinned, strong-willed—the sort of misfit woman who might easily don trousers and go through life playing a man's part in the world. But she proved to be the antithesis of this type. There is nothing suggestive of the woman with a mission about her. She is about the last woman in the world one would pick out as one who would enter London's "Jungle," dare its perils and expose its horrors.

She is a native of India, whose women are supposed to be so oppressed and benighted that many thousands of dollars are spent on missions to convert them to Christianity and spread among them the blessings of civilization. Her life story is a most romantic one. She was born in Lahore. In her veins flows the blood of Indian princesses. East and West are mingled in her ancestry, for her great grandfathers were respectively French and Scotch. But her physique and physiognomy are those of the Oriental.

Early emancipated from the trammels that surround native girlhood in India, she received an excellent education, which included a knowledge of three Oriental languages and a thorough mastery of English. She traveled much about India. She gazed on the awesome grandeur of the snow-clad Himalayan Mountains and reveled in the matchless beauties of the Cashmere Lakes. The charm and mystery of the scenes amid which she wandered over the vast solitudes, the ruined cities, the busy marts—fired her imagination and when a mere child she began to write stories.

For some years she cherished the ambition of becoming a great writer. But among the gifts which nature has bestowed upon her was a voice of rare charm and compass. Some of her friends advised her to go to England and cultivate that voice and take up singing as a profession. While still in her teens, armed with a few introductions, she came to England and for two years was a student at the Royal College of Music. At the same time she studied elocution and dramatic art under Beerbohm Tree.

After some three years of hard work she made her début as a singer, reciter and lecturer. She sang her own songs, recited her own poems and stories. The novelty of her performances, her personality—that indefinable something about her which led women to describe her as "too sweet for anything"—won for her instant success. She became a society pet, but passed through the dangerous ordeal unscathed. She made a tour of America, too, and those who saw her on the platform there or met her at receptions will share my own surprise that such an elf-like creature should have undertaken the work of an Upton Sinclair.

When I met her the other day for the first time, in the pretty but modestly-furnished drawing-room of her Kensington flat, I fell to wondering what was her secret—whence came the impulse that had given her the strength and fortitude to submit herself to conditions and go through tasks which must have been so utterly revolting to a nature so exquisitely sensitive, so delicately organized, so responsive to every appeal of art and beauty. But I soon found out. When she spoke of the poor creatures whose hard lot she had shared, her big, dark, lustrous eyes were suffused with tears and her tender little mouth quivered. Then I understood.

"I am a Christian," she said, "or rather, perhaps, I should say that I am a Christian as I understand Christianity, for on many points of theology I find myself exactly at variance with my orthodox friends. It seems to me that the greatest obligation laid upon us by the Master is that we should do something for others—something to bring sunshine into the lives of those whose lot is so much harder than our own. So, when I found that I could give entertainments which those who could afford it would pay to see, I felt it incumbent on me to do something with my gifts and talents for those who could not afford to pay.

"I joined a guild of working girls in Hoxton and gave entertainments for them and did my best to make them happier. I have never done anything for which I have been so richly repaid. They gave me love and friendship. I spent much time with these poor girls. I tried to get at life from their point of view. I thought I understood them.

"One day there came to the guild a very grand lady, indeed, the sister of a duchess. She gave the girls an address. She treated them to a lot of gratuitous advice. She told them what their duties were to society and how they should discharge them and how grateful they ought to be for the efforts made to uplift them. She was a typical exhibition of Mayfair patronizing slumdom. And naturally the girls resented it.

"'How little this grand lady understand them!' I thought. Then I fell to questioning how much I really understood them—how far I had really qualified myself to help them. And then and there I resolved that I would go through some of their experiences, that I would work as they worked and live as they lived. And I didn't select the easiest of their occupations."

Of the stories she told me of her experiences I have space for only a few. When she first conceived the idea of enlisting herself in the great army of factory toilers she had no idea of the nauseating revelations which work in those devoted to the preparation of food would bring to her, for it was before the Chicago exposure had thrilled the civilized world with horror and disgust.

"It was early in July, when the fruit season was almost at its height," she said, "that I obtained, after a long night out in the London streets with dejected and homeless creatures, a temporary job in a jam factory. There were there some score or more of women and girls who, like myself, had spent the night wandering the streets of London. This kindly town had offered us no place of refuge where we could have washed or made ourselves in any way decent or fit to take up work in a fruit-preserving factory. One of the women had some nasty skin disease; what is was I am not able to say. They were all desperately dirty, and absolutely unfit to touch food that was meant for human consumption.

"There was no place in this factory where the workers could wash their hands, nor were there sanitary arrangements of any description. We sat down as we had come out of the street and began work. The heat was so intense that the perspiration poured down the unfortunate workers, and every now and again a woman would put up her hand to dash off the moisture from her forehead and face.

"The fruit was, of course not washed. It came to the factory in huge vans, piled high in large baskets. It was the practice of this particular factory to buy at Covent Garden market, the second or slightly 'off' fruit, which was unsalable to fruiterers, costermongers, or green-grocers. Owing to the heat and pressure of packing, the fruit often arrived at the factory in a sort of half-fermenting mass; indeed, so bad was it often, that it was impossible to pick out whole fruit. All we could do was to take up the mess by handfuls, pick out any leaves or stems that were prominent, and throw it into the next basket in a sort of pulp."

The wages of the women in this factory never exceeded $1.75 a week, and for this they were often compelled to work twelve or thirteen hours a day.

From the jam factory Olive Christian Malvery went to a marmalade factory, the chief director of which is a man of high standing in his church, and noted for his charity, and public beneficence.

"In this factory," she said, "were employed some seventy women and girls, and between thirty and forty men. The women were of a very low class—foul-mouthed and drunken. Every room had a foreman. In all my experience of factory work I have continually heard the same complaint made where men are employed to supervise girls and women. It would not, of course, be polite to retail all that one hears of the evils arising from such a system, but it is sufficient to say that the fact has come to my own knowledge of two girls who, rather than give up their own means of livelihood, submitted to the wishes of the foreman under whom they worked. It is not pleasing to contemplate the closing chapters of such history.

"I was never able to find out where the oranges were bought, and I cannot give as authentic the story in common circulation in the factory, that the great quantities of orange peel which I myself saw brought in were swept off the streets. I had no means of verifying this statement, but this I do know, that the oranges which came in great baskets piled one on the top of the other in the company's own vans were often in a state of decay.

"One morning the consignment of fruit for the day's boiling was so bad that the workers made open jokes about it when the foreman was not too close. One basket of oranges which I had the pleasure of unpacking and counting contained fruit so bruised and crushed down, and evidently of such age, that there was a growth of greeny-white mildew on the top and between each layer. I pointed this out to the foreman, and was promptly told that that was no concern of mine, and that if I could not mind my own business there were 'others as could.'

"There is only one consolation which comes to those who work in such places, and that is that even wealth does not protect people from the dirty and disgustingly manufactured stuffs sent out from these places; for their sale, I am happy to say, is not confined to the very poorest classes. It is some small satisfaction to think that a fine lady, with all the dainty tastes, fostered by great wealth and elegant surroundings, may perhaps partake of some preserved delicacy which has been made in filthy and unsanitary workshops by suffering and dirty people."

In the course of her investigations, Miss Malvery obtained employment in a meat-packing house owned by a large company and a very rich one and run in a name that has been for years familiar to the British public. Relating her experiences there, Miss Malvery said:

"On one occasion there came into the factory four enormous wooden cases containing tongues and sheep's heart, which were mildewed over, and smelt so fearfully that it made one physically sick; the whole air was polluted by the smell from these horrid cases, and yet every scrap of the diseased offal was used in the preparation of potted tongues and savories of different kinds. It is necessary, during the process of preservation, to season these goods very profusely, and also to use various dyes in order to bring the pulped meat to a proper appearance. Recently, a noted analyist described in the London Press how it is possible to preserve and pack animal matter in a state of early decay without causing the tins wherein it is packed to bulge or show any sign of any generation of gases or decomposition.

"I know from my own observation of the stuffs packed in this factory, that this statement is absolutely correct, for the food preserved and packed was so effectually doctored, that no further decomposition took place, once the tins were hermetically sealed. Large quantities of these preserved materials were sent abroad to firms of quite well-known reputation.

"The girls and women with whom I worked were case-hardened. They were among the lowest and most miserable specimens of humanity that I have come across. I did not notice any definite disease among the workers, but their bodily persons were so extremely unsavory and disagreeable that, added to the hideous smells of the animal matter that was being preserved, it rendered life almost intolerable."

In another London meat-packing factory in which Miss Malvery worked, the conditions were if possible, still worse. "I saw tongues and pork that came in for pressing and to make brawn," she told me, "actually in such decayed condition that they were falling to pieces, and the smell was shocking. In this factory we were paid shamefully low wages, and we constantly worked longer hours than the law allows. The staff was reinforced in the heavy season by relays of tramps from the gutters and riverside. Their usual bodily condition was offensive and beyond description."

Miss Malvery found conditions almost as disgusting in the bread-baking and confectionery trade. "On one occasion," she said, "I took a lodging in a little street where most of the houses were owned by a Polish Jew who rack-rented them. In another room in the same house, there lived a baker with his wife and family. The man had himself, at one time, owned a small baker's shop, but through drink and other misfortune he had contrived to bring himself down to the very dregs of the labor market. To supplement this man's earnings, his wife worked for a Jew sweater—she made button-holes.

"This baker undertook to introduce me to some of the mysteries of the baking trade, and it was through his instrumentality that I learnt the condition of some of the baking houses in London. It is true that these were not of the best class; but it is equally true that people who use cheap tinned meat are not of the richest class either, and surely the customers of the one class are of no less value than the customers of the other.

"In one big house, which was a sort of underground vault, damp and ill-smelling, there were thirty men employed, all of the most degraded class and exceedingly filthy. The dough was being kneaded by the feet, and the air was so stifling and hot that the perspiration poured down in the streams from the men into the dough. There were other abominations in this place which it is hardly possible to describe without trespassing too closely on the indecent.

"They habitually used foreign eggs. They were broken up indiscriminately in huge troughs, beaten up and used, whatever their condition. The stench from them was absolutely loathsome."

Miss Malvery obtained employment in a baker's shop in the fashionable West End, and found things almost as bad there.

"Eggs were used," she said, "which were sent from Holland in great casks—that is to say, the eggs were broken into these casks and packed in Holland—they were not in their shells such as those that are sent over for household cooking or table use. This is decidedly a trade that ought to be stopped at once, for it was a usual occurrence that these eggs arrived in a semi-decayed state. Of course they were never destroyed, as the loss would have been too great. They were well beaten up, and owing to the flavoring used and the baking they were subjected to, it was remarkable how little apparently bad effect they had on the pastries and cakes in which they were used."

The above affords a few glimpses merely of the horrors of London's "Jungle," as explored and exposed by Olive Christian Malvery. Her work there brought on a serious illness, and she will enter it no more. I have spoken of her by her maiden name—the name by which she is known to the public—but in private life she is Mrs. Mackirdy. Last year she married Archibald Mackirdy, the United States Consul at Muscat, Arabia. Behind that lies another romance. He saw a picture of her in an illustrated English paper which found its way to him in Arabia which made such an impression on him that he vowed the first chance he got to go to England he would find some means of making the acquaintance of the original. And for once things turned out as they do in the story books. The marriage has proved a most happy one.

"My great ambition now," she said to me at parting, with quaint frankness, "is to make my husband as good a wife as he deserves. And my next is to make a name for myself in literature. I should like to return to India to get inspiration. After the horrors I have seen here—the squalor, the utter hopelessness, the sordid misery of life as it is lived by hundreds of thousands—the greed and indifference of those who profit by their toil—there is something in the calm of life in India—the quiet acceptance of fate—which seems infinitely alluring to me now. There is no such degradation of womanhood in India—heathen India, as it is called—as exists in Christian England."

FIRST TRACES OF MEMORY.

EARLIEST TRACES OF SUBCONSCIOUS MEMORY.

Peculiar Case of a German Girl Who, in a Delirium, Talked Languages She Had Never Learned. Other Cases of Subconscious Activity Reported.

[Chicago Chronicle:] How far back can you remember? What is the very earliest recollection you have of your infancy and childhood?

These are questions that have been asked of Chicago citizens during the past week, and the results are here set down. They make a most interesting psychological study.

The statistics show that most people can remember back to their fourth year. Some recall incidents in their third, and a very few get back in the second year. One of the most difficult points is to fix these dates. But few persons who have been interviewed have any means of establishing the exact time by circumstances.

Another element of uncertainly enters, also, and that is that a great many people remember certain incidents from having heard their mothers or their fathers talk about them. In this way they remember incidents, accidents or occasions, and are unable to state whether the recollections are their very own or whether their memory dates from hearing the statements of their parents.

A controversy has raged among psychologists as to when the memory actually begins. These erudite discussions are not clear to the popular mind. They are crammed with technical and scientific terms. There is much talk of the subconscious memory and the objective memory and other abstruse subjects of that nature.

ABOUT SUBCONSCIOUS MEMORY.

It is contended that the subconscious memory retains every impression made upon it.

It is said that it never forgets any word ever heard or any impression, however little and insignificant. Many experiments have been conducted to prove this, and many cases have been found that seem to bear out this contention

There is the case of a German girl, for instance, who in the delirium of sickness, poured out a flood of Hebrew and Greek. She was an ignorant, uneducated girl and her relatives and the physicians attending her were astonished. An investigation was made and it was found that she had worked in a menial position in the home of an old Lutheran pastor. It was his habit to walk up and down a hallway nearly every day reading aloud from two books. One of these was a Greek testament and the other a Hebrew Bible.

While the girl had paid no attention to what was going on at the time, it seemed that her subconscious memory had retained the reading and in her delirium she repeated passage after passage from the Greek and Hebrew of these volumes. A recent case of this sort is reported from Sioux City, Iowa, where a woman had been troubled with insomnia for years. She was on the point of insanity when her case was taken by Willis Marshall, a psychologist, and she is now cured and sleeps at night like any well-regulated person.

One of the strange features of the case was that the woman would sit up in bed at night and repeat exact conversations that had taken place the year before. They were recognized by other members of her family. Prof. Marshall decided that the subconscious memory was in full control on such occasions. The balance between the subconscious and the objective memories had been destroyed and when this balance was readjusted, the woman was cured. Prof. Marshall does not state by what method he performed the cure.

EXPERIMENTS IN HYPNOSIS.

Some interesting experiments have been performed by certain psychologists in regard to the subconscious memory. Under the effects of hypnosis it is possible to get certain subjects to recount happenings in earliest infancy. There are also certain persons in India who claim that they have memories that extend back to another state of being.

It was only the other day in a meeting of the Anthropological Society that this matter came up and it led to a heated discussion in which a Hindu scholar was called an impostor. D. H. Mihlmann, a Russian scholar and translator, took exception to some of the statements made by the Hindu. The subject under discussion was "Reincarnation" and in the course of his remarks Sakharam Ganesh Pandit, a graduate of the University of Bombay and a Sanskrit scholar, said: "Reincarnation may be divided into three subjects and it may be proved three ways. The first is by direct evidence. There are men in my native country who remember distinctly their previous existence on earth.

"Then cannot prove it, of course. They do not attempt to. They are men of learning, and when a doubter asks questions they become silent. They remember and that is all there is to it, and one can believe or not, just as he chooses. But they are men whose opinions or words should give weight any subject under discussion. The second manner of proving it is by evidence that is partially direct and partially indirect. The third is by evidence of an indirect nature. The theory of evolution would come under head." In the discussion that followed these remarks it was brought out some of those present thought Hindus were getting back a little far.

He Meant "Chiffonier."

The word "chiffonier" and "chauffeur" look very much alike when written, though in conversation there is sufficient difference in the pronunciation to distinguish very readily. Recently the following dialogue occurred in which the words were used. one of the parties thought for a that his friend didn't know ter:

"What are you waiting for man?"

"Waiting for my chiffonier. going driving in my auto."

"Oh, no; you mean you are for your chauffeur—the man drives your car."

"Nope; I'm waiting for my fonier," stubbornly replied the

"I beg your pardon," other. "A chiffonier is a er, and a chauffeur is one your car."

"That's all right," replied who knew, as a pretty somely dressed, came down way and got into the waiting for a 'chiffonier' [Chicago Interocean.

[BY A TIMES REVIEWER.]

THE FAR EAST.

Japan and Korea.

THE PASSING OF KOREA. By Homer B. Hurlbert A.M., F.R.G.S. Author of "The History of Korea," "Comparative Grammar of Korean and Dravidian." Doubleday, Page & Co., New York. (For Sale by C. C. Parker, Los Angeles.)

"This book is a labor of love, undertaken in the days of Korea's distress, with the purpose of interesting the reading public in a country and a people that have been frequently maligned and seldom appreciated," says the author of the immense quarto volume in his preface. And he adds: "They are overshadowed by China on the one hand in respect of numbers, and by Japan on the other in respect of wit. They are neither good merchants like the one, nor good fighters, like the other, and yet they are far more Anglo-Saxons in temperament than either and they are by far the pleasantest people in the Far East to live among. Their failings are such as follow in the wake of ignorance everywhere, and the bettering of their opportunities will bring swift betterment to their condition."

Regarding Japan's apparent rapid assimilation of western ideas, in comparison with other eastern people, Mr. Hurlbert has this none too complimentary comment:

"When, in 1868, the power of the Mikado, or Emperor of Japan, had been vindicated in a sanguinary war against many of the feudal barons, the Shogunate was done away with once for all, and the act of centralizing the government of Japan was complete. But in order to guard against insurrection it was deemed wise to compel all the barons to take up their residence in Tokio, where they could be watched. This necessitated the disbanding of the Samurai, or retainers of the barons. These Samurai were at once the soldiers and the scholars of Japan. In one hand they held the sword and in the other a book; not as in medieval Europe, where the knights could but rarely read and write, and where literature was almost wholly confined to the monasteries. This concentration of physical and intellectual power in the single class called Samurai gave them far greater prestige among the people at large than was ever enjoyed by any set of men in any other land, and it consequently caused a wider gulf between the upper and lower classes than elsewhere, for the Samurai shared with no one the fear and the admiration of the common people. The lower class cringed before them as they passed, and a Samurai could wantonly kill a man of low degree almost without fear of consequences.

"When the barons were called up to Tokio, the Samurai were disbanded and were forbidden to wear the two swords which had always been their badge of office. This brought them face to face with the danger of falling to the ranks of the lower people, a fate that was all the more terrible because of the absurd height to which in their pride they had elevated themselves.

"At this juncture they were given a glimpse of the West, with its higher civilization and its more carefully articulated system of political and social life. With the very genius of despair they grasped the fact that if Japan should adopt the system of the West, all government positions, whether military or civil, would naturally fall to them, and thus they would be saved from falling to the plane of the common people. Here, stripped of all its glamor of romance, is the vital underlying cause of Japan's wonderful metamorphosis. With a very few significant exceptions, it was a purely selfish movement, conceived in the interests of caste distinction and propagated in anything but an altruistic spirit. The central government gladly seconded this proposition, for it immediately obviated the danger of constant disaffection and rebellion and welded the state together as nothing else could have done. The personal fealty which the Samurai had reposed in his overlord was transferred, almost intact, to the central government, and today constitutes a species of national pride which, in the absence of the finer quality, constitutes the Japanese form of patriotism.

"From that day to this the wide distinction between the upper and lower classes in Japan has been maintained. In spite of the fact of so-called popular or representative government, there can be no doubt that class distinctions are more vitally active in Japan than in China, and there is a wider social gap between them than anywhere else in the Far East, with the exception of India, where Brahmanism has accentuated caste. The reason for this lies deep in the Japanese character. When he adopted western methods, it was in a purely utilitarian spirit. He gave no thought to the principles on which our civilization is based. It was the finished product he was after and not the process. He judged, and rightly, that energy and determination were sufficient to the donning of the habiliments of the West, and he paid no attention to the forces by which those habiliments were shaped and fitted. The position of woman has experienced no change at all commensurate with Japan's material transformation. Religion in the broadest sense is less in evidence than before the change, for, although the intellectual stimulus of the West has freed the upper classes from the inanities of the Buddhistic cult, comparatively few of them have consented to accept the substitute. Christianity has made smaller advances in Japan than in Korea herself, and everything goes to prove that Japan, instead of digging until she struck the spring of western culture, merely built a cistern in which she stored up some of its more obvious and tangible results. . . The highest praise must be accorded to the earnestness and devotion of Christian missionaries in Japan, but it is a fact deeply to be regretted that the results of their work are so closely confined to the upper classes. This fact throws light upon the lower class there. Even as we are writing, word comes from a keenly observant traveler in Japan that everywhere the Buddhist temples are undergoing repairs."

And yet Mr. Hurlbert's anecdotes and descriptions of Korean life assuredly give evidence that the Korean, is, if not an example of a conservative lower civilization, certainly in some significant respects not very far removed from an earlier savagery. He says, for instance:

"The callousness which Koreans exhibit in the presence of suffering, especially the suffering of animals, is a trait which they share with all orientals. Most dumb animals have no way of showing that they are suffering unless the pain be extreme, and the Koreans seem to have argued from this that these animals do not suffer; at any rate they show an utter unconcern even when the merest novice could see that the beast was suffering horribly. If a sick cat or a lame dog or a wounded bird is seen upon the street, the children, young and old, arm themselves with stones and amuse themselves with the thing until life is extinct. They take great pleasure in catching insects, pulling their legs or wings off, and watching their ludicrous motions. Dragon flies and bettles are secured by a string about the body, and allowed to fly or jump as far as the string will permit, after which they are dragged back to the hand. Young sparrows that have fallen from the nests beneath the eaves are passed from hand to hand, their half-grown plumage is colored with different tints, and at last, of course, they die of exhaustion. When an unfortunate dog is dragged down the street with a rope around its neck to the dog-meat shop, it will be followed by a jubilant crowd of children, who enjoy a lively anticipation of seeing the poor thing struggle in the mortal throes of strangulation."

"As for morality in its narrower sense, the Koreans allow themselves great latitude. There is no word for home in their language, and much of the meaning which that word connoted is lost to them. . . . Today there is little, if anything, to choose between Korea and Japan, in this matter of private morals, the geisha of Japan being the exact counterpart of the kisang of Korea, while the other and still less reputable members of the demi-monde are too low the world over, to require classification."

Of the government Mr. Hurlbert says: "Wealth and official position are practically synonymous in a country where it is generally recognized that justice is worth its price, and that the verdict will uniformly be given to the side which can show either the largest amount of money or an array of influence that intimidates the judge." And he says elsewhere: "Not a week passes but you come in personal contact with cases of injustice and brutality that would mean a riot in any civilized country. You marvel how the people endure it. Not to know at what moment you may be called upon to answer a trumped-up charge at the hands of a man who has the ear of the judge, and who, in spite of your protests and evidence that is prima facie, mulcts you of half your property, and this without the possibility of appeal or redress of any kind—this, I say, is enough to make life hardly worth living." Mr. Hurlbert gives some appalling cases in point that somewhat destroy the value of his assertions in favor of the Korean character.

About half the book is occupied with the history of the country to date, including a chapter on the Japanese in Korea. In this last, describing the resistance of Korea to dependence, Mr. Hurlbert says that, after dispatch of the Emperor's messenger to Washington to beg intercession of the American government, Japanese action was rapid: The Korean ministry, summoned to conference, stood by the treaty of 1904, guaranteeing independence. "They would die sooner than acquiesce. Repeated exhortations and inducements were offered, but the Koreans were immovable. When this deadlock occurred, the scenes were shifted a little, and Japanese gendarmes and police suddenly appeared and surrounded the audience chamber and blocked every approach to the imperial presence. The Emperor, feeling sure that personal injury was determined on, retired to a little anteroom. No sane person can deny that he had sufficient reason to fear. The strongest man in the Cabinet was the Prime Minister, Han Kyu-sul, and it was evident that only by segregating him and handling the Cabinet without him could the desired result be accomplished. When, therefore, the Prime Minister retired to the apartment where the Emperor was, supposedly with the intention of conferring with him, he was followed by Japanese armed officials and detained in a side room. The Marquis (Ito) there plead with him to give in, but he was firm. Leaving him there, practically in durance, the Marquis returned to the rest of the Cabinet, who were very naturally alarmed at the non-appearance of the Prime Minister. The moment must have been one of great suspense. Hedged in by armed Japanese, their official chief spirited away and perhaps killed, there is little wonder that another turn of the screw resulted in the defection of several of the Cabinet, and at last a paper was signed by a majority of the ministers present, after a clause had been added to the effect that at some future day, when Korea is strong enough to resume her independence, it will be given back to her. The Foreign Minister signed this document, and the seal was attached. There is some question as to just how this last was done. Some say that the seal was purloined from the office by Japanese and the document was stamped by them. However this may be, we have here the picture of how the agreement was put through, and the reader and the world may judge for themselves how far it was voluntary on the part of the Korean government. When this had been done, the Japanese authorities announced in Washington that Korea had voluntarily entered into an agreement granting Japan a protectorate over the country, and the American government, apparently without consulting with Korea as to the truth of the statement, recognized the validity of Japan's claim."

Mr. Hurlbert also relates many instances of ill treatment of Koreans by Japanese, since the lower classes of the latter have commenced to flock into the country, likewise many acts of oppression on the part of Japanese officials. He says that "men claiming to be connected with the Japanese army go out into the country districts and seize any land they like, repeating simply the formula 'This is for military purposes.' The writer has been repeatedly asked to interfere in such cases of fraud. . . . During the year 1905, there was no such thing as justice for the Korean either from the private Japanese or from the officials. The military put their hands upon eight square miles of the most valuable land near Seoul simply for the building of barracks and parade grounds for twelve thousand men, when experts affirm that one-sixteenth of that space would have been ample. That land could not be bought in the open market for $6,000,000, but the Japanese knew the government could not pay the price, so they gave $200,000, to cover the cost of removal only. And this is all the Koreans could ever hope to get. The most elementary laws of human right and justice have been daily and hourly trampled under foot. Hardly an effort has been made to carry out any reform that would better the condition of the Korean people. Mark the action of the man who controlled the finances of the country, a Japanese. The country was flooded with counterfeit nickels, made largely by Japanese in Osaka, and brought over to Korea by the millions. The Korean currency fell to a ruinous discount, and Japanese merchants were suffering severely because of the rapid fluctuations of exchange. The Adviser determined that the Korean Government should borrow several million yen from Japan, and with it make a new currency to substitute for the one in use. When it was learned that Korea was to pay 6 per cent for this money, Korean financiers came forward and said that they would lend their government the necessary money at a far lower rate. They did it to keep Korea out of debt to Japan, but the Adviser refused to allow it. The money must be borrowed from Japan at the higher rate. A few million dollars' worth of nickels were made in Japan, where the Japanese enjoyed the profit, which amounted to over fifty per cent, and the nickels were sent to Korea. The Adviser announced that on the first of June, or about then, everybody who bought nickels would receive the new ones at par with the Japanese money, but would receive one new one for two of the old. As the old nickels were at a discount of 240, this would mean that anyone with capital could buy up old nickels at 240, and exchange them at 200. Chinese and Japanese merchants leaped to do so, and the market was sucked dry of money. When the day of exchanging came, it was found that the supply of new nickels was entirely inadequate. So the exchange was put off for two months; then for two months more. Meanwhile the Korean merchants were going to the wall because they could not meet their notes, owing to the tightness of the money market. Some of them were trying to save themselves by borrowing from Japanese usurers at 6 per cent a month. At this most painful juncture the Emperor proposed to lend some three hundred thousand dollars of his private funds to the suffering merchants, but when he sent his check to the Japanese bank, where his funds were deposited, the Japanese Adviser ordered payment stopped, and would not let him draw out his private funds even to help the merchants in their dire straits. There is no language in which to denounce this outrage."

Mr. Hurlbert gives many other examples of public as well as private exactions and oppression—cases, even, where Koreans were beaten into helplessness or even put to death for passing over places which were forbidden to them but where no sign warned them of the fact.

Further chapters of this very detailed and interesting account of Korea describe older and new means of revenues, modes of transportation, architecture, industries, trade, monuments, language, literature, art, music and poetry, education, folk-lore, the position of women, slavery, religion and superstition, burial customs; and a chapter is devoted to modern improvements and one to an outlook into the future In this last the author urges Americans to assist as far as possible in the education of the Korean people, as evidence of good faith in atonement for too uncalculated action at the time of cession to the Japanese and because "it is the opinion of those most conversant with the feelings of the Korean people that there is no other place in the world where money invested in education will bring larger, surer or more beneficient results."

The big volume is profusely and strikingly illustrated.

SCIENCE.

Evolution.

LAST WORDS ON EVOLUTION. By Ernest Haeckel. Translated from the second edition by Joseph McCabe. Peter Eckler, New York. (Price, 75 cents.)

Prompted, in part, by the baseless cable dispatch of a few months back that Prof. Haeckel, Darwin's colleague and the greatest of living German biologists, had abandoned his earlier scientific viewpoint and given public support to the teachings of a Jesuit writer, a follower of Haeckel has put into English the scientist's latest and probably his last printed utterances regarding the theory of evolution and its relation to dogma. The book consists of three lectures—"The Controversy About Creation," "The Struggle Over Our Genelogical Tree," "The Controversy Over the Soul," with a postcript, "Evolution and Jesuitism," concerning the above-noted cable dispatch and Prof. Haeckel's real position in regard to the Jesuitic doctrine accredited to him. The aged scientist says in his own preface to this book that it is probably his last public utterance.

The opening lecture of the three was delivered at Berlin in response to urgent and repeated request. Of his object in writing the lecture Prof. Haeckel says in his preface: "It happened that I had just been following the interesting efforts that the church has lately made to enter into a peaceful compromise with its deadly enemy, Monistic science. It has decided to accept to a certfain extent, and to accommodate to its creed (in a distorted and mutilated form) the doctrine of evolution, which it has vehemently opposed for thirty years. This remarkable change of front on the part of the church militant seemed to me so interesting and important, and at the same time so misleading and mischievous, that I chose it as the subject of a popular lecture, and accepted the invitation to Berlin." Here is certainly a plain enough refutation of the claim of Prof. Haeckel's change of doctrine, and direct critical references are made in the lecture itself to the Jesuit, Father Erich Wasmann, whose teachings Haeckel was so erroneously reported to have adopted. In the second lecture Prof. Haeckel shows that science has now, unnoted of theology, entirely bridged the gulf between man and his ape-relatives, so that the old argument of the "missing link," although still harped upon, no longer possesses value. This lecture is of the deepest interest, forming, as it does, an authoritative summing up of recent scientific discovery and theory on man's place in nature. In the third lecture, Prof. Haeckel combats the ideas of freedom of the will, of a soul entity, thus of immortality of the individual, and of the ordinary or prevailing theologic concept of God. He sums up on this point in the following words:

"Beside the law of evolution, and closely connected with it, we have that great triumph of modern science, the law of substance—the law of the conservation of matter (Lavoisier, 1789,) and of the conservation of energy (Robert Mayer, 1842.) These two laws are irreconcilable with the three central dogmas of metaphysics, which so many educated people still regard as the most precious treasures of their spiritual life—the belief in a personal God, the personal immortality of the soul, and the liberty of the human will." And he concludes, in his "postscript," concerning the strange cable dispatch:

"I thought at first that the telegram was due to the misunderstanding or the error of a reporter, but I was afterwards informed from Berlin that the false message was probably due to a deliberate corruption by some religious person who thought to render a service to his faith by this untruth. He had substituted 'supported' for 'refuted' and 'error' for 'truth.'

"The struggle for the triumph of truth, in which I have had the most curious experiences during the last forty years, has brought me a number of new impressions through my Berlin lectures. The flood of calumnies of all kinds that the religious press (especially the Lutheran Reichsbote and the Catholic Germania) poured over me exceeded any that had gone before. . . . I can only repeat here that the calumination of my person does not move me, and does not injure the truth which I serve."

Polar Exploration.

A HANDBOOK OF POLAR DISCOVERIES. By A. W. Greely, Major-General, U.S.A., Little, Brown & Co., Boston. (Price, $1.50.)

Here is, for the phenominally small price of any third-rate novel, a complete handbook of polar exploration by one of the foremost of the explorers himself. It represents, in epitome, "70,000 pages of original narrative, from which the author has faithfully endeavored to compile such data of accomplished results as may subserve the inquiries of the busy man who often wishes to know what, when and where, rather than how." Gen. Greely adds:

"It is confidently believed that no important Arctic geographic addition to knowledge has been omitted from this record. While the original scope of the volume did not include scientific research, yet the more important investigations are mentioned." This last fact adds to the value of the handbook, otherwise of first importance. Specially desirable, too, are the full chapters dealing with American exploration—for which Gen. Greely modestly apologizes: "If the author has dwelt somewhat fully on American expeditions, and especially on the work he personally commanded, such a course has been taken with some misgivings, and at the request of American geographers." Antarctic as well as Arctic exploration is treated, and a valuable bibliography includes references to periodicals as well as to published volumes. The book contains many maps and a frontispiece portrait of the distinguished author.

RELIGION.

Religious Origins.

THE HISTORICAL BASES OF RELIGIONS. By Hiram Chellis Brown. Herbert B. Turner & Co., Boston.

The author of this book begins with the "religious sense" as developed by a feeling of the order and of power in nature, and of personal dependence on this. He argues that morality, as such, has nothing to do necessarily, with religion. On this point he says:

"We have only to examine the pages of history, or indeed to note the lives of many eminently pious people of the present day, to learn that the essentials of religion are not dependent upon moral conduct; on the other hand, we have only to look abroad in the world to be convinced that the most moral are quite apt to be skeptics so far as religion is concerned. The moral sense of a people depends very largely upon their intellectual status. The more intelligent, the more moral is a truism that can hardly be disputed; and another, equally true but probably not so readily admitted, is, the more intelligent the less religious."

A section on nature myths is followed by one on Babylonian civilization and religion, and this by a long section, occupying nearly two-thirds of the book, on the Jewish religion. The study of Judaism is critical in character and from the viewpoint of the outsider, as may be presumed from the above quotation. The Judiac is regarded as in part derived from the Assyrio-Babylonian. Origins of different parts of the Old Testament are considered somewhat in detail, as representative of various periods of Judaic history. Against Judaism as a whole the author inveighs:

"Its ideals for both human and divine character are of the lowest type. Its spirit is the spirit of exclusiveness, bigotry, intolerance and persecution. For fifteen centuries it held the greater part of what had constituted the Roman empire in its merciless grasp. As it became the ruling factor in the life of the people, it remoulded and largely destroyed their social, political and religious habits and institutions—the growth and fruitage of centuries of healthy and, in the main, wise development. It destroyed the ancient conceptions of deity; conceptions that recognized in the forces resident in matter evidence of divine immanence—that identified God with the universe itself—and substituted an unnatural, unintelligible being, who, standing entirely outside of all material things, manipulated them in an unnatural, unintelligible way. Coincident with the rise and predominance of this spirit was the decline and fall of the human intellect. A mental paralysis followed in its wake. We have only to compare the works of the Greeks and Romans in literature and art, beginning with Homer and Hesiod and ending with the Antonines, with the inane platitudes of the Talmud, and the works of Christian historians and apologists, upon whom this spirit most liberally descended, to understand the appalling change that had been wrought. Across the path of human progress it erected a wall of prejudice and rancor that has served as breastworks, behind which the theological dogmatism of the past eighteen hundred years has entrenched itself."

Whatever may be said of the rest of the book, this conclusion is a sad example of the logical fallacy of post hoc propter hoc. The religion under which the highest point of ancient civilization was reached—the Greek—embodied no lofty conception of deity, there was no pantheism except in the minds of a few philosophers, who were not representative; but exceptional; and the immortality taught by example of the myriad nature gods was deprecated by the best men of the country in which it prevailed—by Socrates, for instance. The fall of Rome, while not specifically due to the character of the Graeco-Roman religion (as some Christian writers have averred) was equally not the result of the change to Christianity. On the contrary, ancient civilization was, by its own nature as a tiny oasis in the midst of general savagery, necessarily doomed to destruction as soon as its isolation was ended by the penetration of surrounding barbarism over the earlier barriers of sea and mountain wall. In like manner the dark ages that followed are not due to any particular phase of thought, religious or otherwise (if religion had its part, this was as effect as well as cause,) but to the fact that all Europe had now to be leavened by Mediterranean influence. Mr. Brown's study of oriental influences in Christianity is interesting, although not deep-going; but its value, even so likely to be differently estimated according to viewpoint, is depreciated by this one-sided sociological judgment. The fatherhood of Jehovah is a far higher conception than the capricious hates and loves of the Greek and Roman deities.

Life of Paul.

PAUL, THE APOSTLE, AS VIEWED BY A LAYMAN. By Edward H. Hall. Little, Brown & Co., Boston. ($1.50 net.)

This is a study of the life of Paul under the headings "The Convert," "The Missionary," "Jew and Gentile," "The Mystic," "The Theologian." The book is calmly critical rather than theological, yet it is the work of one who calls Paul "a great thinker," therefore writes with admiration. It is very closely analytic of the apostle's doctrines at various periods and under different circumstances. This character will be deeply interesting to the advanced Bible student, whether or not all its conclusions are accepted by the latter.

Immortality.

WHAT'S NEXT, OR SHALL A MAN LIVE AGAIN? By Clara Spalding Ellis. Richard G. Badger, the Gorham Press, Boston.

Bereaved by death and pondering on the hope of another life in which the beloved might again be found, a woman conceived the idea of collecting testimony in favor of this belief from prominent American thinkers. "What's Next," the product of this idea, is thus made up entirely of assertions of positive belief in an existence after death. Among the names of contributors to the volume one finds those of such men as Prof. Mark Baldwin, Prof. William James, Prof. Josiah Royce, Pres. Benjamin Ide Wheeler and Pres. Ira Remsen, Felix Adler and James H. Hyslop, Commissioner of Education William T. Harris and many others well known to the public; and among names especially familiar to Los Angeles people, those of Madame Caroline M. Severance, Clara Foltz and Helen M. Winslow. Part of the book consists of letters in answer to the query whether the authors believe in personal immortality, and part consists of extracts from books and articles that have appeared in prominent periodicals. There is also a short collection of poems on immortality. These are also all by American authors, and one misses Schiller's beautiful verses. Nearly three hundred pages are covered by the compilation, which is appropriately bound in azure linen starred with constellations white.

Christian Endeavor.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR IN ALL LANDS. By Francis E. Clark, DD., LL.D. The John C. Winston Company, Philadelphia. (Prices, cloth $2.25; half Morocco, $3.50; full Morocco, $5.)

The founder of this now giant organization has traced, in this volume, the growth of the Christian Endeavor movement, from its first inception to the present day. Even to one not enrolled in the society the history of the spread of the organization idea to all lands of the earth, and the description of the great variety of philanthropic work undertaken, are of deep interest. One of the prettiest pictures among the many illustrations is a reproduction of a photograph of a little band of "Juniors" of Foochow. The big book is not a dry summary, but as varied and attractive in its viewpoint as the versatile efforts of the association itself. One of the most interesting chapters is headed "The Society as a Democracy," and includes a photograph of Prince Oscar Bernadotte and his wife, of Sweden. The book will be warmly welcomed, and will undoubtedly have a large sale all over the world.

POETRY.

A Western Poet.

THE POETICAL WORKS OF EDWARD ROWLAND SILL. Illustrated. Houghton, Mifflin & Co., Boston. (Price, $1.50. For sale by Cunningham, Curtin & Welch, Los Angeles.)

Among the poets of our West none stand higher than Edward Rowland Sill; and, minor poet though he be, judged by an absolute standard, his work is of such polish and delicacy that we could ill afford to miss the best of it from our literature. This polish and delicacy of Mr. Sill's verse were increased with the years, but it lost in some other regards concomitantly; the best of it belongs to the early middle period of his life, when he wrote "The Fool's Prayer," by which he will be best and longest remembered, and much exquisite nature verse. It is in such descriptive work that he is most at home; the finely contemplative mood was evidently characteristic and usual. Among it the "Venus of Milo" must rank first and best—probably, after the one poem named above, likely to live longest in the memory of the public. Here are lines of beauty:

—o—

"There fell a vision to Praxiteles:
Watching through drowsy lids the loitering seas
That lay caressing with white arms of foam
The sleeping marge of his Ionian home,
He saw great Aphrodite standing near,
Knew her at last, the Beautiful he had sought
With lifelong passion, and in love and fear
Into unsullied stone the vision wrought.

"Far other was the form that Cnidos gave
To senile Rome, no longer free or brave—
The Medicean, naked like a slave.
The Cnidians built her shrine
Of creamy ivory fine;
Most costly was the floor
Of scented cedar, and from door
Was looped to carven door
Rich stuff of Tyrian purple, in whose shade
Her glistening shoulders and round limbs outshone,
Milk-white as lilies in a summer moon.
Here honey-hearted Greece to worship came,
And on her altar leaped a turbid flame.
The quickened blood ran dancing to its doom,
And lip sought trembling lip in that rich gloom.

"But the island people of Cos, by the salt main
From Persia's touch kept clean,
Chose for their purer shrine, amid the seas,
That grander vision of Praxiteles.

. . . .

Thou art the love celestial, seeking still
The soul beneath the form; the serene will;
The wisdom, of whose deeps the sages dream;
The unseen beauty that doth faintly gleam
In stars and flowers, and waters where they roll;
The unheard music whose faint echoes even
Make whosoever hears a homesick soul
Thereafter, till he follow it to heaven.

. . . .

Placid thy brows, as that still lies at dawn
Where the dim hills along the sky are drawn,
When the last stars are drowned in deeps afar.

. . . .

So bright, so still thy lips serenely sleep;
So fixedly thine earnest eyes the while,
As clear and steady as the morning star,
Their gaze upon that coming glory keep.
"Thy garment's fallen folds leave bare the fair, round breast
In sacred loveliness. . . .
Around thy firm, large limbs and steady feet
The robes slope downward, as the folded hills
Slope round the mountains' knees, when the shadow fills
The hollow cañons, and the wind is sweet
From russet oat fields and the ripening wheat.

"From our low world no gods have taken wing;
Even now upon our hills the twain are wandering;
The Medicean's sly and servile grace,
And the immortal beauty of thy face.
One is the spirit of all short-lived love
And outward, earthly loveliness.
. . . .
Just a swift glance of her illumined smile
Along the landscape goes;
Just a soft hint of singing to beguile
A man from all his toil;
Some vanished gleam of beckoning arm, to spoil
A morning's task with longings wild and vain.

"Thou, too, O fairer spirit, walkest here
Upon the lifted hills

And many days, when all one's work is vain,
And life goes stretching on, a waste gray plain,
With even the short mirage of morning gone,
No cool breath anywhere, no shadow nigh
Where a weary man might lay him down and die,
Lo! thou art there before me suddenly,
With shade as if a summer cloud did pass,
And spray of fountains whispering to the grass.
Oh, save me from the haste and noise and heat
That spoil life's music sweet:
And from that lesser Aphrodite there—
Even now she stands
Close as I turn, and, O my soul, how fair!
Nay, I will heed not thy white beckoning hands,
Nor thy soft lips like the curled inner leaf
In a rosebud's breast, kissed languid by the sun,
Nor eyes like liquid gleams where water run.
Yea, thou art beautiful as morn:
And even as I draw nigh
To scoff, I own the loveliness I scorn.
Farewell, for thou hast lost me; keep thy train
Of worshipers; me thou dost lure in vain;
The inner passion, pure as very fire,
Burns to light ash the earthlier desire."

The exquisite harmonies of this verse, wed to exquisite fancy, are patent.

Parts of the final stanza of the poem, unquoted here, are equally fine. The irregularity of the verse—occurring in many of Sill's poems—but adds to the sense of untrammeled flow. Had the writer possessed the courage to blue-pencil his own work in this poem, to shorten and perfect but a little more, it would have constituted one of the finest pieces of verse in our American literature, and even so, it has, beyond doubt, a permanent place.

This volume constitutes the first complete collection of Sill's verse. It is handsomely bound in blue linen and gilt, a choice holiday book.

MEN AND THINGS OVER THE SEAS.

[illegible] Still an Open Sesame.

[illegible] now counts its most ardent [illegible] in diplomatic circles in Paris. [illegible] entertainment is considered [illegible] complete without its friendly [illegible] it is given for some big [illegible] purpose. Wives of Ambassadors think twice before inviting any [illegible] who is not a past master of the [illegible] of the bridge playing. When, [illegible] a careful weeding out of the invitation lists, the hostesses have discovered a certain coterie of card experts, [illegible] these only are admitted to the [illegible] evenings at the different embassies. An intruder who is not skilled [illegible] is ruthlessly barred from this [illegible] circle.

[illegible] can appreciate what [illegible] none but the members [illegible] gauge the charms of [illegible] are so utterly incomprehensible to the masculine portion [illegible]. As a little girl, she was [illegible] allowed to do some shopping [illegible] stores at Kensington, [illegible] of Kensington Palace, [illegible] earlier years were spent. [illegible] King William came to the [illegible] attempted to continue his [illegible] ways in going about [illegible] streets, he was on several [illegible] so severely mobbed that he [illegible] resolved to show himself no [illegible] public thoroughfare on [illegible] likewise insisted that the [illegible] of the royal family [illegible] a similar reserve.

[illegible] then that the custom was [illegible] of having shopkeepers submit [illegible] to royalty at the latter's [illegible] and while from that time on Victoria would have periodical [illegible] jewelry, laces, etc., at [illegible] at Osborne, and at Buckingham, to enable her to make a [illegible] was necessarily restricted [illegible] of the tradesman, and [illegible] of the satisfaction of [illegible] her own selection from the [illegible] stock, as displayed in his [illegible] of going from store to store [illegible] found something to strike [illegible].

[illegible] Alexandra is handicapped in [illegible] way in England, and it is [illegible] she is abroad in France or [illegible] and comparatively unknown, [illegible] is able to indulge in shopping [illegible] heart's content, without let or [illegible]. In Berlin, conditions are [illegible] with regard to mobbing [illegible], and both the Emperor [illegible] have long been obliged [illegible] their former practice of doing [illegible] own shopping, especially at [illegible] time.

SCIENCE NOTES.

[illegible] New Battery.

[illegible] A. Edison announced last [illegible] he had discovered the mechanical [illegible] necessary to the [illegible] of a lightweight, very [illegible] virtually indestructible electric [illegible] battery, which has been [illegible] goal of the electrically inclined Galahads of science for a [illegible]. The wizard of West [illegible] N. J., declares the new battery [illegible] marketed next spring, and [illegible] factories now in course [illegible] will be devoted exclusively to their production. Cobalt [illegible] unlocked the door to [illegible] power.

[illegible] the Senses.

[illegible] interesting results have [illegible] by experiments in hallucination of the senses at the Yale [illegible] laboratory. A person [illegible] a quiet room was asked to [illegible] intensity of a tone which [illegible] sounded every time a telegraph [illegible] ticked. At first the [illegible] actually produced, but afterward [illegible] to the person experimented [illegible] was emitted, [illegible] ticking was regularly continued [illegible] the subject of the experiment [illegible] that he heard the tone [illegible] every click of the instrument.

[illegible] experiment consisted in [illegible] light pith ball on the hand [illegible] that he could [illegible] was done. Each fall of [illegible] to correspond with [illegible] regularly emitted by a metronome. After a while the ball was [illegible] dropped, but the subject of [illegible] continued to feel or [illegible] the touch of the [illegible] sound from the metronome.

[illegible] experiment a blue bead [illegible] the center of a white [illegible] person was required to [illegible] and note, by means [illegible] at his side, the distance [illegible] the bead first became [illegible]. Later the bead was selected [illegible] still on arriving [illegible] determined distance the person believed that he saw the bead.

Making Artificial Gems.

The ancient alchemists directed their energies to transmitting what they were pleased to term the gross metals into precious metals, particularly gold, but their success would not have been more brilliant, or profitable, than the everyday commercial production of artificial jewels at the present time. The classic researches of the French savant, Moisson, with the electric furnace, looking to the artificial production of diamonds, have been heralded far and wide, and while the physical possibility of so making diamonds has been demonstrated, the commercial phase of the problem is as unsolved as ever.

On the other hand, Verneuil, who has devoted his attention to the production of artificial sapphires and rubies, which are amorphous forms of alumina, has been remarkably successful, and, according to the Watchmaker, Jeweler, Silversmith and Optician, has succeeded in producing rubies up to 15 carats, the artificial product being indistinguishable from natural gems.

The secret of the Verneuil's success, which has made possible this apparent transmutation, lies in the discovery that the ingredients must be fused at a temperature just sufficient to produce liquefaction. The operation in principle is extremely simple. Finely-powdered alumina is mixed with a little sesquioxide of chromium, and the mixture, by very slow degrees, raised to the fusion point by the use of a blow-pipe temperature. After a fusion has taken place the mixture is as slowly reduced in temperature.

The majority of fusions, it is reported, yield perfect stones, "equal in beauty to the natural gems," and capable of being cut and polished in a similar manner.

Danger Lurks in Eggs.

Experts in the Department of Agriculture have now reported that hens' eggs may contain dangerous disease germs, even if they are fresh laid. They say it is possible for an egg to become infected with bacteria, either before it is laid or after, and that the porus shell offers no more resistance to this micro-organism than it does to that which causes an egg to spoil. They say that typhoid germs may attach themselves to the hen's feet or feathers and penetrate the shell before the egg is laid. The eggs of worms, as well as grain and seed, are found in eggs, having become lodged there while the white and shell were being added to the yolk in the egg gland of the fowl.

To Excavate Herculaneum.

The governments of England, France and Germany and the United States have now consented to take part in the execution of the project initiated by Prof. Walastein of Cambridge, England, for the excavation of the ancient Roman city of Herculaneum, near Pompeii, which was covered with volcanic ashes at the same time the latter were buried. Pompeii, however, was a comparatively unimportant place, having no libraries or works of art, while Herculaneum is known to have been the home of wealthy Romans, possessing many fine works of art and literature. Only the approval of the Italian government is lacking to make possible the beginning of the work. First the town of Ristori, which was built eighty feet about the aucient city, must be demolished, and then it will be necessary to remove an eighty-foot layer of earth.

Discontent as a Disease.

Dr. A. R. Mitchell, surgeon for the Rock Island Railroad, speaking before the Chicago convention of railway surgeons, said that the prevailing popular tendency to wage war on wealth and corporations was a form of neurasthenia, which sweeps over the country like an epidemic. He said the power which had enabled the few to profit at the expense of the many was the fault of the many. He showed that men were led emotionally into destructive methods, consequently the lobbies maintained by corporations in different capitals were necessary to their self-preservation, because of the lower standard growing out of perverted nerve action, which is spreading itself in the form of a hysterical epidemic.

THE RAMBLER.

The Water Lily.

This lily, exquisitely white,
Whose heart displays a golden fire,
Reached out in darkness toward the light,
Though long submerged in ooze and mire.

So pure a things from such a source!
A miracle of God's sweet power,
Tranhformed in such a marvelous course
From noisome slime to perfect flower.

I ponder on the whence and why,
And see once more the infinite love
That would not let the lost seed die,
When sunshine filled the world above.

Look upward to the Light, my soul,
And like the lily spurn the gloom;
Thou, too, shalt reach the longed-for goal,
In matchless splender bud and bloom.

The Tramp Cat.

The Rambler saw the cat from his window while at breakfast one morning, only a few weeks ago. It was the most pitably forlorn object he had ever seen, starved to a skeleton, disheveled, wild-eyed, and with a broken jaw. It had evidently never known a single friend in all its short and unhappy life.

Dropping his knife and fork, the Rambler rose to his feet and hurried into the pantry for a saucer and some fresh milk. He could not eat so long as that gaunt reproach sat miserably outside his door.

Glaring with fear at the Rambler's approach, the cat scrambled wildly over the fence and disappeared in the underbrush of the neighboring lot. It had never, till today, known the friendship of man—only his enmity and cruelty and vindictive hate. No hand had ever stroked it in kindness—but many had hurled stones that bruised and maimed. No voice had called it in gentleness—but many had driven it away with angry shouts.

So the Rambler went thoughtfully into the house, leaving the saucer of milk in an exposed place, where the cat, if it returned, could not possibly miss seeing it. The cat did come back, but hours later, and it lapped the milk ravenously, yet furtively, always on the lookout for sudden attack from behind.

The next morning it appeared again, and vanished with the same abject terror when the Rambler came out with the saucer. This happened day after day. The sound of the Rambler's voice, the coaxing call of "kitty, kitty," seemed to scare it half to death.

It took the cat a long time to learn to trust the Rambler's motives, even at a remote distance, though he has always been its most solicitous provider. He never thinks of eating his own breakfast until the saucer has been filled for his pet. Lucretia did not have half so much trouble to win it, though she doesn't like cats and shoos this one away whenever it sidles up to her skirts. Perhaps instinct or experience has taught it that a human being in skirts is generally more kind than one in trousers.

However, the cat, grown sleek and clean, and almost fat, timidly allowed the Rambler to stroke its back the other day, evidently liking the caress, but still drawing away in nervous trepidation.

This morning, beneath the Rambler's delighted eyes, it played in the sunshine on the lawn, chasing its own tail and bounding toward the stray leaves that whispered in the grass. It was free from hunger and care and haunting fear at last.

It is really a rather handsome cat now, and its poor hanging jaw is no longer very noticeable. Its gray fur is kept quite smooth and clean, and even the thin tail is gaining some weight and flexibility and roundness. The cat has suffered from malnutrition so long, however, that the Rambler does not look for perfect beauty for some time yet.

This is a true story. What a commentary it is on the civilizing power of kindness and of good food regularly administered!

PROMINENT PERSONS.

Senator Proctor's great gift to Vermont, the Vermont Sanatorium for the treatment of tuberculous patients, for which he contributed $100,000, is under construction near Pittsfield and will be completed next summer. Senator Proctor has given much of his great wealth toward such charities in his State.

Rev. Dr. Gilbert T. Rowe, a Methodist preacher in Asheville, is prone to rather long-winded discourses and his congregation has conveyed to him a request that he restrict sermons to thirty minutes. In reply the reverend gentleman says he will preach as long as he pleases or quit.

Mrs. F. V. Church, aided by a number of female assistants, for years has carried on the business of a bank in Joplin, Mo. The president and vice-president are men connected with the institution, which is known as one of the most substantial of its kind in Missouri. Mrs. Church is cashier and when married declined to give up her position. She has never cashed a worthless piece of paper.

Senator Lodge is the one prominent political leader in Massachusetts who declines to be listed as a telephone subscriber. He considers it important to have some period of complete rest while away from Washington and, in spite of the grumbling of lesser political workers, the Senator has never succumbed to the house 'phone.

James Hazen Hyde, former vice-president of the Equitable, who is living in Paris, has arranged for a debate between Harvard and Yale in French. He has offered a cup to the team winning such a contest. This is one of many things Hyde has done to increase an interest in the study of French at Harvard.

Dr. Charles Eastman, the full-blooded Sioux, has inherited much of the poetic eloquence which characterized his father, in days of old. In an address which he delivered a few evenings ago to the Harvard Union he said: "Some of the laughing waters which have been big streams are now nothing but a few sad, trickling tears, because the white man uses up the stream."

Count Tolstoi always wears boots of his own making, which boots are the admiration of the shoemaker who taught him the trade, but the latter was certain that the Count would starve did he endeavor to earn a living by boot manufacturing, as the work put into each pair was too excellent and slow to prove profitable.

Twenty-three years ago the late Roscoe G. Smith of Cornish, Me., wrote to Amos L. Allen, then private secretary of Congressman Reed, thanking him for some agricultural reports. This letter has just reached Mr. Allen. It was laid away in some correspondence of Mr. Reed and has since then been waiting for some one to send it along to the owner.

PEOPLE OF THE COAST.

Superior Judge W. H. Waste at the memorial services held by the Oakland, Alameda and Berkeley parlors of the Native Sons of the Golden West last Sunday, referred to the condition of public affairs in San Francisco and said: "May our order answer the call and may right and decency be again restored to power and the vice and rottenness which would destroy the new San Francisco be forever put down. May every man be ready to do all in his might to preserve the good faith and integrity of the California of old."

Perry Bryant of Seattle claims to be the youngest soldier of the Civil War. He went as a drummer boy on August 22, at the age of 9 years and 10 months. He was born October 22, 1852, in Kane county, Ill., but enlisted from Mount Vernon, Iowa. After serving a year he was honorably discharged on a surgeon's certificate of disability. The pension officers have investigated Bryant's papers and found that his allegations were correct.

The Swiss and Italian consuls at San Francisco are looking over locations in Stanislaus county for farming and dairying lands for colonization purposes.

Gov. Pardee appointed the following delegates to represent California at the Trans-Mississippi Commercial Congress to be held in Kansas City, Mo., on November 20: Senator George C. Perkins, Oakland; A. R. Briggs, San Francisco; A. L. Stetson, Los Angeles; George W. Dickie, San Mateo; W. P. Hammon, Oroville; R. N. Lynch, Petaluma; T. Walu-Morgan Draper, San Francisco; Rufus P. Jennings, San Francisco; M. E. Dittmar, Redding, and A. A. Anderson, San Francisco.

B. F. Walton of Yuba City has been appointed a member of the Sacramento Drainage District Commission by Gov. Pardee to fill the place formerly occupied by T. B. Hull, deceased.

J. W. Keutzel, for forty years a member of the San Francisco fire department, has been retired upon his own request.

Frank Hays, a lumberjack employed by the Laclede Lumber Company at the mouth of the Clark's Fork River, Idaho, picked up a floating bottle which contained a $50 bill. On a paper were the words "Thrown over the Missoula bridge, May ——." The year was not legible.

Prof. Henry C. Quayle, the mosquito expert, who left the University of California last winter for Ames College, Iowa, has returned to the State University, at Berkeley, and will again take charge of the field work in entomology. Prof. Quayle is said to be one of the greatest experts on mosquitoes in the country and became known to the residents of the bay cities by his effective campaign against the little buzzers at Burlingame two years ago.

THE INNOCENT BYSTANDER.

A Chat With the Turkey.

The turkey, with a careless air,
Went gobble-gobble here and there.
"O, turkey, turkey, nice and plump,"
I said, "you'd better plan to jump,
To skip, to flee, to run, to hide,
And likewise get away, beside,
For soon Thanksgiving Day will come
And you may then be roasted some.
Unless you skip, I tell you true,
Thanksgiving Day I'll feast on you."

The turkey winked his knowing eye
And chuckled, or gobbled: "Don't you sigh
For what you think will be my fate.
You'll not eat me, at any rate.
The turkey with which you will give thanks
Has hung for years among the ranks
Of those in some cold-storage place.
Yes, sir, you'll say Thanksgiving grace
Above a bird that's frozen blue
Since 1892."

Diary of an Uncle Tommer.

Nov. 3.—We are now the World's Combined, Colossal, Megatherium, Mammoth Quadruple Uncle Tom's Cabin Company. Tuesday afternoon, while we were walking the ties from Hillville to Valley Mills, where we were booked for Wednesday night, we were stopped by a danger signal held in the hand of a man who came running around a curve toward us. The man was evidently a Lawyer Marks comedian, and he flagged us with his red bandanna handkerchief. We pulled up, and the other company walked around the curve.

"Where are you bound?" asked the manager of the other company.

"Valley Mills. Where are you going?"

"Hillville."

The two managers laughed solemnly at each other.

Then each told the other he would be safe, as all the eggs in those towns had been thrown at the stage.

They sat together on the trunk containing the drops for the panorama of Uncle Tom going to heaven, and after much confab concluded to combine. Instead of going either to Valley Mills or Hillville, we pulled ahead to a branch line which runs down to Coalton, and there we will open with four Topsies, three Evas, four Uncle Toms, four Markses, two Lagrees, one bloodhound, one bulldog, one shepherd dog, one mule and one donkey.

I am beginning to wonder if after all, I knew my own heart when I decided that I loved the thespian art. It is difficult to hold the mirror up to nature when a cantankerous mule wants to kick you through the walls of the theater every time your back is turned. And why do the people rejoice to see the donkey kick me? Another thing: The bloodhound has been laboring under the delusion that I am his commissary department. I told the manager yesterday that if he expected Marks to feed the dog he would have to feed Marks, or else get a fatter man for the part. Much as I love to tread the boards, I cannot afford to contribute four or five inches of cuticle and an occasional mouthful of my flesh to the savage Siberian bloodhound every now and then.

Little Eva is full of professional jealousy today. That is, the littlest Eva—the one we had originally. I heard her telling her daughter, who plays Eliza, today, that as far as she was concerned, if she could only get back home, all the applause she ever wanted to hear again would be somebody asking for a second order of her flapjacks.

"Them's the only encores that comes from the heart," she said. "It's all good enough to die singin' on the stage, and have the audience cryin' and hollerin' for you to die again, but give me the old greased griddle and the boarders yellin' for more flapjacks. Besides, even if you do run a lunch counter, you can eat once in a while yourself."

Must close now, as we have rested long enough and a light snow is falling.

By Her Little Brother.

Since sister married him, why he
Don't ever take me on his knee
An' say 'at I'm a splendid lad
An' boys 'at's full o' fun ain't bad.

An' he don't say: "Frank, here's a dime,"
Like he would say 'most every time
He come here, an' don't pat my head
And say to not send me to bed.

Since sister married him, why he
Won't have a thing to do with me!
Old stingy! Freckledfaced an' slim!
Why did sis ever marry him!

BITS OF VERSE.

The Eternal Question.

I've wandered to the village, Tom,
We loved so long ago,
I've mingled with the boys, and with
The girls we used to know;
The boys are worn and feeble, Tom,
They're gray, baldheaded men;
It made me sad and blue, dear Tom,
To meet them all again.

But when I met the girls, Tom,
It was a sadder sight,
Their faces all were powdered, Tom,
Their forms were laced up tight,
And every one I met, Tom,
Insistent were to know
If they did not look as young
As twenty years ago.

Mary and the Flea.

Mary, on her pretty arm,
Found a little flea;
Every time she grabbed at it,
It would "23."

Fido saw her acting up
And the cause he knew—
Fido smiled and said, "Ah, ha!
Mary's got 'em, too."

It Isn't Safe to Be.

It isn't safe to walk the streets
For autos, trucks and cars,
And in the country lanes one meets
The bull outside the bars;
There's earthquakes swallowing the land
And tidal waves at sea,
There's certain death on every hand—
It isn't safe to be.

There is no pleasure any more
In what we drink and eat;
We swallow microbes by the score
In every bit of meat;
Our food is freighted deep with death,
And if from food we flee
We draw it in with every breath—
It isn't safe to be.

Not knowing what will happen next
We ask ourselves again
The question that of old perplexed
The melancholy Dane.
But if the fatal germ may wait
Within a kiss, you see,
We simply must asseverate
It isn't safe to be.

So let us eat and let us drink
In spite of quake and squall;
It won't do any good to think
How soon the blow may fall.
This is a vastly better plan,
Whether on land or sea,
Get every bit of fun you can,
Until you cease to be.

—[Clarice W. Riley, in the New York Times.

Tomorrow.

I said "Tomorrow," one bleak, winter day—
"Tomorrow I will live my life anew,"
And still "tomorrow," while the winter grew
To spring, and yet I dallied by the way,
And sweet, dear sins still held me in their sway;
"Tomorrow," I said, while summer days wore through;
"Tomorrow," while chill autumn round me drew;
And so my soul remained the sweet sins' prey.

So pass the years, and still, perpetually,
I cry "Tomorrow will I flee each wile—
Tomorrow, surely, shall my soul stand free,
Safe from the siren voices that beguile."
But death waits by me, with a mocking smile,
And whispers, "Yea, tomorrow, verily."

Love.

Unless you can think when the song is done,
No other is sweet in the rhythm;
Unless you can feel, when left by one,
That all men also go with him;
Unless you can know when upraised by his breath
That your beauty itself wants proving;
Unless you can swear, "For life, for death"—
Oh, fear to call it loving.

Unless you can muse in a crowd all day
Of the absent face that fixed you;
Unless you can love as the angels may,
With the breath of heaven betwixt you;
Unless you can dream that his faith is fast,
Through behooving and unbehooving;
Unless you can die when the dream is past—
Oh, never call it loving.

—[Elizabeth Barrett Browning.

The Regiment of God.

Every mason in the quarry, every builder on the shore,
Every woodman in the forest, every boatman at the oar,
Hewing wood and drawing water, splitting stones and clearing sod,
All the dusty ranks of labor in the regiment of God,
March together toward His temple, do the task His hands prepare;
Honest toil is holy service; faithful work is praise and prayer.

REMOVAL SALE

Broadway Drapery and Furniture Co.
447 South Broadway

This removal sale of ours is now at its best. Our stock was never more complete in spite of the heavy selling during the past fortnight. We told you that new goods purchased months ago were due at any time. They are coming now. In fact we have just received a lot of bedroom furniture which we are now unpacking. When you can buy fresh, new furniture of this kind at considerable reductions, it is economy to do so. We don't make sweeping flat price concessions on any one line—each piece is reduced just as much as it will stand. The reduction is honest, just as our regular selling price is honest and fair. Every piece is tagged with its regular price and the reduced price. You can see exactly the saving quoted. If you have a chamber to furnish, attend to it this week—an opportunity like this is seldom offered.

Chiffoniers at a Saving

Our stock of chiffoniers is large—we list but a few to give you an idea of the nature of the reductions. Not one but is well put together and a thoroughly practical piece of furniture. Come in and walk through the floor on which they are displayed.

We hear it every day. The new suit management is scoring victory after victory.

Volume of business, buying prestige, a great selling scope have put the Broadway in such close touch and perfect harmony with manufacturers that they have worked wonders in producing prettier garments at lower prices.

High class suits such as particular women want, suits of silk, and velvet and cloth in a great variety, no matter whether it be $10.00 or $50.00 you want to pay. Note what we say—put us to the test. Comparison proves. If you haven't your new suit yet, plan to buy at The Broadway Department Store. Monday.

Hurrah For the Toys!

The First Big Christmas Display on the Third Floor Monday

We've moved domestics, wash goods, flannels, linens over into the third floor annex just to gain the room we need to give a fair chance to this great lot of Christmas toys Santa Claus has sent us.

Hundreds of Them

Dolls, Toys, Games and Wheel Goods

All spread out on the third floor. Electric toys, mechanical toys, toys for girls and toys for boys, iron trains, wagons, automobiles, doll buggies, printing presses.

A regular kingdom of toys, and Santa Claus is coming later to be ruler.

Bring the children Monday. Let them come and look to their heart's content. It's the time of all times to get their ideas now. It's the time of all times to buy when crowds are less and varieties are big, and broad, and good.

You'd be surprised if we told you the acres upon acres of floor space we've had to use as warehouse room to store these toys. It's to be the biggest display Los Angeles has ever seen.

And as the biggest values have always been here, expect to buy good toys for less at The Broadway again this year. Compare qualities, compare quantities, compare varieties, compare prices. But above all, bring the children to the third floor Monday, the first day of the Christmas toy display.

Save on Table Linens

By buying them Monday at the Broadway Department Thanksgiving a little over two weeks, time to think of the table now. Time to take advantage of these exceptional values. More than one reason for them.

We buy linens to sell them for less. We like to sell them for even lower prices when you want them most. Besides, these are values to introduce you to the new department, third floor, Annex.

Silks, Dress Goods, All Black, All Underpriced

A partnership of rare values, a celebration time of unusual importance for every woman and dressmaker.

The biggest business in silks and dress goods we've ever done rests upon the biggest values we've ever offered, and the Broadway has always been noted for its unusual values. Time and again this season customers have wondered how we could sell such good materials for so little. (Partly because we sell so many of them.

We've done big things. We are going ourselves one better now as a sort of "thank you," to show that we appreciate the generous approval you've given us. We started out to make November a record month and we're doing it. We're going to have a record day Monday.

Let these values tell you why. Then compare qualities for Broadway values always rest upon a quality foundation—the best for the least.

Silks and dress goods. A great "Black Only" day. Read on.

BASEBALL BATS.

Millions of Them Being Made from Hickory and Ash by Factories Running Year Round.

What becomes of all the baseball bats? It quite like the old inquiry of "What becomes of all the pins?" At any rate, big factories are running all the year round, turning out nothing but bats. When one considers the 10,000,000 small boys in this country, and that each one averages four bats during his early baseball days, the problem is reduced to figures which account for the demand. Bats are no longer whittled out of a piece of board, as was done forty years ago, but are made on machines which turn out their thousands daily.

The process is simple but slow. First the logs are cut into "bolts" of from 32 inches to 42 inches long and the bolts sawed into billets 2½ inches or 3 inches square at the ends. Three years' seasoning is required by the best bats, either in the log or billet. The kiln drying process is rapid, but not considered as good. The billets are placed in an automatic lathe, which quickly transforms the stick into the graceful form of the bat. The bat is then smoothed and polished by being held against a rapidly moving, horizontal belt, which is covered with sand. It is then ready for its coat of oil, varnish or paint, as the case may be. White hickory and ash are the best woods, but these are becoming scarce, and the small boy of a few years hence may have to use a bat made of paper, fiber, or even metal. The Sporting Goods Dealer says most of the wood used comes from Michigan and Ohio.

Epsom Salts' Different Uses.

The use of Epsom salts in the adulteration of boot leather will have been a novelty to most people who know the salts only as a medicine. They have been extensively used, however, in the weighting of cotton cloth, and also as a top-dressing for clover hay. Epsom salts come from all parts of the world, and have even been got from sea water, though they retain the old name which commemorates their extraction from the mineral springs of Epsom in the seventeenth century. Scientifically, they are sulphate of magnesia; it was only the errand boy of the chemist juror in Bardell vs. Pickwick, who had an impression that Epsom salts meant oxalic acid. That, of course, is the classic reference to the new boot adulterant in literature, unless we are to reckon the apocryphal epitaph:

Here lie I and my three daughters,
Died of drinking Cheltenham waters;
If we had stuck to Epsom salts,
We shouldn't be now in these here vaults.

—[London Chronicle.

Richard's Victory.

Two brothers, aged 9 and 10, respectively, pupils in a public school of Washington, were recently absent for a period of two weeks. When the elder of the boys returned to his class he brought a note from his father stating that the cause of the absence of his children was illness.

"Where's your brother Dick?" asked the teacher. "Is he still sick?"

"Yes, ma'am," replied the pupil, "he's still in bed with a broken arm."

"I'm sorry to hear it. How did it happen?"

"Well, it was this way, ma'am. You see, Dick and I were trying to see which could lean out of the second-story window the furthest, and Dick won."

Prince Murat Sells Fish.

From marshalship of the Napoleonic empire to the trade of fishmonger is a remarkable descent, even in three generations.

Prince Louis Napoleon Murat, who is a direct descendant of Napoleon Bonaparte's famous marshal and who married a Mingrelian princess and owns a magnificent chateau on the Circassian coast in the Caucasus, is now devoting his energies to importing Scotch herring.

He has just imported 450 tons from regular monthly delivery of 4000 barrels. The Prince says he is of a steady market and peasants in the neighborhood establishment will be to the profit of Marshal scendant.

Compensating Advantages

The Truth About Credit

Brent's the Great Credit House

Is it not ridiculous for any store to say you pay no more on CREDIT than you do if you paid CASH. Only the most ignorant, unsophisticated person will believe that.

At "BRENT'S" every article is marked in plain figures for SPOT CASH. That means the very LOWEST PRICE in California. If you buy where goods are not marked in plain figures you are taking chances. If you buy where you are asked one price and you can get it for another price you are taking more chances. The store with two prices would rob you if it could. We want your credit business. On our credit system we add 10 per cent. to our spot cash prices. It is the only honest way.

Thousands of Housekeepers Visited the Store Last Week

Furniture Buyers, Read This

With a complete change of programme, Brent's commences another battle against Trust prices and methods.

Some people—a few—still fail to grasp the fact that this store is waging single handed a war against monopoly and unfair profits.

We ask no man or woman to trade here from sentiment, but it is our right to expect support from the public which we are benefiting.

You save money at Brent's—big money. Many a Trust store asks double Brent's prices on certain lines of goods and every Trust price in the city is from 25 per cent. to 40 per cent. higher than you pay at Brent's.

Carpets, Furniture, Stoves, Pianos, Sewing Machines

—everything you need down to a toothpick holder can be bought for less at Brent's. It stands to reason that we would not dare to publish statements like these unless the facts upheld us. We say, come and compare. Get Trust prices prices, see Trust goods, and decide for yourself.

One Customer Last Week Saved $2481 at This Store

That illustrates what we are doing for our patrons. On a bill of goods at Brent's you save enough to buy many additional pieces of furniture. Bear in mind, then when you pay excessive prices, you practically throw money away.

INSECT DAMAGE IS HEAVY TAX.

COSTS COUNTRY MORE THAN EXPENSES OF GOVERNMENT.

Department of Agriculture Estimates That the Loss Will Total $700,000,000 Annually—What the Cost Has Been of Attemps to Check Some of Their Ravages.

The Department of Agriculture has been gathering data and making careful estimates, among other things, of the average annual loss to agricultural products in the United States due to the ravages of insects. They place the average annual loss to all agricultural products due to insect ravages at $700,000,000, which includes loss to field and forage crops, live stock, fruit and garden truck, forest products and stored foods. In one year a single insect, the chinch bug, caused a loss of $60,000,000, and the Hessian fly caused a loss of $24,000,000 in only two States in one year. A careful estimate of the average annual damage caused to the apple crop by the codlin moth shows it to be $20,000,000. Millions of dollars of damage is caused each year by the San José scale, the exact loss by it being impossible to estimate, because it attacks so many different kinds of fruit trees and bushes and not only ruins or injures the fruit production, but kills the plants outright. St. Louis county is one of the sections suffering most of late. Millions of dollars are lost each year by corn or boll worm, attacking corn and cotton; corn root worm, cotton worm, wire worm, cut worm, plant lice, web worm, plum curculie, especially to the apple; scale insects, canker worm, apple maggot, bark beetle, warble fly, and hundreds of other species.

THE ENORMOUS COST.

The Department of Agriculture shows that the annual tax paid to insect depredations exceeds the entire annual expenditure of the national government, including the pension roll and the maintenance of the army and navy.

Insects become injurious when they destroy or injure cultivated or useful plants, stored food, books, clothing, live stock, or carry diseases to either man or domesticated animals. Insects which simply annoy, as the bedbug and cockroach, are not counted. Insects are beneficial when they destroy injurious insects, noxious plants, decaying animal or vegetable matter, when they pollinate plants, make soil, form food or clothing for man, or can be made use of in the arts, as shellac and cochineal insects.

Nature maintains a balance which man upsets when he attempts to cultivate and raise a quantity of certain plants at the expense or exclusion of others. Practically every kind of plant has certain insects that naturally feed upon it and tend to hold it in check, and as man produces more of a certain kind of plant, nature produces insects to destroy it. In many instances the withdrawal of the natural food of some species of insects forces them to take another, which may be to a cultivated plant. Such a notable instance is seen in the Colorado potato beetle, which until a few years ago naturally fed upon a wild plant in Colorado, but now injures the potato plant all over the United States. Most plants, whether cultivated or uncultivated, have many different species of insects that tend to destroy them. For instance, the apple has 281 species, the clover plant 82, the beet 70, and so on throughout the list equally startling figures are to be found.

SHIFTING THE BURDEN.

That injurious insects cause an enormous damage is well known and many attempts have been made in the last thirty years to calculate as accurately as possible this yearly or annual damage and to reduce it to a money value. Many factors and influences enter into the estimate and react on one another in such a way as to render exact figures difficult or impossible. If the insects destroy one-half the number of barrels of apples grown this year, is not the remaining half worth about as much in money value to the State as the whole would be? On the other hand, if the yield of corn is reduced this year one-half by insect damage, would not the money value to the State be reduced also about as much? From these two extremes are all grades of variation in the per cent. of money value as compared with the per cent. of insect damage. A much more accurate estimate therefore, would be to express the loss in bushels and pounds and let each one estimate the money value accordingly. In most instances of insect damage it is the individual who suffers the loss and not the State as a whole. A may lose his entire crop of apples through insect ravages, while B. in the next county, has a full crop. Where A. loses B. therefore gains to a certain extent in the enhanced value of his crop, and the consumer, that is, the city and the town man, pays the extra price, so that the consumer at large really suffers as much, as a rule, from insect ravages, as the producer at large, although the consumer in the city or town may not stop to consider that he is paying an insect tax on agricultural products.

SOME EXPENSES KNOWN.

Besides a direct annual loss in insect ravages, time and money are spent in fighting them. Some commercial orchardists spend $500 annually in spraying for a single insect, the codlin moth. California spent over $1,000,000 in trying to fight the San José scale; Massachusetts appropriated out of the State Treasury and spent more than $1,000,000 in fighting the gypsy moth, and Congress recently appropriated $250,000 to fight the boll weevil and other insects.

It is the immense loss by injurious insects that has given rise to the comuparatively new science of applied or economic entomology. In the United States are some 225 workers in this new field, who spend about $250,000 each year in trying to devise methods York State alone employs fourteen entomologists, who spend $35,000 annually.

Corn Fed Fish for Chicago.

Inhabitants of Wilmot village, Wis., have opened up a new industry in fattening fish for the Chicago market. German carp, which are plentiful in Fox River, are scooped up in nets and placed in a big pen fenced off in a small stream. They are fed on corn and grain, the same as hogs. It is claimed the fish take on flesh rapidly, and it is not uncommon to take carp from the pen weighing from thirty to fifty pounds. Last year the ingenious workers in the new industry sold over two tons of fish fattened in this way. This season they will dispose of twenty tons, as there is a good demand. The fish are ready for the market about the middle of January.

Trouble in Suburban Families.

"What's the matter with all you swamp-bursters?" demanded Citiman. "You all appear to hate Newcomb and yet he's a decent sort of fellow."

"Huh!" snorted Subbubs, "the miserable chump bought his wife a $30 bonnet the other day and now there's no [illegible] in our homes."—[Philadelphia ing the stairs to my office. However, I was busy. Every little case I got was studied back to the foundation of both law and precedent, and I learned much that has since been useful to me in the larger matters of my profession. I looked over my account book the other day. The first year at Haverill I earned $300, which was not enough to pay rent and other expenses. My fees were $400 the second year. The third year I made $1000 net. Thereafter my income grew steadily until I got into politics and came to Congress."

"Had you expected to take up politics as a career?"

"At no time. I was elected a member of the Republican Campaign Committee in my city, and later was made chairman. Gen. Benjamin F. Butler ran for Governor and we had an exciting battle in Massachusetts. Well, one thing led to another, until I was elected district, or prosecuting attorney. I held that office six years, and it was the best single experience of my life. Congress is full of lawyers who began or have served as prosecuting attorneys. That kind of practice to a lawyer is what a surgeon or physician gets in a hospital. You have no client at your elbow to make suggestions and to expect a verdict when you are not entitled to it. You follow your own course and learn readiness, thoroughness and the value of truth."

"You helped to try the case against Lizzie Borden?"

"Yes; I was called into it, although it was not in my district. I suppose that case was more fully reported in the newspapers of this country than any other in the history of American criminal practice. No further light has been thrown upon the murder of Andrew J. Borden than was brought out at the time of the trial. The mystery of fourteen years ago is unbroken to this day. Borden, aged, rich, and retired, lived in Fall River with his second wife. He had two daughters, Lizzie and Emma. On the day of the murder Emma was away from home. Both Borden and his wife were killed one morning in August, 1892, between the hours of 10 and noon—chopped to death with an ax or hatchet. Mrs. Borden was murdered in her room on the second floor; her husband, on a couch in the parlor, where he was taking a nap.

"Lizzie Borden was about 32 years old and had taught in a Sunday-school. She said she had been in the stable at the foot of the lot at the time of the double murder, to get lead for some fishing lines. It was she who discovered her father's dead body. No robbery had been committed. The theory of the police was that Lizzie wanted her father's property and feared her step-mother would get it. She was arrested, indicted, tried and acquitted. Fall River, even to churches and families, being divided in opinion as to her guilt. It was proved by physicians and chemists that Mrs. Borden had been murdered an hour or two before her husband. We put everything we had into the case, and no new evidence, so far as I know, has been obtained since. Lizzie Borden and her sister got their father's property, and the former has continued to live in Fall River."

"You have been a prosecutor during much of your life as a lawyer?"

"Oh, no; I was District Attorney for six years, but I kept up my private practice, which was civil, and in no instance, that I now remember, criminal."

"You sent several Haverhill aldermen to jail?"

"In Massachusetts licenses to liquor dealers are apportioned on the basis of population. Accordingly, they are valuable. A wholesale whisky merchant in Boston and his local agent in our town made an arrangement with certain of our aldermen to deal in lincenses at Haverhill. I heard of it, went to work, and got five aldermen and another man indicted. They were convicted. The case was carried up, but the conviction was affirmed. One man fled to Canada and another to Europe. We waited until they returned and put them in prison. All of them went to jail under a sentence of fifteen months."

"You were elected to Congress in 1895 with no particular effort on your own part and without spending any money?"

"I served seven years in the House of Representatives and was elected four times. I paid a small contribution each campaign to the Republican committee, and that was all. I spent no money myself. I didn't have it. Moreover, money was not necessary. If I had been a rich man and in a close district I don't know what I would have done. I can only hope that I would have been as decent from choice and principle as I actually was under my limitations and the necessities of the case. I have much sympathy with the rich man who gets into a hot political contest and opens his pocketbook to save himself the humiliation of defeat. Nevertheless the use of money in politics is one of the serious and growing perils of our time.

"The honest or dishonest rich man spends it for himself. The dishonest poor man is willing to accept a purchased office, and, covered with mortgages, takes up his public duties in dishonor and thraldom and with a secret determination, perhaps, to make all he can. We have got to meet this question in the United States. There must be laws on the subject. I would limit the amount of money that could be spent in the election of every candidate under our various departments of government, from a city councilman to the President of the United States. And then I would compel the publication of all expenses, even to the cost of postage stamps. I would make it unlawful for a corporation to contribute a cent to any party or any nominee. Corporations may be patriotic, may have a sincere interest in the result of an election, but their boards of directors have no right to vote away the money of their shareholders. If they want to give, let them go into their own pockets, and then let the names of all contributors be printed for the scrutiny of the people."

"I believe you came to the opinion that the way to fight the trusts was to stop the railroads from giving them special rates on freight and other advantages not accorded to their competitors?"

"I thought it would help, in the effort to bring the trusts within the law and fair practice. My own view is that trusts and monopolies would never have grown to be a menace to the welfare of the country if they had been denied preferential treatment by the railroads. The ink was scarcely dry on the Elkins law when I came into this office. Senator Philander C. Knox, my predecessor, had begun with vigor and great intelligence the policy which has since been followed in respect to trusts and monopolies. There is always a man in this country for any work that needs to be done. Washington and Lincoln, in the mercy and wisdom of Providence, first created and then saved the republic. Grover Cleveland maintained the integrity of our money, split his party, and ruined himself. William McKinley's renown will rest upon his labors for protection to American industry, and the wisdom with which he managed the war with Spain. Monopolies and monopolists had been called harsh names, sometimes vile names, by Democrats and Republicans. When Theodore Roosevelt came to the Presidency he summoned them to court. The country and the occasion were ready; so was the man. There was no abuse. There were no frenzied shouts of alarm. Mr. Roosevelt had the right man in the right place at the right time in the person of Knox, and together they began to act.

"I was happy in the opportunity which awaited me when I left the navy and took the place I have. The railroads said: 'There is law enough. We have ceased to give rebates, anyway.' The statement was inconsistent, to say the least. After a time I concluded that the railroads were right as to there being law enough and wrong when they declared that rebates stopped. Subsequent events confirmed my conclusion."

"How many cases were brought against the railroads?"

"There have been ninety cases brought against railroads, persons and corporations under the interstate commerce law since Mr. Roosevelt became President, sixty-three of which were under the Elkins act."

"Were there convictions?"

"Yes. Fines amounting to over $350,000 have been levied, and in two instances sentences of imprisonment were imposed. So far twenty-three persons and corporations have been convicted."

"At your suggestion the law was changed so that the courts might send railroad officers to jail."

"That is true. However, I do not believe that a money fine is a light or ineffectual method of punishment. But the world takes that view. 'What,' it asks, 'do the officers of a railroad care if they are made to pay $10,000? They have plenty of money.' They care a great deal. Usually they are conspicuous men in business and society and even the church. They are called into court, convicted of breaking the law and fined like a culprit before a police magistrate. Don't tell me they are indifferent to such shame and to such a stigma. They wear the brand the rest of their lives and are buried with it. But even so, a day in jail is better still. Imprisonment not only makes the penalty more drastic, but it satisfies public opinion, and, better than all, it is a poweful deterrent. Consequently, I was in favor of it, and asked to have it put back into the law."

"What have you done to the trusts?"

"We took action against the beef trust. The civil action succeeded, but the criminal action was not a success. The monopoly in print paper, which was plundering the newspapers of the West, has been destroyed, and prices have fallen 20 to 30 per cent. The elevator trust has been broken up, and suits are pending against the monopolies in tobacco, sewer pipe, fertilizers, drugs and the bridge privileges over the Mississippi River at St. Louis. Already the price of fertilizers has been much reduced in the South, and the tobacco trust is making concessions to independent manufacturers. A trust has many ramifications at times. The monopolists in tobacco, for instance, got control of all the licorice in the world. Licorice is an essential ingredient in plug tobacco and in some kinds of smoking tobacco. The trust, by means of an apparent outside company, grabbed the licorice supply. When it discovered that we had facts, it reduced the price of licorice 20 per cent. and made contracts with independent manufacturers to treat them fairly in the future. There were trusts also in Alaska and Hawaii. We have put an end to them. For some time we have been investigating hard coal monopoly, and hope for results in that direction."

"Should there be other laws against trusts?"

"I have a very undramatic suggestion to make, one, I fancy, that w not appeal to the extremist. I think it would be well if each State in the Union would compel every business corporation to print, once a year at least, the names of its shareholders. What good would it do? I will tel you. Suppose—and this is a hypothetic illustration—that nearly all the coal in the country was mined, sold a distributed by a single corporation masked under various aliases. Then suppose there were State laws such as I have suggested. It would soon be discovered that the coal company of Pennsylvania, the mining company of Michigan, the fuel company of Ohio and so on throughout the United States were owned by the coal securities corporation of New Jersey. How long do you think it would take the separate States to break up the combination? Why, forty Legislatures would go after the trust in no time."

THE LARGEST EXCLUSIVE PICTURE STORE IN AMERICA

GREEN'S

Holiday Opening Sale

One of the greatest sales ever known west of Chicago. Never before has such a sale of pictures been known in Los Angeles. Our regular prices are 25 to 50 per cent. less on every line than others ask for goods of similar quality. During this sale the prices will be so much lower that we expect everybody in Los Angeles to take advantage of the unusual offerings.

We have a magnificent stock of pictures to select from—framed in the very latest effects—everything from a 10c picture up to the rich oil paintings at $100.00. Five large stores filled with the newest and best in pictures. All bright, fresh new goods direct from the greatest producers in America. No old goods or out of date pictures at Green's.

CHRISTMAS BUT SIX WEEKS AWAY

We are beginning this extraordinary Holiday sale early to avoid a great rush the last few days. Buy now while you can save big money. Purchases made during this sale delivered whenever you wish. But remember these special low prices are for this week only. You must buy this week to take advantage of the big savings offered.

Picture Bargains Never Equaled Before

We make these remarkably low prices to bring people to the most wonderful picture establishment on the Pacific Coast and to start Christmas buying early. Though we have a tremendous stock on hand it is bound to be much depleted before the end of the season. So this sale has a double significance—early buyers are sure to get the best selection and to save money.

THIS SALE WILL BE HELD IN THE RED ROOM OF THE MAIN STREET WING WHICH HAS JUST BEEN COMPLETED. Whether you buy for Christmas gifts or for your own home we want to emphasize the fact that you will get the greatest picture bargains ever offered in this country. Money back if you're not satisfied. The following specials are but a few of the many pictures we offer at low prices.

The following item is reproduced from the Picture and Art Trade, which speaks for itself:

"PICTURE STORE WITH THE LARGEST STREET FRONTAGE

A subscriber writes to inquire if we can tell him which picture store in this country has the largest street frontage. There are several retail stores which have frontage on more than one street. Perhaps the largest street frontage is that of Green's, Los Angeles, Cal. It has entrances on three streets and claims a frontage of 220 feet. 65 feet on Broadway, 130 feet on Tenth and 25 feet on Main street, the entire 220 feet being covered with plate glass show window."

Another note in the same trade journal says: "Green, the art man, is fitting up another store in connection with the four he already occupies. He has now over 300 feet of window display."

FRUIT AND GAME PICTURES Very beautiful combinations. Has 3-inch Flemish oak frame; size 17x38½ inches. Divided into three parts by 1-inch oak bars. Center picture is fruit. Outside pictures are game and fish. Our regular selling price $2.25 and cheap at that. Holiday opening sale $1.75

HUNTING PICTURES A very attractive new novelty. Richly colored effects framed in 3-inch Flemish oak frame divided by 1-inch bars. Frame has three openings with three distinct hunting pictures and cleverly decorated with horse shoes, bit and whip. A great bargain at the regular price, $2.75. Frame alone is worth more. Holiday opening sale $2.00

GREATEST BARGAIN OF ALL Photographs, plain and hand colored, framed in 1½-inch very neat gilt frame with 2½-inch white mat; size 23x27 inches. Big variety of popular subjects. The standard price of these pictures unframed in plain black and white is $3.00. Colored, $5.00. Framed up to sell at Green's regularly low prices, $5.00 and $7.00. Choice of plain or colored. During holiday opening sale $2.00

THE HARVEST MOON A very popular subject; a genuine etching framed in 3-inch Flemish oak frame with brass title plate. Size 18x38 inches. Sold regularly at Green's for $3.50. Sale price $2.50

GENUINE ETCHINGS IN THE VERY BEST SUBJECTS Two sizes, 24x44 inches and 30x40 inches. These are mounted on 3-inch double thick mat framed in 3-inch Flemish oak frame; very neatly ornamented. Made up to sell at Green's for $6.00. During the holiday opening sale $4.00

The Paris of Asia.

SHANGHAI, THAT WONDERFUL CITY ON THE WOOSUNG—WHAT "THE TIMES" PARTY IS SEEING IN THE FAR EAST.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

SHANGHAI (China) Oct. 3, 1906.—Shanghai, sometimes called "The Paris of the Far East," and "The New York of Asia," comes nearer deserving these appellations than any other city in Asia that we have yet entered.

The city is built in a bend of the Woosung River, a few miles above its mouth in the Yellow Sea, and near the mouth of the Yangtse, the mighty river of China in the valley of which lives a hundred and eighty million souls. This great stream, the Yangtse-Kiang, is navigable in the high water of summer time for merchant ships with a draft of twenty-six feet, and for American men-of-war, also, as far up as Hankow, 680 miles from the sea, and for smaller craft, including junks, for a distance of 1000 miles more.

Immense areas of fertile and unoccupied land are to be found in the valley, proving that China, contrary to the popular impression in the United States, is not actually over-populated. It was Li Hung Chang who declared that the Chinese had no occasion to go abroad for the sake of securing farming land, for that was abundant at home. The Chinese habit of massing themselves in cities and towns to live, constitutes that "over-population" which exists in the public mind. Tremendous stretches of country along the valley of this great river give the country the appearance, in some measure, of the great plains and prairies of the Far West in our own country. The valley is the outlet for the trade, commerce and travel, of the dense populations that inhabit its whole length, even far up toward the mountains of Tibet, where it has its source; and it might support even more human beings than it contains, were they distributed over the land in agricultural communities, after the manner of our trans-Missouri country, which, in the period of half a century has been transformed from a pathless wilderness, occupied, settled, populated and made to blossom as the rose.

I cannot undertake in this first and brief letter to make anything like an adequate description of this important Asiatic city. The most that I can hope to do is to hit the high places and scratch the surface a little.

The business sections are distinguished by block after block and row after row of splendid buildings of brick and stone, which would be creditable to New York, not to say to Los Angeles herself. An extensive system of street railways is under construction, and the work upon the tracks is more thorough-going and efficient than any I have ever seen in an American city. Heavy rails, imbedded in cement, are being laid, and the space between them is filled with eucalyptus blocks imported from Australia and treated, first with creosote and then with boiled tar, after being laid, to make them still more firm and lasting. If street railway construction of equal thoroughness and solidity were required in some cities of the United States where fortunes are made out of such construction, I make the statement, without fear of successful contradiction, that several kinds of fits would be the outcome.

Those of the excursionists who are making their first visit to the Far East were surprised to find Shanghai a modern city with a population conservatively estimated at 350,000, of whom 10,000 or 12,000 are Europeans, Americans and other foreigners, with another and purely Chinese city within the environs containing a population of between 600,000 and 800,000. The modern city has located on its river front immense silk and cotton factories, great warehouses or "go-downs," (as they are universally called in the Orient,) railroad shops, and business houses of various kinds, giving all the evidences of an American or European city. Compared with Japanese cities, the streets are broad, well paved and well kept. There is a tremendous traffic and constant activity, and the streets swarm with people of all nationalities. The city is cosmopolitan and metropolitan in the fullest sense. All the principal European nations are represented among the business houses, but the English are predominant. The United States does not make the showing that she might make were trade conditions better, and the fostering hand of our government more prominent in the commercial affairs of the Far East.

The Woosung River, in front of the city, is filled with shipping, from sampans and launches up to merchantmen and men-of-war, in which latter class the United States is represented. There is a depth of water in the channel at high tide of something over twenty-four feet, and at low tide of fourteen feet.

The climate is mild, soft and agreeable, not unlike that of the Pacific Coast in the region of Portland, the weather being a little cooler at this time than it is in Los Angeles. The excursionists have, with slight exceptions, enjoyed the weather ever since leaving home. Experts here agree that we have come at the right season of the year to get the most enjoyment out of the climate. With a great ship in which to sail, and seas and weather such as we are having, the oriental journey could not have bee ntaken under more favorable auspices. We are so sure of the Dakota, with her great size, her powerful build, her steady steam and sailing qualities, and her capable commander, that we have small fear of the typhoon, should another one of the Hongkong breed confront us when we reach those waters.

The trade with our country is nothing compared with what it might be and what it should be. The surface of commercial China has scarcely been scratched. American traders have been making strenuous efforts to gain a large and permanent foothold in the treaty ports, and their progress is blocked in too many cases by many serious obstacles, among which is the "likin" tax, a curious and oppressive Chinese device by which a fresh duty is to be paid at the gate of each interior city or town into which the trader seeks to enter, after having paid his import duty at the chief port of entry, and which, under normal conditions in any modern country, governed by sane laws, would entitle the importer to go at will from point to point after having paid his regular tax at the port of entry through which he first entered.

There is at this time something approaching stagnation in monetary and commercial circles, which gives rise to murmurings on the part of the interests affected. There are today great warehouses here which are bursting with American cotton piece goods to the enormous aggregate of 3,00,000 bales, for which there is no satisfactory sale. This fact is partially attributable to existing conditions in Manchuria, which was formerly a great outlet for American cotton goods and flour. These conditions are produced, it is alleged, by the action of the Japanase government and traders, who are pushing their own cheap cottons into that large country under circumstances which make American competition difficult if not impossible. One conspicuous feature of the situation is the fact that the ports of Dalny and Newchwang are, through Japanese manipulation, made practically free ports for the entry of Japanese products, while the same ports are duty ports for the goods of all other nations.

While it is given out in Japanese official circles that her armies are being withdrawn from Manchuria, it seems to be a fact, according to information of an authentic character which I have been able to gather, that this statement has only a semblance of truth, and that behind the military front of the Japanese army is a commercial or trade front which is being maintained for the exclusive benefit of the Japanese, to the exclusion of the traders of other nations. And all the while the Japanese are pouring into Manchuria in untold numbers with the manifest purpose of taking possession of the country and of dominating it in the interest of Japan.

The vast unoccupied plains of Southern Manchuria, fertile and productive beyond comparison, will, at no distant period, be occupied by Japanese agriculturists growing wheat ready for conversion into flour by scores of flouring mills which the Japanese are putting in, or are preparing to put in, at various points. Under these conditions it is not difficult to see that the opportunities for supplying Manchuria with American flour will be crippled, if not cut off entirely; they have already been greatly diminished.

During the war between Russia and Japan, the sentiment of Shanghai, among the foreign populations, and especially among the English, as expressed in their newspapers and in other public and private ways, was almost universally in favor of Japan. Now things are different, and there are many thinking people to be found in this metropolis who sing out of the opposite corners of their mouths, and sing a different tune. They say that had Russia succeeded, trade conditions in this and other ports of China would have been different and better, and that the color of Russian money would have been more visible in Shanghai than it is now.

The Standard Oil Company, which established itself here twelve years ago, is finding competition closer and progress more and more difficult. This is not to be attributed, however, to Japan, but rather to Russia, in whose territory are vast petroleum fields, yielding oil in vast quantities, which can be produced so cheaply that American competition, with long and costly transportation and with Chinese duties added, is severely handicapped, and the capable agents of the great American monopoly are put to their stumps to hold up their end of the beam.

When the widely-predicted but long-delayed "awakening of China" comes, it will come with tremendous force, and show to the world the mighty power of the empire in business, if not in war. There are millions and millions of consumers of foreign goods, and they are liberal buyers of things they need, and have the money to pay for them. It is entirely within the possibilities for the United States to build up a trade wtih China, the extent and volume of which cannot yet be predicted; always provided that such trade conditions can be established between the two countries as will make it possible for American manufacturers, merchants and shippers to do business on right lines, and with right profits, on Chinese soil.

VARIETIES OF MIRRORS.

They Are Made to Suit All Kinds of Trades for Promotion of Business.

"It is not enough to make true mirrors," the dealer said. "If that were all, ours would be indeed a simple business."

He was walking complacently over his huge shop, which bustled and hummed with a brisk fall trade.

"Dressmakers and milliners," he explained, "require mirrors of all sorts. They need, for example, a mirror that makes one look taller and thinner. When they dress a fat, short patron in one of their new hats or suits, they lead her to this mirror, and she is so surprised and pleased with the change for the better in her looks that, straight off, she buys.

"For masseurs I make a mirror that, like a retouched photograph, hides blemishes, wrinkles, scars. The masseur takes the wrinkled face of some rich old woman, steams it, thumps it, pinches it and smacks it for an hour, and then holds up to it the mirror that gives a blurred, blemish-hiding reflection. The woman thinks her wrinkles are gone, and is happy till she gets home to her own true mirror.

"Altogether I make some twenty varieties of false mirrors. Salesmen and saleswomen in millinery and dressmaking establishments can double and quadruple their business if they are quick and deft in their selection of the mirror that flatters each patron best."

WINDOWLESS SLEEPING ROOMS.

Over 350,000 Unlighted Apartments in New York's Tenement Houses.

It will take over eighty-six years, according to Charities and the Commons, to open up the dark interior bedrooms of New York's tenement-houses, at the rate of progress shown by the last published statement of the tenement-house department.

Paul D. Cravath, chairman of the Tenement-house Committee of the Charity Organization Society, as quoted in that publication, says: "Under the administration of Mr. Butler, able and conscientious work is being done to enforce the laws intended to secure to the city safe and healthful new tenement-houses, and to remedy the unspeakably bad conditions which exist in many of its old buildings. But certain phases of the activity of the department are very seriously hampered by the utter inadequacy of its force.

"With its present appropriation it can employ hardly more than enough inspectors and office workers to properly supervise the construction of the great number of new tenement-houses erected, and to act promptly and effectively upon the thousands of complaints received annually.

"The progress of the structural changes in the old houses is slow. The first report of the department recorded the existence of nearly 362,000 unlighted, unventilated rooms in New York City. On January 1, 1906, nearly 357,000 still remained. In the first three months of 1906 more rapid progress was made, but even so, in that period only 1031 dark rooms were provided with windows. At the present rate three generations will sleep in the smother of these unventilated boxes."

BOILED CHAMPAGNE.

San Francisco Fire Developed New Way to Impart Rare Flavor to the Wine.

At the time of the San Francisco fire last April, 100,000 quart bottles of choice California champagne boiled for over forty-eight hours in a million gallons of sherry. The result was the production of 10,000 quarts of champagne of rare flavor at a cost, however, never before expended on a like quantity.

The sherry was contained in 80,000-gallon casks on the upper floors of the building of the California Wine Association. The fire destroyed the casks and the flood of sherry poured into the cellars where were stored the 100,000 bottles of wine. The fury of the flames soon heated the sherry to boiling point, and the boiling continued for two days and nights. When cooled the sherry was found to be filled with extraneous matter, and worthless, so it was pumped out into the streets. Then it was found that 10,000 of the bottles of champagne were unbroken and that the unparalleled process had imparted to the wine a rare flavor. Wine experts are now testing out the "boiling process," and the result may be a revolution of the methods of this industry.

The Black Silk Handkerchief.

The London Court Journal says: "It is not generally known that Nelson's death was the origin of the black silk handkerchief which the sailor wears under his broad blue collar, tied in a loose knot in front. The scarf, or handkerchief, was first worn as mourning for the great admiral, and by some means or other it was retained and eventually became a part of the naval man's uniform. The white stripes around the broad blue collar also represent the victories at the Nile, Copenhagen and Trafalgar."

More money is made every day by good judgment in investing money than by all the labor and wages in the country. Safe and shrewd investments in this stock will make fortunes.

You will never get rich on wages. No one ever did. Every man in this world who ever got big money got it either by speculation or investment. Speculation is unsafe. You stand more chance to lose than you do to make. Investments are right the other way. Make a safe investment and it is sure to bring you returns.

Don't hesitate about this stock. It is absolutely safe and sure.

Here Is an Important Point to Remember

There never has been a failure of consequence in electrical manufacturing. Stop and think of that. All are immensely successful. All pay big dividends and have made their investors wealthy.

This company will soon be one of the biggest in electrical manufacturing in the world.

This is bound to be so, because there is not a place now where a motor or generator is used but will have to sooner or later change for the Bidwell Cold Motor or generator. Why? Because we make something better than any other kind known.

The sanatoriums of this "Four Link Chain" are the model institutions of the world, there being incorporated in their general plans every known facility for the betterment of conditions and alleviation of suffering.

Located as the various branches are, in sections to get the extremes of beneficial climatic conditions, sufferers from diseases of any name or nature may now turn their faces toward the picturesque Southland knowing that there they may have advantage of the treatments that never fail, and enjoy the beauties and comforts of Paradise while regaining their health.

Dr. Burner's California Radium, Milk and Rest Cure and Dr. Burner's Radium Treatment System are the only two systems of combating disease that the sufferer can today turn to with confidence, for there is no question as to the curative powers of these systems. Dr. Burner in his institutions is effecting the most marvelous cures of disease heretofore supposed to be incurable, and when asked about his treatment he will tell you that it is not he that is curing people, but he also gives, through Radium, New, Sweet, Pure Life to take the place of the deadly disease germ.

The action of Radium can be best compared to the way a ferret works when taken on a hunt for rats. Turn a ferret into a rat hole and before he leaves all the rats are either killed or driven out—and the ferret never runs; when he gets in it's a fight to the finish. So it is with Radium. By infusing the blood with Radium a battle is started between clean, healthy life and the deadly disease germ, and the new life never gives up until not only the disease germ is gone, but every trace of its terrible work has been wiped out and the affected parts replaced by new, strong, healthy tissues.

run through hastily any one of the Gibson albums you see that the history of American society—sentimental, dramatic, economic, intellectual—is written in the American girl.

"How can they resist so much attention? They do not—and there's the rub. Between the ages of twenty and twenty-five they have no other object in life but to have a good time. Everybody encourages them in this. It seems as though the whole country rejoiced to think that it possesed a true aristocracy as a reward for the gigantic effort it is sustaining.

"What are the results?

"When the Gibson girl had been paid attention by lots of men, and for a number of years, it grows very difficult to fix her choice upon any one of her suitors. She has become critical. All beaux seem to her more or less alike. Why should she pick out one more than another, when she can dispose of half a dozen? Why should she inflict upon herself the monotonous society of one man when she can be surrounded by a number? Why submit to the annoyance of being bound, when she can exercise her caprices as though they were laws and enjoy her liberty at the same time?

"American young men are disconcerted by such procedures. They are discouraged to feel that the girl they love requires constant amusement, luxury, wealth, diversion, in order to be happy. Perhaps the many material advantages provided by her father are not an indispensable part of her nature. But how is the poor young man to know this? In his uncertainty he hesitates to declare himself. He dreads seeming presumptious if he supposes that his devotion alone can make up for so much liberty, so much distraction and the alluring frivolity which any girl would necessarily have to renounce in marrying him.

"If he makes a timid advance the chances are he will not be encouraged He withdraws then, disheartened, bitter. And who knows? Perhaps two people, thousands of couples, have missed their opportunity for a real, enduring happiness—men and women worthy of each other, who might have led useful lives and who together would have added to the general advancement of the whole country.

"Now," pursued Mrs. Van Vorst, "given these conditions, given the freedom which prevails among both sexes over here, the result is that when a marriage is happy it can be happier, oftener, in this country than anywhere on earth. But, as a matter of fact, there are perhaps more unhappy marriages in America, particularly the American cities, than anywhere in Europe. Why? Our girls expect too much. And when they are disappointed they are miserable and make their husbands miserable.

"As I read over all my correspondence to women my first impulse was to publish everything. Then I began to reflect, to seek out the various causes which apparently act as poison to the happiness of couples whom love has compelled to chose each other as life companion. There were, it appeared to me, a certain number of causes which recurred with a discordant influence; indifference, ambition, egotism, jealousy, So they are given, in my book on "Letters to Women in Love," for what they are worth, with, of course, changes in the names of the people who figure in the relation.

"Yes, Everything in America is arranged for the woman—it is her Garden of Eden. What is there she cannot do, and alone? London, on the other hand, is all arranged for the man. Even the hansom cab is a masculine invention which entirely overlooks skirts, The shop windows redound with leather articles, toilet articles, colonial articles—all for men. And Paris? It is meant for the man and woman together, and to the exclusion of the rest of the world. For the French, love, sentimental companionship, is not a luxury, Like the red wine they drink it is a necessity for all classes.

"What are the salons which have made France famous? They are nothing more than the reunion of men and women who can talk together. The woman's lunch and the stag dinner are unknown in France. Even at the professional banquet, which a doctor or a lawyer offers to his colleagues, the women of his family appear to assist in receiving his guests. In Paris who are the best cooks? Men, all of them. Who are the best dressmakers? All of them men. Montesquieu said once that when one has been a woman in Paris one is never satisfied to be a woman anywhere eles. Why? Because the women of France are cherished until they are 20, courted until they are 50, and reverenced in their declining years."

Passing to her writing table, Mrs. Van Vorst glanced over her morning mail—a medley of letters from all sorts and conditions of people.

"I wonder," she said presently, "if this correspondent has seen her reflection in my letters to 'Lily Burnside?' The letter from a Middle-Western city was, in part, as follows:

Dear Friend: You are certainly such to me, for your letters to wives and sweethearts have done me a world of good. Perhaps this will never reach you and perhaps—well, I want to thank you personally for the good you have done me and consequently my husband. . . .

I look carefully at the last article to see if I could find his name somewhere, for it seemed as if he must have written it himself, and he told me he was almost sure I must have sent you some facts, I wonder if you ever write of the stepmother, poor thing, so evilly portrayed in fairy tales? I happen to be one of these with quite a family under 14, with all the cares and estrangements that go with it. I never can regret my husband except when the children prove—oh, well, no one needs to tell you, for you already know.

Another communication was from an American girl, who confessed:

I am so spoiled that I usually get what I want and have an unbounded faith in the old adage of there being a way where there's a will. In the first place, I am little; second, I have a twin sister; third, we were 25 a short time ago, and, fourth, we are yet old-bachelor-girls-to-be. Neither one of us has any hopes of marrying, or rather present indications. As for my sister, she is perfectly happy and contented, while I am happy and yet discontented.

Two years ago papa took me to Los Angeles for my health. I had suffered from nervous prostration. While there I met and fell in love, but the man in the case did not feel able to marry, and I have returned hom. What am I going to do?

I am ambitious beyond my strength, and everything I attempt to do seriously is too hard for me. I am not worrying over the business side of the question. What I want is to meet some good man who will care enough for me to give me a home and that respect which will entitle me to help him in his business as well as his home life. I do not ask him to love me. Perhaps some such man as I admire may have loved and lost and yet be willing and generous enough to try and make some woman happy. That is all I ask. How am I going to manage it? That word manage makes me sick at heart, for can happiness ever be managed?

"Poor child, her case is one of thousands of similar ones; just as the case of Lily Burnside, the overambitious young wife, evidently has many parallels. She flattered herself that it was unique, just as most of us do of our special cases. She was desperately in love with her husband when she married him. She was 18, he was 25. They lived one year in a New York boarding-house. Then, when their first child was born, they moved to Newark and took a house. Her husband was promoted by his employers and they were enabled to have a nurse, a waitress and a cook. Yet she looks at him todav and wonders that she could ever have been so infatuated with him. He is perfectly good to her, gives her more than she had hoped as far as material possessions are concerned, but he hardly seems to care for her or for anything as he once did. Why?

"I wrote her to remember that little things make a man happy and make a woman unhappy, that so long as she permitted little things to make her unhappy her husband would never be sure of her. What did she do?"

This is the epistolary reply: "So you have quarreled again, and because he was late getting home. Poor man! Was it his fault that there was a blizzard, that all the trains were blocked? Yet he protested in vain. What he was to blame for, you insisted, was not the blocking of the trains, but the blocking of himself and of you, stuck off in a suburb and shut in all the year round, as though there were a perennial blizzard. You warmed to the subject as you went on, condemning the life of the commuter; it was like a prison there in Newark, row upon row of houses stretching along like cells; interminable avenues, nothing but the most dreary, mediocre people for neighbors. He listened to your descriptions amazed, and his very amazement whetted your longing to condemn everything you could think of. There were times, you cried out, when it seemed as though you would lose your mind—your personality you had long since lost—you felt like an animal cooped up in a stable, where there were other animals cooped up in other stalls exactly like yours.

"After a while he sank bewildered into a chair, and you heard him say: 'What have I done to merit this outburst? I thought I was giving you and the children a first-rate home. I don't see what there is lacking to make you comfortable.' And you retorted: 'When we were married I expected you would, as other husbands do, give me the position in life to which I am entitled. I begin to see now only too clearly what a mistake I made.'

"What answer could he make to all this? If it were true, nothing. If it was untrue—nothing. He took up his hat and left the house, nor did you see him when he returned later in the evening. 'If she thinks me such a failure,' he probably said to himself, 'she'd better go back to her mother. So long as she is convinced that I am spoiling her life the only thing for her to do it to divorce. Then she can get some man who is able to provide a better setting for the rare gem she thinks herself.'

"And so it goes. They are like two clocks wound up at the same time and that never strike the hour together. Then some day there will be an explosion, unless a remedy is provided. She will write her mother and pack up her things preparatory to leaving. On that particular day her husband will remain in town. He will put up at the club, dine with some bachelor friends who hate women. He will drink to forget his misery.

"A few days later there will be a moving van before their door in Newark—like a hearse—come to remove something lifeless, come to move not only her belongings, but her memories as well, all the past souvenirs which went to make up their family life. And in our young country there will be one more home broken up, one more corner-stone removed from the edifice which it served to uphold.

"Then will come the divorce case of Burnside vs. Burnside, just such a case as thousands that are occurring day by day. The husband is being catechised by the judge, who presumes that the defendant knows an action has been begun by his wife. The hearing will be something like this:

"'Yes, I know it.'

"'You are not surprised.'

"'I am amazed. I can think of no way in which I have failed to keep my part of the marriage vows.'

"'Your wife does not accuse you of failing to keep them, but it doesn't suffice merely "not to have failed," you owe something more than this to the woman you love.'

"'I have done everything I could to make her happy.'

"'You haven't succeeded.'

"'Why? What was it she wanted?'

"'She is young, she is pretty, she is intelligent——'

"'I guess I know that better than any one.'

"'You are an egoist. You want to hide your light under a bushel. The light is made to shine for all.'

"'Who, everybody? Other men?'

"'Other men and other women; the people around you, society in general. A woman like your wife has a right to be something more than a commodity to her husband. She should expect to have a life of her own, something besides housekeeping, if it pleases her.'

"'It comes rather high, this double existence, as far as expenses are concerned. The truth is my wife reproaches me with not earning enough.'

"'The reproach is a serious one.'

"'Certainly. But it is not fair to make it to me.'

"'To whom should she make it?'

"'To my employer. He keeps me busy nine or ten hours a day. He takes up every bit of intelligence I have. If I should ask him to raise my pay he would show me letters from a dozen men just waiting a chance to step into my boots.'

"'Is this your defense?'

"'Yes.'

"'Fancy the wife undergoing the same ordeal. The judge advises her to restrain her emotions. She says she is disgusted.'

"'With whom? Your husband?'

"'Not with him exactly, but with the sort of life he makes me lead.'

"'Explain yourself, please.'

"'In the first place, judge, I don't believe you realize how much attention I had before our marriage.'

"'I can easily understand.'

"'There were two young men, for example, who were my absolute slaves. Either would have been a better match for me than Mr. Burnside. If I told you their names you would know how they are. They are prominent in Wall street. Hardly a day passes but there is something about them in the papers.'

"'Did either of them marry?'

"'Yes, after I married; when they realized there was no hope for them.'

"'And I suppose there is mention of their wives in the newspapers, too?'

"'Not on account of the women themselves. They are perfect nonentities and would never be heard of if it weren't for their husbands.'

"'There are others in the same position. But tell me one thing: If these two men were your absolute slaves, why did you choose a third when you married?'

"'I suppose I saw qualities in him which he doesn't posses. I imagined he loved me for my own sake, and found he loved me for his.'

"'What do you mean, madam?'

"'I mean that I supposed he would have but one object in life—to find out and satisfy every wish before I had time to express it.'"

And there, in concluision, is one of the main items which this judicial critic, an American woman herself, charges against American women: That they are encouraged in and used to being unreasonable in their demands and expectations of life.

Mrs. Van Vorst is far from believing that Miss America is a failure. She discriminates between what she finds her to be and what the cartoonists and critics, foreign and domestic, pretend that she is. What Mrs. Van Vorst really seems to believe is that the American girl is on trial, perhaps never more definitely so than at the present hour. Evidently she believes that Love is on trial, too—a hapless co-defendant!

CHINA ABOLISHES OPIUM.

Another Attempt of the Government to Throw Off the Opium Incubus.

China has again decreed the abolition of the culture of the opium poppy and the use of opium or its products in any of its forms, save medicinal. This action, which comes in the shape of an imperial edict, was the direct result of the report of the Chinese commission appointed to visit this country and Europe, and the edict is signed by the heads of both civil and military affairs. This is not the first attempt of China to free herself from the effects of the opium trade. The first effort was made in 1839. That result led to a war with Great Britain, which profited by the export of opium to China, and as a result of the war the edict was recalled and China had to pay an indemnity of about $6,000,000. The Chinese commission which visited England last year found public sentiment far different from what it was three-quarters of a century ago. Hence the issue of this second edict, the abolition of the opium trade, both in the way of home products and imports.

Real Redskin.

"What's the trouble, little lad?" asked the kind-hearted stranger.

"I ran away to play injun," sobbed the boy in the big blue sweater.

"You did, eh? And do you feel anything like a redskin?"

MANHATTAN

Is Going to Yield Millions

WILL YOU SHARE THEM

Development work on our Five Indian Chief Claims is now being pushed with all possible speed, and large quantities of valuable gold ore are being blocked out daily a put on the dump ready for the mill. Dividends should soon follow quickly, and the next advance in the price of this stock now selling at the low price of 10c a share will 25 or 50 cents. SEND OR BRING IN YOUR ORDER NOW, AT ONCE, BEFORE THE ADVANCE.

Our company, the Manhattan Mining Venture Company, is an Arizona corporation with a capitalization of $1,500,000—1,500,000 shares each with a par value of $1, fully paid and non-assessable.

Our corporation owns eight of the most VALUABLE GOLD MINING CLAIMS in the State of Nevada; they are the Indian Chief Nos. 1, 2 and 3, Indian Chief Extension Nos. 1 and 2 and three other claims known as the Butterfly mine, which are located within one-half mile of the old Ophir mine that yielded more than SEVEN AND ONE-HALF MILLIONS OF GOLD from 1873 to 1900.

The five Indian Chief claims are located in the heart of Manhattan which, though but little over six months old, is already conceded by every well-known mining man to be the richest gold mining district of Nevada.

Richness of Our Claims

Five of our claims, the Indian Chief and Indian Chief Extension properties, contain outcropping quartz ledges that assay as high as $470.45. When we tell you that it requires only $85 free milling ore, and that taken from our claims is free milling, to put a mine on a dividend paying basis, you can readily estimate the amount of profits our company should earn when we get to milling $470.45, and what we should earn when we get to milling $1000 and $1500 ore, to say nothing of the ENORMOUS RETURNS there will be for the STOCKHOLDERS, when we locate the MOTHER LODE of the placer deposits, which have just recently been found.

Richness of Surrounding Claims

On the property of the Bulldog Mining Company IMMEDIATELY ADJOINING our Indian Chief claims, and within a stone's throw of our property, a force of miners has sunk a 70-foot shaft and is taking out ore that assays better than $1000. This same ledge is identical to those of our property, some of which assayed $470.45; same formation, etc., and expert mining men who have examined our property, say that these ledges are wider and more valuable as depth is attained.

On the opposite side of our Indian Chief claims $1500 ore has been struck and the same vein runs entirely through one of our Indian Chief claims.

In addition to this wealth, that we know is on our claims, our mining superintendent discovered the other day valuable placer deposits. Miners rushed to the vicinity of our claims in hundreds when this discovery became public, and there is practically no doubt whatever that the MOTHER LODE also is on our claims.

Placer Ore Discovered

Following is what Manhattan Mail, the biggest paper in Manhattan, says of the placer discovery on our property:

"Mining activity is at fever heat in the vicinity of the Indian Chief claims, owned by the Manhattan Venture Mining Company, located east of the Bulldog property. Rather unexpected and valuable placer ground has been developed on the former property during the past seven days. Dry washers are now at work. The gold granules are coarse, angular and sharp, showing that the metal has not been carried for from the point of liberation.

"The finding of gold in such quantities has had the effect of renewed placer activity in that section of the district. Property owners in the neighborhood are preparing to begin a campaign of development for the purpose of finding, if possible, the mother lode."

The finding of the placer ore alone was sufficient to warrant our raising the price of our stock to 75c or $1.00 a share, but we did not. We are going to continue selling it at 10 cents a share as we have agreed to do for a short time longer, after which time it will be advanced to 25 cents per share.

Pacific Monthly Says

That Manhattan is the richest gold mining camp in the world, considering its age, is not for a minute the slightest doubt. Following is what the Pacific Monthly for October says about our property and the Manhattan district:

"Around the town of Manhattan, which came into existence last winter by reason of the great discoveries which followed the location of the April Fool mining claim, there are two vast summit ridges, which constitute the north and south sides of the canyon in which the town of Manhattan is built. On both sides of these ridges mines are being developed. On the extreme west of the north ridge, beginning with the MANHATTAN MINING VENTURE CLAIMS, there follows a long string of mining claims such as the Bulldog, Paymaster, Nemo, Mustang, Broncho, Chipmunk, April Fool, Standard and Dexter. On the south ridge may be named the Mayne, Double Eagle, Indian Camp, Little Gray Union No. 9, Jumping Jack, Joker, Stray Dog, Reilly, Fraction, Cowboy, Annie Laurie, Portland and Manhattan Consolidated.

"The naked facts, new-born of Mother Truth, concerning Manhattan, seem miraculous and mythical. Never since the halcyon days of Virginia City has a camp sprung into existence which gave such instant fulfillment of mighty promise. Never, in all the world's history of mining, have such high averages of values been sent to the smelters in the infancy of a camp. The average value of ore shipped to smelters up to a recent date was $400 a ton. It is a fact that the ORE discarded upon the dumps at MANHATTAN MINES is more valuable than most of the ore shipped from California mines.

"It is another truth that the output of MANHATTAN CAMP in the first sixty days outvied the united production of Goldfield and Tonopah camps in the same period. A third and consequential fact is that none of the Nevada gold camps has ever blocked out so much high-value ore in so few weeks as Manhattan.

"Within this marvelously mineralized region, such values are being taken as have rarely been known in any other mining camp in the history of man's digging for gold. There lie stacked up today at the mouths of mines, millions of gold. Also discarded upon the dumps as profitless trash—in view of the charges for freight—higher values than many mines bear which pay their owners dividends without ceasing.

"The blocking out of high-value ores continues beyond precedent, beyond belief. Not one of the older Nevada gold camps has ever demonstrated so much richness within sight and reach in so few weeks as Manhattan. STRIKES HERE, STRIKES THERE, STRIKES EVERYWHERE, keep the camp in an incessant whirl of excitement, and in a perennial buzz of astonishment. The coldest, calmest man becomes enthusiastic over Manhattan before he has been on the ground twenty-four hours.

"Most of the mines paid from the start. Almost without exception the prospects which have been developed have proved more valuable even than the discoverers themselves believed when they scratched the surface. Manhattan literally has sprung into existence like Minerva, full panoplied from the brow of Jove. In one bound it presses to the van of the Nevada camps, the youngest of all but the giant chief. The gold excitement at Manhattan is undying. The stampede to the camp has continued now for six months. The pace which characterized its earlier days has not suffered any perceptible check. In fact, from a substantial point of view, it has increased. More people are investing in Manhattan today than ever, and investors are commencing to arrive from the Far East, several of the late arrivals being from England.

"Manhattan, at a conservative estimate, contains 6000 people today. Nearly all the buildings in the camp are of wood, but a number of stone structures are completed or under construction. The town is gradually stringing down the canyon, and is fully one and one-half miles in length."

MEXICO.

CENTRAL IS NOT SOLD.

Mexican Government Hasn't Purchased Railway.

Federal Ownership Fails to Give Satisfaction.

Billion of American Gold Invested in Mexico.

BY EDWARD C. BUTLER.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 6.—Considerable interest has been awakened in Mexica in connection with the fast-growing rumor that the government intends to purchase the Mexican Central Railway. That system not only has the long line of 2000 kilometres to El Paso, but controls one-third of the mileage in the Mexican republic, and its acquisition would be of great importance to this government.

The government already controls about one-third of the country's mileage, in the National, International and Interoceanic lines, aside from the short but very important Isthmian route across Tehuantepec. The recent visit of Secretary of the Treasury Limantour to Europe and his somewhat prolonged stay in New York has given birth anew to the rumor that the government was negotiating for the purchase of a controlling interest in the Central.

The Associated Press reported here on Monday that Mr. Limantour stated in New York that while certain interviews had been on, presumably in London and in New York, nothing definite had been reached with respect to the acquirement of the big railroad. Of course, if conditions should be submitted to the government making the transaction practicable, it would naturally take up the business, on a commercial basis, just as any individual would. But in palace circles not much credence is given to the rumor.

AMERICAN BILLION INVESTED.

In 1902 Andrew C. Barlow, Consul General of the United States at this capital, compiled the first statement of American investments in Mexico, a task in which he was aided largely by Vice and Deputy Consul General Edwin Conley, and the thirty-eight consular officers of the United States, the five British and five German Consuls, who gathered the data. A canvass covering several months was engaged in by the American, British and German Consular officers, the latter two nationalities taking up this work in districts in which there was no American representative.

Undoubtedly many Americans doing business in this country failed to respond with information to the inquiries instituted, among other reasons because the tax assessors thus would know more about their business matters than they wished known. However, 1117 companies, firms and individuals replied to the inquiries, and they alone reported an investment during the past twenty-five years of $500,000,000 in gold, with about half that sum invested since 1898, or in four years' time.

The railroads represented the largest part, or about two-thirds of the whole amount, the Mexican Central alone reporting $159,000,000. About $80,000,000 had been invested in mines, $28,000,000 in agriculture and $25,000,000 in manufacturing enterprises.

If in the four years directly preceding 1902, when Mr. Barlow's report was made to the State Department, $250,000,000 of American money had been invested in this country, how much more satisfactory the returns must have been during the past four years, given the logical momentum acquired, in astonishing ratio along every line of material development in this favored country. The investment of American capital in Mexico goes by leaps and bounds and has progressed during the past decade phenomenally. Since the peso is now fixed in value, Americans do not hesitate to enter the Mexican field, and the calculation made at the Treasury Department places now at $1,000,000,000 gold the total of American investments in Mexico.

Sixty acres of the old Coyoachea hacienda in San Angel, forty of which is to be occupied by the house and grounds of the new San Angel Inn, is to be laid out for settlement as a city suburb, under the name of Colonia Alta Vista, or High View.

In the steady growth of this city westward, thought seems to overleap the gradually dwindling open spaces and anticipate the settlement of points like Alta Vista, eighteen miles distant. It is not many years, twenty probably, when there were but half a dozen houses west of the corner of Bucareli and Providencia streets; yet that corner today is eighteen or twenty blocks inland from the limit of construction in the rapidly growing West End of this capital. Land along Bucareli boulevard at its intersection with Providencia, twenty years ago was valued at one peso per square metre, and thirty years ago at 15 cents, whereas it now commands from $25 to $40 per square metre, with some property held strenuously at $100 in that vicinity.

Even in the last ten years the increase in land values has been phenomenal. Gore Court, the first American flats built in Mexico, erected about ten years ago, about ten blocks west of Providencia and Bucareli, was put up on land that cost then $9 per square metre and is today worth $30. The Colonia Roma, an addition laid out by Americans and Mexicans nearly ten blocks further westward from Gore Court, had eight or ten houses built two years ago and today has about eighty, and new ones being commenced each week. Land in Colonia Roma which cost $8 per square meter two years ago, now brings $18.

This great increase in land values makes it hard for the workingman to locate in the city proper or in its more immediate suburbs, and hence the urspringing of the Colonia Imparcial, out on the Atzcapotzalco electric lines, twelve miles to the northwest, the Alta Vista directly west, and the Cherubusco Country Club addition to the south.

A landscape gardener from Los Angeles, who laid out Hollywood, the pretty suburb of that California city, is now here, making his plans for the new colony. He will have entire charge of all the work and will adapt the general ideas of the famous California suburban towns to the Mexican fashions, and he promises one of the handsomest colonies in the whole valley.

An artesian well is to be drilled, the contract having been let recently and the work of getting this new colony in shape and ready for occupation by settlers, being well under way. Swimming parks, immense gardens, picturesque homes, gymnasiums on large scale, will all be ready by the time the tourist wave sets Mexicoward, and additional to the spacious grounds will be golf links, tennis courts, croquet lawns and billiard and ten-pin alleys.

The view from the roof of the inn and the adjoining houses, is one of the finest in the valley of Mexico. Westward are the overhanging ranges of Las Cruces and Rio Hondo, the hills of Contreras and camel-shaped Ajusco, whose broken back seems silhoutted against the sunset waiting for the load of centuries. These mountains are so near to San Angel that they seem to brood over that charming spot, and sentinel that little city of stone. Beyond the beautiful dome of El Carmen, beyond the terraced gardens of San Angel, off to the eastward, with fairy Mixcoac interlying, and in the intermediate distance the historic town of Tacubaya, and still eastward the castled hill of Chapultepec, poised like some gray bird over the city of Mexico; such are the salient touches of landscape caught from the lofty roofs of Colonia Alta Vista.

Of course, an unbroken vision will always be had of the capital itself, its adjacent lakes, the sacred shrine of Guadalupe, the mile-wide prairies of rye and barley, corn and alfalfa, and over and above them all, the two volcanoes, Popocatepetl and Ixtaccihuatl, with their eternal coronal of driven snow, falling pure from the fingers of God.

J. H. Creighton of Redding, who has been mising for some time, has written his wife from Maopo, Nev., saying he left because of financial and political difficulties. Creighton, who was the Assemblyman from this district, disappeared last September, and the letter from Nevada is the first news his family has received. Creighton writes that he will not come back.

MANUFACTURE OF CHARTREUSE.

Controlled for Three Hundred Years by the Carthusian Monks Near Grenoble.

The liquer known as Chartreuse

The liqueur known as Chartreuse thusian monks for 300 years, and for a century and a half at a great monastery called the Grand Chartreuse, near Grenoble in Southestern France. There have been many attempts to imitate it, but none of them have been successful, and until now the French government has been diligent in protecting the friars from infringement. They began to make the liqueur in Paris in 1607, where the recipe was discovered by Marschal d'Estrees, a chemist in the Luxumberg Gardens. He gave it to the monks. Twenty years after Friar Jerome Naubec perfected the process and gave the liquor the properties which have since made it famous. Owing to the difficulty of getting the necessary herbs and roots in Paris, the Carthusians removed to the monastery of Grand Chartreuse in 1735, where they have since employed two or three hundred peasants—men and women and children—in addition to about two hundred lay brothers, growing the grapes, distilling the brandy, collecting the herbs, manufacturing the liqueur, bottling, packing and shipping it to all parts of the globe. About forty monks were engaged in superintending the business between their religious exercises. They had an enormous plant, as may be inferred from the fact disclosed in the evidence taken before Consul-General Mason that they sold 7,000.00 francs worth of liqueur the year before they were expelled.

The basis of the liqueur is a grape brandy, very old, smooth, and fine, which is flavored by essences distilled from the flowers, berries, leaves and roots of plants which grow wild upon the mountains surrounding Grenoble and have been cultivated in the gardens of the monastery for more than a hundred and fifty years. Some of the plants were used green, others dried, and the proper proportions of each ingredient are said to have been known only to two or three of the friars, who handed the secret down from generation to generation. Government experts, however, who have been investigating the processes, dec are that the only secrets in the manufacture were good materials and extraordinary care in making and mixing them. They insist that the quality of the brandy made the chartreuse what it is and gave the monks advantages in preparing it which no other manufacturers could enjoy.

The cellar of the monastery was filled with barrels of brandy distilled by the monks from grapes grown in their own vineyards. Some of it was fifty and sixty years old, and it was the best brandy in the world. They added to their supply every year as much as or more than they used, so that the stock remained about the same, and they could afford to let it lie and ripen in the wood for half a century.

When the law suppressing the religious orders went into effect two years ago the Carthusian friars decided to remain in the country, making a formal application as required and promising submission to its provisions. Their commercial interests and other holdings of real estate were too valuable to

THE OPEN SHOP—Trade School the Hope of Union-restricted Apprentic

CURRENT COMMENT.

WHAT bearing will the recent elections have on the open shop issue? This is a pertinent and highly important question. At first thought it may appear to some observers that there is no connection between the open shop and a political election. A little reflection will serve to dispel this delusion. The relation was vital in the recent election, because the advocates of the closed shop saw fit to project themselves into the arena as a political factor. Never before did federated unionism attempt so much, in a political way—nor achieve so little.

The position of The Times in this matter is well known. It welcomed the advent of labor-unionism into the political field, in order that unionism might show its hand—and its weakness. For many years we have been told regularly, at every election, what "labor" would do to this candidate and to that one, if he dared to act contrary to the demands of the walking bulldozer. Threats of boycott and defeat have been held, like a stuffed club, over the heads of candidates, in all parties, until this form of petty tyranny became intolerable. Political candidates are proverbially weak and cowardly. These continual threats from persons assuming to speak for "labor" has tended to make them weaker and more subservient. It is a well-known fact that two or three coyotes, by keeping up an interminable yelping, can create the impression that they comprise a pack numbering hundreds. So it has been with the yelpers of unionism, and thousands of candidates for offices, all the way from President to poundmaster, have been frightened by vague threats of vengeance from "the labor vote."

The late election has shown how baseless were the fears of weak-kneed candidates. Union labor has done its best and its worst, for its best is its worst. It has shown at once the weakness of its cause and the weakness of its influence. It appears from the returns of the election that all the candidates who were opposed by the union labor bosses were elected, and that all who were supported by these bosses were defeated. The gas-bag of union bluster has been punctured and it has collapsed. The timid candidate may now defy the swaggering threats of the walking delegate, with the certain knowledge that they are comparatively harmless.

But we should not underrate the evil significance of this movement of organized labor to seize political power. Of itself, union labor is not strong enough, numerically, to enforce its preposterous demands. But it will naturally attract to itself all the vicious elements of society—anarchists, socialists, criminals—all the enemies of the existing order and of sound, conservative government, founded upon organic and statutory law. Here is the principal menace. When the mob organizes against society, our form of government will face its supreme test. Union labor has never given evidence that it would be found on the side of law and order if the government should be confronted by a grave crisis. To the lasting disgrace of unionists, they have been found far oftener on the side of disorder than on the side of order. They violate the law oftener than they obey it.

The open shop will be benefited by the late election, from the fact that the latter has strikingly shown the numerical weakness of the leagued unions. There are some persons who still have an idea that labor, in the abstract sense, is virtually synonymous with union labor. People are learning the folly of this, but some have not yet learned it. The pitiable showing of the leagued unions at the polls last Tuesday is educational. It revealed their paucity of numbers, as compared to the mass of voters, and their insignificance as a political factor. It illustrated the absurdity of closing the vast industries of the country to the great mass of free workmen for the benefit of the small minority of workmen who submit their necks to the union yoke.

The general managers of twenty-three railroads entering in Chicago, on November 6, declined to accede to the demands of the Switchmen's Union for an increase of wages. The roads offered an increase of 2 cents an hour, but this was promptly refused, and the switchmen came back with a demand for 10 cents an hour increase, and a virtual threat to strike if the demand was not acceded to. At last accounts, no agreement had been reached. The tying up of twenty-three railroads—some of them long trunk lines—would be a serious calamity; not so serious as the Debs rebellion of 1894, but serious enough to cause a damaging interruption of business in all sections of the country.

As illustrating the frivolous nature of the pretexts upon which strikes are called in these days of union cussedness, an incident is related in a dispatch from Whitehouse, Shasta county, to the Sacramento Bee. Thirty miners, constituting the entire night shift at the Reid mine, in the Old Diggings district, struck on Sunday noon because the management proposed to make election day "change day," instead of Sunday, the usual day. The purpose of the management in making the change was to allow every man on each shift a half holiday so that he could go to the polls and vote. The men on the night shift refused to agree to the arrangement because they would have had to work two more nights. Rather than do so they struck, and were paid off. The mine is running as usual, but thirty men have lost good jobs which they might have held indefinitely. Such foolish strikes as this make trades unions distrusted and despised.

In Philadelphia the Central Labor Union has conceived a scheme to "unionize" the public schools. It is proposed to require all teachers to be members of trades unions, and to admit as pupils no children whose fathers are not members of a union. A recent press dispatch from the City of Brotherly Love says:

"The matter came up in a remarkable discussion, led by Delegate F. Collins.

"The plan, as contemplated, is the thorough unionization of teachers. After all scab teachers have been excluded from the schools, the work of instilling into the youthful mind the 'principles' of trade-unionism will begin.

"The children are to wear to school the union buttons of their fathers' crafts, and the scab child is to have brought home to him the force of unionism, even to the point of expulsion.

"Lessons on the evil of the open shop will be a part of the curriculum, as advocated by the school reformers.

"'Most of the teachers are women and too high-toned, maybe, to associate with workingmen, but they'll come around,' declared Delegate Collins.

"The matter came before the union through a complaint received concerning the trades school which the Board of Education will open as an adjunct to the public school system this week. Delegates declared that this school would be a mere nursery for 'scabs' and that the young men graduated after a three-year course would be inimical to the unions.

"Then the scheme of school unionizing was sprung."

There isn't the least doubt that the union trouble-breeders would carry out this nefarious scheme in all the schools of the United States if they could do so—which is, of course, an impossibility. The public schools belong to the people—to all the people. There would be a great deal more sense in excluding from the schools all the children of unionists than in the plan above outlined for "unionizing" the schools; for less than three out of every one hundred persons living in the United States are members of trades unions. The preposterousness of allowing this 3 per cent. of the population to "organize" the schools, or to organize anything of a public nature, has only to be mentioned in order to be recognized. This would be a case of the tail wagging the dog, with a vengeance. The American republic is not that kind of a dog.

Writing in the Square Deal for November, C. W. Post points out some of the dangers in the demands of the labor trust, as follows:

"The labor trust tries to pass laws to prevent any one buying labor except from members of the labor unions, and at any price the trust may have power to name. This trust does not ask Congress to pass a law to prevent employers or common citizens from assaulting or murdering labor union members or blowing up their houses.

"Such a law is not necessary to the trust, but it does seek with all its power to force a law through Congress, called the anti-injunction law, to tie the hands of the courts, so they cannot issue 'restraining orders' or 'injunctions' which would have the effect of 'restraining' union men from assaulting citizens or blowing up houses or property.

"Is it not plain they want to be left free to do those things?

"Think for one moment of the audacity and desperate lengths to which the labor trust leaders will go to terrorize and force the public to 'obey.' What foreign squad of bandits would dare ask for laws to protect them in their raids on the people? No man is safe and no family protected with such riot and anarchy rampant in our midst."

THOUGHT AND WORK.

I'm not what people say I am, I'm not a lazy man;
I simply do my work upon a scientific plan.
I let my head save hand and foot, I bring my brain in play;
And still I am a lazy chap, so all my neighbors say.
But I don't care, I let 'em talk, and keep about my work;
That is, I keep my brain hitched up and never let it shirk.

Each morn when I get out of bed I sit right down and think;
I think how this and that should go before I eat or drink.
I think up some good, easy way to do this thing and that,
And after thinking hard a spell I have it right down pat.
Instead of delving into it and working hard all day,
I simplify it fiftyfold by thinking out a way.

And, best of all, sometimes I find by thinking long and deep
There's many jobs that once I thought were pretty middling steep.
I do not need to do at all which I'd have gone and done
Had I not sat and thought 'em out before they were begun.
An that's the way I find it now, the more I sit and think
The less hard work I have to do to get my food and drink.

So if you see me sitting here beneath this tree each day,
And my good wife is washing clothes not very far away,
Pray don't misjudge for I shall be lost deep in thought to see
How she can get those washings out with less of drudgery.
I'm not what people say I am, I'm not a lazy man;
I simply get through life upon a scientific plan.

FACTS ABOUT TRADE SCHOOLS.

Modern Necessity Caused by Modern Conditions.

Unions Hinder, Harass and Restrict Apprentices.

Views of Various Unionists on the Subject.

In the olden days, when the apprentice lived with the boss, and was practically one of the family, says the Square Deal, we grew real mechanics, men who knew how to do their work properly, promptly and conscientiously. These good mechanics are dying off, and we are not growing good ones to take their place. There are several reasons for this, but the principal one is that employers have rather encouraged the education of specialists in the different trades, under the mistaken idea that they would get more work out of that kind of men. Another is the mistaken idea of the labor unions in restricting apprentices, seemingly believing that if boys were allowed to learn a trade, the market would soon be flooded with workmen. They forget that this country is growing with leaps and bounds, and that their policy is retarding the growth of trade. Almost all of the large factories and iron works of the country are short of men, and many of the largest could use from a third to a half more men than they now have.

So thoroughly have the workmen become imbued with the apprentice restriction idea advanced by their leaders that they hinder and harass in every way any boy who is so fortunate (or unfortunate) as to secure admittance to a shop for the purpose of learning a trade. Many of those who think for themselves, however, are beginning to have it brought home to them that they are making a mistake, because they find that this very ruling which they have indorsed and encouraged now prevents their own boys from learning a trade that they may be useful instead of loafers and criminals, and eventually a charge upon the public.

This phase of the question was brought home to the workmen and to the employers of England last year, when the unemployed, able-bodied hosts of laboring men, numbering nearly a million, were walking the streets and called hopeless incompetents, because they could not do the work that was to be done, and of which there was plenty, never having learned a specific trade on account of this very apprentice restriction which has been in force there for many years.

One large American employer told us not long ago that he needed three thousand more men, and that he would gladly pay a bonus of a hundred dollars each for many of them, if he could thereby secure good ones.

Under the present system of apprenticeship where one boy may learn a trade in a shop working not less than eight journeymen, for instance, the boy is expected to do the chores, run errands, drive the wagon, and do pretty nearly everything except learn the trade, while in a practical trades school he would have nothing to do except apply himself to learning thoroughly the trade he selects.

The necessity for such trades schools, which should really be practical trades shops, is acknowledged by all thinking men, and especially by employers, and the strongest proof that can be offered of this necessity and of their effectiveness is given by the concerted action the union leaders of the country have taken against them. In the report of the Commission of Labor for 1902 are many replies made by labor leaders to the question as to the advisability of starting trades schools. The rank and file of union membership favor the schools, while the leaders invariably denounce them. Many of these replies are entertaining, notwithstanding they are ridiculous and unjust. For instance, the representative of the Bricklayers' Union says:

"Generally speaking, neither the union nor the individual members thereof would be opposed to trade schools which are open only to apprentices or workmen, but schools which take in boys outside the trades and attempt to make mechanics of them are strongly opposed. Such schools help to create an abnormal supply of embryo workmen, and this tends to make the position of the skilled mechanic less secure, and has a depressing effect upon wages."

Bricklayers are now receiving from $6 to $8 per day for a "restricted" day's work. In other words, under the protection of their union they are receiving about double what they used to, which would be all right were it not for the fact that they are laying less than half the brick they can or did do under the competitive system. No wonder they oppose the making of more bricklayers. They have a snap and want to keep it; but if this condition is continued, it will not be long before no one can afford to build, and then their snap will be gone.

The union carpenters say:

"It is claimed that the trades school does not and cannot teach a trade, and that it is impossible for a graduate to be a competent workman as a result of his school education alone."

This is thoroughly understood, and the province of a properly conducted school would be to give the student a practical as well as a theoretical education, by having him do actual work.

Another reason given by them as to why the trades school is not a benefit is that employers no longer desire the thoroughly trained, all-round man, but want only the specialist.

The Cigarmakers' Union says:

"When there is any labor disturbance they (trades school graduates) naturally drift into the shops and become a menace to the union workman. It is said that schools are favored by the manufacturers, as they help to flood the labor market with cheap labor, and are, therefore, an effective means of reducing wages."

The electrical workers say:

"It is claimed that these schools turn out a cheap class of workmen, who accept employment regardless of the wages paid, and thereby make trouble for the regular journeymen."

The president of the Garment Workers' Union said:

"Owing to the overcrowded condition of the labor market, I would suggest that young men be trained in the agricultural pursuits."

The Plumbers' Union says:

"It is said that the employers prefer trades school graduates because they will work cheaply. This is a source of trouble to the unions."

And so on it goes through the whole list. The real truth, probably, is that the employer prefers the trades school graduate because he has learned his trade thoroughly and is attending to his business instead of agitating.

The president of the Building Trades Council of San Francisco said, when he heard that a school was to be started at Palo Alto:

"If they will teach the boys that they must join the unions, it will be all right, but if they are going to run a 'scab incubator' down there, we will oppose it."

In Chicago, when a trades school was talked of, the unions became very active and threatened, in retaliation, to unionize the public schools, and have no children admitted who did not wear a union button.

All graduates of these schools state that their training has been beneficial in every respect and has resulted in their obtaining much higher wages than they could have secured without.

How long will the American employer and parent allow these disgraceful, un-American and unlawful restrictions of apprentices and restriction of output rules to be enforced by a lot of men who have no financial interest in their business?

Mexican Strike Settled.

The following from the Mexican Herald would indicate that President Diaz thoroughly comprehends the labor question.

All the strikers were taken back except two of the most active agitators:

"Through the efforts of President Diaz and Vice-President Corral, the strike on the Mexican Central Railroad, which has been in progress over two weeks, has come to a close and the striking machinists and boilermakers are returning to their work.

"The strikers, represented by the officers of the Mechanics' Union, visited President Diaz. The President talked the question over thoroughly with the men and showed them that by striking they were retarding the industrial development of the country, hurting their own interests and also those of the railroad company.

"The strikers were very much impressed with the words of the President, and requested that he use his influence in securing permission from the Mexican Central for the strikers to return to their work. Vice-President Corral, upon whom the committee had called, also advised the strikers along the same lines.

"It was asked by the strikers that their union be recognized by the officials of the company. They desired that only one apprentice to every six machinists be employed; that union men be discharged only for good cause; that workingmen be granted passes from any point on the line to the general offices to present grievances and numerous other clauses of a minor nature.

"The President stated that the condition of the workingmen was one that appealed to him both from a personal and official standpoint. He stated that he would give their requests every consideration, but that capital also has rights, and these rights must also be looked after. Much of the property and progress of the republic is dependent upon the introduction of capital, both domestic and foreign, and every imposition that is unjustly placed upon capital retards the forward movement of the country and its industrial development. The President stated that the government had respected the right of the men to leave their work, and as long as there were no disturbances of the public peace or the rights of others it will always be respected.

"The President declared to the strikers that their demands upon the company were bot unjust and unacceptable. The strikers have no right to ask for a monopoly of labor. The company must provide a sufficient number of apprentices, or within a short time, as the demand increases, a dearth of laborers of this class will be found. Every employé of the company has the right to say whether he cares to work for the company or not, and to accept or refuse the work offered him at the fixed salary. The company also has the right to accept or decline the service of any workman individually, and to fix their salaries according to the work they can individually perform."

WIRELESS TELEPHONY.

The wireless telephone appears as well assured as the wireless telegraph and discoveries of what can be done in this field of electrical science indicate that scientists in remote localities are apparently working successfully to the same end.

Paris newspapers report that M. Maiche, a well-known inventor, has made a sensational discovery in the field of wireless telephony. His new apparatus consists of two posts which are placed in his premises. Each post consists of a telephone, battery, a special form of induction coil and a frame which is formed of a series of insulated wires. One post is placed in the garden and a second one in a room in the building some distance off, about 100 feet, and several walls, doors and windows come between the posts. Conversation can be carried on easily, and the sound is clear.

On the other hand, a dispatch from Marshfield, Mass., says: The wireless telephone, it is claimed, has successfully entered into the deep-sea fishing industry. For the last week experiments have been conducted by the wireless-telegraph station at Brant Rock, which is equipped with a wireless telephone, with a small vessel station among the fleet of the south shore fishermen, twelve miles out in Massachusetts Bay.

Recently, it is asserted, the fishermen wished to learn the prices ruling in the Boston market. The operator on the wireless-fitted boat called up Brant Rock, asked the prices of fish in Boston and received the information asked for

THE OPEN SHOP IN BITUMINOUS MINES.

THE strike of the bituminous coal miners in the Central Pennsylvania district, said to involve nearly 40,000 workmen, which had been "on" since the 1st of April, says the New York Journal of Commerce, has been settled by agreement between the operators and representatives of the United Mine Workers of America.

The most important point in the agreement is this: "The right to hire and discharge the management of the mine and the direction of the working force are vested exclusively in the operator, and the United Mine Workers of America shall not abridge that right." The right of any employer is so elementary and so essential to the successful conduct of any industry or business that it is strange that it should ever be questioned, but it is against this that the contest of organized labor has been chiefly directed for some time past.

Among the most offensive pretensions of organized labor is that of dictating who shall and shall not be employed. The discharge of some union man, for however good and sufficient cause, or the employment of non-union men, however competent and faithful, has been the occasion for more strikes and more conflict in recent years than any failure to grant reasonable demands for wages, hours or other conditions of labor.

"The right to hire and discharge" is of the essence of the open-shop principle, and its denial is the basis of the closed-shop demand; and yet it is an elementary right, as is also the right to be hired and to leave work, free from dictation by any individual or any organization. These are necessary elements in the "inalienable right" to "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness," and their denial is a denial of that and an interference with that individual freedom and equality before the laws which it is the purpose of our political institutions to establish, maintain and protect.

The coal mine operators in Pennsylvania, in both the bituminous and the anthracite fields, have put the "open-shop" principle in effect and the miners have been compelled to accept it or go without work. It is an example which should prevail in all industries, to the benefit of both labor and capital and the removal of the greatest menace to our national prosperity, but a necessary condition in carrying it out is the legal protection of workingmen in their individual rights, whether they belong to unions or not.

The Child Labor Committee.

Mr. Gompers, the owner and director of the American Federation of Labor, was asked a year ago by the National Child Labor Committee what the attitude of labor unions toward child-labor was. After claiming that organized labor had forced by its efforts the passage of every child labor law in the United States or any other civilized country that was in any way effective (much to the discomfiture, of course, of the committee, who were under the impression that they were doing some, at least, of this kind of work,) he went on with a long harangue of just about as much value and truth as can be found in the following paragraph, with which he wound up his diatribe:

"We, organized labor, are glorified in the recognition of the wonderful advance that is being made and has been made. But it is not quite good enough. So long as there is an injustice done to one man, to one woman or to one child, that is rectification by us, so long as work enough for us to do to secure the right and justice ter condition. We want to our people not only bright star in the diadem not only as an inspiration freedom, but also for tice."

We are sure, by the manner in which he says it, Gompers means every word knowing that in his position Bah Extraordinary to these States, he has been too busy with trivial details, we are call his attention to the daily up and even murdering of men all over the country who temerity to disobey the lieutenants and try to without first investing in a We also desire to call Mr. attention to the fact that tenants of his have which they are impudent call a "law" that American not learn a trade in the gave them birth. We these two items are slight that are "capable of rectification" Mr. Gompers if his attention to them, and therefore we on his valuable time we have, knowing that he of the existence and that to ask to receive from this generous man.—[Square Deal.

Pabst for Temperance

On account of its low percentage of alcohol (only 3½ per cent) Pabst Beer is a distinct aid to true temperance, as well as a wholesome, refreshing beverage. One reason for its great popularity is the fact that doctors recommend it because of its absolute cleanness, purity, age and strength.

Pabst BlueRibbon

is the most nutritious beer brewed because made from Pabst exclusive eight-day malt which retains in greatest degree the food value of the barley. This Pabst exclusive eight-day process malt doubles the cost but it makes Pabst Blue Ribbon Beer the superior of all American beers and accounts for its great popularity.

How Plows Are Made.

[illegible] MACHINERY THAT DOES THE WORK OF A MULTITUDE OF MEN IN THE GREAT WEST.

By Waldon Fawcett.

[SPECIALLY CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.]

[illegible], in all probability, the [illegible] universally used of all farm [illegible], yet it is safe to say [illegible] few of the users ever stop to [illegible] them very essential aids to [illegible] are made or what a great [illegible] has been built up as a result [illegible] need of tools with which [illegible] soil. Americans are easily [illegible] greatest plow makers, and it [illegible] source of satisfaction to some [illegible] readers to know that [illegible] are now used extensively [illegible] country where modern [illegible] plowing are in vogue. [illegible] steel plow manufactory [illegible] is located in Illinois, al[illegible] the center of the country's [illegible] and a tour of this vast [illegible] is bound to give the vis[illegible] of the power and mag[illegible] agricultural interests of [illegible]. Here he sees 1400 men [illegible] but make plows [illegible] in shops that have thirty-[illegible] of floor space. This army [illegible] nine carloads of ma[illegible] day in fashioning the [illegible] are turned out at the [illegible] every few minutes.

[illegible], is it not, to the [illegible] method by which the [illegible] plow was manufactured sole[illegible] in the year 1837 from the [illegible] a log, the latter be[illegible] shaped to serve as a [illegible]. Nowadays the up-to-date [illegible] has on hand a sup[illegible] lumber for three years [illegible] prepared for his especial [illegible] grade of steel that [illegible] hardest temper and [illegible] strength and toughness [illegible] beautiful scouring sur[illegible] by the experi[illegible].

[illegible] THE PLOW.

[illegible] follow the plow in its [illegible] from forge to farm, [illegible] the big black[illegible] we get a glimpse [illegible] primitive form, [illegible] which two men [illegible] machine known [illegible] and bites the [illegible] bite a stick of [illegible] from the shears the [illegible] flat piece of steel [illegible] and it is next [illegible] into the semblance [illegible] the piece of steel [illegible] edge is drawn [illegible] powerful hammer. [illegible] ready for the short [illegible] for a moment [illegible] is prepared. [illegible] landside is punched [illegible] this being forged [illegible] red hot through [illegible] the right shape. [illegible] step is to weld [illegible] landside and the [illegible] was formerly [illegible] another, [illegible]. The points are brought to a welding heat in that modern inferno, an oil furnace, thence carried by means of long-handled tongs to a die, where four or five blows from a heavy drop press serves to cement them in the strongest of unions.

Welding completed, the point is hammered out and shaped, after which it is sent to the fitting shop and jointed, the upper edge ground off on emery wheels and the share fitted to a form or template that is a counterpart of the plow it is intended to fit. Now a visit is paid to the grinding shop, where the scaly surface is ground off. At the conclusion of this task the share is pronounced complete and ready to be tempered. Tempering is perhaps the most important process in plow manufacture. For tempering, the share is first placed in a large oven and heated to a bright cherry red, then immersed in a red-hot bath and finally knocked into shape, put in a clamp and gradually cooled until it is as hard as flint and has a surface that cannot be scratched by the hardest file. After its treatment of hot and cold baths, the share is complete and ready to be fitted to the plow, so we will leave it with hundreds of its fellows and go to another part of the big industrial plant to follow the fortunes of the moldboard.

THE MOLDBOARD.

This likewise is cut from a slab of steel, and almost the first step in its evolution is the application of a shin plaster—by means of welding—which greatly increases its wearing qualities. After the application of this shin plaster the moldboard goes through processes similar to those which characterize the transformation of the share, and finally arrives in the fitting shop to await its turn to be fitted to a plow. However, a landside must be prepared before the assembling of a plow can take place. This involves more forging, bending to shape and welding. In the vast fitting room moldboards, landsides, shares, etc., are tried, edges ground, tried again and fitted until all parts go together perfectly, when the bolts are put in and all joints drawn up tight and snug.

The grinding room presents one of the most picturesque spectacles of the entire plow manufactory. The walls are lined with grinding and polishing wheels, each sending off a shower of cometlike sparks as steel is held against it in order to obtain that fine polish which is the delight of the farmer. Meanwhile the preparation of the steel beam has been going on, what was originally a straight bar of metal being heated and drawn out and bent until it assumes the shape so familiar to every rural resident. Then comes the process of "wooding," whereby the plow in the making receives its wooden handles, or, in case of a wood-beam plow, is supplied with both beam and handles. The preparation of the wood parts is in itself very much of a chore, for not only must the lumber be thoroughly seasoned, but the handles, for instance, must be steamed in a vat in order that the necks may be bent in proper form.

After the metal and wooden parts of a plow have been assembled in the fitting department, the product, which now begins to take on the appearance of a plow, goes to the paint room, where we find in operation every imaginable appliance for painting, striping and varnishing. In the case of wheel plows as well as walking plows, the process of painting is novel and interesting. A large vat, big enough to suggest a swimming pool, is sunk in the floor, and this is filled with paint, kept stirred by beaters in the bottom to prevent settling. The plow, suspended by a hook, is let down by a mechanical process into the vat, and the paint fills every nook and cranny more thoroughly than it could possibly be done by means of a brush, and in less than half a minute's time.

PAINTING THE PLOW.

As soon as the plow emerges from this bath the paint is wiped from the surface of the share, moldboard and landside, and then the plow is set aside to dry. As soon as it is thoroughly dry it is treated to another plunge bath into the paint vat, which constitutes a second coat. When this coat it dry the plow is striped, and then takes a plunge into a varnishing bath, after which it is ready for shipment to the farmer. For conveying the newly completed plows to the warehouses and thence to the shipping platforms there is provided a novel overhead trolley system. Indeed, this ingenious elevated railroad serves to assist in handling the raw material and partially completed plows at all stages of manufacture. Suspended from the ceilings of the shops is a complete network of tracks, with curves and switches, and provided with trolleys, like a hay carrier or a barn-door hanger. These tracks run from end to end of the buildings, circling about and through the different aisles and passing over bridges from building to building and out to the shipping platform.

As the plows for shipment arrive by means of the miniature trolleys at the loading platforms they are switched right and left to the railroad cars into which they are to be loaded. Car loaders work like beavers during the shipping season storing away in big box cars the plows destined for farmers in all parts of the world. At the Illinois plow manufactory, which ranks first in size among all such institutions in the world, as high as thirty-five cars of new plows have been sent out in a single day during the heavy shipping season.

AMERICAN IS BEST WORKER.

AN ENGLISHMAN RELATES HIS OWN EXPERIENCE.

Took an Engineering Course at College, but Had to Pay $500 for Privilege of Learning the Trade, and Also to Stand Treat for All His Fellow Workmen.

I have worked as a mechanic in England, where I learned my trade, and since I became a skilled workman I have been employed in a large American shop in the same line, says Thomas Clark. The methods totally are different in the two countries, and the American system seems to me to be far superior.

When I began my shop work in one of the large British plants I paid a premium of $500 for the privilege of learning the trade. These premiums in England vary from $250 to $1500, depending upon the character and reputation of the firm. I had taken an engineering course in an English college, and according to the American standard, should have been able to earn something worth while in the way of salary from the start, instead of being compelled to pay for my shop experience.

On starting to work in the English shop I was waited upon by a deputation of two workmen and told that I should be expected to pay "my footing," which meant that I must stand treat to a cigar or a drink for every man in the establishment. I refused, but was subject to so much annoyance and petty persecution that after a week I was glad to pay up and beg for mercy.

For pay I received the princely sum of $1 a week during the first year, increasing at the rate of 25 cents a week each year, so that at the end of my apprenticeship, in the fourth year, I drew $1.75 a week, Saturday afternoon and all holidays being deducted from my wages. Holidays are more numerous in England than America, and Saturday afternoons are lost all through the year.

The works were in operation fifty-four hours a week. Starting at 6 o'clock in the morning, we were busy until 8:30, when we had half an hour for breakfast. At 1 o'clock there was an intermission of an hour for lunch, and the regular day's work ended at 5.

The foreman of the shop usually made his appearance after breakfast, and as no check was kept upon the men's work or time before he came, the hours before breakfast were spent usually by the employés in discussing the latest racing, betting and general sporting news. It is worth mentioning that the English workman is a great sport. Some of the men lose all their wages by betting, and many of them place bets every day. Bookmakers are waiting outside at the gates for them when they leave the works, and not infrequently they have agents inside.

ENGLISH SHOPMEN WASTE TIME.

On account of lost time before the foreman's arrival, and the liberal time allotted to starting and stopping the works, about six of the nine hours were spent at actual production. The other three hours were lost entirely, so far as any benefit to the firm was concerned.

In this factory the workmen had one unusual privilege. The firm had rented a room which was fitted up with seats, tables and a large cook stove, where the employés could prepare their own meals or warm up the food they brought from home. Most of the men drank beer, and I was called a baby because I had tea, bringing a bottle of milk from home for it. Many of the men had a deep-rooted conviction that they could not put in a day's work without alcoholic stimulation.

I was amazed at my first work in a large American shop to see full grown and husky workmen drinking milk unashamed and openly. I was more amazed, even, to find that an apprentice was paid the liberal salary of $6 a week, receiving frequent raises as he deserved. Often within a year the apprentice receives more pay than the journeymen mechanic gets in England—that is, $9 or $10 a week.

The American foreman follows the progress of each man's work with intelligent interest, and the men are glad to coöperate with him to get out a good quantity of work in good shape. The foreman is not looked upon as a superior being as he is in England.

Perhaps the most striking and important economic difference in the methods of work in the two countries is that in England the workmen are careful and painstaking during the whole process of production. They take as much pains with unimportant details as they do with important processes. The American, on the other hand, uses discretion. He hurries over the unimportant part of his work and is careful of the main job. This makes the English product the more finished, but the American made goods are produced in less time and at much less expense, notwithstanding the higher wages.

ENGLISHMAN LACKS ENERGY.

The British workman undoubtedly is the best all around mechanic, while the American workman is a specialist. He knows how to do one thing rapidly and well. The American will run four machines at once, passing from one to another and full of busy interest all day long. The English worker will look after a single machine, and sit idle until it needs changing or replenishing. He will stop the machine in the middle of its task to go and get a drink, while his American cousin will wait for half an hour for an idle moment sooner than shut down his machine.

In a short time the British workman in America catches the American spirit. He is full of energy, and new powers are called into play. On account of his wider experience in every detail of the work he soon becomes a valuable man, though perhaps he never is as quick and capable at a specialty as the workman who is born in America.

The American workman is better educated and more ambitious. He expects to become foreman or to have a shop of his own, or to save enough to buy him a farm or to own his own home. The English workman is content with his station in life and sees no hope of rising.

In America everybody starts at the bottom when it comes to learning the trade. The son of the boss or the foreman works his way up cheerfully through all the details of the shop, while in England he would be placed in a higher sphere, and keep himself aloof from the ordinary workmen.

I hold the present social system in England to be most to blame for the superiority of the American methods. As long as the present conditions obtain so that it is impossible for the British workman to rise above his original station in life he will have no ambition and England will be handicapped in her industrial competition with America.

HOUSE GIRLS NEED TEACHING.

MODERN IMPROVEMENTS NEED MODERN HELP.

Girls Are no Longer Cooks Because They Are Born Girls—Much of the Present Education Is Foreign to Duties That Falls to Girls as Home-Makers.

[Portland Oregonian:] Incompetency in household duties is a great hindrance in securing help in the domestic realm as is the disinclination of American girls for domestic service. Housekeeping, like every other vocation, has been modernized. The implements of its service are in evidence in every home in the land, the members of which have kept step with the march of improvement in other lines. Homemaking is an evolved type of living, of which housekeeping is the intelligent handmaiden. Sixty years ago it was at a very primitive stage in the then pioneer Middle West. Toothsome viands were brewed and baked in ponderous black kettles that hung on the crane over the fire of walnut or hickory coals and in the covered oven in the corner of the wide fireplace. But cookery as an art has been developed since that period, and the implements of the art are no longer clumsy and crude, but light, convenient and adapted to every want of the skillful housewife. The heavy black iron pots and kettles that belonged to that time were first modified to meet the requirements of cooking on a stove and later were superseded entirely by lighter, cleaner vessels, until now the modern kitchen is as well equipped in its way as is the parlor, the bedroom, the pantry and the bathroom.

All of this means special or developed attainments in the housekeeper and her helper. It was formerly supposed that the single fact that a girl was born a girl would make her a cook and housekeeper when she grew older. Special instruction in the intricacies of these arts was not then thought of. There are places in which this fallacy still prevails in many country homes, and not a few in the city, and it is from these that many girls go out to housework. Perhaps it would be more nearly correct to say that it is from these homes that girls did go out to do housework, until that honorable vocation was brought or fell into disrepute among American girls. They did not know how to do what they engaged to do, and were hired to do, and the work became hard for them and impossible under an employer who had perhaps been no better taught in the art, except in its finer touches than they, and who was impatient and cross under the double infliction of her own lack of knowledge and her helper's incompetency.

Granted that a woman or girl must be taught housekeeping before she can keep house acceptably; that she must be taught to cook before she can prepare palatable viands; that she must be taught to wait upon table before she knows how; to take care of silver before she can keep it bright, and to handle china before she can do so without chipping it; and taking into consideration that these and kindred things are distinctly woman's work and must continue to be so, if the American people are to continue to live in well-ordered homes. What then? Is it not plain that much of the so-called education of girls is utterly foreign to the duties that fall to them as home makers and housekeepers? Of what avail is the high school girl's smattering in Latin when, married to a young man in her own station in life, she is utterly incompetent to bake a loaf or broil a steak? And of what use in the art of modern housekeeping is the girl who goes out to work for wages in another's home without knowing how properly to sweep and dust a room, cook and serve a simple meal, and use without defacing the implements with which the modern kitchen and dining-room are equipped?

It follows that the industrial school with its basis in kitchen kindergarten, up through a simple course in domestic science, is necessary to equip a girl for her life work as a home maker. Time was when the mother could and did furnish all the instruction necessary in this diversified branch of knowledge. But that time seems to have vanished with other conditions of a past era. Housekeeping has developed into an art, and cooking into a science, and to become proficient in either or both competent instruction is necessary. Whether this question will be solved on a broad basis by the institution of a course in domestic economy in connection with our public schools, beginning with the kindergarten, or will remain unsolved while clumsy and awkward girls from over the water clog the wheels of American housekeeping with broken china and soggy food and the untaught daughters of American mothers go from disorderly homes into ill-paid service in department stores and offices, is a matter that must be adjudicated before the open court of common sense.

The name "industrial school"—whether its course of instruction goes no farther than teaching a little girl how to thread her needle expeditiously wear her thimble on the middle finger of her right hand, darn her stockings neatly, dust a chair properly, sweep without raising a cloud of dust or strike a match without defacing the newest article of furniture—is a name well applied and represents an effort that looks to the solution of the most important question in the industrial life of the nation—the peace, comfort and orderliness of the American home.

A PRINCELY DRESS.

Completed by 300 Expert Mexican Needlewomen After Nine Years' Work.

After nine years of most painstaking toil Senora E. Leon of Aguascalientes, living in the City of Mexico, has completed a dress which is valued at the princely sum of $40,000 gold. She was assisted in her arduous toil by 300 expert needlewomen, all of whom were well paid.

The dress was first intended for the Mexican exhibit at the Paris Exposition. As it was at that time incomplete it was decided to display it at the St. Louis World's Fair, but the close of this exposition still saw the work unfinished.

Aguascalientes is famous for its drawn work and needle work and its embroidery artists, but this dress excels anything ever attempted or compleated in that city. The dress is an exquisite and wonderful example of woman's skill, patience and artistic conception.

It consists of a full trained skirt, eton jacket and bertha, and is made of the sheerest linen, the thread for which was imported from Paris and bore the number 600, the finest manufactured. The design, which was originated by Senora Leon, is a marvel. There are no seams visible in the entire garment, which is drawn in wheels in such a way that the original fabric is changed into a flimsy weblike lace.

The dress will be put on exhibition in Mexico City and offered for sale. No price under $40,000 gold will be considered. During the winter, when the city is filled with American millionaires, it is not thought that finding a purchaser will be difficult.

Phenomenal Iron Production.

The famous Edgar Thomson steel plant of the Carnegie Steel Company at Braddock, Pa., broke the world's record of production last month. The 11 blast furnaces turned out 148,134 tons of pig iron. Four stacks turned out 82,301 tons, which beat the previous record for four stacks, held by the Duquesne plant.

The converting mill produced 107,037 tons of steel ingots, while the blooming mill turned out 92,508 tons, which beats the former record by almost 25,000 tons. No. 1 rail mill turned out 61,048 tons, and No. 2 mill 23,547 tons. The latter mill has been in operation thirty-five years, and when first built turned out from 8000 to 10,000 tons a month.

No Race Suicide There.

"Boil your water at this season, and if you eat fruit, wash it first. For this is the bacteria season. At no time in the year are bacteria so plentiful as now."

The speaker, a chemist, resumed solemnly:

"Call these germs, microbes, bacteria, what you will, there are twice as many of them about in the autumn as at any other season. Hence it behooves us to be careful till the cold comes, freezing them off.

"These creatures increase very rapidly. President Roosevelt, watching the growth of bacteria families, would rejoice. There is no race suicide among them. Indeed, in a dry autumn bacteria will often propagate at the rate of 17,000,000 a day."

Who Cares?

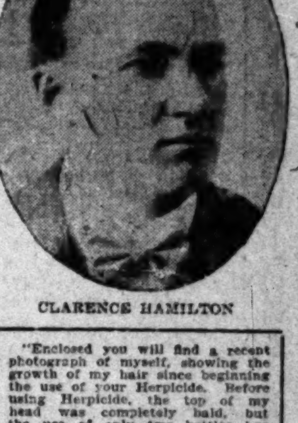
The Wise One: So Restwell has gone. He was a good chap; do you know what he left?

The Idiot: He left a world that needed him. He left a good name. He left behind him so many good deeds that if half of them were recorded his enemies, if he had any, may have no fear of meeting him in another world. He left innumerable bonds of friendship—interest-bearing bonds, payable in golden memories. He left——"

"Thunder! I meant how much money did he leave?"

"Oh, I don't know."

What Newbro's Herpicide has done for others it may do for you



CLARENCE HAMILTON

"Enclosed you will find a recent photograph of myself, showing the growth of my hair since beginning the use of your Herpicide. Before using Herpicide, the top of my head was completely bald, but the use of only two bottles has brought a new growth of hair. I had spent between $30 and $50 on other remedies, but failed to derive any benefit until using your Herpicide. I cannot commend this remedy too highly to any with dandruff, baldness or falling hair."

(Signed) CLARENCE HAMILTON,
Atlanta Police Department,
Atlanta, Georgia.

WHILE CHRONIC BALDNESS is incurable, many cases of primary or incipient baldness have been completely cured with Newbro's Herpicide, the original remedy that "kills the dandruff germ." Of course, the rational plan is to save the hair while there is hair to save, but even after it is gone there is a "fighting chance" if the hair follicles are not atrophied. Herpicide stops itching of the scalp instantly.

Some Matters of Especial Interest to the Women.

The Day's First Meal.

SOME CONSIDERATIONS DETERMINING ITS CHARACTER—ALSO A VARIETY OF GOOD RECEIPTS.

By Mrs. Ruth Arbogast.

[SPECIALLY CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.]

THERE is, perhaps, no subject upon which opinions differ more radically than that of what constitutes the most healthful breakfast. Aside from a cupful of hot water many fast until the noon meal, a dish of cereal satisfies many, toast and coffee is favored by others, some eat only of fruit, yet in spite of all that may be said as to the desirability of a light morning meal there are still a large number of people who insist upon food of a decidedly substantial nature before commencing their day's work. And, after all, it is largely the nature of the work one does that determines the necessity for a light or heavy morning meal. Periods as well as individuals and classes show wide differences in breakfast phases. An early mention of the word has been found in an English household account book for the year 1463, where the sum of eleven pence is entered under the heading, "Expenses for breakfasts." The meal was then generally light, often consisting of a draught of ale only. When Cosmos, Grand Duke of Tuscany, was visiting in England during the reign of Charles II., he mentions a breakfast at which his hosts in Oxfordshire "passed some time at the table drinking repeatedly in several sorts of Italian wines, according to the custom of the country, to the health and happiness of the ladies."

Cereal with fruit

Beef Cecils

A dainty way of serving eggs. In lettuce nests

Venner, in his book on the means of attaining a long life, gives us a recipe for a light, nourishing and comfortable breakfast, consisting of "a couple of poched eggs seasoned with a little salt and a few cornes of pepper, also with a drap or two of vinegar if the stomach be weak, and supped off warm, eating therewith a little bread and butter, and drinking after a good draught of pure claret wine." In another place he advises persons of a "phlegmatic temperature" to take no breakfast. Another doctor of the reign of Elizabeth tells us that where the air is pure, clear and wholesome, it is best to fast till dinner.

However, we are told of a truly baronial breakfast which was partaken of by the Earl of Northumberland and his family in the early nart of the sixteenth century. This meal, served at the early hour of 7 o'clock consisted of "a loaf of bread in a trencher, two manchets, one quart of beer, a quart of wine, half a chine of mutton, or else a chine of beef, boiled;" while for the nursery instead of milk we hear of a quart of beer, and three mutton bones boiled. In the season of Lent or on fast days, salt fish—baconned herring, a dish of sprats, etc.—took the place of meat. Pepys, it is said, though not averse to the pleasures of the table, took his draught of half a pint of Rhenish wine or a dram of strong waters in place of a morning meal. And so continues the diversity until the present day. Some of the requisites of desirable breakfast dishes are wholesomeness, easy digestibility, and the possibility of quick preparation, and with these necessities in mind the following recipes are offered:

Venezuelan Ragout—Take one cupful of smoked beef chopped fine; add half of a small onion, a piece of butter the size of a walnut, a dash of cayenne and a flurry of cinnamon. Take four eggs, beat them thoroughly, the yolks and whites together, then add to these the pulp of three medium-sized tomatoes. Next melt a lump of cheese as large as a dollar and when entirely dissolved pour it in with the eggs and tomatoes. Whisk them all up and pour them in with the beef stir well and turn into a hot frying pan. Do not let it brown, but cook thoroughly and slowly, which will take about fifteen minutes.

Beef Cecils (Illustrated)—Melt two tablespoonfuls of butter, add to it one tablespoonful of bread crumbs, then two cupfuls of chopped cooked beef. To this add the beaten yolks of two eggs and stir all in a saucepan until it is heated through. Cool, form into small round balls, cover with egg and and bread crumbs and fry in smoking hot fat.

Mushroom Omelet—Take four eggs, one ounce of fresh mushrooms, eight tablespoonfuls of butter, one tablespoonful of flour, and one and one-half pints of stock. Cut the mushrooms into small pieces. Put one tablespoonful of butter into the frying pan and set it on the fire. When hot add the flour and stir the mixture until it is smooth and frothy. Gradually add the butter and stock, stirring all the while, then add the mushrooms and cook gently for five minutes. Break the eggs into a bowl and beat only enough to break them—not enough to make them light. Put two tablespoonfuls of butter in a frying pan and set on a hot fire. When the butter is so hot that it begins to turn brown pour in the eggs. As soon as a thin crust is formed on the bottom of the pan draw it back with a broad-bladed knife. Do this three times, then pour half of the mushroom sauce into the middle of the omelet. Roll up and turn out on a warm dish, pour the remainder of the sauce around the omelet and serve immediately.

Broiled Sausages with Fried Apples—Separate a string of small sausages and prick each one with a fork several times. If the skins are dry place in boiling water for a couple of minutes. Put in a broiler over a dripping pan and bake in the oven until the sausages are well browned. Drain on brown paper. Core apples and cut into one-half inch slices, and fry in the fat which has dried out of the sausages. Place the sausages on a hot platter and arrange the apple slices around them.

Creamed Calf's Liver—Rub the yolks of three hard boiled eggs smooth with half a cupful of cream, then add the chopped egg whites. Melt and brown two tablespoonfuls of butter, add two tablespoonfuls of flour and brown thoroughly; then add a cupful of boiling water and when this is cooked smooth put into it three cupfuls of cold cooked liver, cut in small pieces. Cook until the liver is heated through, then add the cream and egg mixture, seasoning the whole with a saltspoonful of salt, one-third as much paprika and two tablespoonfuls of orange juice. This is a very dainty and finely flavored dish.

Eggs au Gratin—Prepare a cupful of thick cream sauce. Take from the fire, add two tablespoonfuls of grated cheese and one beaten egg, cook two minutes and then remove from the fire. Butter a pudding dish and place in a layer of fine crumbs moistened with milk. Cut hard boiled eggs in slices and arrange them in layers on the crumbs having first dipped them in the sauce. Repeat the layers and put over all a covering of sifted bread crumbs, dot with butter and bake in a quick oven until a light brown.

Broiled Soles—Take two small soles, clean and trim, wipe them dry with cloth, season with pepper and salt, oil them over, then place on a gridiron over a moderate fire, cooking first on one side and then turning to the other. When done through take up on a dish, put a little chopped parsley and clarified butter over them and serve very hot.

Corn Omelet—Beat the yolks of five eggs until light, add one-half cupful of cream and a pint of sweet corn. When mixed add one scant teaspoonful of salt, one-quarter teaspoonful of white pepper, and the whites of the eggs beaten to a froth. Melt one teaspoonful of butter in a hot frying pan, and when hissing hot pour in one-half of the mixture, shake and stir until set, then roll and turn out on a hot platter. Cook the remainder in the same way and serve at once.

Asparagus Cream Omelet—Make a white sauce by melting one tablespoonful of butter, stirring in a level tablespoonful of flour, adding a half cupful of milk and stirring until it thickens. Separate the yolks and whites of four eggs and beat each separately. When the sauce is cool add the beaten yolks, a generous half teaspoonful of white pepper and a half cupful of the heads of cold cooked asparagus, chopped fine. Beat the mixture until light, fold in the stiffly beaten whites and turn at once into a hot omelet pan containing a teaspoonful of melted butter. When the omelet is set and slightly brown put the pan in the oven for a few minutes, then fold, turn out on a hot platter and serve.

Cereal with Fruit (Illustrated)—Cook the evening before any cereal preferred and fill with the mush buttered molds and set away in a cool place until morning. When ready to unmold dip in a dish of hot water turn out on plates, remove a portion of the center with a sharp-pointed spoon, and fill the cavity with fruit, garnishing the top with whipped cream.

Shredded Wheat Turbot—Take three shredded wheat biscuits cut crosswise into quarters. Make a white sauce of a half tablespoonful of butter, one and one-half cupfuls of milk, one and one-half tablespoonfuls of flour and a teaspoonful of salt. When this is smooth take from the fire and add a half teaspoonful of mustard, one-fourth teaspoonful of paprika and a quarter pound of grated cheese. Butter a pudding dish, put into it alternate layers of the biscuit and sauce, sprinkling the top with grated cheese and color well in a hot oven.

THE REAL MRS. RUSSELL SAGE.

An Intimate Glimpse of the Life and Work of One of the Richest Women in the World.

Mrs. Russell Sage is a Puritan and a school teacher—a steadfast New Englander by inheritance and desire, says Arthur Huntington Gleason in the World's Work. And never for a moment does she lose her balance or her sense of humor.

Objecting to men smoking in the presence of women, she went to the Mayflower dinner (the Mayflower Association being one that she has notably furthered,) protested against the smoking, and withdrew in entire good humor when her protest was overruled. Her unblurred viewpoint, the unbroken consistency of a simple faith and practice, is delightful in a flighty and erratic society.

She has been as earnest and humorous, living at the center of $60,000,000, as when she taught school in Philadelphia. Not in any sense a public woman, emphatically a home woman, she has been forced into prominence. Always the exponent of common sense, her expenditures are sensible, her views on life are sensible, and, greatest triumph of all, her charities are sensible. She has never been tied up in new thought or to fake causes. To the Emma Willard Seminary, on its fiftieth anniversary, she said: "Then to you, young ladies, I commend from my own experience of life the cultivation of manners and sound common sense. Character is a perfectly educated will."

Her rooms look like the city room of a newspaper. They are the abode of a worker—full of letters, pamphlets, newspapers and magazines. There is also a filing system for letters, and drawers for newspaper clippings on woman suffrage. Mrs. Clarence Mackay's experiments in school work at Roslin, the will of Mrs. Emma Schley (who left a great fortune in part to faithful servitors and to hospitals,) Journal editorials, and the triumphal progress of Miss Helen Gould.

All her life she has been hard at work studying the problems of practical education and of woman's amelioration. Every day has seen a round of duties: writing letters, attending committees, studying the needs of a hospital, receiving ca...rs who had definite objects, and then giving Mr. Sage a welcome home. Situated in the rarified stratum of women of wealth and social position, two traits give her distinction: her excellent mental endowment and her democracy. Her compelling sense of equality—that is the noblest element in her make-up. She will criticise a servant for a mistake or a coachman for a delinquency in precisely the way that a city editor "calls down" one of his staff. It is masterful, complete, and it leaves no resentment. She has done it in a big, strong way. She hasn't been patronizing him.

TRUE WOMAN.

BY W. D. COWLEY.

[SPECIALLY CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.]

Quincy being asked why there were more women than men, replied: "It is in conformity with the arrangements of Nature. We always see more of heaven than of earth."

Nothing can be more touching than to behold a woman who has been all tenderness and dependence and alive to every trivial roughness while treading the prosperous paths of life, suddenly rising in mental force to be the comforter and supporter of her husband under misfortune, and abiding with unshrinking firmness the bitterest winds of adversity.

As the vine which has long turned its graceful foliage about the oak and been lifted by it into sunshine will, when the hardy plant is riven by the thunderbolt, cling around it with its caressing tendrils and bind up its shattered boughs, so it is beautifully ordained that woman, who is the mere dependent and ornament of man in happiest hours, should be his star and solace when smitten by sudden calamity. I have observed that among all nations the women ornament themselves more than the men; that wherever found they are the same kind, civil, obliging, humane, tender things; that they are ever inclined to be gay and cheerful, timorous and modest. All men who avoid female society have dull preceptions and are stupid or have gross tastes and revolt against that which is pure. Your club swaggers, who are sucking the butts of billiard cues all night, call female society insipid. Well, poetry is uninspiring to a jockey; beauty has no charms for a blind man. I protest I can sit for a whole evening talking with a well-regulated kindly woman about her little girl, Mary, or her boy, Tom, and like the evening's entertainment. One of the great benefits a man may derive from a woman's society is that he is bound to be respectful to her; the habit is of great good to your moral men, depend upon it.

The true lady is known wherever you meet her. Ten women shall get into a street car, and, though we never saw them, we shall point out the true lady. She does not giggle constantly at every little thing that transpires; or does some one appear with a peculiar dress, it does not throw her into confusion. She wears no flowered brocade to be trodden under foot, nor ballroom costume, nor rose-tinted flowers; but the lace frill round her face is scrupulously fresh and the strings under her chin have evidently been handled only by dainty fingers. She makes no parade of a watch, if she wears one; nor does she draw off her dark, neatly-fitting glove to display ostentatious rings. Still we notice nestling in the car beneath us such a trim little boot, not paper-soled, but of an anti-consumption thickness. She is quite as civil to the poorest as to the richest person who sits beside her and equally regardful of their rights. If she attracts attention it is by the unconscious grace of her person and her dress. If we were a bachelor we would go home to our solitary den with a resolution to become a better and a—married man.

The strongest man feels the influence of woman's gentlest thoughts, as the mightiest oak quivers in the softest breeze. We admire the ladies because of their beauty; respect them because of their virtues; adore them because of their intelligence, and love them because we can't help it. Woman's rights are as sacred as those of the male sex. Her mental powers are underrated by those only who have either not seen or were so blinded by prejudice that they would not se their development. As a species, the perception of women, especially in cases of emergency, is more acute than that of the male species, unquestionably so designed by an All-Wise Creator for the preservation and perpetuity of our race. Her patience and fortitude, her integrity and constancy, her piety and devotion are naturally stronger than they are in the other sex. It has been said she was first in transgression, her seed has bruised the serpent's head. She stood by the expiring Jesus when boasting Peter and the other disciples had forgotten their Lord. She was the last at His tomb, embalmed His sacred body and the first to discover that he had burst the bars of death, risen from the cleft rock and triumphed over death and the grave.

Women have exercised a most remarkable judgment in regard to great issues. They have prevented the casting aside of plans which led to very remarkable discoveries and inventions. When Columbus laid a plan to discover a New World he could not get a hearing till he applied to woman for help. Woman equips man for the voyage of life. She is seldom a leader in any prospect, but meets her peculiar and best attitude as helper. A man discovered America, but a woman equipped the voyage. So, everywhere, man executes the performances, but woman trains the man. Every effectual person leaving his mark in the world is but another Columbus, for whose furnishing some Isabella, in the form of his mother, lays down her jewelry, her vanities, her comforts.

There cannot, by any possibility, be a home where there is no wife. To talk of a home without love, we might as well expect an American fireside in one of the pyramids of Egypt.

There is a world of wisdom in the following: "Every schoolboy knows that a kite would not fly unless it had a string tying it down." It is just so in life. The man who is tied down by a half dozen blooming responsibilities and their mother will make a higher and stronger flight than the bachelor who, having nothing to keep him steady, is always floundering in the mud. If you want to ascend in the world, tie yourself to somebody.

Uses of Gelatine.

A USEFUL INGREDIENT IN MANY DELICIOUS DISHES.

[SPECIALLY CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.]

To please the palate, the eye must be first attracted, and the house mother, looking for means to attain both these ends, considers the use of gelatine almost indispensable. It takes so many attractive colors, with the vegetable coloring extracts or powders, and serves as the foundation for many sorts of delicacies.

In using gelatine in California, more must be used than in the East if one wishes it to solidify quickly, especially is this so near the Coast. There are so many delightful and easily made deserts made with gelatine that this should be considered by California housewives. Differences in cooking are not considered when we consider the difference in climate. Many things in foods that were considered indispensable in the East do not gratify the palate here.

And gelatine is not only good for puddings, it is fine to make "molded" salads. A tomato salad is exceedingly nice if a portion of the tomatoes are stewed, strained and seasoned. Set on the stove to come to a boil, then add a proportion of gelatine to thicken. When this is cold, but not yet congealed in the molds, drop in slices of raw tomatoes. Serve with mayonnaise dressing. In serving, garnish with a delicate slice of tomato on top, and parley leaves. Of course, you have turned your gelatine salad out on a lettuce leaf. There is art and poetry in the daintily well-served salad.

Molded fish is a delightful way to serve left-overs of bass, halibut or, indeed, any fish. Take the skin, and objectionable parts from the fish leaving the clear meat broken into flakes. Make a gelatine with very strongly lemon-seasoned water. When made, drop in the fish; let simmer a moment, then turn into molds. When the mixture has cooled and nearly congealed, drop in a thin slice of lemon. Some like the gelatine seasoned with Worcestershire sauce and a little chopped onion. If made with the latter, young onions cut in small pieces and parsley makes a tasteful garnish.

Rice and peaches can be developed into a nourishing and delicate dessert by the following recipe: In a double boiler cook three tablespoons of rice in one pint of milk, flavored with a tiny piece of stick cinnamon; if the rice becomes dry before it is cooked tender, add a cupful of hot milk. Some rice absorbs more fluid and cooks slower. When cooked tender, add two tablespoons of sugar, heaping, and dissolving two tablespoons of gelatine in cold water, stir in, taking out the stick cinnamon. When nearly cold beat in a cupful of whipped cream; pour into molds. Just when the gelatine mixture shows evidence of settling drop in slices of ripe peaches. Let harden. Serve with whipped cream.

A little gelatine added to bouillon or soup gives a "quality" that relieves the "thinness" of plain soups.

Loquats, at their present development, seem not to lend themselves kindly to the culinary art in any way but in making jelly. Their flavor is so distinct and fine that a dessert made from them will appeal to the most jaded taste. Boil the loquats, after cutting them in pieces, until as soft as for jelly; strain; set this juice on the stove and thicken with proper amount of gelatine. Let cool and nearly thicken; indeed, it must have begun to congeal, but not stiffen. Whip enough cream so that the proportion is about, after whipping, one-quarter cream to three-quarters gelatine. Stir cream and gelatine together and pour into molds that have been lined with lady fingers, standing fingers points up; drop tiny discs of candied fruits on top, either sprinkled or in a design. Set where it will get very cold, yet where it is dry. A good, quick way is to open the top of the refrigerator for a few moments and set on the ice until thoroughly chilled, then keep cool until served. The delicate flavor of the loquat assimiliates well with whipped cream and light sponge cake.

A delicious flavor for cake icing can be made from loquats by boiling and straining the juice, using it with the sugar as in other frosting. With the packet of gelatine are many recipes, but they merely tell enough to show the "way" to use the contents. After one has learned the "way" one's culinary and artistic taste can devise so many things.

One especially nice thing is a savory "aspic" to serve with cold meats. The foundation may be meat stock on plain water. It should be divided in three portions, and colored, that is, two parts colored, one left clear. A vegetable coloring in red and green is used. The stock may be spiced, onioned, bay leafed and highy chili peppered, as well as salted, before coloring, or each part may be separately and distinctly flavored, then the gelatine is added, and when cold it is served in nicely broken pieces with the meat. Some people like this with salad, and others eat it on slices of bread. If well made it is a dainty. If made to eat with bread, finely chopped pickles make it very nice. These suggestions open up a possibility to the house mother, that she may devise, in her own way, many dainty servings.

"Emotional" Dinner Services.

The "emotional" dinner gown has suggested "emotional" dinner service. It has been considered that the efforts of a chef will be far more appreciated if his masterpieces are served on plates which suggest the flavor of his dishes.

The service may be fashioned of any metal which can be enameled, but the more expensive patterns are carried out in beaten silver. The favorite metals are pewter or copper.

The olives are serve on miniature dishes to represent an olive leaf carried out in lily green enamel on pewter.

A witch's cauldron is the latest novelty in soup tureens. The cauldron hangs between pewter sticks over a silver spirit stove, and the ladle represents the witch's stick. Each soup plate of pewter bears an enameled black cat in its center, but the enamel is protected by an upper plate of prepared glass, through which the design shows.

Fish is served in a silver boat, held by two mermaids, whose scales are suggested by mother-of-pearl, fantastic slabs of which ornament the pewter plates.

The haunch of venison reposes on a dish borne by a crouching deerhound. Each plate is raised a few inches from the table by a pair of antlers.

Dishes and plates for game can be enameled in the gorgeous colors of the pheasant's feathers.

Ices may be served in a frosted glass cave hung with icic'

Fruit plates are of beaten pewter, while each finger bowl represents a different fruit set with enamels.—[London Express.

Candle-light in Fashion.

Women have realized at last that candle light is the most becoming to their complexions. Candles will therefore be the only illumination at smart dinner parties this winter.

The only drawback that candle light was depressing has now been removed. Four candles on a dinner table was not a cheering system of illumination, but the new scheme provides a light for each guest.

In consequence of this boom in candles, novelties in shades are being displayed in the fancy shops.

"Ladies are learning to make their candle shades at home," a teacher of art needle work informed an Express representative yesterday.

"This is really necessary, as fashion has decreed that as many as twenty candlesticks may deck a long dinner table, while others are arranged on the sideboard and mantelpiece.

"The color scheme of the shades must all agree, and must tone with the table center and flowers.

"One of the prettiest of the designs is named the 'blossom' shade, and is composed of velvet and silken petals to represent the hostess' favorite flower.

"Another pattern is more elaborate. It is fashioned of white satin embroidered in silver thread. This shade, which adorns the candle opposite each lady guest, bears a small circular looking glass in front.

"'Candle shade' games for a dinner party will quite replace 'book teas' or fancy dress dinners.

"One novelty is called the 'eye' game. Each shade bears the eye of a distinguished man or woman painted on mica, which lights up as if it were alive. The guests are provided with cards and pencils attached, and at dessert the shades are passed around, and the one who guesses the largest number correctly is awarded a prize."—[London Express.

How to Iron a Shirt Waist.

In this country where shirt waists are worn the year round and most of them are made of a material too fine to be sent with safety out with the general wash, any hints as to the best method of ironing are of interest to a large majority of women, and a few moments spent watching the skilled workers in one of the higher priced laundrys is a most valuable object lesson.

When the skilled laundress takes the shirt waist from the dampened pile she proceeds first to iron over the puffer all the gathered portions, where the sleeve goes into the armhole and cuff, and at the waist line, if the waist is put into a belt. Next with a flatiron she irons all the tucks, the cuffs and collars, since these do not iron smoothly if they become dry. Then the sleeves are finished completely, and the final finish is given by ironing out the plain portions of the waist. When there are inserts of embroidery these are ironed last of all, being pressed on the wrong side.

Of course, the average household does not afford a puffer, but a flatiron set on end makes a fair substitute, and the general principle of procedure can be followed, with the result that the shirt waist is more satisfactorily laundered and in one-third the time required when ironed in the usual haphazard manner.

House Furnishing Hints.

Don't crowd in more furniture than is needed.

Admit nothing that has neither real decorative meaning nor usefulness.

Admit nothing that is irretrievably ugly in line or clashing in color, even if it is a Christmas present from your dearest friend.

Don't think that every square foot of wall space must be ornamented.

Don't shut out the light and air.

Don't try to modernize everything.

Better a plain room, bare save for a Rembrandt print, a pair of Colonial chairs, a Bokhara rug, and a merry fire on the hearth, than a gorgeous parlor cramed full of gilded pieces of uselessness and glutted with ornaments. Simplicity is the order of the day.—[Country Life in America.

OLD-FASHIONED JEWELRY.

The Return to Favor of the Cameo, Beads, and the Miniature Lockets.

[London Express:] One of the most striking features of the moment in the realm of jewelry is the sudden revival of the antique as regards both the settings and the gems themselves. Old-fashioned and cumbersome brooches, massive chains, heavy gold or enamel buckles, and enormous lockets of ponderous weight are nowadays as much valued by the fashionable world as was the delicate Italian filigree work which was so much in vogue a few years ago.

Stones, whose names had almost been forgotten, and of whose existence no one excepting perhaps the stone cutters themselves were aware, are once more assuming an important place in the latest schemes, and are responsible not only for letter-weights, trinket boxes, and such personal matters as umbrella tops and charms, but are being turned to elry of a definite character

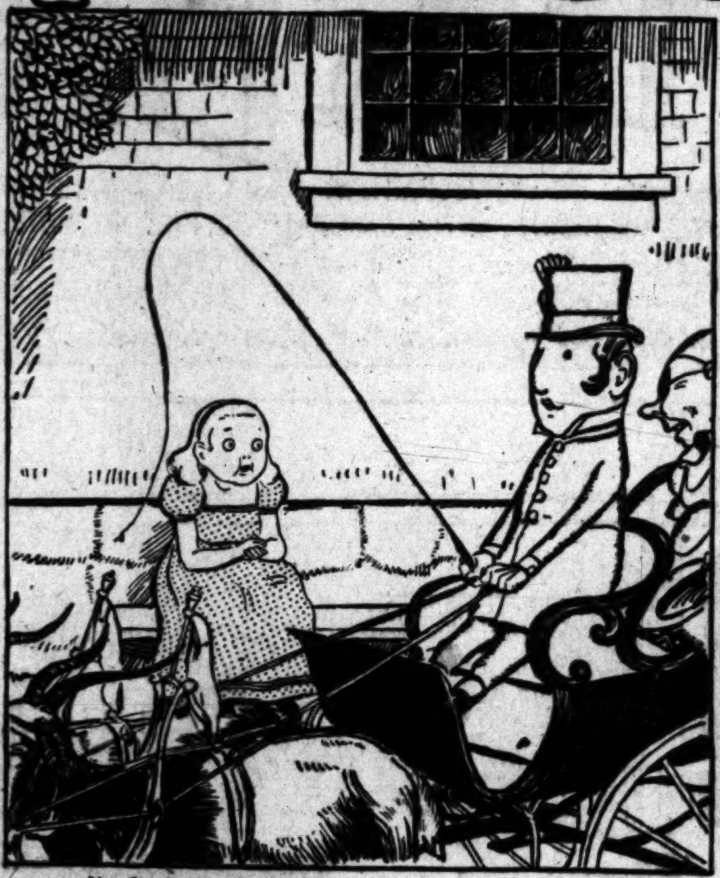
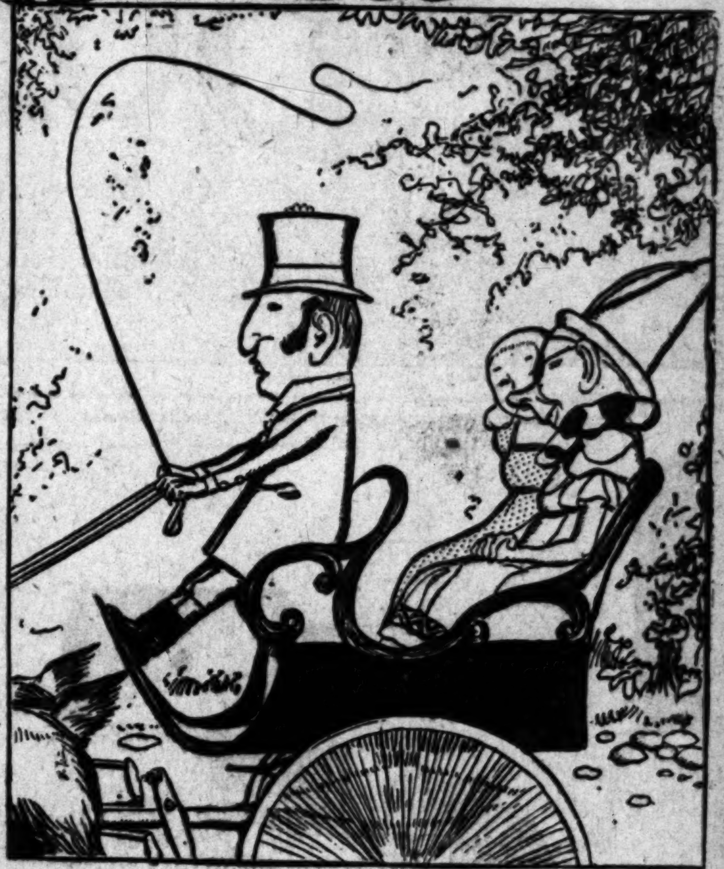
No. 1.—Polly was sitting out by the side of the house doing nothing in particular, but very much inclined to to go sleep, while Spider, her cat, under the bench, was already peacefully slumbering.

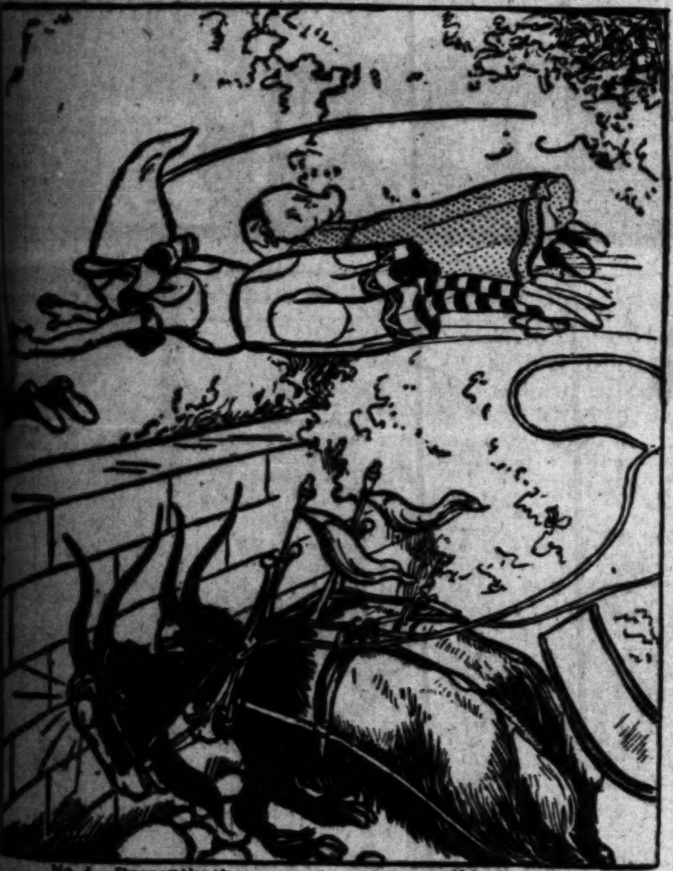


No. 2.—Suddenly the Joker came around the corner of the house seated in a goat cart and being driven by a very dignified coachman. He saluted Polly and said:—

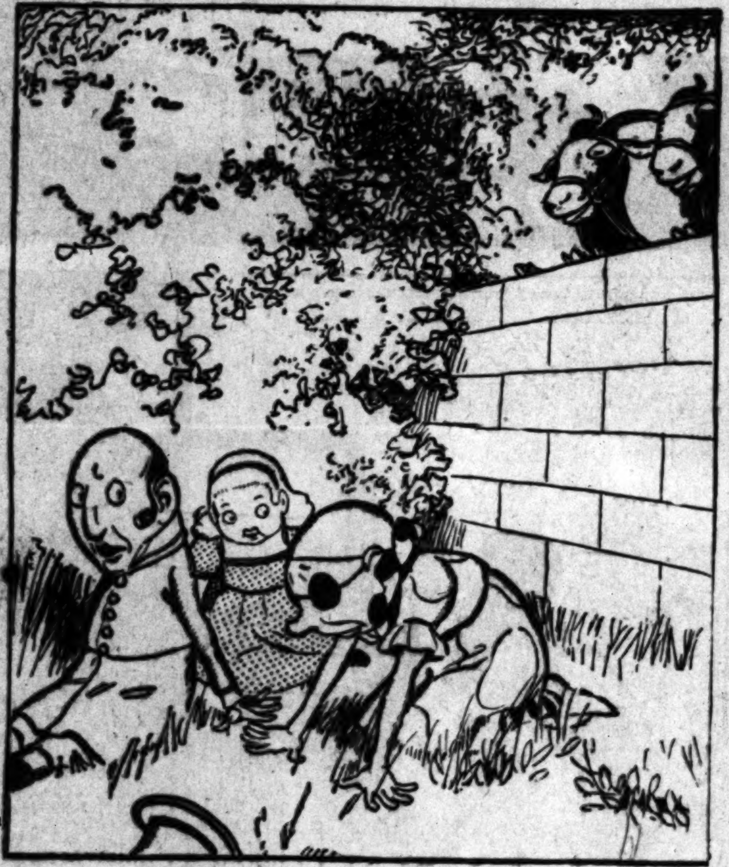
"We're bound for Shadow Land, my dear—jump in without delay—
To seek the Topsy-Turvy Cranes and watch them at their play."



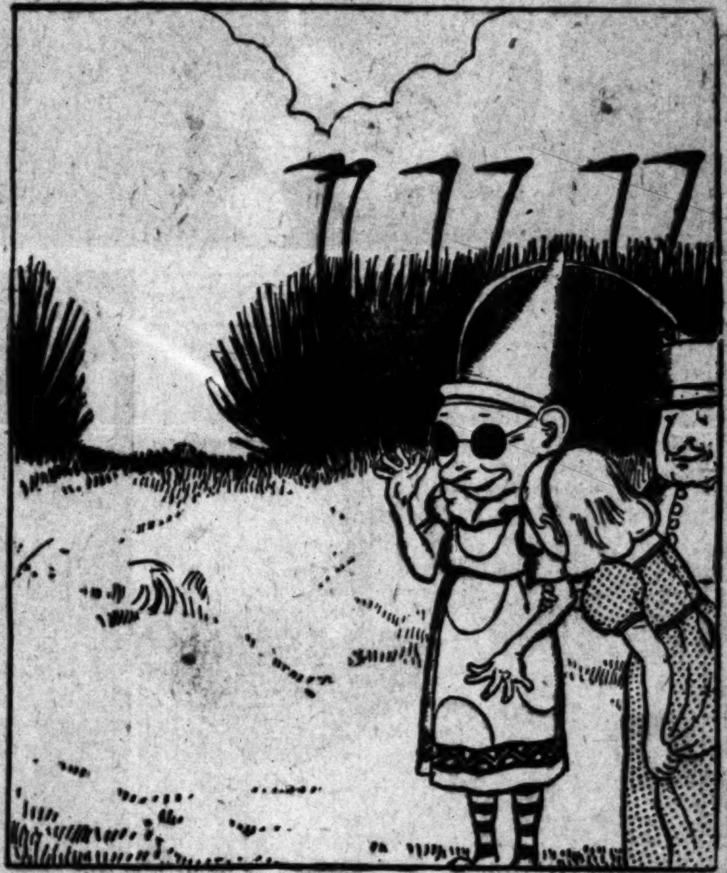
No. 3.—Without the least hesitation Polly mounted to her place beside the Joker and announced herself ready. The coachman cracked his whip, the Joker cracked a joke, and away the goats trotted down the lane toward the mystic land.



No. 4.—Presently they came to a stone wall built across the lane, which seemed to bar their way. But the coachman only urged the goats to greater speed, and just before they reached the wall they lowered their heads and butted into it with a mighty thud! The entire outfit came to a sudden stop—no, not the entire outfit, for the occupants of the cart shot over the wall as though they had been fired from a gun!

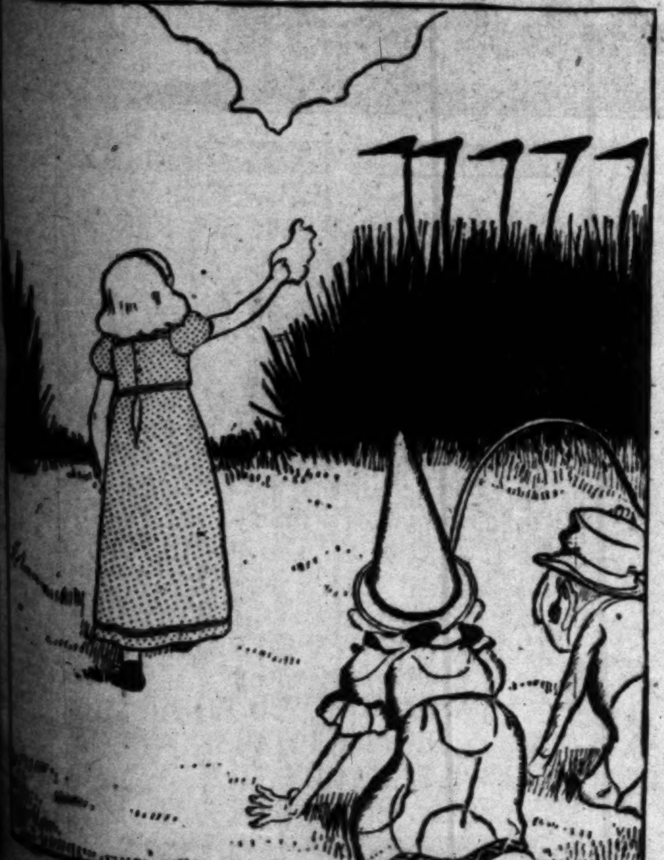


No. 5.—They arrived in a heap on the other side of the wall, somewhat confused, but unhurt. And thus they arrived in Shadow Land.

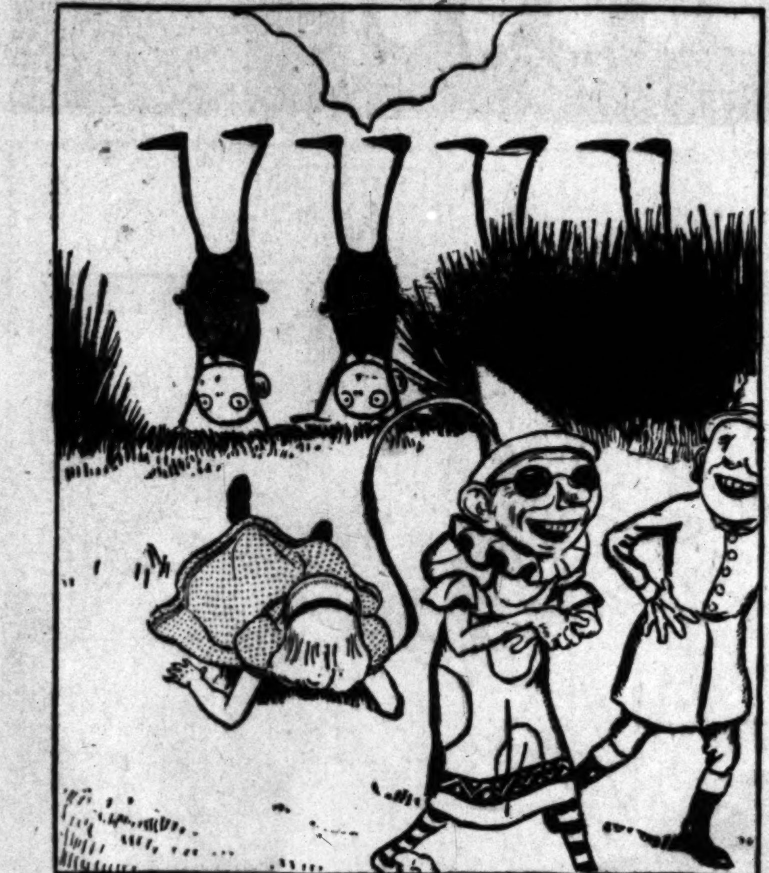


No. 6.—The Joker then conducted the little girl forward a few paces, and pointing out a number of long necked creatures just visible above a clump of reeds, said:—

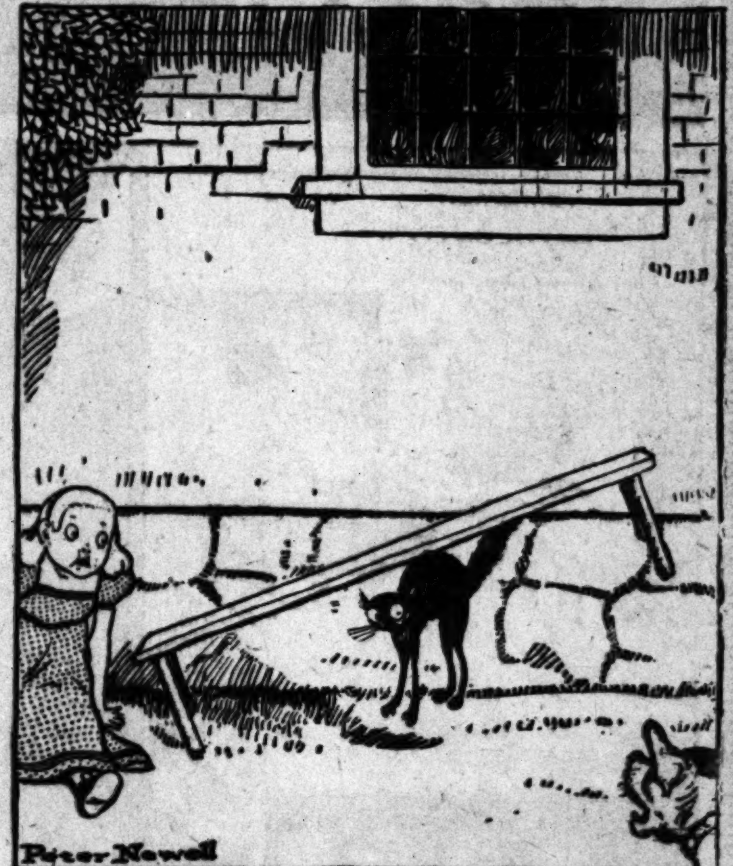
"Ah, see the Topsy-Turvy Cranes—approach 'em and say 'Shoo!'
And it will be the greatest sport to see the flock skidoo!"



No. 7.—Polly advanced cautiously toward the birds, waving her handkerchief at them, and when she thought she was close enough, shouted "Shoo!"



No. 8.—This had a very marked effect on the Topsy-Turvy Cranes and they forwith came into view. Polly was so startled at what she saw that she shrank back, and, catching her heel in a bunch of grass, fell flat!



No. 9.—Then she woke up to find herself still on the ground "Get out, you strange dog!" said she. "Solder, ain't you ashamed to slide your mistress off on the ground?"

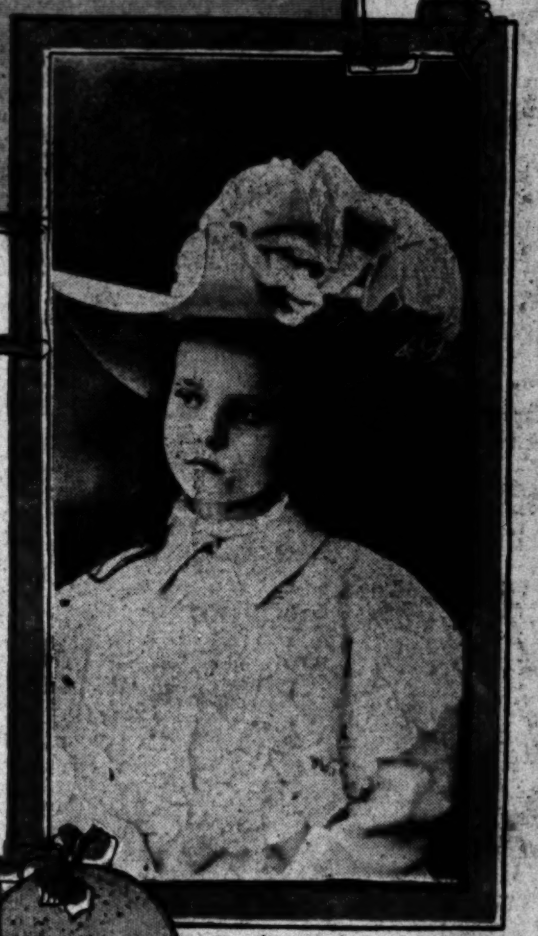
VELVET FACES BRIM AND BOW



A GREAT CHOU OF VELVET AND PLUME

QUAINT poke bonnets, befrilled in Paris fashion out of all but a passing resemblance to their old-time prim style, are to be unusually popular for little girls this winter, even for those wee damsels who, last year, would have been judged quite old enough to don hats.

Bengaline makes the prettiest of them, and this is one of the new points in childish fashions, for bengaline has been "out" a long while. They are made upon wire frames, and shirred elaborately so that every trace of the stiff, hard frame below is lost, and the bonnet seems nothing but a great, soft, shimmering chou of silk.

Half, if not more, of the style of the bonnet lies in the treatment of the brim's facing. Elaborate it is almost sure to be, but in a way that is thoroughly in keeping with baby prettiness: chiffon or mull shirred into the softest possible mass of white usually forms the foundation, with tiny loops of satin ribbon or rose foliage coming next the face, with a rose or two—tiny pink ones—or a quaint rosette of loops, perked up, in a pretty coquetry of style, just at the left.

An occasional bonnet—always a pretty one, though—has the brim slashed up the middle, the cut parts deftly rolled back, and the opening massed with wide, soft ribbon crushed into a full bow.

In place of the beaver of last year, scratch felts are used—not quite so pretty nor so soft a frame for the little face as was beaver, but more easily kept in perfect order.

For the hats which have long ribbon strings to tie under the chin, and are just midway between bonnets and hats, a pretty new touch lies in adding a bunch of tiny roses or a rosette at the left, low upon the strings.

For older children hats grow bigger and bigger, most of them the soft shapes that bend and droop into such fascinating, becoming curves. For the most part they are simply trimmed with ribbon bows or rosettes, with perhaps a plume stuck through. A pretty variation of the usual straight bow is shown in the model directly to the left, where the loops are made to ray out from the crown across the whole front of the hat, each loop (and the brim itself) faced with velvet.

Curiously enough, although ribbon is more popular than ever upon children's hats, where velvet is used, it is more apt to be the velvet itself than velvet ribbon. Just why this distinction is made is a mystery to most of us, but certainly those big velvet choux are prettier than ever rosette of velvet ribbon was.

Following the fashion of trimming children's coats with fur—not too much of it, and always the "simpler" kinds—has come that of using fur upon hats, an animal apparently coiled around the brim often making the only trimming.

Plumes—long, uncurled ones—find their way onto a few, but very few, hats, usually white ones for "best" occasions. Lace is used a great deal, among the soft facings of baby bonnets or edging ribbon rosettes upon hats. And, what is akin to lace, embroidered felt flats—an echo of the lingerie hats of last summer—are draped upon wire shapes, and made up as nearly like the lingerie hats as the heavier material will permit.

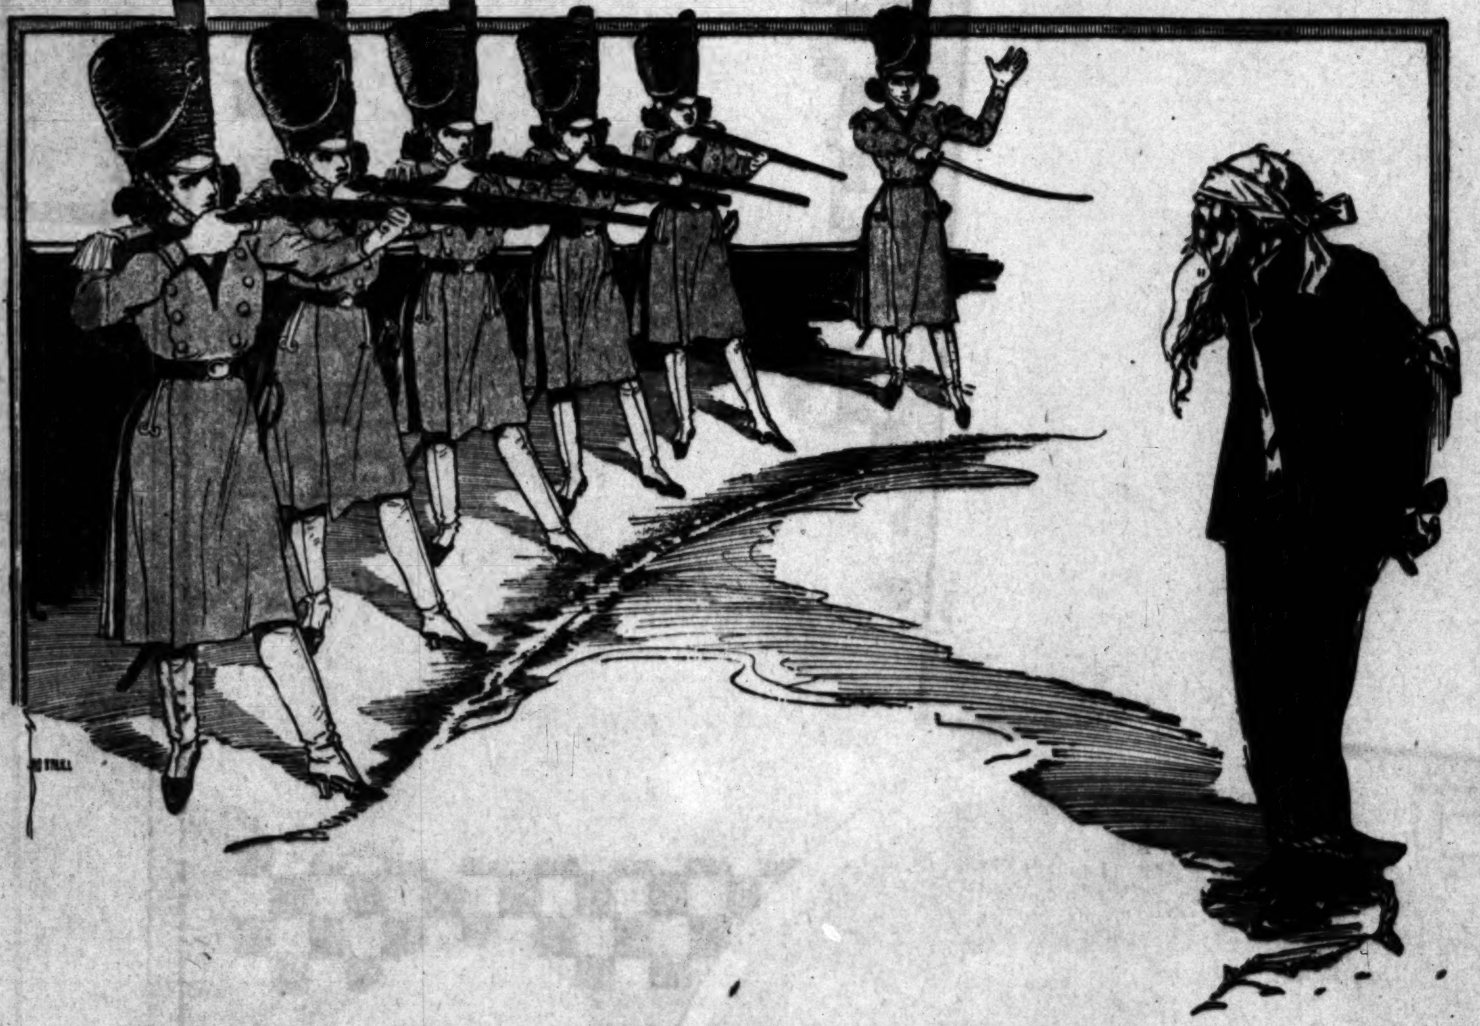
Should The Old Father Be Shot?



"What is the matter, girls? What is the matter with the fathers? What is the matter with you? Is it your fault or theirs? Should the old father be shot?"

SHOULD the old father be shot?

That was the question—or something like it—asked by a celebrated Scotch clergyman preaching in this country a few years ago. Only he said: "Should the old clergyman be shot?" Then he went on to prove that that was about the only way to dispose of him. Sometimes I have felt the same thing about the old fathers I have seen. Which is my reason for asking the question today of you girls and trying to find out what you think of it.

A while ago some one wrote and inquired why we did not have a Father-Petting Chapter. She said that there was a great deal said about mother-petting, but no one seemed to think that the fathers needed anything of that sort. I printed that letter on the page, and asked the girls what they thought of the scheme. Would any of them care to form such a chapter?

To that inquiry I have received one answer, just a single, solitary one. Only one girl in the whole of this big society of thousands who write to me on anything or everything has a word to say about the need of petting fathers, about their own friendship with their fathers, about the happiness they have with their fathers. They are ready enough with suggestions on everything else, but—to paraphrase the song from which I quoted in one of my talks a few weeks ago, "Everybody is Worked but Father." I daresay, he may be "worked" at home in other ways, but thus far there has been little effort to say a word for him on the page.

If this big society of ours had been made up of boys, instead of girls, I could understand this sort of thing better. Sometimes you see boys and their fathers who are great chums, but more frequently the boys and the mothers are the ones that pair off. It is the girls who go with their fathers. Have we none at all like this in Each and All?

I must own myself that I think the father is sometimes a rather hard proposition—especially when he gets to be the old father. A man becomes "sot" in his ways more easily than a woman, and it is harder for him to get out of ruts. He doesn't look with quite so much favor upon new things, as a rule, and, if you wish to find some elderly or old person who is "up and coming," you have to look to the mother. I have known fathers who seemed to have no taste for anything new or lively, who grumbled at the innovations the children wished to introduce into the family, and, in a general way, made themselves so disagreeable that you wondered whether it would be force of tradition or real filial devotion that would have made the children object to having father shot. Those are the circumstances in which one feels a sort of sneaking sympathy for the cannibal tribes in which old people are, so to speak, put in the stockpot when they become so aged and infirm that they are of no other use to any one and are a burden to themselves.

Does this seem dreadfully flippant and shocking? I don't mean it to be that. I know some dear, dear fathers—if I may be pardoned a personal remark, I have one of my own—who are a joy and a benediction and who share in their children's interests and amusements as if they were their own. But are there many of those? What do you think, girls?

Of course, being a woman with grown children of my own, I have lived long enough to have had a good chance to see plenty of fathers. I have known some that were dears—and I have known others that would be dear at any price. The queer part about it was that in some cases the latter seemed to be just as much loved as the former.

One such man I knew, the father of two sons and three daughters. I was in a position where I had the opportunity to meet him pretty often, and I should have set him down as a rather cross-grained old chap. I don't mean that he was disagreeable all the time, but only that he was snappish and crusty on insufficient cause. His wife was one of the loveliest and gentlest of women. Yet when he died, years afterward, one of the daughters said to me: "I have learned one thing since father left us. You may talk abo you please, but, after all, it is the fath the home." And she said this about tha

Still, it must be said that the fathers h hard time of it. Or perhaps it would be that old men have a rather hard time of not the father part of them that causes th old lady can sit in the corner and knit grandchildren's stockings, or fuss with of needlework. But an old man! He can't even tie up a cut finger satisfactorily, and work, unless he whittles, what is there for He is not likely to care to learn anything wife, if her time were not filled, would basket work or to string bead chains or to other little craft. But the old man seldom anything of that sort, and, when he leaves his business, there he is with his time on his hands. not strange that he feels and says he is no world, that he gets cross and peevish and onlookers the wonder as to whether he would be shot.

The old man who lives in the country or on a and cares for outdoor things is not so badly of potter about his garden or potter about the barn criticise the hired man, and so let off some of his ing energy in that way. In the evenings he can down to the "store" and sit around and talk to other men about politics. But what is there for city old man to do? He doesn't haunt saloons and hasn't a club, and he isn't clever with his fingers that he can make little repairs about the house mend broken china and drive nails and upholster of furniture. He reads a little, and his eyes get There is no one especially for him to talk to. He a good deal—fortunately. But what else? Is it wonder that he gets querulous and Wouldn't it, perhaps, be a kindness to shoot

All this sounds as if I had a prejudice against ers? I haven't, not the least in the world. I don't look upon them as a necessary evil. On the contrary like them, as a class and individually. In some As I said, I have known some uncommonly fine The point I am trying to reach is, what we are to do with them to make them happy and comfortable and do the best for them in every way. Personally, I not at all keen to have them shot. But I don't think a rule, that they are happy, and I wish Each and could extend its charity and goodwill to them and something to make their lives fuller and brighter.

The only way to go about this, so far as I can is to find out from our girls what kind of fathers have, and what they do to make them happy and You have told me a lot about your mothers. But about your fathers? Lots of girls have brought mothers into the society, but not one of you has ever pressed a wish that her father might be one of us. may say that you knew it would be impossible. true—and yet I think it would have been natural some girl to write and say something like this: dear old dad and I are such chums that the only back to my enjoyment of Each and All is that he belong to it." But I have had no word in the last this.

What is the matter, girls? What is the matter with the fathers? What is the matter with you? Is it your fault or theirs? Should the old father be shot?

IDEAS FOR IMPROVING THE SOCIETY'S WORK

DO YOU girls recollect that a few weeks ago I asked on this page for suggestions which would be of help in developing our society and making it more helpful? I asked also for suggestions on any subject which would prove of service to our girls.

I am sorry to say that I have had fewer replies than I could wish, but those that came were very good. I print some of them on the page today, and I hope I shall have more from time to time. I put them together here today in order that more attention may be called to them and to the helpfulness they contain.

A Splendid Idea

I think your idea about having a corner for suggestions splendid, and it will no doubt be the means of helping many of the girls in doing kind acts and making them feel that they can share all their nice ideas with others.

MABEL B. H. (Philadelphia).

I hope other girls may think the idea "splendid" enough to encourage them to send me more suggestions.

Correspondence in Esperanto

When the Esperanto sub-clubs are formed—as doubtless they will be—why can't they have a corresponding secretary to whom the solitary students may write for help and advice?

When sick at heart of care and strife,
And even love grows weary,
Brighten then some other life,
Other lives are dreary.

J. M. L. (Bridgewater, Mass.).

Who falls in with this suggestion about Esperanto? Are enough of the girls making progress that will encourage them to undertake correspondence in Esperanto?

For Postcard Girls, Especially

I am sending in a suggestion. An artist friend has given me a strip of matting which reaches from the floor to the ceiling. He painted some Japanese cherry blossoms on it, with the words, "Great Japan," in the Japanese lettering. I have my prettiest postals mounted on this matting. Don't you think this is a pretty idea?

L. G. F. (Los Angeles, Cal.).

A very pretty idea. Let me know if some of you girls carry it out.

A Blue Print Pillow

Seeing on the Each and All page that you would like suggestions of any kind for a pillow, will tell you of one I have in my mind if I can get the "Camera Club" to help me. I would like each one to send me a developed film of some favorite place (dark background preferred), then I shall make a blueprint sofa pillow. If I succeed in my attempt, I will send each girl a picture o. the pillow, full size, and then if she wants, will print her the pillow for just the cost of the material. A developed plate will not do. I would also like to exchange camera views of any kind.

I am still willing to help any of the clubs having a fair with fancy work for same, as it will soon be time for holding them.

SADIE (Worcester, Mass.).

I should think this suggestion would tempt the "camera girls" to get to work at once.

Table Covers of Postcards

I would like if you would put down a suggestion about postcards that they make such a beautiful library table cover for you girls at boarding schools or in those hospitals where you arrange your own room. This cover will be a reminder of your friends, and at the same time serviceable for your table. It takes fifteen cards one way and five cards wide. You can lace it with brown cord, brown baby ribbon or with leather cut by a saddler, or you can fringe the cards themselves.

I would suggest a shawl or scarf made in two colors, blue and white, knit with Afghan stitch, 27 inches wide, 1½ yards long. These are beautiful. If you think the girls would like the directions, I will send them to any one.

A LOVING RAY (Mount Carmel, Pa.).

All of these are good suggestions, and will interest different readers.

To Artistic Members

I am very fond of painting and drawing, and would like to hear from some one who is also interested in that line of work.

I. S. (Everett, Mass.).

We have other artistic girls who might help this member and be helped by her.

An Older Sister's Work

I have not offered to do anything, being the oldest of five children. I have to be up at 3 o'clock every morning. Sometimes I lie down to take a nap in the afternoon. The evening is the only time I have nothing to do. I spend my time in addressing postals and answering letters. If I could be of any help to the club in the evening, I would do it gladly.

Please put my name in the Flower Sub-Club to exchange seeds and slips of plants.

KATHERINE de C. L. (Philadelphia).

As busy a member as this should have many allowances made for her, and such an offer of help from her means a great deal.

Employment for Cripples

I see in today's paper a question I had thought of asking—Who of us paints china? I shall watch for the answer.

I echo your wish. I wish all who do fancy work would send me their names.

Now, I want the name of some one who makes Princess Louise lace, and also Irish crochet and baby Irish.

Is there any person who could give me any information about a society in Chicago, Ill., that helps cripples find employment? I believe there is some such organization, and I would be very thankful to know something about it.

ANNA M. S. (Black Gap, Pa.).

Will not all our fancy-work enthusiasts send their names to this, the chairman of our fancy work chapter? The china painters, too, would be welcome, and I hope some one may be able to answer her inquiry about the Chicago organization.

Here's a Chance for "Suggestions"

For nearly eight years I have been kept in the house by a spinal affection. For the last year I have lived about four miles from Pottstown with a relative. I am able to get around the house and do the mending and help in the kitchen.

I would like to earn money and live in Philadelphia, where my home has always been. I only have myself to depend on.

I am taking the liberty of writing to you, hoping you can tell me how to put to practical use some of the things I can do. I have painted Christmas and Easter cards, china brooches, belt and hatpins, shirtwaist sets, etc., and do pyrography. I make rag dolls, with painted faces.

Friends have sold work for me, and stores have sold china, on commission, but the sale of these things is too irregular. I would like to find some work that would be permanent. I will give any one my rag doll pattern, also have some water-color studies I would pass on.

A. T. P. (Pottstown, Pa.).

Cannot some of our energetic Philadelphia members devise some way in which this correspondent can secure the work she seeks? I trust, at all events, that some of them will write to her.

The Badge

Our pins have come, and we are much pleased with them, and we wear them where they can be seen when in the house and on the street. Dear Mrs. Herrick, is it not part of the Each-and-All spirit to show our colors? I put my badge on when I dress in the morning, and change to other clothes, and keep it on until I retire.

FRANCES E. S. (Salem, Mass.).

I fully agree that the colors should be shown and the badge worn anywhere and everywhere. The complaint of non-appearance of badges is painfully frequent.

"Starting Small and Growing Up"

I wrote you just yesterday, and since that time have found a girl who is really anxious to help me start a sub-club here. There will be only two to start, and before we ask others we are going to see what we can do alone. Our object is to help others as much as we can, and, before going further, we wish to ask you not to name our town should you choose to insert portions of this letter on the page.

We have decided to start sewing, making whatever we find to make, especially baby clothes. Where can we get patterns, and where can we send them when made? We also propose doing fancy work. And do you know where we could dispose of this?

We are going to start small, and grow up.

A. A. T., J. A. B. (Pennsylvania).

I don't see the force of withholding the name of the town, although I like the idea of "beginning small and growing up," and I approve of the enthusiasm that is willing to start with two members. Patterns for baby clothes can be bought in most of the large stores, and there will be no difficulty in finding poor families where they will be welcome. Any church has destitute households on its list where baby clothes are needed. The fancy work can be sold to friends, or very good, in an exchange. But I would counsel the admittance of more members to your chapter.

Practical Suggestions for Invalid Cheer

Would any shut-in like to have some collars, bibs, doilies, etc., stamped on linen ready to embroider? I have some I will gladly send.

I was much interested in Mrs. K. H.'s idea of window gardens for shut-ins. May I add another suggestion? When these envelopes of seeds are sent, could they not be made more attractive by inclosing each package in a plain little envelope and write on outside of each a pretty quotation about the particular flower seed inclosed? For instance: Asters—"Everywhere the purple asters nod, and bend and wave and flit." Roses—"I wish the sky would rain down roses," etc. (Many of these may be found in Shakespeare's works, and other poets'. I can supply hundreds of them, if wanted.) Then inclose all these in a large envelope and tie with ribbon. On this outside one write any of these: "Flowers are God's thoughts in bloom." "Flowers are the sweetest things that God ever made and forgot to put a soul into." "How noiseless falls the foot of time that only treads on flowers." "To me the meanest flower that blows can give thoughts that do often lie too deep for tears." "The fragrance whispers that the flower is there."

G. D. (Philadelphia).

These ideas might well be cut out and treasured for the Christmas season. They would give pleasure to others as well as to shut-ins.

TWELVE LESSONS IN ESPERANTO

THE INTERNATIONAL LANGUAGE

Copyright, 1906, by A. M. Grillon.

From the French of Th. Cart and M. Pagnier. Translated and adapted to American use by A. M. Grillon, professor of modern languages in the School of Industrial Art and the Central Manual Training School, Philadelphia, Pa.

BY WAY OF EXPLANATION

So simple, with all its wonderful possibilities, is Esperanto, that this series of twelve lessons, which closes today, is enough to lay a thorough foundation for its study.

The first lesson appeared on this page August 26, and the sixteen rules, which have absolutely no exceptions, were printed in the issue of September 2.

Cut these lessons out; mount them upon cardboard for better preservation; and you have all that you need in the way of textbook. Leave a margin at one side and stamp holes in it, by means of which the leaves may be tied together in complete form.

LESSON XII

La Feino.

Vidvino havis du filinojn. La pli maljuna estis tiel simila al la patrino per sia karaktero kaj vizaĝo ke ĉiu kiu ŝin vidis povis pensi ke li vidas la patrinon; ili ambaŭ estis tiel malagrablaj kaj tiel fieraj, ke oni ne povis vivi kun ili. La pli juna filino, kiu estis la plena portreto de sia patro laŭ sia boneco kaj honesteco, estis krom tio unu el la plej belaj knabinoj kiuj oni povis trovi.

Ĉar ĉiu amas ordinare personon, kiu estas al li simila, tial ĉiu ĉi patrino varmege amis sian pli maljunan filinon, kaj en la sama tempo ŝi havis terman malamon kontraŭ la pli juna. Ŝi devigis ŝin manĝi en la kuirejo kaj laboradi sen ĉese. Trter aliaj aferoj tiu ĉi malfeliĉa infano devis, du fojojn en ĉiu tago, iri ĉerpi akvon entre malproksima loko kaj alporti domen plenan grandan krudon unu tago, kiam ŝi estis apud tiu fono, venis al ŝi malriĉa virino, kiu petis ŝin, ke ŝi donu al ŝi trinki. "Tre volonte, mia bona," diris la bela knabino. Kaj ŝi tuj lavis sian kruĉon kaj ĉerpis akvon en la plej pura loko de la fonto kaj al portis al la virino, ĉiam subtenante la kruĉon, por ke la virino povu rinki pli oportune. Kiam la bona virino rankviligis sian soifon, ŝi diris al la knabino: "Vi estas tiel bela, tiel bona, kaj tiel honesta, ke mi devas fari al vi donacon (ĉar ŝi estis feino, kiu renis sur sin la formon de malriĉa vilaĝa virino, por vidi, kiel granda estas la ĝentileco de tiu ĉi juna knabino)." Mi faras al vi donacon "daŭrigis la feino." Ke ce ĉiu vorto, kiun vi diros, el via buŝo eliros aŭ floro aŭ multekosta ŝtono.

Kiam tiu ĉi bela knabino venis domen ŝia patrino insultis ŝin, ki al si revenis tiel malfrue de la fonto. "Pardonu al mi patrino," diris la malfeliĉa knabino "ke mi restis tiel longe." Kaj kiam ŝi parolis ti ujnĉi vortijn, elsaltis el ŝia buŝo tri rozoj, tri perloj kaj tri grandaj diamtoj. "Kion mi vidas, diris ŝia patrino kun grandega miro, "ŝajnas al mi, ke el ŝia buŝo eis altas perloj kaj diamantoj!" De kio tiu ci venas mia filino (ĝi esis la unua foje ke ŝi nomis ŝin sia filino). La malfeliĉa infano rakontis al ŝi naive ĉion, kio okazis al ŝi, kaj, dum ŝi parolis elfalis el ŝia buso nultego da diamanoj. "Se estas tiel," diris la patrino, "mi devas tien sendi mian filinon." Maringo, rigardu, kio eliras el la buŝo de via fratino, kian ŝi parvlas; ĉu ne estus al vi agrable havi la saman kapablon? Vi devas nur iri al la fonto ĉerpi akvon; kaj kiam la malriĉa virino petos de vi trinki vi donorgin al ŝi gentile.

"Estus tre bele," respondis la filino malĝentile, "ke mi iru al la fonto." "Mi volas ke vi tien iru," diris la patrino, "kaj iru tuj." La filino iris sed ĉiam murmurante. Ŝi prenis la plej belan arĝentan vazon, kiu estis en la loĝejo. Apenaŭ ŝi venis al la fonto, ŝi vidis sinjorinon, tre riĉe vestitan, kiu eliris al la arbaro kaj petis de ŝi trinki (tiu cj estis tiu sama feino, kiu prenis sur sin la forman kaj la vestojn de princino por vidi, kiel granda estos la malboneco de tiu ĉi knabino). "Ĉu mi venis tien-ĉi," diris al ŝi la malĝentila kaj fiera knabino, "por doni al vi trinka? Certe, mi alportis arĝentan vazon speciale por doni trinki al tiu ĉi sinjorino? Mia opino estas, prenu mem akvon, servi volas trinki." "Vi tute ne estas ĝentila," diris la feino sen kolero. "Bon, ĉar vi estas tiel servema, mi faras al vi donacon, ke ĉe ĉiu vorto, kiun vi parolos, eliros el via buŝo aŭ serpento aŭ rano.

Aprenaŭ ŝia patrino ŝin remarkis, ŝi kriis al ŝi: "Nu, mia filino?" "Yes, patrino," respondis al ŝi la gentilulino, eljetante unu serpenton kaj unu ranon. "Ho ĉielo!" ekkriis la patrino, "kion mi vidas." Ŝia fratino en ĉio estas kulpa; "mi pagos al ŝi pro tiu ĉi?" Kaj ŝi tuj bati ŝin. La malfeliĉa infano forkuris kaj kaŝis sin en la plej proksima arbaro. La filo de la reĝo, kiu revenis de ĉaso, ŝin renkontis; kaj, vidante, ke ŝi estas tiel bela, li demandis ŝin, kion ŝi faras tie-ĉi tute sola kaj pro kio ŝi ploras. "Ho ve, sinjoro, mia patrino forpelis min el la dormo."

La reĝido, kiu vidis, ki el ŝia buŝo eliris kelke da perloj kaj diamantoj, petis ŝin, ke ŝi diru al li, de kè tiu ĉi venas. Ŝi rakontis al li sian tutan aven turon.

La reĝido konsideris, ke tia kapablo havas pli grandan indon, ol ĉio, kion oni povas doni dote al alia fraŭlino forkon dukis ŝin al la palaco de sia patro, la reĝo kie li edziĝis je ŝi sed pri ŝia fratino ni povas diri, ke si fariĝis tiel malaminda, ke ŝia propra patrino ŝin forpelis de si; kaj la malfeliĉa knabino, multe kurinte kaj trovinte neniun, kiu rolus ŝin akcepti baldaŭ mortis en angulo de arbaro.

"Laugh, and the World Laughs With You"

THIS poem is familiar to many readers, but there may be others who wish to secure it for their collections:

LAUGH, and the world laughs with you;
 Weep, and you weep alone;
 For the sad old earth must borrow its mirth,
 But has trouble enough of its own.
Sing, and the hills will answer;
 Sigh, it is lost to the air.
The echoes bound to a joyful sound,
 But shrink from voicing care.

Rejoice, and men will seek you;
 Grieve, and they turn and go.
They want full measure of all your pleasure,
 But they do not need your woe.
Be glad, and your friends are many;
 Be sad, and you lose them all—
There are none to decline your nectar'd wine,
 But alone you must drink life's gall.

Feast, and your halls are crowded;
 Fast, and the world goes by.
Succeed and give, and it helps you live;
 But no man can help you die.
There is room in the halls of pleasure
 For a large and lordly train,
But, one by one, we must all file on
 Through the narrow aisles of pain.

Objects and Aims of Each and All

PERHAPS some of you, seeing this page for the first time, wonder just what the Each and All Society really is; what there is about its aims and objects to create so widespread an interest among "young girls of all ages."

The society was founded in February, 1905, with Christine Terhune Herrick for its president, and with an almost instant membership of girls in nearly every State in the Union and in Canada.

Its object is to help girls help themselves by developing their talents into something the world wants; to solve difficult problems—the sort a girl wants a calm, unbiased, out-of-the-family opinion upon; and to promote the exchange of general help.

Any girl can belong. There is no red tape about it. The sending of your name for membership gives you the range of every opportunity the society boasts. And Mrs. Herrick stands ready to welcome, to advise and to help.

Pillows Made of Ribbon Badges

I am away out here on the prairie of North Dakota, and I find it very, very lonesome. I correspond with almost twenty-five Each and All members, so cannot correspond with any more, as it takes every cent of my pin money. But I am going to try a new idea. I want an Each and All sofa cushion. How many of our members have odd badges they do not care for? I would love to get a badge from every State in the Union. I have already made one pillow from ribbon badges I collected in Jamestown, and think it is very pretty, so now I want an Each and All one.

I am busy making quilts. If any of our Each and All members have any pieces which they do not care for, I would be pleased if you would send them my name, and I will do something to repay them for their kindness. I don't get any chance to go visiting or to help any one unless I walk, and I am not able to do that.

I see that M. M., Wyoming, Pa., has just finished her sunrise quilt. That is the next quilt I will try to make, and if I can get any help from M. M., it will be gladly received. I am also going to make a log-cabin quilt and an eight-pointed star, also a crazy one. So I think my time will be very much taken up for the winter.

I would like to learn cross-stitching. Can any of our members help me? I have never had the time nor ability to learn such things, but now I have so much spare time on my claim.

DOLLY (Media, N. D.),
Formerly of Jamestown, N. D.

If this member carries out the plans she is making, she will have no time for loneliness. I hope I shall have many requests for her address.

A Chance for Very Real Service

I came to Arizona over a year ago. It is very necessary I should do something to support my mother and sister, who came here for her health.

I am anxious to get a position as a private teacher in some small place. There are places here where there are not enough children to establish a public school; then a private school is formed and the teacher is paid by the families who send their children to school. Or I should like a position in some family as a governess or companion. I know there are such positions in Arizona, but I am a stranger in a strange land, and it seems almost impossible for me to find a position, although I have tried so hard. I would be willing to give my services for my board and very small wages, or even at first for my board, until I could find a better position.

I have had over three years' experience as a teacher in a graded school in Minnesota, and can furnish the best kind of references.

A. B. (Peoria, Arizona).

Here is a chance to be of very real service. Who can give such service?

This member belongs to our Teachers' Chapter, and I hope with all my heart that some one of our girls will be able to advise her judiciously. Let her hear from you as soon as possible.

Classes in English

I have been a teacher for the last six years, and I note from time to time that members have asked for instruction in English and different subjects.

Now, I thought I would like to form some classes in English, United States history, civil government and literature, charging a small sum (prices on application) to cover expenses, or would exchange for fancy work and shadow or eyelet embroidery for shirtwaists.

MAUDE O. (New Brighton, Minn.).

We have girls who wish just the sort of help this member can give. If they will write to me for her name, inclosing a stamped and self-addressed envelope, I shall be glad to give it.

My Quilt Design

I would like to exchange quilt blocks, mine to be unbleached muslin, 8x8, worked in yellow silk; name, address and date of birth.

Upside Down at the Bottom of the Sea

A CAPITAL diving story is told in an English school paper by a man signing himself "An Amateur Diver."

I believe (says he) by some remarkable process of nature every third male person is born a diver. Whitstable is the place where most divers grow, and where I caught the temptation to go a-diving myself.

I mentioned my desire to one or two old divers, but met with jeers and suspicion. But Whitstable never produced a diver that could put me off. I bought a diving dress, and got permission to go down and amuse myself on a sunken coasting vessel lying off shore a little distance.

It was a noble diving suit, and the new india rubber squeaked musically as I moved, and smelt very refreshing. There was a shield-shaped plate, rather like a label on a decanter, hanging on my chest, and a noble metal collar—about thirty-two the size would have been on the usual scale.

I had also a very fetching red nightcap, while my helmet was a terror to all beholders. I don't mind confessing to a certain amount of discomfort while they were building me up in this dress—partly due to a vivid imagination. The helmet made me think of the people in the story who put hot pots on the heads of strangers, and I seemed stifling at once.

All Ready for the Descent.

There wasn't much comfort to be got out of the leaden shoes—try a pair for yourself and see—but when all was ready, I made a shift to get overboard and to crawl slowly down the ladder.

It was not a great deal of the outer world that I could see through my windows, and I hung on to that ladder with something of a desperate clutch. When at last the water stretched away level around my windows, then, I confess, I hesitated for a moment. But I made the next step with a certain involuntary blink, and I was under water.

All the heaviness—or most of it—had gone out of my feet, and all my movements partook of a curiously easy, yet slowish character after all. At the top of my helmet the air escape valve bubbled merrily, and I tried to think of myself as a plumed knight striding among the fishes. You do think of the silliest things on certain cheerful occasions.

It was not as long as it seemed before I was on the wreck, and down below in the nearest hold. Regular professionals had already been at work, and access to different parts of the ship had been made easy.

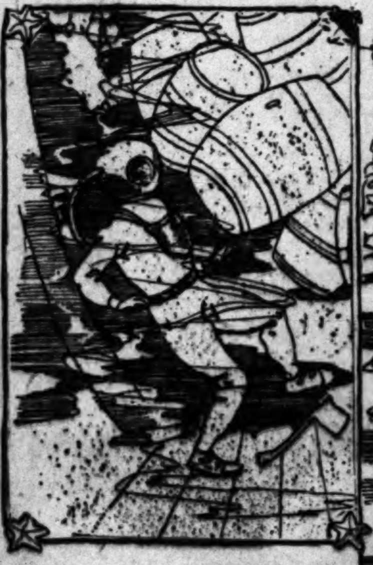
Now, in this big hold were an immense number of barrels, stood on end and packed tightly together—barrels of oil, to judge from externals. I tried to move one, but plainly they were all jammed tightly together, and not one would budge.

I took the light axe, with which I had provided myself, using it alternately as wedge and lever, and at last felt the barrel move. I had certainly loosened it, and I pulled up the axe with the intention of trying to lift the barrel, when suddenly I was ingulfed in an awful convulsion, as of many earthquakes in a free fight!

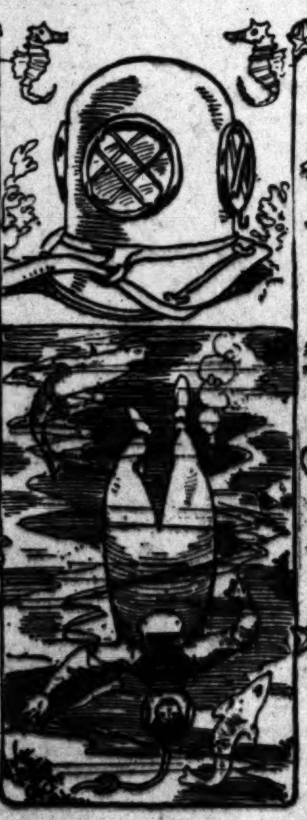
The world was a mob of bouncing oil barrels, which hit me everywhere, as I floundered in intricate somersaults, and finally found myself staggering at the bottom of the hold, and staving at the roof, whereunto all the barrels were sticking like baloons, absolutely blocking up the hatchway above me.

What was this? Some demoniac practical joke of fiends inhabiting this awful green sea about me? Were they grinning at me from the corners of the hold? Or, had some vast revolution in the ways of Nature taken place in a second, and the law of gravity been reversed? It was not at all warm down there, but I perspired violently!

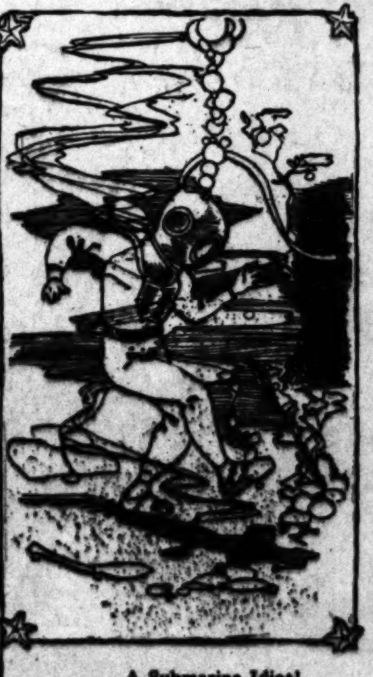
Then a notion flashed upon me. Those barrels must have been empty. Jammed together, they stayed below, of course, but once the jam was loosened, they would fly at once toward the surface.



A Mob of Bouncing Barrels



I Had Turned Upside Down



A Submarine Idiot!

Gloomy Thoughts of a Fool.

Then I thought more. I had been an ass. Of course, those barrels would do as they had done, even were they full of oil. Oil floats on water, as everybody should know. They might be either full or empty, it didn't matter a bit. I had forgotten that I was moving in a different element from the air I was used to, where barrels of oil did not rise up and fly into space without warning.

Obviously, I had made a fool of myself; but I had some comfort in the reflection that there was nobody about to see it. Then it came upon me suddenly that I would rather have some one there after all, for I was helpless. Those horrible barrels were having another jam in the hatchway now, and my retreat was cut off entirely.

Here I was, like a rat in a cage, boxed in on every side. My communication cord and my air pipe led up between the barrels to outer safety; but what of that? Why did I ever make a submarine idiot of myself, and go rummaging about, where I had no business, at the end of a rubber gas pipe? If I could have dated myself back an hour at that moment, I believe I should have changed my mind about going in for this amusement.

I made an effort, pulled myself together, and determined on heroic measures. My axe lay near, and, with a little groping, I found it. I would hew my way out of this difficulty through the side of the vessel. I turned on the inoffensive timbers at my side and hacked away viciously—with, I really fancy, a certain touch of that wild, stern, unholy joy that any one feels who is smashing somebody's else property with no prospect of having to pay for it. Every boy with a catapult, who lives near an empty house, will understand the feeling I mean—especially if the empty house has a large conservatory.

The timbers were certainly stout. The work was a bit curious to the senses—the axe feeling to work with a deal more dash and go than the arm that directed it. At any rate, the exercise was pretty hard. Any millionaire in want of an excellent, healthy and expensive exercise should try chopping his way through the sides of ships—it will do him a world of good, and will be as expensive as anybody could possibly desire. After a while I found that I had well started a plank, and, once through, chopping away round the hole was not so difficult. Still, when I had made a hole big enough to get through, I did not feel by any means as fresh as I had when first that horrible copper pot was screwed down over my head.

I squeezed through the hole, and at the first step I had ever made on the sea bottom, I came a complicated cropper over my communication cord. I got up, but as I stepped clear of the cord, a frightful conviction seized my mind that I was a bigger fool than I had ever given myself credit for being.

What in the world was the good of getting out through the side of the vessel, when that communication cord—my only means of signaling—and that airpipe—my only means of submarine life—led up through the boat itself and among those horrid oil barrels? Awful! Awful! I sat down helplessly on a broken rock and stared blankly through my windows. To weep would have been mere bravado, with so much salt water already about me.

IMPOSSIBLE TO SIGNAL

I tried to signal with the communication cord, but it was caught somewhere in that congregation of oil barrels. It seemed to me all up, except myself, who was all down, with no prospect of ever rising in the world again. Shadowy forms came and went in the water about me, and I speculated desperately in how long or how short a time these sea creatures would be having a dinner party, with me as the chief attraction. I wondered, casually, whether the india rubber would agree with them, and hoped that it would not. Then I wondered what they would take for the indigestion, and I thought they would probably take each other—it's their way, I believe.

I was wandering on in this way, when an inspiration seized me—a great inspiration. I should have called out "Eureka!" as did the venerable discoverer of that principle of specific gravity that had lately (literally) taken a rise out of me, if I had thought of it, but I didn't, which was fortunate, because it was rather a chestnut after all.

This was my notion—a desperate one, but still one with hope in it. I would shut off the air-escape valve on my helmet, so that the air being pumped in would inflate my india rubber dress like a bladder. Then I could cut my air-pipe and communication cord, stuffing the pipe and tying it as best I could, take off my leaden shoes, and rise to the surface triumphantly, like an air cushion, or, say, an oil barrel. Specific gravity having taken a rise—all the rise—out of me, I would proceed to take a rise out of specific gravity—a great, glorious and effective rise to the upper world. No office boy on promotion ever looked forward to his rise with more hope than I to mine. It was a desperate expedient certainly, but what else could I do?

I took off one leaden shoe and loosened the other, ready to kick away. I shut the escape valve. I cut the cord with my axe on the rock I had been sitting on, and then, when the air had blown out my dress to most corpulent proportions, I took the decisive stroke. I chopped through the air-pipe. I stuffed it as well as possible, and tied it in some sort of a knot—it was very stiff—in a great hurry, and then I kicked off the leaden shoe.

Everything Upside Down.

Never, never, never shall I forget the result of my forlorn dodge. I kicked off the shoe, as I have said, and, in an instant, the whole universe of waters turned upside down and swirled away beyond my head. In sober fact I had turned upside down—as I might have known I should.

Of course, the moment my leaden shoes went, down came my copper head-pot, being my heaviest part, and up went my feet. I had a pretty quick rise, certainly, but I prefer not to recall my feelings during the rush. I can quite understand now why a rise in the world makes some people giddy. All that I had before felt of amazement and horror, I now felt multiplied by fifty and squeezed into about two seconds, so that they felt like ten hours. Up through that awful water and those moving shadows I went, feeling that I was in reality held still like a man in a nightmare.

When at last I stopped, I felt that it was but a matter of moments, and the air would leak away through that cut tube, and I should go down again, still head under, for the last time, to die in that grisly combination of mackintosh and copper kettle; also I felt choking, stifling, when—something had me roughly by the ankle, and I was dragged, a wretched rag of misplaced ambition, into a boat. The appearance of my legs sticking out above water caused intense amusement among the boat's crew—a circumstance which probably ought to have gratified me, although it didn't.

GOT ENOUGH OF DIVING

I have little more to add, except that I shudder to this day whenever I see an acrobat standing on his head, because it is so remindful. But, if anybody is thinking of going in for diving, by way of placid enjoyment, I shall be delighted to treat with him for the sale and purchase of a most desirable diving dress in unsoiled condition, cut in the most fashionable style, with a fascinating copper helmet and commodious collar, and a neat label for the chest. The shoes will not be included in the bargain, having been inadvertently left in a damp place.

How Paper Was Invented

JUST think if some one had not invented paper! There could be no such thing as Polly Evans' Story Page for Boys and Girls!

Hundreds of years ago there was no paper! We couldn't get on without it in these days, could we? We are always wanting it—to write upon, to wrap things up in; and last, but not least, to print our books and newspapers on.

It was a clever little Japanese gentleman who first invented it. This little man was a merchant, and as he had ever so many parcels to send out from his shop every week, he found the silk in which he always wrapped them a rather expensive item.

He was always thinking and puzzling his brains to try and invent something that would be cheaper.

One day while he was walking in his garden he came across a wasps' nest, and he noticed how wonderfully it was made—how the clever wasps had used some kind of wood, softened it into a thin paste with their jaws, and, after carefully shaping it, had left it to dry.

"If wasps can do a thing like that," thought the little gentleman to himself, "why can't I? If I could get some kind of wood, form it into a pulp by means of river water, wouldn't the result be something like the fabric of the wasps' nest. I'll try, anyway, and see what I can do. It would save myself and other people quite a lot of money if my experiment succeeded."

The little Japanese gentleman tried—and succeeded, too, in putting into practice the lesson that the wasps had taught him.

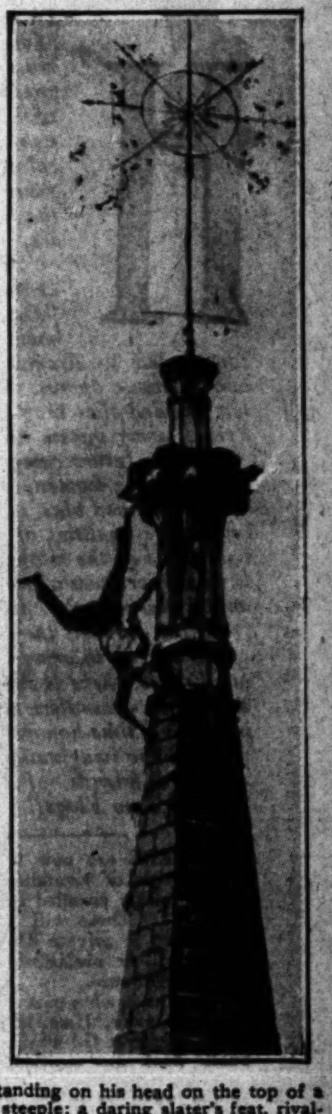
So that's the way paper was invented—years and years ago out in far Japan.

A Daring Feat

YOU have heard of intrepid steeple-climbers, of course. Never a year passes that the newspapers do not publish a tale about some steeple-climber or other having made a particularly dangerous ascent in safety.

But, have you ever heard of any one attempting the daring feat pictured here—standing ON ONE'S HEAD on top of a steeple?

This was done by an Englishman whose business is laying down slate roofs. He has become so accustomed to dizzy heights that he thinks nothing of such performances as this.



Standing on his head on the top of a steeple; a daring slater's feat, rivaling those of the professional gymnast.

Pinless Chinese.

A member of the Chinese Legation, clad in splendid pale hued silks, stood before the Casino at Newport.

"Pins," he said, "cause untidy habits. We have no pins in China. The right way to fasten things is with buttons and buttonholes or with loops and frogs. To fasten things with pins is to make use of an untidy makeshift. To employ pins is to become lazy and slovenly.

"We have no pins in China. Certain foreign manufacturers shipped millions of them to us in the past, but we sent them back. We had no use for them. We were too neat."

Do You Know This Game?

IT IS called a game of Milking Pails, and is very jolly.

A number of children form a line, holding each others' hands, and act as the sons and daughters. Another child or a grown person acts as the mother, standing in front of the line, while it sings to her, swinging hands.

The words are as follows:

Children—
Mary's gone a-milking,
Mother, mother,
Mary's gone a-milking,
Gentle, sweet mother o' mine.

Mother—
Take your pails and go after her,
Children, children;
Take your pails and go after her,
Gentle, sweet children o' mine.

Then the following verses, with the refrain:

Children—Buy me a new pair of milking pails,
Mother, mother, etc.
Mother—Where's the money to come from?
Children, children, etc.
Children—Sell my father's featherbed, etc.
Mother—What's your father to sleep on? etc.
Children—Put him in the trundle bed, etc.
Mother—What are the children to sleep on? etc.
Children—Put them in the pig-sty, etc.
Mother—What are the pigs to lie in? etc.
Children—Put them in the washing tubs, etc.
Mother—What am I to wash in? etc.
Children—Wash in your thimble, etc.
Mother—Thimble won't hold your father's shirt, etc.
Children—Wash in the river, etc.
Mother—Suppose the clothes should blow away? etc.
Children—Set a man to watch them, etc.
Mother—Suppose the man should go to sleep? etc.
Children—Take a boat and go after him, etc.
Mother—Suppose the boat should be upset? etc.
Children—Then that would be an end of you, etc.

When the children have sung the last verse the mother swoops down upon them to seize and beat whom she can catch.

The first one caught must act as mother in the next game.

The children should advance and retire in rhythm with the music as they sing their verses, and the mother should sway her body rhythmically as she sings.

Amusement.

Hospital Talk.

A SICK little girl who had spent many weeks in a hospital and unconsciously picked up many phrases commonly used by the nurses and doctors was telling her doctor about the death of her little brother, which had occurred just before her own illness befell her.

"It was all along of eatin' too much ice cream and ginger nuts," she narrated, with unction to the doctor. Then she smiled beautifully. "It was a beautiful death, doctor," she wound up piously.

His Praying Was Nothing!

A little boy was on his knees recently at night, and auntie, staying in the house, was present.

"Ah!" he answered, "ah! but, auntie, you should hear me gargle!"

True Story About Hugh

HUGH'S father was a switchman. He went to work early in the morning and stayed all day at the railway tracks. Hugh took him his lunch at noon.

There was a long bridge over the river which ran near the place where Hugh's father worked. At first Hugh, who is only 10 years old, was afraid to walk across the ties, and see the river running beneath, but after a while he thought it fun to see how quickly he could cross the bridge.

One day he had taken his father's lunch, and, after his father had eaten, Hugh started back home, swinging the big tin dinner pail.

What was that smoke that Hugh saw a little way ahead? It seemed to come from the railway bridge.

"Fire, father," cried Hugh, "the bridge is on fire."

"Run, Hugh," answered his father. "Get some water from the river! I cannot leave the switch to help you. Be as quick as you can."

Hugh slid down the railway embankment to the river. In a moment the cover was off and Hugh had a brimming pailful of water.

He climbed up the bank, holding the pail as carefully he could. But his shoes sank into the gravel, and the water slopped over the top of the pail. But Hugh reached the top of the bank, stepped quickly upon the bridge and poured the water upon the blaze. Then he slid down to the river to refill his pail.

He could hear the flames snap and crackle above him and he wondered how many times he must go back and forth before he could put them out. The pail had sometimes seemed large to Hugh when he brought his father's dinner, but now as he looked at the leaping flames it seemed very small. Again he clambered up the bank, poured as much water as he could carry on the flames and went back for more.

The sweat stood out on his forehead, his back ached and his shoes were filled with gravel, but he did not stop. He could see his father standing near the switch watching him.

"Take another pailful, Hugh," he heard him call from far down the track, "you will have the fire put out soon."

Hugh could not count the times that he dipped his pail in the running water and climbed the steep bank. But with each trip the red and yellow flames grew smaller and the black charred spot on the bridge grew larger.

At last the fire disappeared and the smoke drifted away. With his empty pail Hugh trudged back to his father at the switch.

"Well done, Hugh," said his father, "you have saved the bridge from burning. I am proud of you. Go home, now, and rest."

Hugh went home, proud and happy. He forgot his aching back and the gravel in his shoes.

Now when he walks the ties over the river he feels as if it was his bridge he is on, because he saved it from burning.—The Little Chronicle.

An Owl Stole a Puppy

A CONNECTICUT paper, mentioning the purchase of a fine Gordon puppy by a gentleman named Haas, added: "On Thursday he went away to work, leaving the puppy shut up in the barn. He did not get back till 8 o'clock in the evening, and while he was putting out his horses the puppy ran out in the barnyard.

"In a few minutes Haas heard it yelping piteously. Thinking that one of the cattle had either hooked it or stepped on it, he ran out just in time to see a huge horned owl flying off with the puppy in his claws. He ran after him hallooing, but the owl swooped through an orchard, and this was the last he has since seen of his Gordon puppy."

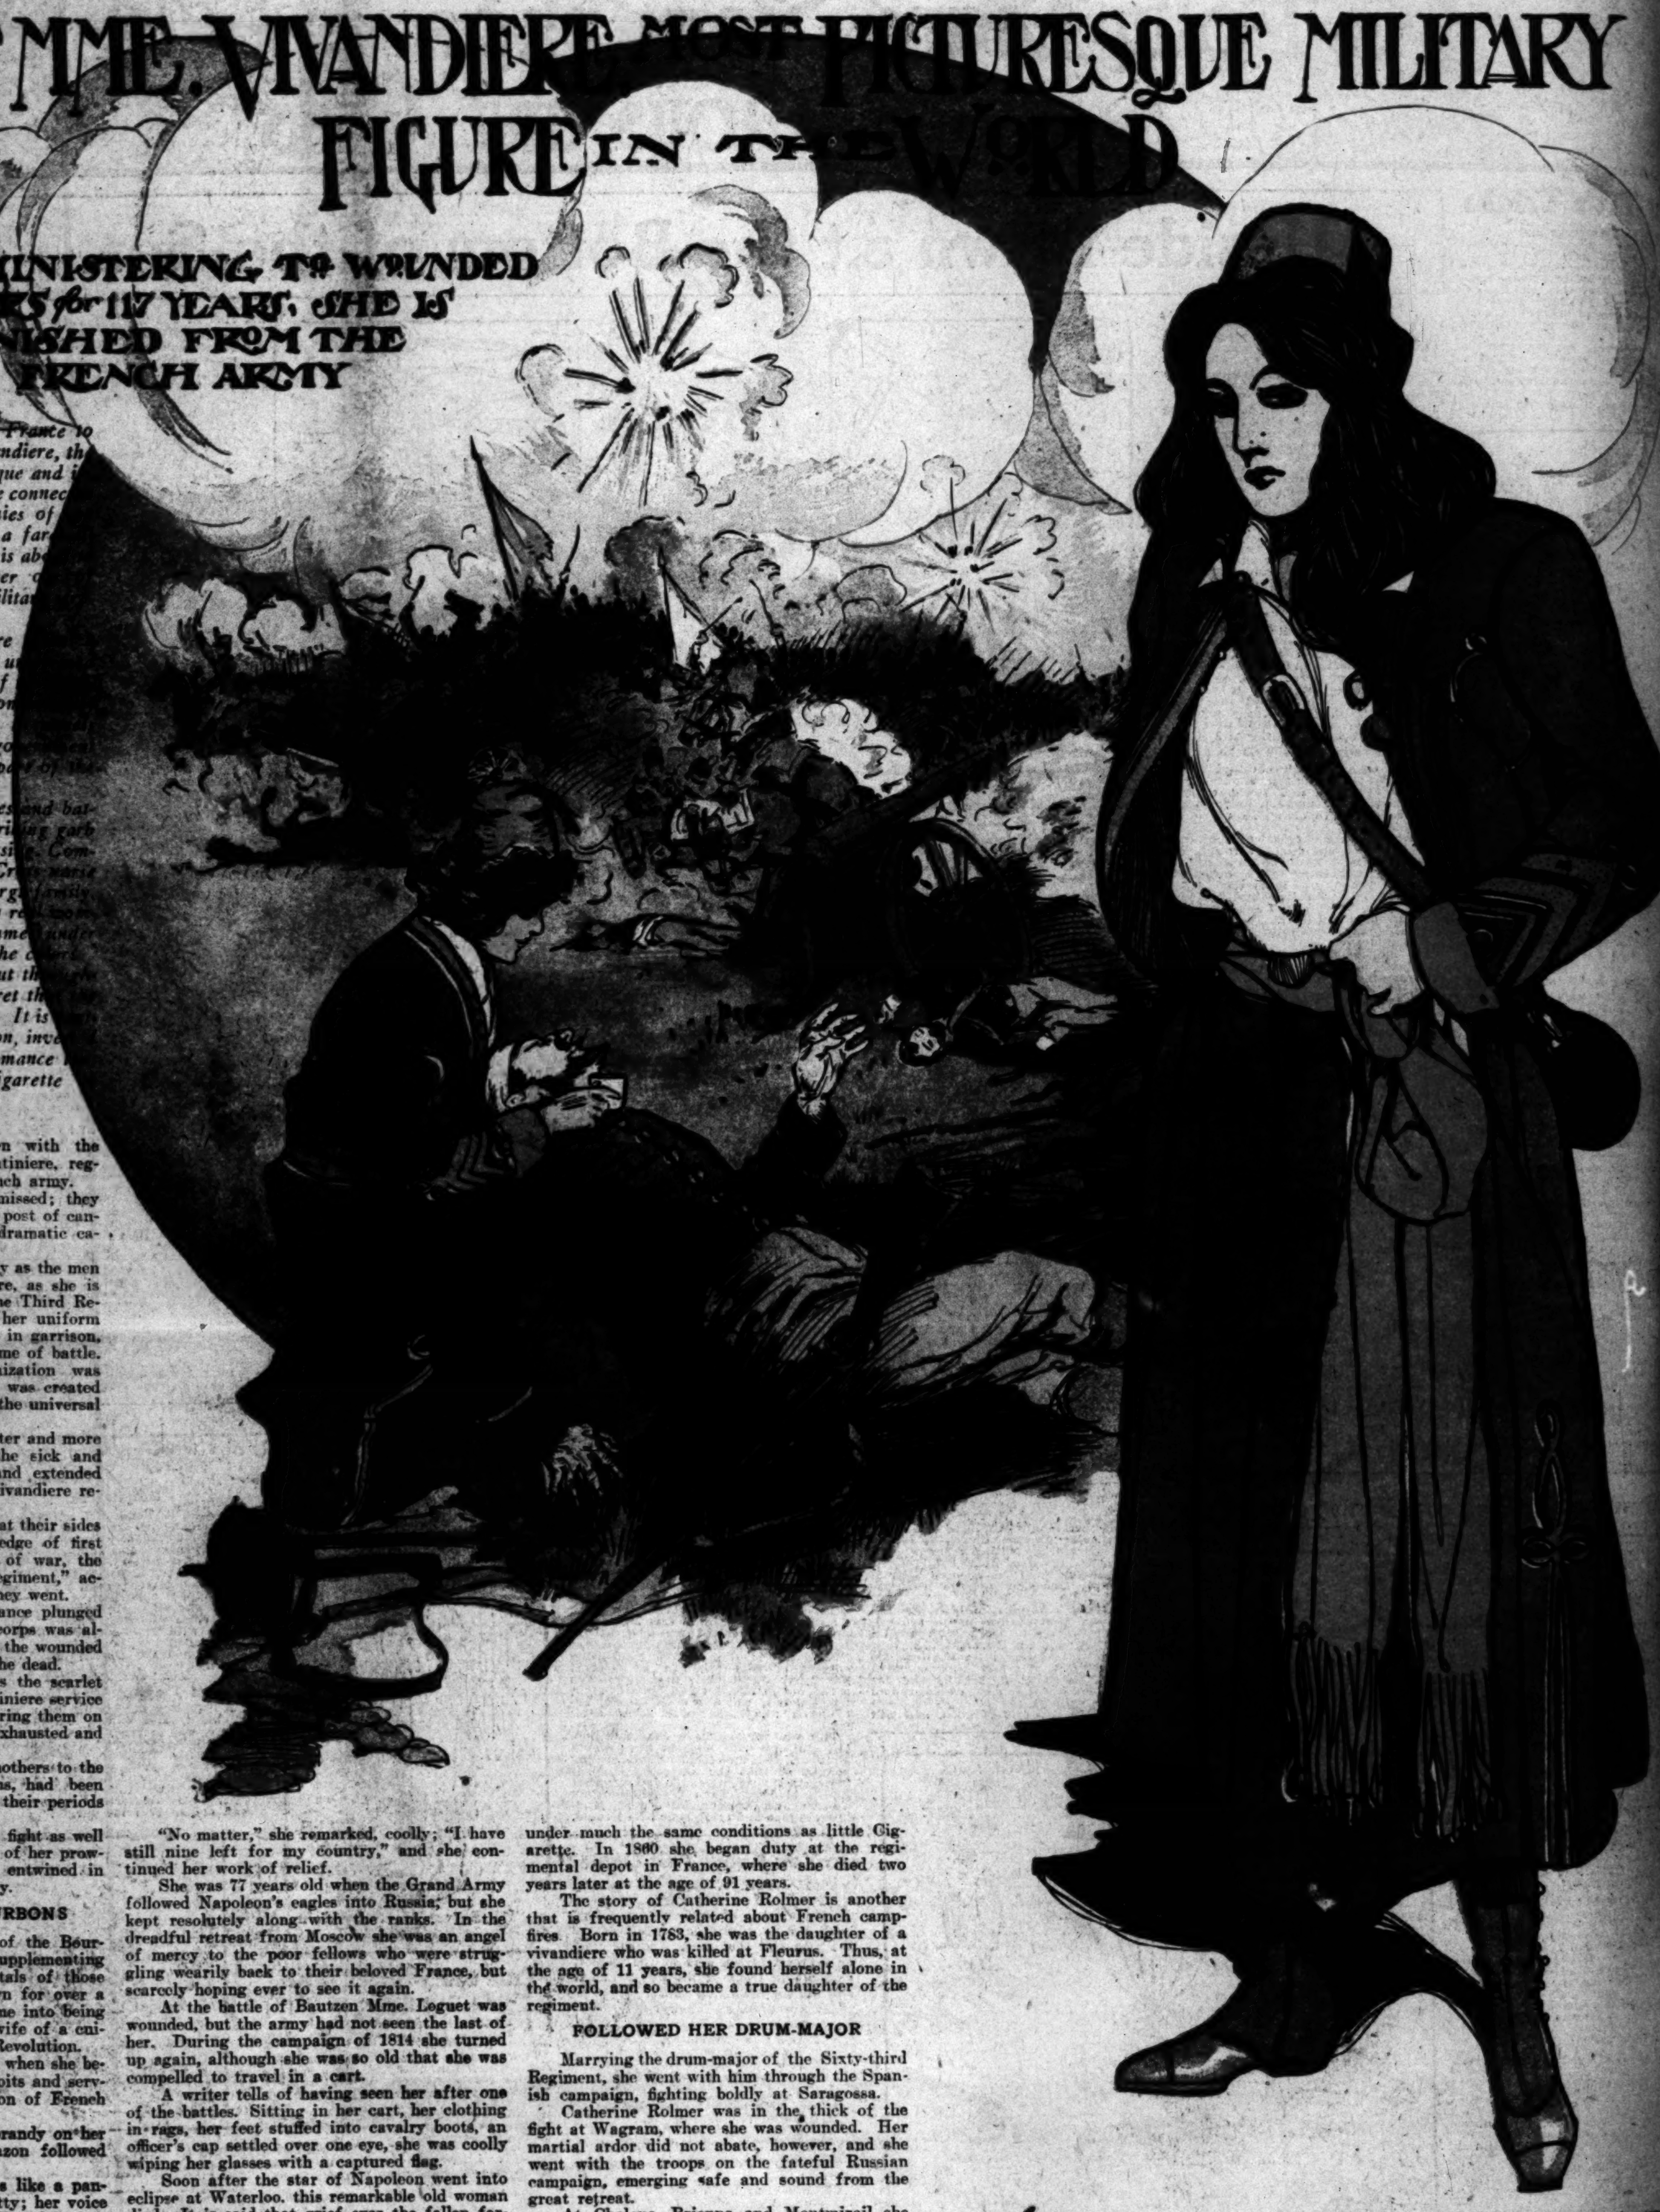
EXIT MME. VIVANDIERE, MOST PICTURESQUE MILITARY FIGURE IN THE WORLD

AFTER MINISTERING TO WOUNDED SOLDIERS for 117 YEARS, SHE IS BANISHED FROM THE FRENCH ARMY



HATS are off in France to Mme. la Vivandiere, th most picturesque and i teresting figure connec with the armies of world. It is a far salute, as shè is ab muster forever the French milita ice.

For more century these u "Daughters of ment" have ro contributed to French history, and to comic operas. But the go has decided that they shall be p French army system no longer.

From future camps, marches and battlefields these women, in their stri garb of scarlet-piped blue, will be missi Combining the qualities of a Red Cr with those of the mother of a larg la vivandiere was often the only r anly influence the soldiers came from the moment they joined the

Not only in army circles, but th out France, there is sincere regret th end of the vivandiere has come. It is ing with a time-honored tradition, inve with all the imagination and romance delighted friends of little Cigarette "Under Two Flags."

THERE are now 1073 women with the title of vivandiere, or cantiniere, regularly enrolled in the French army.

These will all be dismissed; they will return to private life, and the post of cantiniere will be abolished, after a dramatic career of 117 years.

Just as much a part of the army as the men who bore arms, Mme. la Vivandiere, as she is called wherever the standards of the Third Republic float, was entitled to wear her uniform and remain with the troops, either in garrison, on the march or in the stirring time of battle.

Before the Red Cross organization was formed the position of vivandiere was created to fill the need that is now met by the universal organization.

It is only because of vastly better and more modern methods of caring for the sick and wounded, through the improved and extended Red Cross service, that Mme. la Vivandiere retires to private life.

Carrying little kegs of brandy at their sides and possessing a sufficient knowledge of first aid to the injured, these women of war, the dearly loved "Daughter of the Regiment," accompanied the soldiers wherever they went.

When the dashing sons of France plunged into battle, the uniformed nurse corps was always at their heels, ministering to the wounded and looking after the identity of the dead.

Upon long and heavy marches the scarlet and blue garbed women of the cantiniere service were constantly with the men, cheering them on their way, succoring the sick and exhausted and looking after stragglers.

In camp they were veritable mothers to the men, many of whom, mere youths, had been dragged away from home to serve their periods of enlistment.

But Mme. la Vivandiere could fight as well as nurse; there are stirring stories of her prowess in battle that will always be entwined in the annals of French military glory.

WOMEN AIDED THE BOURBONS

Women followed the armies of the Bourbons and did excellent service in supplementing the work of the rude field hospitals of those times, but the cantiniere, as known for over a century, is regarded as having come into being in the person of Felicia Loguet, wife of a cuirassier of the time of the French Revolution.

Although she was 57 years old when she became the first vivandiere, her exploits and services continued to be the admiration of French soldiers for over two decades.

Strapping a small barrel of brandy on her hip, this eighteenth century Amazon followed her husband to the frontier.

It is said that she "had limbs like a panther; her arms were bare and knotty; her voice like that of a beast of prey, shrill and broken with cries of tumultuous rage."

Yet she possessed a womanly heart, and her kindness to the sick and wounded of the command made her an object of veneration with her husband's comrades.

But it was her deeds of daring upon the battlefield, the ferocity with which she plunged into conflict, with never a sign of fear or shrinking from the terrible scenes of carnage about her, that won her an enduring place in the affections of the men who valued martial glory above all.

At Toulon Mme. Loguet performed services that caused the entire army to ring with her praise. Like Molly Pitcher at Monmouth, she sprang to a cannon at which all the gunners had been shot down, and continued to load and fire it with her own hands.

While the battle of Hohenlinden was raging, she busied herself upon the field caring for the poor fellows who were writhing in agony from their wounds.

As she bent over two desperately wounded hussars to give them a drink of water, a rifle ball tore away a finger.

"No matter," she remarked, coolly; "I have still nine left for my country," and she continued her work of relief.

She was 77 years old when the Grand Army followed Napoleon's eagles into Russia; but she kept resolutely along with the ranks. In the dreadful retreat from Moscow she was an angel of mercy to the poor fellows who were struggling wearily back to their beloved France, but scarcely hoping ever to see it again.

At the battle of Bautzen Mme. Loguet was wounded, but the army had not seen the last of her. During the campaign of 1814 she turned up again, although she was so old that she was compelled to travel in a cart.

A writer tells of having seen her after one of the battles. Sitting in her cart, her clothing in rags, her feet stuffed into cavalry boots, an officer's cap settled over one eye, she was coolly wiping her glasses with a captured flag.

Soon after the star of Napoleon went into eclipse at Waterloo, this remarkable old woman died. It is said that grief over the fallen fortunes of her idol, rather than old age, was the principal cause of death.

One of the best known of all the French vivandieres was Therese Jourdan, wife of Sergeant Patrus, of the Sixtieth Half Brigade.

FOUGHT LIKE A MAN

She followed the onsweeping standards of Bonaparte through the Egyptian and Italian campaigns; at the battle of the Pyramids she fought in the front ranks, and as bravely as a man.

In one of the fights about Moscow she saw her husband killed, but she remained with the army and shared in the hardships and conflicts that attended the fearful retreat.

During the remaining campaigns of the Emperor in France Mme. Patrus was soldier, nurse, companion and mother to the battle-scarred veterans and new recruits alike. It is said that she fought as fiercely as any one at the battle of Waterloo.

This, however, did not end her military career. In 1823 she took part in the Spanish War; later she saw service in Algeria, perhaps under much the same conditions as little Cigarette. In 1860 she began duty at the regimental depot in France, where she died two years later at the age of 91 years.

The story of Catherine Rolmer is another that is frequently related about French campfires. Born in 1783, she was the daughter of a vivandiere who was killed at Fleurus. Thus, at the age of 11 years, she found herself alone in the world, and so became a true daughter of the regiment.

FOLLOWED HER DRUM-MAJOR

Marrying the drum-major of the Sixty-third Regiment, she went with him through the Spanish campaign, fighting boldly at Saragossa.

Catherine Rolmer was in the thick of the fight at Wagram, where she was wounded. Her martial ardor did not abate, however, and she went with the troops on the fateful Russian campaign, emerging safe and sound from the great retreat.

At Chalons, Brienne and Montmirail she fought with courage, and then devoted herself to the care of the wounded. When Napoleon was banished to the Island of Elba, Mme. Rolmer went with the troops composing the fallen Emperor's bodyguard; she returned with him to France, and was present at the battle of Waterloo.

This, however, did not end her career with the army. Later she went through the Spanish campaign, where she saw her husband stretched lifeless upon the field.

About a year later she married again, her second husband being a soldier also. With him, and accompanied by her sons, she went to Algeria. At L'Affaire de la Maison Carree she saw her husband and her sons killed, and was herself badly wounded.

It is to be regretted that this heroic soul, who had two husbands and four sons offered upon the altar of patriotism, fell upon evil days toward the end of her life, and died in actual want.

Seventeen campaigns in all were participated in by Marie Tete de Bois, who married a grenadier. She, too, saw her husband fall upon the gory field of Montmirail.

Later, while attempting to recover the body of her dead son under the walls of Paris, she was severely wounded.

Other brilliant chapters in the history of the vivandiere were written during the Second Empire. In the Franco-Prussian War Mme. Saurien, of the Third Zouaves, aroused the enthusiasm of the army by slaying a German officer who attempted her capture.

Badly wounded at Strasburg, she was out of service during the remainder of that short, sharp campaign, but when the troops went to Algeria the following year she was at her post, as brave as the bravest, as full of fight as any man in the ranks.

With his own hand Emperor Napoleon III decorated Mme. Cros, of the Foot Chasseurs of the Guard, upon the field of Solferino, where she had displayed remarkable heroism.

During the campaigns of 1861-62 the vivandieres of the First Zouaves, the Thirty-fourth Regiment and the Empress' Dragoons all received medals of honor for daring and conspicuous services.

It was, however, rather for the tender, womanly devotion with which they succored the wounded under fire than for amazon deeds upon the battlefield that the vivandieres of the Franco-Prussian conflict will be remembered.

While ever brave and unmindful of personal peril, not all the vivandieres were marked by the savage and unwomanly instincts that led them to fight in the ranks, to deal injury and death, as well as care for the victims of the enemy's guns.

There were many who emulated the daring deeds of Mme. Loguet, Mme. Patrus, Catherine Rolmer and others who wrote chapters of blood into the history of the vivandieres, but there were more who were peers of Florence Nightingale in their womanly devotion to the relief of suffering.

Romance of a softer kind has occasionally invaded the ranks of the vivandieres. More than one "Daughter of the Regiment" has captured the heart of a general, an Ambassador or a peer, and has exchanged her scarlet-faced uniform for the silks and satins of the fashionable salon.

fable? No fable at all. The story of Midas is written every day in the lives of a great many should rather say, in the lives of a good men, for after all the mere lust for gold is not means a universal weakness of the human race. in America we are all ambitious. We know no class or class privileges. The opportuni- of life are wide open to us all. The boy born in may aspire to be President. The farmer's son may hope one day to be a millionaire, a man of great achievements or a leader among other men.

But this ambition, even that of accumulating great wealth, is an entirely different thing from the Midas greed of gold. This is a canker which fortunately eats into the life of but very few of us. The ambition to possess great power, whether it come from wealth, political office, or social position, is not an ignoble thing. Indeed, ambition may animate a man's breast for the noblest of purposes. He may reach after this great power to use it not for himself, but for his country and his race. Certainly Theodore Roosevelt has not been in his past life a man without ambition. He has had exceedingly high and not only noble but ennobling ambitions at every point in his career. The man of affairs who grasps at the power of great riches in order that he may do great things has not an ignoble ambition. The men who have pierced the wilderness of the great West with great lines of railroads, who have opened up new districts for the hardy settler where homes are built and thrift and happiness prevail, have rendered a service of great importance to all the people of the country. His ambition has not necessarily been selfish, and whether or not, his achievements have not been for himself alone. He has not lived in the world for nothing. The railroad promoter who has driven these great lines into new districts has been as serviceable to his country and his race in his day and generation as even Edison or Bell or Morse.

The ignoble ambition is that which animates a man merely to gather together a golden hoard, not by great industrial achievements, but in a sense by preying upon the industries of other men. We all have our admiration for the great promoter who builds a trunk line of railroad into an unsettled district and opens up an opportunity for the settling of farms, the building of towns, the establishing of industries, and all those cognate achievements that go to make modern civilization in a material sense.

But the ignoble ambition is that of the man who makes $10,000,000 as complacently by wrecking a railroad as he would by promoting one. The Wall street operator who, in close touch with the daily events of all our complex industries, only uses his advantages to gather together unearned millions by the trickery of a card sharp, his is the soul whose ambition is the most ignoble.

Midas's fate is often illustrated in that which befalls men of this stamp. The great energetic promoter often has a soul far from being withered by its absorption in his occupations. There is something human, something manly, something exhilarating about the great promoter whose achievements are colossal in the industrial world. It does not sap all the better sentiments of his soul and leave him dried and hard and hungry of spirit and of imagination as Midas was of food to sustain his physical being. But the vampire whose business is sucking the life out of the industries which other men build up by their energy and daring achievements, the Wall street stock broker whose only object is to make a few million dollars and who would quite as soon make it by wrecking a great industry and bringing distress and misery on thousands as he would by the opposite course, he of all men on earth is the one to be most pitied.

These pirates in the industrial and financial world lose more than King Midas when he prayed that all he touched might turn to gold. It is not their bodies that starve, but their minds and souls and spirits. The family circle is no joy for them. The grandest opera ever sung would fall on dead ears if it fell on theirs. The brightest story that ever was told by human genius or the sweetest poem that ever was sung by human lips would be to these pirates among men as food was on the lips of King Midas.

Of all the poor men in the American world today, the poorest is the one who loves gold, not for what he can achieve with it, not for the good he can do with it, not for the progress he can work out of it, the prosperity that he can create for his fellow-men, or the material improvements in the life of the general public that he can leave through handling it, but simply whose love of gold is for the metal itself. One has heard of the shriveled minds and souls of the misers of olden time who went crazy by a dim candle as they counted over their hoard of shining metal. The modern pirate whose career on Wall street is a curse to the country, is as pitiable as the miser.

A CYCLE OF SONNETS.

III.—EVE.

Lone in the sunrise of primeval day,
More lovely than the virgin world around,
With fingers pressed on lips that made no sound,
She stood and gazed. Spread out before her lay
The future—and the clouds were rolled away.
The war of kings in empires still unfound,
The crash of cannon that should yet resound,
She heard, and saw the great world rock and sway.
Across the crimson sky above her head
There came a cry of children asking food;
A wail of woman for the nations' dead
Went upward to the stars. So pale she stood;
Then to some secret place in Eden fled,
And wept in presage of her motherhood.

PRACTICAL ETHICS.

BARBARITIES OF FASHION.

SURELY it would make a wildwood redskin shout a "whoop-la, whoop," to see the painful efforts of the feminine portion of fashionable "pale faces" to imitate his savage decorations. One can hardly look at the menacing erectness of various quills and the many brush-like adjuncts of the latest headgear without an uncanny feeling creeping into one's cogitations, that this highly "civilized" form of millinery adornment is really something of an insignia of an Indian on the war-path.

Especially is this true when the waving, sky-pointing plumage is worn by a woman of stalwart frame, with a military bearing and a general "present arms!" attitude. Still, this is not all of the militant millinery in vogue; the huge tuft (feather pompon) and aigrette on other heads are so irrepressibly ludicrous that while our sense of decorum assists us in successfully suppressing the rising laugh that threatens to burst from our lips, we, nevertheless, are unable to gather into an expression of gravity the smile of amusement that persists in playing about the mouth.

With the proud air of an advancing drum major, my lady tosses her feather-decked head coquettishly hither and thither, never missing a single opportunity to catch a passing glimpse of herself in street car or shop window, to smile approval at the radiant reflection of a beaming countenance underneath the newest of new hats. However, one really needs to be well versed in the milliner's art in order to discriminate between the ornaments and the thing ornamented. The so-called hat may be a mere mass of plume with a gleaming jewel and a bit of silk or lace, the latter lost by the fluffy softness of downy decoration. Or, horrible to relate, the "hat" often consists of a mephistophelian arrangement of rigid wings with their tips directed toward the four quarters of the globe.

Nor does this satisfy the taste of others still, who indeed will have nothing less than the complete form of the unhappy creature perched mournfully with glassy stare on what was intended to be a crown or brim of a woman's chief glory from the point of view of wardrobe—the millinery means for exquisitely enhancing her beauty, or hideously lessening her modicum of good looks.

Then hail to the chief of the savage tribe, who "sets the style" for fashion's foolish followers; with birds, beads and bracelets, the barbarous indispensables of modern dress!

Still nothing is to be so much deplored as the anti-Audubon custom of terrifying, slaying or scattering sensitive broods and sacrificing valuable song birds to allay the feverish thirst of fashion for novelty which must be obtained at any cost. Were any of the barbarous toilette accessories actually conducive to human comfort, such as affording a protecting principle of some sort—like the wool of the sheep or fur of the fox—there might be some excuse for adopting the otherwise undesirable means for the attainment of practical or utilitarian ends.

Is the end sought beauty? Then it remains to be determined what is beautiful and what is ugly. Moreover, if the baubles with which self-respecting women, with high claims to modern culture, adorn themselves are of esthetic value in their estimation, why should the same things be decried as hideous or barbarous when adorning the person of a rude savage?

Nevertheless, despite this prevalent flaunting of fine feathers, it is gratifying to note that on the whole there is a decided awakening of the humane conscience that is concerned about the preservation and protection of bird life. President Roosevelt, although himself a man of field and gun, is always on the side of right and reason, and it was his sympathetic interest in the cruelly hunted animals that brought into effect the new Federal bird law June 28, 1906, introduced by Congressman Lacy.

It is pleasing to know also that the wife of the Chief Executive is in hearty accord with her husband, which was evidenced by the reply to a letter of William Dutcher, who wrote in July last begging that Mrs. Roosevelt with the request of the Audubon societies for a few ing her disapproval of the wearing of aigrettes, saying: "Mrs. Roosevelt occupies the same place in this country that Queen Alexandra does in Great Britain, and if she will place her stamp of disapproval on the use of 'aigrettes,' it will do far more to abolish them as millinery ornaments than months of Audubon work. Will you not kindly place this matter before Mrs. Roosevelt with the request of the Audubon Societies for a few words from her pen to help the great humanitarian movement so nobly started by Britain's Queen?"

To which the President at once replied: "Permit me on behalf of Mrs. Roosevelt and myself to say how heartily we sympathize, not only with the work of Audubon societies generally, but particularly in the efforts to stop the sale and use of the so-called 'aigrettes'—the plumes of the white herons. If anything, Mrs. Roosevelt feels even more strongly than I do in the matter."

Would it not, with all due respect to the spirit of American independence and with full regard to the maintenance of individuality in dress, reflect credit upon us as champions of weak and defenseless creatures, as lovers of rare and beautiful specimens of the bird family, and as true Americans, who should stand for the broadest principles of humanitarianism—would it not reflect credit as showing the good sense and better taste of the American woman to eschew the ornamental plumage of a barbarous fashion and in so doing stand in line with one honored the world over as the leading lady of the land?

The British Northwest. By Frank G. Carpenter.

A TALK WITH WILLIAM WHYTE.

WHAT HE SAYS ABOUT CANADA AS UNCLE SAM'S COMPETITOR.

From Our Own Correspondent.

NEW YORK, October, 1906.—I recently had a talk with one of the biggest men of the British Northwest. This is William Whyte, the second vice-president of the Canadian Pacific railway, and manager of its many enterprises between Lake Superior and the Pacific Ocean. The Canadian Pacific is a developing company as well as a transportation company. It not only has the longest continuous line of roads under one management on this continent, but it owns millions of acres of lands, great tracts of timber and valuable mines, which it operates itself. It has under way by far the largest irrigation project in North America, and, in addition, has steamship lines on the Pacific which connect it with Japan, China, Alaska and Australia and the South Seas, and steamships on the Atlantic which connect it with England. The company operates its own sleeping cars and a line of hotels. It is now building in Winnipeg one of the biggest hotels in Canada at a cost of something like a million dollars, and it has great summer hotels in the Rockies and at the larger cities along its line. It has the chief telegraph company of Canada, and it operates its own express service.

The Canadian Pacific was the first railroad to open up this Northwest, and its position to a certain extent is a paternal one. It gives special rates of transportation for fine stock in order to help the farmer, and not long ago when the lumber lords were overcharging the settlers for building materials this company brought them to time by threatening to start sawmills of its own. It threatened to open coal mines when the coal dealers charged exorbitant rates, and it now proposes to send out education cars to teach the farmers grain raising.

New general offices of the Canadian Pacific at Winn

The head of all these movements is William Whyte, and he has been at their head for years. He has gone over the most of this great Northwest on horseback and in wagons, examining the soil and studying the resources with a view to increasing the traffic of his railroad system. It is he who has been largely instrumental in pushing out branch lines into the wheat belt, and as the head of the land grants which originally comprised as much land as the whole State of Ohio, he has laid out many of the towns and aided in populating the country.

As I talked with Mr. Whyte we looked over some maps of the New Canada and discussed its relations to the lands across the Pacific. Mr. Whyte has been several times to Japan and China, and he has traveled over Manchuria and Siberia examining into these countries as possible traffic producers. My first question was as to the effect of the Japanese-Russian war upon the trade of the Orient.

The Future of Japan.

Said Mr. Whyte: "I think that the war will greatly benefit the Japanese. Those people will exploit Manchuria and Korea ,and they will then turn their attention to China. The Japanese already have many investments in China. They do a large part of the carrying trade for the Celestial Empire, and they have lines of steamboats on the Japanese rivers. They are good organizers, and they realize that their future is to be industrial and commercial. They are taking the best elements of our civilization and making them their own. We are already trading largely with Japan, and I expect to see a steady increase in that trade. The Japanese are largely rice eaters, but we are now sending them wheat, and they will in time be wheat eaters and meat eaters. It is this future of their development which interests us, for we expect to supply a large part of those products."

"How about the tourist travel to Japan? Is it increasing?"

"Yes, we are having a heavy passenger traffic between Vancouver and Yokohama. We have a shorter route than any of the steamers from the United States, as we are higher up on the globe than you are. We are making a specialty of our passenger service, and we expect to put on faster steamers and better steamers even than those we now have. We shall carry some freight, but ours will be more of an express than a heavy-freight business. Our freight at present consists largely of silks, curios and tea rather than of the heavier articles."

"Is Canada sending much wheat to Japan?" I asked.

"Not as yet. We are having some shipments from the province of Alberta, which lies just east of the Rockies. That province is beginning to raise winter wheat. It produced something like two million bushels this year, and its possibilities are very great. The wheat is the turkey-red variety which comes from seed imported from Kansas. It is superior to the Kansas wheat and will make more pounds of bread to the barrel. With the growth of this product we shall probably have a large shipment to Japan, not only on account of the quality, but because of the low freight rate which we can make from there to the Pacific and to the Orient."

The Siberian Wheat Fields.

"Do you expect much competition from Siberia in your wheat raising?" I asked.

"Yes," replied the vice-president. "Siberia, outside of Canada, is about the only country which promises to form a new element in the wheat markets of the world. For a few years before the war Siberia was producing about 30,000,000 bushels of wheat. That was its average during the years between 1898 and 1902. In 1903 the crop amounted to 60,000,000 bushels, and it will probably exceed that, now that the war is closed. There is a vast tract of land adapted to wheat raising between the Ussuri and Amur rivers extending from the Pacific westward. That region is being settled by Russians. They come across from Europe on the Trans-Siberian Railroad or by sea from Odessa on emigrant steamers subsidized by the government. That region can produce millions of bushels of wheat. It will probably furnish a large part of the supply of Japan and China. There are also wheat lands in Manchuria and farther west in Siberia. Indeed, it is hard to estimate just what Northern Asia will do in the wheat markets of the future."

Canada Our Competitor.

The conversation here turned to Canada as our chief competitor in the foreign markets. Mr. Whyte said:

"Your people do not appreciate our possibilities. Your wheat lands are well defined. You had something like 48,000,000 acres under crop last year, and your average was about thirteen bushels per acre. Canada has 250,000,000 acres upon which wheat can be grown. It has five times as much wheat land as now cultivated in the United States, and even if you deduct 100,000,000 acres on the account of swamp, moskeg and other bad lands, we have three times as much good wheat land left as you have. As to our average crop, it is twenty bushels and upward per acre, instead of thirteen. When our land is all under cultivation we shall be able to supply the greater part of the European demand and aid in feeding you."

"Who are to be your chief competitors in the wheat market of the future?"

"The United States will compete for a time," said Mr. Whyte, "but your population is growing so rapidly that it will eventually consume all you raise and will probably have to call upon us. Among other competitors Russia and Siberia will probably lead, but Russia is still very poorly farmed. Argentina wil be a competitor and India and Australia likewi

New Railroads for Canada.

"Can Canada handle her big wheat crops whe come?"

"I think so," replied the railroad vice-pre "The march of railroad building is rapid in this the world. The wheat belt is being opened up by lines and branch roads will be constructed to mee demands of the farmer. We expect to build a gre of new track this year, and we shall double our wherever needed. We have been sending 500 grai a day from Winnipeg to Lake Superior, and by time next year we shall have a double track be those two points. There are other railroads being structed in addition to ours. The Canadian Nor is building a line through the wheat belt above us the Grand Trunk Pacific will have its route th the same region. Our explorers have surveyed country to ascertain where the most fertile o wheat lands are, and we shall have our own with branch lines. Railroad building in the belt will go steadily on, keeping as far as possi advance of the settlements. Such construction i a matter of experiment. We know that we shall the settlers just as soon as the lines are built. In they begin to buy before tracks are laid, and w finding that our branch roads pay from the very The farmers know that they will get the roads and are going ahead and taking out their homestead faith."

"I see, Mr. Whyte, that both the Dominion and provincial government of Canada are going into road building. Ontario is pushing a line northw ward Hudson Bay, and the Grand Trunk Pacific, Winnipeg to the Atlantic, is to be built by the F government. Will it pay the governments to ow operate their own railways?"

"I think not," was the reply. "Railroading is a fession, and it takes trained men to manage th ness successfully. Politicians cannot make go road operators. They are dependent upon the for their election and continuance in office, an must take their constituents into consideration i ing railroad appointments. Bad men may, the through political influence retain railroad position good men may lose their jobs. Indeed, I do no how a railroad can be successfully handled by ou ernment with our present political machinery. I not pay."

Lines to Hudson's Bay.

"What do you think of the plan of making the wheat route to Europe via Hudson Bay?"

"That matter is yet to be settled. We do not how far the bay or the straits which lead into be navigated. Hudson Bay is said to be free fr but it is uncertain how long the straits can b open. If a clear channel can be maintained th a good part of the year much of the wheat may Europe that way. The haul from the Saskatch Valley to Hudson Bay would be much shorter th Lake Superior, and Hudson Bay is much nearer pool. If the straits are to be open for only a shor the grain would have to be stored until the yea lowing its harvest, and that means elevator and heavy insurance. Indeed, there are many q entering into the problem. We ought to know what we can expect as to the navigation of the before building roads or projecting them."

"Is the Canadian Pacific Railroad bringing in Americans?" I asked.

"Yes, we are getting your people from all the United States. They are settling eve throughout the wheat belt. They are the most able immigrants that come to Canada. They stand our conditions and make more headway th

THE COW TREE.

If you spend the winter in the tropics, don't forget the cow tree up," said a globe trotter.

"The cow tree?"

"Yes; the palo de vaca, or cow tree. It gives milk."

"Real milk?"

"The very best. Listen to what Humboldt, in k on South America, says about it.

And the globe trotter took down a book and read:

"Among the many curious phenomena that I beh ring my journey, there was hardly any that stru y imagination so forcibly as the cow tree. It gro the rocky side of a mountain, securely insinuating ots in the stone. For many months not a show rain falls on its dry leaves; the branches seem d dead; but pierce the trunk, and a sweet and no hing milk flows. At sunrise this vegetable source ost abundant; then the blacks and native people hu om all parts provided with jugs to catch the mi hich turns thick and yellow on the surface."

The globe trotter, replacing the volume, went on:

"I've tasted the cow tree's milk and found it goo his milk has been analyzed. It contains, besides proper to milk, sugar casein and phosphates. ch is it that ordinary milk is as nothing beside it. ct, it is as rich as cream.

"The Canary Islands, Memerara, Ceylon, and su e places all have cow trees."

THE CROWN OF SUCCESS.

Gobsa Golde looked narrowly at the aspirant for h ughter's hand.

"After all," he said, "I have no real proof that y e the successful man you claim."

"But," cried the other, eagerly, "you forget that ve been muckraked thrice in the Trash magazine."

Gobsa Golde's manner suddenly changed.

"My boy," he said, "forgive me. She is yours."

"What size farms do they purchase?" I asked.

"The most of them begin with sections or half sections. A farmer ought to have about 320 acres to operate economically. He should let his land rest at least one year out of three, and this gives him about 200 acres to put in wheat or other crops. So far we have but little bonanza farming in the Northwest. Several [illegible] companies have bought large tracts, a few having purchased millions of acres. Such land companies buy to colonize and sell again. The most of them have disposed of their lands.

Our Canadian Farming.

"What kind of farmers have you here in Canada?"

"We have all kinds—some wise and some otherwise. At present much of the land is poorly cultivated. Right [illegible] Winnipeg are farms which do not yield more than twelve bushels of wheat to the acre. They are so filled with weeds that the wheat grown is almost [illegible]. Our country roads are twice as wide as they should be, and the waste lands along their sides are [illegible] for weeds and trash. Some of our farmers are not careful in their seed selection; they will sell the best wheat and save the poorest to sow for the next crop. Indeed, I have known men who have sold their good wheat and kept that which has been [illegible] for seed."

"We have much to learn about farming," continued Mr. Whyte, "and we are making new discoveries every day. The latest is that to which I have already referred as to the winter wheat for the dry lands. We had no idea that we could produce grain in the semi-arid belt. One of the settlers tried it and succeeded. Then the Canadian Pacific railway brought two carloads of turkey-red seed to Alberta and gave them to the farmers at cost. This was planted and it was largely from that seed that we got the 2,000,000-bushel crop of last year. We are doing all we can to improve the farming conditions; for the greater the crops the greater our traffic. We have now what I might call education trains, which we have equipped with different kinds of seed wheat. We expect to send them from station to station and have lecturers who will explain the different seeds and show the farmers how to make the most of their lands. I understand a similar educational movement has been going on in the United States."

"Tell me something about the Canadian West, Mr. Whyte. Is it dependent entirely upon wheat for its success?"

"By no means," replied the railroad vice-president. "A large part of Alberta and Saskatchewan is adapted to mixed farming. There is a great dairy county right about Edmonton which is now producing butter for British Columbia and the western markets. That region is adapted to mixed farming, and a great many of the Pennsylvania and Ohio people are settled there. They have big barns, just as in the United States. The region produces the finest oats. I know farmers who get from 80 to 100 bushels per acre and the oats weigh forty pounds to the bushel. It grows timothy as tall as a man and also barley and other grains. It is as mild near the Rockies as farther east, and in some respects it is more desirable for settlement than the [illegible] belt proper.

"British Columbia promises to develop somewhat like [illegible] of Washington and Oregon. It has many [illegible] which can be irrigated and which will produce the finest of apples, pears, peaches and prunes. [illegible] is just opening up and we expect it to [illegible] increase in population in the near future."

THE COW TREE.

"If you spend the winter in the tropics, don't forget to look the cow tree up," said a globe trotter.

"The cow tree?"

"Yes, the palo de vaca, or cow tree. It gives milk."

"Good milk?"

"The very best. Listen to what Humboldt, in his Travels in South America, says about it."

And the globe trotter took down a book and read:

"Among the many curious phenomena that I beheld during my journey, there was hardly any that struck my imagination so forcibly as the cow tree. It grows on the rocky side of a mountain, securely insinuating its roots in the stone. For many months not a shower ever falls on its dry leaves; the branches seem dry and dead; but pierce the trunk, and a sweet and nourishing milk flows. At sunrise this vegetable source is most abundant; then the blacks and native people hurry from all parts provided with jugs to catch the milk, which turns thick and yellow on the surface."

The globe trotter, replacing the volume, went on:

"I've tasted the cow tree's milk and found it good. The milk has been analyzed. It contains, besides the [illegible] proper to milk, sugar casein and phosphates. So rich is it that ordinary milk is as nothing beside it. In fact it is as rich as cream.

"The Canary Islands, Memerara, Ceylon, and such places all have cow trees."

THE CROWN OF SUCCESS.

[illegible] Golde looked narrowly at the aspirant for his daughter's hand.

"After all," he said, "I have no real proof that you are the successful man you claim."

"Why," cried the other, eagerly, "you forget that I have been muckraked thrice in the Trash magazine."

[illegible] Golde's manner suddenly changed.

"My boy," he said, "forgive me. She is yours."

The Widows' Wordalogue.

SHE DISCUSSES MAN'S IDEAL AND WOMAN'S DEAL.

By a Special Contributor.

"WHO is the ideal woman?" asked the widow pensively, laying down her embroidery hoop and clasping her hands behind her head.

The bachelor blew a smoke ring reflectively and squinted through it at the widow.

"You've got powder on your nose!" he remarked disapprovingly.

The widow snatched up a diaphanous lace handkerchief and began rubbing her nose.

"Have I got too much on?" she asked anxiously.

"Any," replied the bachelor, with dignified scorn, "is too much—in a man's eyes."

The widow laughed and stopped rubbing her nose.

"But it isn't in his eyes," she protested, "if it is put on so artistically that he doesn't see it. Getting it on straight is such an art!" and the widow sighed.

"Black art, you mean," exclaimed the bachelor disgustedly. "A made-up woman is like paste jewelry and imitation bric-a-brac. She looks cheap and unsubstantial, and as though she wouldn't wear well. Even granting that you aren't half good enough for us——"

"What!"

"And that you don't come up to our standards——"

The widow dropped her embroidery hoop and sat up with blazing eyes.

"You flatter yourself, Mr. Travers!"

"No, I don't!" retorted the bachelor. "It's you who flatter us, when you think it necessary to plaster over your defects and put additions on your figures and rouge on your cheeks and frills on your manners. As a matter of fact," he added decisively, "a man's ideal is a natural woman with a natural complexion and natural hair and natural ways and natural self-respect."

The widow sighed and took up her embroidery hoop again.

"I used to think so, too," she said sadly.

The bachelor lifted his eyebrows inquiringly.

"Before I discovered," she explained, "that it was just as often a woman with butter-colored hair and a tailor-made figure and a 'past' and a manufactured 'bloom of health.' The truth is," she concluded, stabbing her needle very carefully into the center of an unhealthy-looking green silk rose, "that no two men admire the same woman, and no one man admires the same thing in two women. Now, there's Miss Gunning, who wears a sweater and says 'damn' and is perfectly natural and self-respecting and——"

"No man gets ecstatic over a bad imitation of himself!" expostulated the bachelor.

"Then why," said the widow, laying down her needle and fixing the bachelor with a glittering eye, "do you spend so much time on the golf links, and out driving and hunting and walking with her?"

"Because," explained the bachelor meekly, "she sometimes hits the ball, and she can sit in her saddle without being tied there, and she doesn't grab the reins nor call a 'hoof' a 'paw.' But," he added fervently, "I'd take my hat and run if she asked me to spend my life with her."

"Oh, well," the widow tossed her head independently. "She won't. Miss Gunning can take care of herself."

"That's just it!" pursued the bachelor. "The very fact that she can take care of herself and get across gutters alone and pick up things for herself and handle her own horse and beat me at golf and tennis, takes away that gratifying sense of protection——"

"And superiority," interposed the widow softly.

"That a man likes to feel toward a woman," concluded the bachelor, ignoring her. "Muscle and biceps and a 32-inch waist," he added, "are 'refreshing,' but in time they get on your nerves. It may not be immoral for a dear little thing to say 'damn,' but it affects a man just as it would to hear a canary bird squawking like a parrot. When a chap is going for a walk cross country he may pick out the girl with the stride and the strong back, who can leap a fence and help herself over puddles, to accompany him, but when he is ready for a walk to the altar he naturally prefers somebody who understands the art of leaning gently on the masculine arm and who hasn't any rough edges or——"

"Sharp points of view," suggested the widow.

"Or opinions on the equality of the sexes," added the bachelor.

"Or on politics."

"Or on the higher life."

"Or on anything but the latest way to curl her hair and make over a hat," finished the widow. "Isn't it funny," she added thoughtfully twisting a French knot into the center of the sickly green rose, "how many men idealize a fool?"

The bachelor started.

"I—I beg your pardon," he stammered.

"All a woman has got to know in order to wear a halo," went on the widow, calmly fastening the French knot with a jerk of her needle, "is how to keep it on straight. All a man demands of her is the negative virtues and the knowledge of how to do things; how not to think, how not to argue, how not to nag, how not to theorize, how not to be athletic, how not to spend money, how not to take care of herself, how not——"

"You've got your ideas into a French knot!" broke in the bachelor desperately. "You're all tangled up in the thread of your argument. It isn't how not to do things, but how to do them that is important to a woman. It isn't what she does, but how she does it that matters. She may commit a highway murder or low-down burglary; and if she does it in a ruffled skirt and a picture hat any man will forgive her. Her morals may be as crooked and dark as a lane at midnight; but if her manners are smooth and gentle and guileless and tender she can deceive the cleverest man alive into believing her a nun. It isn't what she says, but how she says it that counts. There are some women who could read your death warrant or repeat the multiplication table in such a confiding voice and with such a tender glance that you would want to take them in your arms and thank them for it. It isn't what a woman wears, but how she wears it; it's not her beauty nor her talents nor her frocks that make her fascinating, but her ways, the little earmarks of femininity that God put on every creature born to wear petticoats; and if she's got those she may be a Lucretia Borgia or a Bloody Mary at heart; she may be brown or yellow or pale green; she may be old or young, big or little, stupid or clever, and still wear a beautiful halo. The trouble," he added, flicking the end of his cigar thoughtfully, "is not with man's ideal, but with woman's deal. She holds all the cards, but she plays them badly. When a two-spot of flattery would win her point, she deals a chap the queen of arguments; when the five of smiles would take the trick for her, she plays the deuce of a pout. When the ace of sympathy or the ten of tact would put the whole game of love into her hands, she thinks it is time to be funny and flings a man the joker."

The widow laid her work on the table beside her, folded her hands in her lap and smiled at the bachelor sweetly.

"That's just what I said," she remarked gently.

"What you said!"

The widow nodded and rubbed her nose reminiscently with the end of her handkerchief.

"Yes," she replied, "it isn't putting powder on your nose or rouge on your cheeks or perfume on your petticoats or a broad 'A' on your accent that shocks a man, but putting them on inartistically. It isn't the things you do, but the thing you overdo that offend masculine taste. It's the 'overdone' woman that a man hates—the woman who is overdressed or overly made-up, or overly cordial, or overly flattering or overly clever, or overly good, or overly anything. He doesn't want to see how the wheels go around at the toilet table or in a woman's head or her heart; and it's the subtle, illusive little thing that he doesn't notice until he steps on her and finds her looking up adoringly at him under his nose that he idealizes."

"And marries," added the bachelor conclusively.

"And then forgets," sighed the widow, "while he goes off to amuse himself with the obvious person with peroxide hair and a straight-front figure. I don't know," she added tentatively, "that it's much fun being an ideal woman."

"Who said you were?" demanded the bachelor suddenly.

The widow started and turned pink to her chin.

"Oh—nobody—that is, several—people, Mr. Travers."

"Had you refused them?" asked the bachelor thoughtfully.

The widow blushed a deeper pink and bent over her pale green rose so low that the bechelor could not see her eyes.

"Why—that is—I don't see what that has to do with it."

"It has everything to do with it," replied the bachelor positively.

"And you haven't told me yet," continued the widow, suddenly changing the subject, "whom you consider the ideal woman."

"Don't you know?" asked the bachelor insinuatingly.

The widow shook her head without lifting her eyes.

"Well, then, she is—but so many of them have told you."

"You haven't," persisted the widow.

The bachelor sighed and rose to go.

"The ideal woman," he said, as he slipped on his gloves, "is—the woman you can't get. Is that the firelight playing on your pompadour?" he added, looking down upon the widow through half-closed eyes. "Do you know—for a moment—I thought it was a halo."

The City Beautiful in Europe. By Dexter Marshall.

LA BELLE PARIS.

FIRST PLACE FOR IT DISPUTED BY VIENNA AND BUDAPEST.

From a Special Correspondent.

PARIS, Oct. 30.— Seated at the eastern base of the Tyrolean Alps, just where the Danube escapes impetuously from between tortuous rock walls to wind peacefully across the mountain circled plain of Austria, Vienna, capital and home of the most exclusive aristocracy in existence, now lays claim to be held the most beautiful city in the world.

But Vienna's claim is disputed vigorously, first by Paris and then by Budapest, further down the Danube and chief city of Austria's twin State, Hungary. For many years the claim of Paris as the most beautiful city was almost universally accepted and the French capital would probably get a majority of beauty votes to this day. Certainly each of the three cities named is warranted in being proud of its looks, but to say that any one of them is the most beautiful in the world would be to chance an endless discussion.

Munich, in Bavaria, which is outstripping Paris as an art center; Dresden, where they make the china; Brussels, the royal city of Leopold, the eccentric Belgian monarch; each of these has many famous beauty spots, which in their way excel all others.

The six cities named are certainly more often mentioned when municipal comeliness is under discussion than any other. But Florence must not be left out of consideration altogether, nor must Antwerp, remarkable combination of the old and the new, with its great cathedral tucked in between business streets and facing a pitifully mean little triangular market "square," nor Venice, city of canals and bridges, though it is more picturesque than beautiful.

Antwerp, by the way, boasts one of the most ambitious fountains to be found anywhere, but it is hard to find, either with or without a guide-book. It is in bronze and represents the hero who delivered the city from the fabled giant that tyrannized over it in folklore days, standing upon the monster's prostrate, decapitated corpse and in the act of throwing h hand into the sea. From the severed hand and th some, headless neck streams the water of the in lieu of blood, while the whole is as horrible ception as its execution is strong and realistic.

Rome, the Holy City, has many beauties, while C hagen, the butter metropolis, where the two d of the late King of Denmark, Alexandra of E and Russia's Dowager Empress, are building for selves a summer house of rare beauty, is surely e to some consideration. Copenhageners, by the w especially and justly proud of their new City H is a really beautiful and impressive structure, b not of itself sufficient to give the city special disti

The gorgeous in its white marble elaboration, and might be beautiful, considered by itself, but it surely doesn't harmonize, as it might and without being strictly uniform, with the nearby buildings, either.

BEAUTIFUL BUSINESS STRUCTURES.

To offset the monumental appearance of their many miles of uniform and courtyard streets, the city builders in Europe have a habit of designing even their warehouses with an eye to the beautiful, both as a whole and in detail.

This is not universal, of course, but it may fairly be termed general. In Hamburg, for instance, you will see long rows of warehouses, both in and outside the free port, which, if built along the Brooklyn water front or in St. Louis or Buffalo or Chicago, would be ornamented about as much as if they were gigantic wooden packing cases.

In Hamburg they have been built with almost as much of an effort to please the eye as to hold the merchandise from the ends of the earth which they shelter. The row of buildings in that German city which is shown in one of the pictures accompanying this article is made up of coffee warehouses.

The truth is that the European eye looks for beauty in the most utilitarian things.

The effort to obtain beauty in design is by no means confined to the architects. It would be hard, for instance, to find a bridge in any European city without a distinctive beauty of its own. The elevated railroad in Berlin is by no means such an ugly, iron trestle work as are the structures in New York, Chicago and Boston, over which trains run in the air, but a light elegant structure of ornamented uprights and springing arches.

Nor is it allowed to incumber the streets; in Berlin proper it runs along the bank of one of the canals into which the river Spree is divided as is passes through the city. In the suburb of Charlottenburg, with 200,000 population and continuous with the capital, but not annexed, there being no canal, the line was ordered by the Emperor to be continued under ground, rather than to disfigure the streets.

Designs for beauty as well as utility are almost universal. There are no plain, unsightly trolley poles in the cities, but instead gracefully-made supports, which, if anything, add to the sightliness of the streets. It is so with telegraph and telephone supports also, when, as rarely, the wires are not put under ground. In many cases when the streets are narrow the overhead trolley wires are supported by cross wires anchored to the walls of the houses on either side. Wooden houses being nonexistent, this is practicable in Europe, whereas it would not be in the United States.

In nearly every European city there is much more sculptural ornamentation on the fronts of buildings than in the United States. Some of the finest examples of this sort of municipal beautification are seen on the Rathhaus or City Hall in Munich. The effect of this structure as a whole is marred somewhat by the fact that there is not sufficient free space about it for the observer to get a comprehensive view from any one point.

In this respect, however, the designers of the Munich Rathhaus were lesser sinners than the designers of some of the new skyscrapers in half a dozen American cities, who have placed elaborate carvings in marble and other stone hundreds of feet above the street level, where they cannot be seen at all.

Every city of any size in Europe has much more imposing, more beautiful public buildings than any American city, and the difference never can be equalized, for the palaces of royalty, past and present, are almost invariably the largest, handsomest structures in every city. A noteworthy exception is the Kaiser Wilhelm's palace in Berlin.

Many tourists will tell you that although the Berliners, under the Kaiser's direction, are trying hard to make the imperial German city a beautiful one, they are not succeeding very well. Others think the desired end is being rapidly attained, and experienced sightseers are not wanting who say Berlin is even now one of the world's most beautiful capitals.

It may be that the efforts of the Kaiser and the local authorities, who bend to his will in practically everything, are a trifle too geometrical. It may be that some of the Berlin statuary is more impressive by reason of its size and pomp than by reason of its grace. It is certain that many of the streets in Berlin are unforgiveably dull and uninteresting.

There is a reason for Berlin's straight streets, more of which are to be seen there than in any city outside of the United States, and which suggest the geometrical comparison. Crooked streets are under the ban in Berlin because projectiles from big guns cannot be made to go around corners nor to follow curves, and it has always been the imperial German policy to have the streets of the capital so laid out that artillery could sweep them in case of revolution.

And while the Kaiser's government is anxious for a beautiful capital, it is also anxious to keep constant reminders of Prussian and German military glory before the eyes of Berliners. This is the reason for the numerous statues of the first Kaiser Wilhelm, of Bismarck and of Moltke, the three men who destroyed the third empire in France and made Prussia so great that all the German states save Austria were glad to get under Prussia's wing and join the confederation known as the German empire.

The criticisms of the straight streets and the uncouth statues as blots upon the city's beauty are well founded. But the famous thoroughfare Unter den Linden, though disappointing at first, is one of two or three most impressive streets in the world. Its two rows of rather ragged-looking trees; its bridle path, on which few equestrians are to be seen, however; its perspective of palaces, embassies, theaters, hotels, retail shops and all the rest; its easy-going crowds, well dressed in the main; its automobiles whizzing over asphalt that is unvexed by street car rails and over which the huge gasoline auto buses are forbidden to run, all combine to form a general whole that is not elsewhere paralleled.

The great playground known as the Thier Garten, beginning to the west and at the head of Unter den Linden, is a park of which any city might be proud. It is much bigger than New York's Central Park or than any American park so near the center of municipal life as it is. And it is different.

Berlin being as flat as Chicago, the Thier Garten is not diversified by hill and dale. Berlin being without stony foundations of any sort, the Thier Garten has few "rockeries," and they are so obviously piled up by the hands of men that they detract from rather than add to the park's beauty.

In place of the comeliness given by irregularities of surface, the Thier Garten possesses the surpassing beauty of trees, planted in the greatest profusion. Trees of every variety that will grow in Berlin's sandy ground, enriched through constant irrigation by the canalized waters of the Spree and by the lavish enrichment of the soil. Trees set so close together that at first their shade seems too deep and the great park almost gloomy. Trees which are reflected in innumerable stretches of quiet water. Trees under which the thick sward is shaven to a velvety smoothness in places, while in others it grows ragged and unmolested. Trees whose deep verdure is set off by gleaming arched marble bridges and sculptured Venuses, lions and warriors. Old trees, young trees, trees by the hundreds of thousands, apparently; a veritable forest in the midst of a great capital, accessible to the millions and used by them freely.

Here in Paris the Bois de Boulogne has a great profusion of trees also, but they are not so beautiful as those in the Thier Garten. Great old trees, by the way, are surprisingly rare in European cities, when you remember the age of the cities.

Berlin is now said to be the cleanest city in Europe, and apparently justifies the saying. It is cleaner than Paris or London or Vienna or Budapest. The street sweepers are constantly at work and no litter of any sort, not even the litter made by the builders, is allowed to remain long undisturbed.

There is more of this latter in Berlin, by the way, than in most continental cities, for Berlin is the youngest capital of Europe. At the close of the Franco-Prussian war it was only the skeleton of its modern self, small, dirty and insignificant.

It is still growing about as rapidly in percentages as London or New York or Chicago, and new structures are constantly being erected. Its building regulations are not excelled in severity by those of any other city. A police permit is necessary to change the size, shape or location of a window even; while as for skyscrapers, or the deviation of even one story from the uniform height of the buildings on any street, they would not be tolerated for a moment. Difficult as the achievement seems even now, after more than thirty years of the greatest effort imaginable, Berlin may some day be made one of Europe's beautiful cities.

Its improvement in beauty and cleanliness has been as rapid as that of the chief American cities, which only those comprehend who have closely watched them during the last thirty years. Berlin is the only capital in Europe, or the world perhaps, that has no slums.

CONSERVING THE BEAUTY OF CITIES.

Naturally, because of its youth, Berlin is more comparable to American cities than either Paris or Vienna, between which, as most folk agree, the palm for greatest beauty lies. For the same reason Berlin, like all American cities, seems an unfinished one as compared with most cities on this continent.

Vienna owes some of its beauty to its age, but more to its situation. In the last forty years Vienna's beauty has been vastly increased. The famous curving Ringtrasse, which some say is the most beautiful thoroughfare in the world, was begun in 1865, while many of its most famous buildings and no end of the city's other improvements have been made since then.

The river and sewer improvements, which have contributed immensely to the beauty of the city both directly and indirectly and about which all Viennese delight to talk, are also comparatively new. Before it reaches Vienna, the Danube, in its course through the Tyrol, is a sort of gigantic mountain torrent, subject to heavy overflows in the spring from the melting of the snows, and at most times of the year from sudden and terrific mountain storms.

Flowing in a curving course through the city as it did, it devastated the low-lying sections with tolerable regularity for centuries until a few years ago, when at great expense the authorities made a new and straight channel for the stream, north of the main part of the city, and of sufficient depth and width to accommodate the flow even at its highest flood. At the same time a part of the stream is allowed to pass through the old channel, which otherwise would be a great, dry, unsightly ditch.

The sewerage system of the city was perfected in due time, and within the last few years a plan has been adopted which obviates the drainage of the sewage into the river. Its waters are now entirely unpolluted, both in the city and below it, as well as in the upper reaches. In this Vienna beats all the big cities in the world.

The management of all the improvements is under the control of the City Council, which has its corps of architects, engineers, etc., who order all improvements with an eye to increasing the city's beauty, at every step. Besides, there is a society whose object is the conservation of municipal beauty and the preservation of historical sites and buildings. Its membership includes architects, artists of the highest grade, scholars, professional men, and others who are consulted whenever streets are to be cut through, old sections or new parts opened.

Its advice is not always followed, the Council being supreme, but it carries great weight invariably, and the city as it stands, as one of the two finest examples of the City Beautiful in Europe, is a result largely of this society's intelligent and hearty coöperation with the authorities.

The coöperation of artistic societies and city authorities is a feature of municipal evolution everywhere in Europe, as it is getting to be in American cities, the scheme having been carried further perhaps in Boston than in any other American city.

IMPROVEMENT OF HUMAN SPECIES TO BE STUDIED BY SCIENTISTS.

From a Special Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 5.—"To suggest methods of improving the heredity of the family, the people, or the race," a committee of six scientists—all students of human heredity—has just been appointed by Prof. W. M. Hays, assistant secretary of agriculture, on behalf of the American Breeders' Association of which he is founder and secretary. This association, 1000 members strong, is to enlarge its scope and include the study of the breeding of human beings as well as of animal and plant species.

"The Committee on Eugenics" is the designation of the six scientists appointed. They will report their theories as to the improvement of the human race at the next meeting of the association, at Columbus, Ohio, January 15-18 next. Eugenics, according to the Century Dictionary, is "the science of generative or procreative development; the doctrine of progress or evolution, especially in the human race, through improved conditions in the relations of the sexes." After the committee has reported the Breeders' Association will authorize a series of practical investigations. Prof. Hays, who conceived this interesting scheme for systematic research, has been a scientific breeder of animals and plants. When appointed Assistant Secretary of Agriculture, last year, he was in charge of the Minnesota agricultural experiment station, where he bred many new and valuable species of plant life. One of the foremost members of the Breeders' Association, which he organized, is Luther Burbank of Santa Rosa, who has lately kept the world agog by his wonderful inventions of new fruits and flowers.

To Prevent Marriages of Defectives.

Whether two deaf mutes should marry, whether two blind persons, or two persons otherwise deprived of their senses or faculties should be allowed to beget children, are some of the interesting questions to be reported upon by the Committee on Eugenics. The member who will give special attention to this phase of the investigation is Prof. Alexander Graham Bell, the inventor of the telephone, who has been making a study of the problem, especially as it relates to deaf mutes. If Prof. Bell will demonstrate to the association that intermarriage of such defectives causes the handing down of their deficiencies to their progeny, the association will probably urge the passage of laws prohibiting such marriages.

The effects of immigration will be considered especially by Maj. Charles E. Woodruff, Surgeon, U.S.A., another member of the eugenic committee. After years of study of this problem, Dr. Woodruff has lately come to some interesting conclusions. He says that blond immigrants and their descendants cannot thrive in this country, save in the cloudy regions of the extreme northwestern corner, and that Europeans generally who have lived at home among simple and secluded environments also degenerate after taking up their lot with us. Nervous disorders are frequent among them, and although with their nervous irritability great talent and genius develop their physiques soon become poor and their brilliant careers soon end with such diseases of degeneration as consumption and cancer.

Cause of Nervous Degeneration.

"It seems that extinction is inevitable in time, and that our hordes of immigrants are not to be assimilated, but slaughtered off, except those physically fitted for our climate," says Dr. Woodruff. A great deal of thought is being expended on the marked increase of nervous diseases in America—the main disorder being neurasthenia. Every now and then we learn of some great man collapsing of nervous breakdown before 45 under loads which Europeans seem to bear safely until 60 or 65. Suicides, which are nearly always due to mental or nervous diseases, are increasing in the United States."

Dr. Woodruff attributes this nervous degeneration to the unsuitability of our climate to a large class of our immigrants from Europe. At a recent meeting of the American Pedriatric Association, he says, the American girl of the middle class was pronounced "a bundle of nerves incased in a fragile frame—the artificial product of an advanced 'civilization"—unable to stand much schooling, one in twenty giving up school work on account of ill-health. These conditions, he adds, are not found in Europe, but they are in Australia and New Zealand, whose white populations, like ours, are made up of European immigrants and whose latitude is, like ours, unsuited. He finds four-fifths of the neurasthenia patients in Vanderbilt Clinic and two-thirds of the insane in New York to be immigrants or their children. Outside of New York a half of our insane are of foreign-born parents and the other 30 per cent. are foreign-born themselves. He says that many immigrants come here because they are defective and failures at home. Especially the Armenians, Slavs, Greeks, Huns, Servians and Bulgarians thrive best here because they find the same environment which they have at home. The blond immigrants are too far south even in Boston, and tend to deteriorate.

Race With Germ-proof Lungs.

When the blond types from Northern Europe die here as they did in Italy, Dr. Woodruff predicts that our civilization will degenerate into the condition of Rome, when it fell into the hands of lower types. He points out that it is estimated that 10,000,000 people now living in the United States are doomed to die of consumption, but adds that it will not take many centuries of such destruction to evolve a surviving fittest race not susceptible to the white plague. This evolution has occurred among the Jews whose blood has thus developed a germ-killing power destroying the bacilli of disease breathed into their lungs.

Sociological aspects of the problem will be considered especially by Prof. Charles R. Henderson of the University of Chicago, and biological aspects by Prof. David Starr Jordan, president of Leland Stanford University, also members of the eugenic committee. The remaining members are Rev. J. E. Gilbert, a Methodist minister, of Washington, D. C., and C. W. Ward, of New York. Besides those mentioned, the duties of the eugenic committee will be "to devise methods of recording the values of the blood of individuals, families, peoples and races; to emphasize the value of superior blood and the menace to society of inferior blood."

Man-Breeding Experiments.

Several interesting experiments in man-breeding by selection have been attempted in recent times. Two, in fact, are now being carried on.

Probably the first systematic experiment was that commenced in 1848, by John Humphrey Noyes, at Oneida, N. Y. George Bernard Shaw, who devoted some space to it in his "Man and Superman," refers to it as "one of those chance attempts at the superman which occur from time to time in spite of the interference of man's blundering institutions." Noyes for the first time in the history of the human race made a deliberate attempt to apply to an entire community of men and women the rules that govern scientific stock breeding. He was born in Southern Vermont in 1811, was expelled from the Congregational ministry for heterodoxy and later organized a sect called "Perfectionists," seeking "salvation from sin, disease and death." For this sect he devised what has been aptly called "a system of regulated promiscuity of marriage." He was forced to leave Vermont in 1846, and bought land near Oneida, N. Y., where, two years later, he founded the "Oneida Community."

His methods for producing superman were as suggested, based on stock-raising experiments and he subjected the people of his community to selected in-and-in breeding with occasional mingling of foreign blood. Members of the community selected as the healthiest and holiest were chosen to beget children. The intellects of the parents were only partially considered and the selected father was always older than the selected mother. The women wore long trousers and, over these, short skirts. All members lived together in the large "unity house" shown in the accompanying photograph. It was Noyes's aim that each generation should surpass the preceding one, morally and physically. No member could be married to another, and love between couples was frowned upon as selfish. Each must love the entire community. Community of property was practiced, and everything in the settlem every member alike.

Sixty Superchildren.

Sixty superchildren were born of this ex tween the years 1869 and 1879. Fifty-five were brought up with the greatest care and best conditions. Infants were cared for their mothers until nine months old, and they were eighteen months old they receiv ternal care only at night. From then on the responsibility of the mother's ceased and the were placed in charge of competent nurses in dren's Department" apart from the large building. Nine years after the experiment these children were reported by Dr. T. R. No the founder, to have a death rate less than on of the United States at large and to be taller ier than Boston school children.

It is an interesting fact that this communit of "complex marriages" had to be abandone the spirit of monogamy some time before the years had infected all of the members, who to be drifting into pairs. Noyes, foreseeing this account, gave notice to members, in 187 ing that in deference to public sentiment com riage be renounced and ordinary marriages be substituted. Only three members voted proposition. Twenty-five couples who had when they entered the community immediately life together, and twenty other couples marri four months. At this time there were 29 cluding 83 children under 12 years. Community was also abandoned and the property was tra a joint stock company which now thrives wi coöperative features.

The present status of the carefully-selected born at Oneida is this: The oldest are 37. Th tall, several over six feet, "broad-shoulder proportioned," according to a physician with the community who has kept track of girls are robust and well-built. In spite of the parents were generally of the laboring the boys is a musician of repute, another another a lawyer who won several schol others have been graduated from college became a mechanic. Of the girls, two are uates and one is a kindergarten teacher. these children, when I questioned him lately them, William A. Hinds, the president of Community, Limited, said:

"There are among them some fine exampl physical and intellectual vigor and a consider ber of them have for several years filled much responsibility."

For Raising Giants.

The next systematic attempt at man-breedi lection was commenced in France five years eccentric Count Alfred St. Ouen de Pierrecourt, in that year bequeathed to that city his fortu 000,000 francs on the novel condition that the ally make a marriage gift of 100,000 francs of giants, in order to regenerate the hum The candidates were to be medically examined healthiest couple chosen. To Save the Alligators.

UNCLE SAM TO PROTECT THEM AS HE DOES SEALS.

By a Special Contributor.

A CENTURY ago the waters and lands now in the possession of the United States government were the habitat of the world's biggest fish, animals and reptiles. The buffalo was monarch of animals that roamed the plains, the seal was worth more money than any denizen of the deep, and the ferocious alligator ruled in the swamps of the South. The day of their native supremacy is gone, and now they would actually suffer final extermination but for the protecting hand of Uncle Sam.

The United States government has made protection of its seal fisheries an international policy; it has established a national park for the remnant of the herds of buffalo, and it will soon move to prevent the last saurian in the swamps of the South from yielding its life to the pelt hunter.

It is only in late years that sentiment has grown up in favor of the alligator. That unwieldy, ugly creature was once regarded as a foe to the public order, and his complete extermination at a stroke would have seemed the best thing that could happen, but the commercial uses to which the tough alligator hide can be put have made a new sentiment, and soon national legislation will be invoked to restrict indiscriminate killing of the swamp kings.

Not sentimentalism alone argues for protection of the last survivors of Uncle Sam's lower giants. The buffalo had to go from the plains in order to make way for man, but he should have been driven into herds, and preserved in numbers. The killing of the seal to get the skins is a laudable and proper use of the animal provided the killing is done with such system that the race of seals be not exterminated. So with the alligator. Take the lives of as many as are needed for the purpose of commerce, but do it according to farsighted wisdom.

The alligator is nearly wiped out, but the big saurian multiplies quickly and in great numbers, so that with only reasonable protection he would soon flourish again.

Not so long ago the swamps, rivers and bayous of Florida and other Southern States abounded with the creatures. Formerly they got as far north as Georgia, but now they are only found on the southern coast line of the extreme Southern States. They are still numerous in the Everglades for the reason that it is hard to get at them there.

An early explorer says he found alligators so plentiful in Florida that once at a point where the St. John's River is half a mile wide, they were packed so closely that had they kept still he could have crossed the river on their scaly backs.

At first it was for the amusement of the hunter that the alligator fell. It was esteemed great sport to sail down a river and shoot the saurians, leaving their bodies where they fell, and making no attempt to sell the hides.

Later, as Florida began to settle, the alligators were killed off for the protection of the people. The reptiles had preying tendencies that made them a constant nuisance. Ordinarily they subsist on fish, but when hungry they did not hesitate to come inland, and steal whatever came within reach of their huge tails, a blow from which would mean the death of lambs, pigs and even small calves and colts.

Every time the 'gator attempted inroads a posse would be formed, and a trail of alligator carcasses would be the outcome of a ten days' hunt.

It was not, however, until the saurian developed commercial possibilities that the real devastation began. Trunks, traveling bags, purses and all kinds of leather novelties could be made from alligator hide. The traffic took such sudden bounds that in a short time Florida was sending north about 200,000 skins annually.

The favorite method of hunting was to go out at night and blind the reptile with a strong light from a lantern strapped to the head of a hunter. Thus equipped he could get within a few feet, and use his heavy revolver or short gun with deadly effect. At the present time despite the decimation, there are still enough alligators to make the business of hunting them a profitable one to hundreds of Indians and whites.

In addition to the sale of skins there is a demand for baby 'gators, which are stuffed and sold.

Although the alligator is a great swimmer, he gets around on land but slowly. Yet they have been found fifteen miles inland. They can live out of water for an indefinite period as long as they get plenty to drink.

The alligator is a long-lived old customer, and frequently reaches an age of 150 years.

According to present plans Uncle Sam proposes to have a certain district set apart where it shall be illegal to kill the big saurians except at certain times, and in regulated numbers. In this way it is hoped they will be preserved indefinitely.

SMOKELESS POWDER.

"What is this smokeless powder?" asks A. W. Rolker in Appleton's Magazine for November, and proceeds to answer his question. "It is the modern high explosive which has superseded the old-style black powder, even as electricity has superseded gas, and which is used not only in the field for sporting purposes, but is used exclusively for the shoulder arms of the army and the navy as well as for the machine guns, the rapid-fire guns, and the huge rifles on the decks of our battleships and within the works of our fortifications. Practically it is nothing but a mixture of gun cotton and alcohol and either, or acetone, or else acetone with gun cotton and nitro-glycerin—the two strongest explosives known —and blended into a new compound which is at least double as strong as the common black powder, explodes without giving off smoke, and, once finished, not merely loses the dangerous characteristics of its dreaded ingredients but is so safe that you might give a hatful of the powder intended for the sixteen-inch Sandy Hook gun to a baby to play with. He might pound it with a hammer to his heart's content, or you yourself might place it on an anvil and bring a forty-pound sledge down on it. It would merely squash like so much soap or putty. So concussion-proof is this powder that you might drop a house on a heap of fifty tons of it and it would not explode. So proof is it against explosion by fire that you might place a stick of cannon powder on a saucer in your bedroom, light it with a match, and go to bed by a flickering, sizzling light, as if given off by burning fat. In short, you simply cannot explode this powder unless you go to the trouble of confining it, and even then you can explode it only by using a fulminate of mercury detonator.

"The quickest way to picture smokeless powder is to dismiss all ideas of the ordinary black gunpowder so familiar to every one. The color of the modern powder is not black at all, but has the shade of dark amber. In the sense of a powder being a finely divided solid, smokeless powder is no powder at all. It consists of a waxlike composition, the size of the 'grains' varying according to the calibers of the guns for which they are designed. For use in revolvers, rifles, and sporting guns, the grains resemble the tiny perforated glass beads of the sort used in old-time needlework. For the machine guns, the rapid-fire guns, and the heavy rifles of battleships and forts, the grains are cylinderical in shape, varying in size from a third of an inch in diameter and half an inch in length to three-fourths of an inch in diameter and about two inches in length—each grain, in order to increase the area exposed to ignition, being perforated equidistantly and longitudinally with from one to six holes, big as knitting needles, depending upon the size of the grain."

HOW A BALLOON IS MADE.

The chief amateur balloonist of America is Dr. Julian P. Thomas, of New York. He has written a most entertaining article in Appleton's Magazine for November, in which he describes some thrilling escapes. Incidentally he says:

"It may interest the reader to hear something about the construction of a big modern balloon, and its equipments. It is made of what is known as balloon cloth, which sometimes is of silk, and is sewn in small sections of about a yard square, so that if one of the sections should burst the whole balloon would not collapse and destroy the aëronaut.

"At the top of the bag is the valve to let the gas out when one wishes to descend. A rope for opening it runs from this valve through the center of the balloon to the operator in the basket. The baloon is filled through the neck, and this is left always open, so that when the gas expands, from the heat of the sun or the lesser pressure of high altitudes, the gas may escape and not burst the envelope.

"As soon as the balloon is sewn together it is blown full of air and given three coats of varnish. Each coat must be allowed to dry thoroughly before the next is applied, or else they would never become perfectly dry and the balloon would be likely to be destroyed at any minute from spontaneous combustion. This spontaneous combustion is not a bursting into flame, but a kind of exceedingly quick dry rot. I myself have lost three balloons through it. Once, in my factory, we were looking at a beauty when some one sniffed the air and remarked: 'Thomas's balloon is gone,' and so it proved to be. Five minutes saw it destroyed—so rotten that you could poke your finger through it.

"Sometimes the balloon is so affected in only a few sections, and a man may make an ascension thinking his balloon is all right. Protected by the fine netting which envelops the balloon itself, he may even get up to some height before discovering his danger. In former times there were many fatal accidents from this cause.

"When a balloon is packed, talcum or some other powder is sprinkled over the folds to keep them from adhering to each other. If this is neglected the balloon will be ruined, especially in hot weather.

"As I said, a fine netting covers the balloon proper, both to strengthen it and to carry the weight of the basket and its contents. All the strands of the netting come together in the 'concentrating ring,' just above the basket, in which the aëronaut stands. The anchor and guide rope, as well as the basket, are fastened to this concentrating ring.

"All modern balloons, besides the valve, have a rip cord, fastened to a long patch sewn in the envelope, by means of which the balloon can be cut in two and brought to earth instantly. This is never used except in cases of extreme emergency, and when the basket is within ten or fifteen feet of the ground."

HARVEST THE YEAR ROUND.

"Our Thanksgiving celebrates the garnering of the harvest," said a clergyman, "and a fine poetic festival it is. But did it ever occur to you how various are the harvest times of the different nations of the world?

"January is the harvest month of the Chileans, of the Australians, the Argentine folks, and the New Zealanders.

"February is the harvest of India—February and a part of March.

"The Egyptians, the Persians and the Syrians harvest in April, while the Chinese, the Japanese, the Moroccans and the Algerians harvest in May.

"The Spanish, Greek and Italian harvest time is June; the Russian and Austrian is July; the English, German Dutch and Canadian is August; the Scandinavian, Scottish and Welsh is September; while the northernmost parts of Russia, Norway and Sweden do not gather their harvest till October."

The City of Concepcion.

ITS MUSCULAR WOMEN AND THEIR MODE OF LIFE.

From a Special Correspondent.

CONCEPCION (Chile) 1906.—Concepcion, third city in size and age in Chile, is in some respects first in point of historical importance, its particular claim to distinction in this line being based on the fact that from there was issued the proclamation of Chilean independence on January 1, 1818. In point of disasters sustained, its record can vie with even that of Valparaiso, for in addition to the usual menaces of fire, flood, earthquake, war and pirate that forever hovered over the Chilean ports during their earlier days, Concepcion, as a frontier town, was exposed to the additional danger of Indian raids. On two separate occasions in the first century of its history it was completely wiped out by the resolute and warlike Araucanians under their able chieftain, Lautaro, and 150 years, a far longer period than any important North American town ever knew the menace of Indians, it was in constant danger from the same source. For over two centuries disasters succeeded each other with monotonous regularity till they culminated in the great earthquake of the year 1754. Most of the inhabitants of the town were killed on this occasion and hardly one brick was left upon another. This led the survivors to change the site of the town, as I described in my last letter, and better luck, particularly in connection with earthquakes, has attended it ever since. It was this disaster that taught Concepcion a lesson she has never forgotten in the practical wisdom of "lying low" and taking no chances as regards high buildings.

The modern Concepcion is a first-class town of about 70,000 people. It does a considerable volume of business, is fairly progressive, quite healthy, moderately clean and reasonably attractive. Its educational facilities are among the best in the country and I should say that it would be an ideal place to bring up children in. The face it turns to the world today is notably calm and placid, and quite unseamed by the sufferings that it has undergone in its troublous past. It is essentially a good place to get tired in, to grow drowsy in, to go to sleep in; all of which will not be much to recommend it to the stranger in search of recreation and amusement, and under the circumstances I am not ashamed to say that I found the most interesting place in Concepcion to be some springs over among the Cerros de Caracol, where the washerwomen of the city congregate to pound the dirt out of their clothes.

These springs, mere little dribbles of water running out of the hillsides into natural rock basins, form one of the most characteristic public washing places in Chile. The washing of clothes is a brute-force process all over South America, and notably so on the west coast. The method of procedure varies with the different localities; water and brute force are always employed, and usually soap. In some places they pound the clothes upon a rough-surfaced rock; in others they pound a rough-surfaced rock upon the clothes. Some use clubs, and some use paddles, and some simply throw down the clothes and jump on them. In Concepcion they use paddles; I remember this particularly because I am keeping as a souvenir of Concepcion a favorite white shirt with a paddle-shaped hole in the bosom where they battered a breach through four-folds of good Irish linen that had been turning an unruffled face to the assaults of steam laundries for nearly eighteen months.

I believe it is in Pudden'ead Wilson's calendar that you are given two alternatives in the event of your watch being out of order; the one to take it to the repairer and the other to chuck it into the river. The latter is recommended as accomplishing the same end at less expense. The same rule will be good in regard to soiled linen in Concepcion. They get the things clean all right—at least those parts of them which they return to you—but a man can't make himself respectable, even in Chile, with only a groundwork of seams and neckbands to build on, and one of these things is quite enough for a souvenir.

To one of an inquiring turn of mind it is worth some small sacrifice to see how this execution is wrought, but even in this instance you will find your joy far keener-edged if somebody else's clothes are under the paddle. There is no law in Concepcion that forbids a man's marching right up to the springs while the washing is going on and making himself quite at home. This is never done, however, and I was not slow to notice that my own mood was always less apprehensive and my pulse quieter when I had a steep-sided gully between me and the center of operations, and a smooth path of retreat open in the rear. I could never quite analyze my feelings upon this point to the extent of determining whether they were prompted by fear or bashfulness; on the one hand the instinct of timidity which makes a man stand off six feet instead of six inches from a dangerous machine, or on the other that innate shrinking shamedness which makes a man more comfortable in inspecting the contents of the lingerie display window from the opposite side of the street.

Working from the hillside you will, like any other student of nature, need a good glass. We will suppose you are already in position. No matter how early you may have arrived, some of the washers will be there before you and others will be trudging energetically up the ravine. On one of these, because of the size of the bundle she carries on her head, the straightness of her back and the set of her shoulders, you fix your attention and in fancy call her the "Washerwoman Queen." You are sure she is a beauty and it is with no small amount of anticipation that you run your glass out to a focus. Then you swear disgustedly and are sorry for your sentimentality, for floating up close against the outer lenses of your binoculars is the typical washerwoman's face of Southern Chile. Square-jawed, angular, hard-mouthed and inflexible-eyed, you know it at a glance as the kind of face that a careful Providence always marries to an easily-bent, mild-mannered, lamblike sort of a man to avoid bloodshed; the kind of face that would hound a husband as it would a grease spot, and batter a hole in his head with no more compunction than in his shirt bosom. But don't go away disappointed on this account; you didn't expect to stumble upon a beauties' bower, and the big show is only about to open up. Keep your eye on your first choice; she isn't a dew-dimpled rosebud for looks, but she is one of the best outdoor paddle washers in Concepcion and preëminence should command attention however manifested.

Now she is getting rid of her top hamper and stripping for action. With a jerk of her muscular neck she lands her big bundle of clothes out in the middle of the pool she has selected as a base of operations, which done she commences a careful search in the bosom of her dress for her soap cake. Presently this jewel is discovered, daintily extracted and tenderly laid aside on the grass till the time arrives for it to play its part in the drama of the day. The clothes bundle has a cubic dimension of about four feet; the soap of about as many centimeters. You may think there is a disproportion here, but you forget the paddle that sticks cocked exultantly out of the skirt band of our washer lady, disdainful in the knowledge of its power and amply able to do the whole job alone.

Now she shakes her shoulders free from her baggy waist and stands out in her sleeveless, close-fitting camisa, showing a pair of arms that might have been hacked from the statue of a Roman gladiator. Then she completes her working toilet by turning loose her hair and disposing her skirt. The latter operation is a fitting finishing touch, and I regret my inability to give it adequate description. As near as I could follow it, the process is, in detail, somewhat as follows: The middle part of the front lower hem of the skirt is first grasped in the hands and pulled forward as far as the fullness of the skirt will permit. The slack thus obtained is held by being loosely twisted, after which it is passed backward between the knees and under the rear hem of the skirt. Then it is pulled sharply up and as much as possible tucked inside of the belt or waist band. This forms the skirt into a very fair imitation of a pair of Turkish or zouave trousers, and the effect—and the method by which it is obtained, as well—is, as nearly as I can see, like that aimed at by young ladies in the States in making themselves up for that clever and amusing parlor stunt called the "Bear Dance." East Indian coolie women preparing to go to work in the canefields also emancipate their legs and save their skirts in a similar manner.

Her skirt properly composed, our lady gives a sudden vicious kick with either foot to free it from its heavy zapato or sandal, and with a single tiger-like spring lands on top of the clothes bundle that has been soaking in the shallow pool. This she wallows vigorously for a few moments to insure a thorough mixing of cloth and water, after which she grabs up a liberal armful and leaps back to the bank. Then she draws her paddle, elbows herself a place among the other washers, and settles down to business.

The bunch of wet clothes is packed into a wad and then, with one powerful stroke of the paddle after another, pounded out into a broad, flat pancake. Then she rolls up this pancake, stands it on end, and bats it out flat from that direction. So it goes on for half an hour, the muscular brown arms rippling in the sunshine like running water, the paddle steadily joining its sharp, slappy note in the staccato chorus raised by a hundred other paddles, and the plastic wad of clothes constantly undergoing a manipulation similar to that administered to a hunk of new bread in the hands of a youngster who has lingered after dinner to make "bread pills."

But life is not all toil and trouble for these paddle women; even during their working hours they have several little diversions that serve to make the hours flit faster and the sun shine brighter, and notable among these are singing and fighting. They sing a good deal of the time, whether working or resting, both alone and in chorus, and the best of their performances are more often distinctly bad than distinctly good. Mellowed by distance, they are sometimes bearable, but a careful observer will note, I think, that the mellowing effect does not increase in anything like the same proportion as the distance. A friend who used to walk over these cerros with me occasionaly once told me that the singing of these women made him homesick. Quite naturally I asked him if they sang like that at home. He replied indignantly that it wasn't that at all, but because his home was in Melbourne, and he felt reasonably sure that Australia was beyond the sound of this bally racket.

But if the songs of our paddle ladies are dull and commonplace, the same charge cannot be made against their fights; these are among the best of their kind, and as such, though undeniably deplorable affairs, cannot be lightly dismissed. The question of whether it is worse from a moral standpoint for women to fight than men brings up some ethical points involving discriminations too nice to be made here. There is nothing elevating or ennobling in any kind of fights, and there is no use in endeavoring to defend them on those grounds. But since violent differences of opinion must perennially occur, there may be just a vestige of reason in the assertion of those who claim that it is quite as manly—and why not womanly, as well?—to settle the dispute by a physical encounter as to widen the divergence of opinion and increase the bitterness of feeling by saying unpleasant things within or without the hearing of the parties concerned. An engine without a safety valve that will let off steam as fast as it accumulates is very dangerous, and there are occasions when no man can give vent to all of his pent-up feelings in the form of words. In such a case a stand-up-and-knock-down fight is the best thing for him.

Woman's case is somewhat different; the tongue has been for so long set aside to her as a special and private weapon, and she uses it so much oftener and so much more to the point than man, that she is almost always able to give herself speedy and [illegible] ploying words alone. Fashionable [illegible] have not done a great deal of fighting [illegible] for the same reasons that a pleasure [illegible] knocking around the docks as a water [illegible] stand the banging in the first place, [illegible] place, a collision would necessitate a [illegible] pairs and might reveal structural [illegible] materially decrease her marketable value. [illegible] like fine rigging, are easily damaged; [illegible] no pleasanter for a skipper to have his [illegible] that all the ribs and beams that give his [illegible] ful shape are trumped-up makeshift, than [illegible] to have the same thing happen. Yet these [illegible] things that are shown up in collisions.

As woman drops off down the social [illegible] is less hampered by clothes, makeshifts [illegible] and has less education to make her tongue [illegible] lieving her feelings—she is the more [illegible] her differences with fingers than with [illegible] may be reckoned the principal item, and I [illegible] be in this aspect that they are viewed [illegible] that "Clothes are a civilizing influence." [illegible] this into a fixed rule we have "Women [illegible] ratio to the amount and value of their [illegible] are some who will criticise this on the [illegible] tain characteristics, such as refinement and [illegible] ter in as determinative factors. This is [illegible] go with the clothes and don't affect the [illegible] rule. Sweeping as the latter is, however, [illegible] applied to tea-table tongue tiffs, where just [illegible] holds good.

The attitude of the world toward a [illegible] generally one of more or less disgust, [illegible] certain amount of pity; toward a drunken [illegible] attitude is one of horror so extreme as [illegible] for no other feelings. This is largely [illegible] drunken man is commoner than the [illegible] and we have become more used to him; [illegible] it first comes bumping in onto the beach [illegible] birds wheel clear of a drifting hulk. There [illegible] something also in the fact that, having, [illegible] unconsciously, placed woman several [illegible] heaven than man, we feel the shock more [illegible] to brush against us in her descent back [illegible] on just these same counts that it shocks [illegible] women fighting than men.

I became impressed with the folly of [illegible] other people's fights at a comparatively [illegible] role of peacemaker is essentially a thankless [illegible] the picket fence between two billy goats, [illegible] mad brutes, unable to reach other, unite in [illegible] common spite. The least he can expect is [illegible] and from that he is liable to anything up to [illegible] ing a broken head. Those classic [illegible] peacemaker in which he or she, I forget which, [illegible] sented as clothed in a light wisp of cloth and [illegible] olive branch are all wrong; that individual [illegible] erly be pictured in a complete suit of armor [illegible] dishing a plate of nickel steel.

Duly convinced though I was for [illegible] of the non-dividend-paying policy of [illegible] ple's troubles my own, yet so completely [illegible] I with the world's view of physical [illegible] women—a feeling of instinct rather [illegible] it was only within the year that kind [illegible] nated the last scruples from my mind [illegible] up into line with a solid front on the [illegible] interference. Without going into details [illegible] will say that this came about one [illegible] last October in London, when my "[illegible] me to wade into a female vortex that [illegible] peace of the corner of Judd street [illegible] King's Cross. On this occasion my [illegible] in miserable failure. I lost my hat, [illegible] ing run in, got scratches that were [illegible] appearing, and some ideas which I [illegible] stay with me a good deal longer. [illegible] merely that I may not seem to be a [illegible] interfered in the little skirmish which [illegible] herewith.

I was strolling high up on one of the [illegible] col one morning, when I was startled [illegible] that had been welling up from "[illegible] Gulch" suddenly break off and give [illegible] glad shout of the kind with which [illegible] sembled populace greet the issuance [illegible] from the king's palace. Suspecting [illegible] was happening, I laid aside my [illegible] with luck and the law of gravity in [illegible] down a five or six-hundred-foot ridge [illegible] onds without a scratch. This brought [illegible] above the laundry, and apparently in [illegible] washers from some of the remoter [illegible] straggling in and trying to elbow [illegible] the throng of 200 or more others [illegible] formed themselves into a ring in [illegible] the big central pool. A more barbarically [illegible] one fuller of savagely joyful anticipation, [illegible] seen; it was fairly areek with [illegible] And in the middle of the ring, with [illegible] going fresh and strong and with [illegible] the center of attraction, a fight [illegible] washerwoman, as glorious a rough-and-[illegible] was ever the lot of mortal man to [illegible]

Just as I came down and informally [illegible] a seat upon a mossy boulder, one of [illegible] the other about the waist, swung [illegible] and then rammed her down into a [illegible] which she proceeded to kneel upon. [illegible] murderous paddle, on which, divining [illegible] remembering the execution I had seen [illegible] clothes with a similar weapon, I [illegible] tion of dismay and went all hot and [illegible] I had seated myself to watch a [illegible] and hair pulling, not a murder.

In the momentary cessation of [illegible] ceded what I expected would prove [illegible] opportunity to compare the two [illegible] ous fray. One, the upper dog, [illegible] heavy-set woman of the Chiloto type, [illegible]

Her face was of an Italian cast, dark and beautiful, and with great, wide, madblazing eyes that glowed like live coals. It had been bulldog against wildcat and, as far as one could see, had ended with the cat cowed and beaten and about to be swallowed up and devoured.

With a triumphant leer the stubby one raised the great paddle above her head, and, sick with apprehension, I closed my eyes and waited to hear it fall. I even believe that I was trying to frame a protest, or nerving myself to run for the police, or something of the kind, but the impulse passed with the opportunity. I felt [illegible] then heard a great gasp of joy and excitement from the crowd below, and in another instant was aware that a slender brown hand, darting out like a flash of lightning, had snatched the paddle, that a lithe form had worked its way clear of the clumsy knees that had held it, and that the willowy dark lady was now deftly sidestepping the rushes of her stubby assailant and sending home some vicious cuts and jabs with the edge of her newly-acquired weapon.

This went on for a couple of minutes or so, and so nimble was the dark lady's footwork and so effective her paddle thrusts that the wobbling knees and heaving bulk of the fat one seemed to presage a speedy and general cave-in. But this one continued to rush as doggedly and blindly as ever, and just as she seemed tottering to a fall, the narrowing circle of the eager crowd hemmed her agile opponent and allowed Her Stubbornness to again seize that lithe form in her terrible arms. This marked the beginning of the real fighting.

If the English language had the words to describe it, what happened in the next minute would fill a book. Madame Stubby's hold was too high to permit her to lift and throw her opponent, and she was too cautious to [illegible] to try to change it. The dark beauty, though fresh as a daisy as far as strength was concerned, was quite unable to break from the grip of the iron arms that encircled her, and, in consequence, spun and wriggled like an impaled butterfly. Now I only meant this rule to have application in the generic as relating to the various strata and classes of society, or to races having distinct customs in the matter of dress. Yet over there on the hillside the truth shortly began to become apparent to me in a startlingly literal form. As the fighting became continually fiercer the clothes became continually scarcer. There wasn't a very large amount of clothes in the first place, and as the fighting threatened to get fiercer and go on indefinitely, I was not long in deciding that I had best retreat while the way was open and I could do so unblushingly. I take credit to myself for then deciding to leave while both combatants were still on their feet and the fight unfinished. I had just begun to move resolutely away, when Providence or the God of Battles, no doubt as a direct reward for the sacrifice I was making, intervened and let the fight end. Her Stubbiness simply caved in at the knees and fell over backward, taking the dark lady, still in that iron clasp, along with her. Life Among the Pigmies.

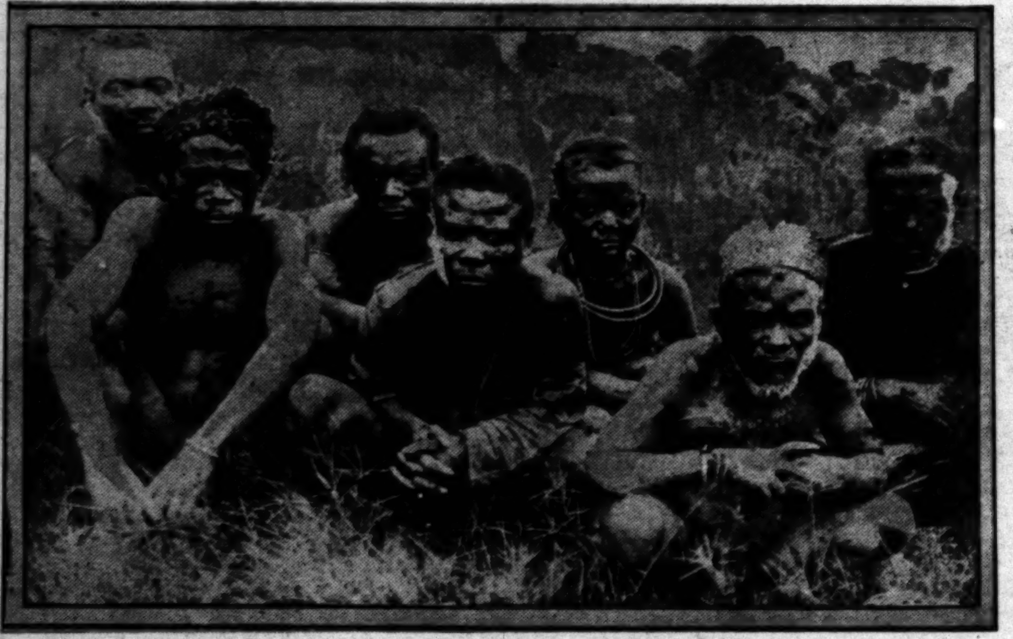
AN EXPLORER'S EXPERIENCES IN DARKEST AFRICA.

By William Edgar Geil, F.R.G.S.

I HAD been for weeks in the vast woodland of the Eternal Twilight, in the very heart of darkest Africa, so that the Pigmies knew me and were inclined to do anything I asked of them. One day I had dispatched a messenger ahead, inviting the Pigmies to meet me at a certain place in the forest. Sure enough, I found on arrival a full dozen awaiting the coming of "The Big White Chief," as they were pleased to call me.

On looking them over, we found that no women were present, and a messenger was at once dispatched asking some to come. Soon four women appeared, and behold! with them a Pigmy baby seated astride its mother's left hip, the first Pigmy baby I had ever seen. It was little smaller than an ordinary baby—if there is such a thing as an "ordinary baby"—with head well shaped, body well developed, eyes bright, its laugh as cheerful as that of a white child, and its cry is as insistent and sad.

The Pigmies went through various performances for our entertainment. First they sat on the ground in an ellipse. Three elected to place their haunches on sections of two-inch tree trunks. How they could be more comfortable there than on the level ground probably only a Pigmy could explain. But I doubt not that they could give as good an explanation as that of the Polynesians, who have sections of bamboo trunks for pillows. The Sultan of the Pigmies wore a bit of foreign cloth about his head and an equally small bit about his body; others were equally scantily supplied with bark cloth. The Sultan held a piece of heavy wood rounded on each side, half an inch thick and ten inches long, in his left hand. On it he beat time with a smaller stick which he had in his right hand. The other Pigmies made grimaces which at times suggested the facial expressions of apes, orangoutangs and monkeys, while their voices were engaged in a weird woodland chant. Then the Sultan sang a solo and all the others joined in the refrain.



A GROUP OF PIGMIES.

When two local drums struck up they all arose and danced with the right foot, the left hand, and the face. Other musical instruments they have none, though I searched their huts and camp to see. The dance was followed by a march, first in a circle, then in the form of an ellipse, the women joining in the performance. The woman with the baby enjoyed it as much as the rest, and the child offered neither visible nor audible objection to the jollification, although it must have been considerably jolted.

The voices of the Pigmies are melodious; this holds true in all their fun. The Pigmy faces are well formed from the eyebrows up. I noticed that one of them had very well developed the phrenological bump of reason. The Pigmies have well-developed eyebrows, while other black people have almost none. I say black people, but I have seen very few black people in Africa. The Pigmies are not black; they are brown, with black hair, and all that I have seen have been well developed in the chests.

The Pigmies are pleasant people. They keep their persons very clean. The Pigmy bathes often. When there is no water convenient he uses the fat of an animal of the forest, newly slain. This bath not only insures cleanliness, but warmth as well. I expected to find these strange little freaks of humanity unwashed and unkempt, but my personal observation found them otherwise. They have a reputation for bathing which may not be borne out by the facts. To wit, Mrs. Browning, in the Dead Pan, writes:

"In what revels are ye sunken
In old Aethiopia?
Have the Pigmies made you drunken
Bathing in mandragora?"

Because they are not nervous, the Pigmies are not easily inconvenienced by weather or accident. They are less sensible to pain than white skins. They are naturally thus, although Isidorus and Serapion would no doubt hold it due to bathing in narcotic mandragora and thereby diminished sensibility to pain. What a blessing it must be to the Pigmy families not to have the thousand ills that civilized flesh is heir to! Because they are jolly. These mannikin are not mad for gain, and therefore have more shouts for joy than misers. Truly it is said: "O delved gold, the wailer's heap." The Pigmies do not understand coin and hoarded wealth, which as often saddens as rejoices the possessor.

Full of fun are these odd little denizens of the forest. They dance and romp and play to their heart's content. I am pleased to write that they invite their wives to participate in their pleasures and diversions. Indeed, in wife treatment they are superior to their bigger neighbors. They may at times roam idly in the forest, but what I have seen of them makes me think they are too full of jolly mischief to be very lazy.

I noticed during my sojourn among the Pigmies that mimicry employs some of their time while at play. A droll humor which is exceedingly funny results. They can imitate their larger neighbors, or the white man, and take them off to perfection. To see them strut about in the dance with stiff legs and solemn faces fills one with roars of laughter. Mimics have great powers of observation, and this is characteristic of the Pigmy. His whole life tends to the development of that faculty.

Could we write the entire dwarf history, the chapters given to the real Mambutti or Pigmy of the dark heart of Africa would bring from the reader a tear of sympathy and the voice of helpfulness. In all the mighty forest there are no schools, churches or improvement societies. If the Pigmy can with his present opportunities "win the secret of a weed's plain heart," with the help of missionary and teacher, he may reach the high altitude of a daily newspaper! Were the Pigmy to print a paper now, methinks it would contain an ink cry for help. While it is the task of anatomical science to prove that these small varieties of the human race have been the predecessors of full-sized humanity, yet we may safely, I think, infer that the Pigmies were the first inhabitant of Central Africa and hence among the greatest land owners on the earth. Why should they who chronologically are the first be the last to receive the healthful results of Christian philanthropy? While the Pigmy has his forest, his food and his fun, yet he is poor in opportunities to know his destiny. He has never heard the name of our Lord. I am reminded of the cute, caustic but Christian words of Thomas Carlyle, "The Cause of the Poor in God's name and the Devil's."

Help the poor Pigmy. He may even now be longing for a better idea. I am inclined to "Believe, that in all ages

Every human heart is human.
That in even savage bosoms
There are longings, yearnings, strivings
For the good they comprehend not."

Moffat had hope for the man who could laugh; the Pigmy is included in that. I like the Pigmies. Room for improvement, to be sure. "Can the Ethiopian change his skin?" A white skin is a great bother in tropical Africa. It is fortunate for the Pigmy that he cannot change his skin. If he could, he might not get a good fit, and I reckon there is nothing more uncomfortable than a skin that does not fit!

Lend the Pigmy a hand. His ancestors have sunk down into the mould of the forest; let not the present-day Pigmies go into the past in like circumstances. Let the old gospel story be told in the compact area of black forest. The grace of God can remake the Pigmy. Through his dense forests I passed unharmed and unharming. Are there no preachers to go to the Pigmies?

Giant Cacti in Cages.

CURIOUS EXPERIMENTS AT "DESERT LABORATORY" IN ARIZONA.

By a Special Contributor.

A MOST picturesque interest does undeniably attach to the notion of raising giant cacti plants, that is to say, which normally attain a height of forty feet—in tin cans, from seed. And the absurdity of the idea is heightened when, as an incidental feature, the sprouting vegetable monarchs of the desert are enclosed in wire cages.

The experiments in question, which are being conducted at the Carnegie desert laboratory, have in view, however, very practical and useful objects. For the outfit (situated near Tucson, Arizona) has been established, partly under government auspices, for the purpose of finding out how desert plants get along with so small a supply of water. Eventually the knowledge gained will be turned to account in the raising of crops in parts of this country where the fluid is scarce.

One thing the experts are anxious to ascertain is how much water is lost by desert plants through evaporation. It is a matter that cannot be determined by tests applied to plants growing in the ground; and therefore resort is had to the expedient of potting small specimens—for which purpose no receptacles have been found so satisfactory as empty condensed-cream cans, perforated at the bottom for drainage.

The giant yucca of the desert

The Desert Laboratory near Tucson

In this fashion are being grown not only seedlings of the giant cactus, but all kinds of desert plants that can be lifted from the soil and potted. And, to protect them from attack by birds and small mammals, they are kept covered by cages made of wire mosquito screening. The desert animals in question are exceedingly voracious, devouring every bit of green vegetation they can find; and the only plants that thrive in such regions are those which have developed some natural means of defense, such as sharp spikes or poisonous juices.

For example, there is the so-called "water barrel of the desert," which, growing in the most arid regions, is nothing more nor less than a living tank of water. Of just about the size and shape of a beer keg, it literally bristles not only with straight spikes, but also with spines shaped like fish hooks. No animal can possibly touch it with impunity; but a man can easily chop off the top of it with a machete, thereby exposing to view the mass of pulp—96 per cent. of it water—which fills the interior of the plant.

Now, the experts at the desert laboratory have taken the trouble to subject this pulp to scientific examination, chopping it into small pieces, mashing it with a mallet, and straining the fluid through cheesecloth. As a result, they have ascertained that the internal structure of the "water barrel" contains a considerable quantity of mucilaginous substance, which helps importantly to prevent the water from evaporating.

It should be explained that the laboratory is situated on a hilltop in the midst of a barren waste which produces an extraordinarily varied assortment of cacti and other vegetable oddities. Thus the scientists in charge are able to study the desert plants close at hand, and to ascertain how each species has solved for itself, in its own fashion, the problem of getting and conserving a water supply. The building of a reservoir, such as that possessed by the "water barrel" is only one of many expedients employed.

The cacti in cages, set out in condensed-cream tins, are placed in open sunshine, so as to be exposed to the same weather conditions as those growing in the ground; and ordinary vegetables and other plants familiar in humid regions are raised alongside of them in similar pots. The differences noted are striking; for it is found that under such circumstances turnips and cabbages, for example, have to be watered several times a day to keep them in health, whereas the desert plants thrive for a long time without receiving so much as a drop.

In summer, in the arid region about Tucson, come rains; and the ground everywhere in the neighborhood of the laboratory becomes for a brief time literally covered with seedlings of ever so many kinds of annual plants. These plants, in order to accomplish survival, complete a hasty growth during the moist season, and pass the rest of the year in the form of seeds. Hardly have they sprouted when they extend long tap roots into the deeper layers of the soil; and some of them are in bloom within four or five weeks after germination.

One conclusion derived from the recent experiments is that "the open formation of desert plants makes it possible for them to draw upon a large area of soil for water supply." In other words, for each plant there is a considerable space of ground, from which moisture may be derived. Besides (to mention another fact ascertained), there is always a good deal of water in the deeper soil of the desert; and the plants go after it with burrowing tap roots.

The experts infer that it is for the purpose of accommodating themselves to such unfavorable conditions as they find in waterless regions that the plants assume such extraordinary forms, among which none are more strange and freakish than those of the cacti—weird, misshapen examples of vegetation, which adopt guises at once monstrous and repellant.

The giant cactus (conspicuously represented in the neighborhood of the desert laboratory) vies in size with large trees; and the starlike flowers which it bears in spring are replaced in late summer by brilliant red, pear-shaped fruits, containing a scarlet pulp with a flavor like strawberry jam. Each year, when these fruits are ripe, the Indian women gather them, press the juice out of them, and collect it in pottery jars—in which receptacles it is allowed to ferment, being thus transformed into a highly intoxicating beverage, of which the natives are exceedingly fond.

There is, however, in that part of the world one species of cactus even greater in size than the so-called giant cactus, attaining a height of fifty feet when full-grown. To science it is known as Cereus pinglei, but its popular name is "comb cactus," the latter designa- tion being bestowed upon it by reason of the fact the horse chestnut-like burs containing its b fruits are used by the Indians for combing their ha the long spiny bristles serving the purpose admirably.

But the most remarkable thing about this k of cactus, perhaps, is that it bears large num bers of neatly-shaped bowls, which natives as receptacles for water. The way in which th comes about is very curious. Woodpeckers ex cavate nests in the trunk and branches, and, to protect itself, the plant emits a sticky juice, which hardens, forming a woody lining for each hole made by a bird. Eventually the cactus dies, and, being compo mainly of water, shrinks to a mere skeleton; but the "wooden" bowls remain intact. To the Indians th plant is sacred, and they imitate the bowls in pottery of their own manufacture.

As for desert plants of possible economic value, there are not many, certainly; but undoubtedly there are a few—such, for instance, as the "canaigre," the root of which yields 30 per cent. of tannin—and efforts will be made to develop some of them, with a view to their in troduction into cultivation. But the main object of the investigation, as already explained, is to find out h such plants store and economize their water supply— with a view to applying in a practical way the lesso which they teach to the production of crops in the dri parts of the country.

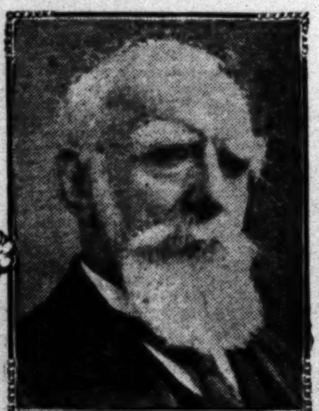
CARNIVAL MAKING A NEW ERA IN SCOTCH UNIVERSITY LIFE.

By Prof. James Main Dixon.

DOINGS such as have astonished the quiet folk of Aberdeen in Scotland do not take place very often; not once in a century. Aberdeen has not had such a carnival during the 400 years since she first had a university—away back in the days of James the Fourth, who died at Hadden. A new era seems to have begun in the life of the Scottish universities when they are striving, in buildings and equipment, to rival the splendor of the palatial halls that have recently been springing up over our American continent.

The new Marischal College Buildings, Aberdeen, recently opened by King Edward.



Lord Strathcona

The two Scottish-born graybears who attracted most attention in these academic gatherings were millionaires who had made their fortunes on the American continent. One was Lord Strathcona, the grand old man of Western Canada, who is now chancellor of the University of Aberdeen, and, as such, dispensed the honors. Born eighty-six years ago in the Highlands of Scotland, as plain Donald Alexander Smith, he early crossed the Atlantic to find a career in the Hudson Bay Company, of which he became the last resident governor. He has seen Manitoba grow into a populous province, and Winnipeg become a busy city; and the marvelous expansion of the Canadian northwest territory has made him many times a millionaire. Aberdeen University owes much to Strathcona's liberality, and on this great occasion, the formal opening of the magnificent new halls of Marischal College, he gave a banquet to no fewer than 2500 guests. The memorable dinner took place in the Strathcona Hall, built for the occasion, and was a sight not soon to be forgotten. There were in it twenty-two tables—in addition to the chairman's—stretching the whole width from end to end of the hall. The caterers were the London firm of Lyons and seven hundred trained waiters were brought by special train from London, and all the arrangements worked without a hitch.

The other notable Scotch-American was Andrew Carnegie, who was constantly by the side of Lord Strathcona, as lord rector of the sister University of St. Andrews. He has also given munificently to the funds of the University of Aberdeen.

The buildings of Marischal College are in ornate Tudor, a style of building which of late years has found popular favor with architects who have to study problems of this kind. Bryn Mawr College, near Philadelphia, was the first notable success in this way, and the new additions to Princeton University are giving the buildings of that institution the same Elizabethan flavor. Marischal College seems to revive much of the glory of that palace of academic fames—King's College chapel, Cambridge.

The services on the occasion began in the Old Town, or Aulton, at King's College Chapel, the interior of which contains some of the finest woodwork carving to be found anywhere. No less a personage than the Archbishop of Canterbury took part in the opening religious ceremonies. As it happens today, both the Archbishops of Canterbury and of York, the Lord Chancellor of England, and the Prime Minister, are Scotchmen born and bred. Archbishop Davidson was therefore on his native heath. After the religious exercises, the procession formed and bent its way down Upperkirkgate, along Schoolhill and Union Terrace, into Union street, where it was seen at its best. Thence it passed up Broad street past Marischal College to Strathcona Hall. James Bryce, Member of Parliament for South Aberdeen and chief secretary for Ireland, was in the procession, and held an honored place, being a former lord rector of the university. There were French delegate professors in orange silk gowns, a delegate from Cairo in eastern fez, and distinguished Germans like Ostwald of Leipsic, not to mention others. This was on Tuesday.

On Thursady the King and Queen arrived amid general jubilations. King Edward apeared to be in excellent form. He was clad in field marshal's uniform, and Queen Alexandra in quiet black. The King's speech proved a surprise. Far from confining himself to dumb show, he spoke in stentorian tones, that carried his voice to every ear in the great crowd. After the first shock of surprise, each sentence was closely followed. He read his speech, but as if he were familiar with the flow of the words. He spoke in appreciation of the undertaking represented in the extension of the college, which is specifically the scientific part of the university. When he was asked to pronounce the formal opening, his voice, without any strain, rang out loud and clear: "I now declare these new buildings open." It was the first time for 250 years that a king had visited the granite city.

Prof. Wilhelm Ostwald, LL.D., of Leipsic, perhaps the most eminent modern chemist, was asked to give his impressions of the gathering. The first thing that struck him, he said, was its international character. "Invitations were," he said, "not only sent to, but also readily accepted by, scientists all over the world. And at the several meetings one could observe, from all sides, that international relations were not formed on this occasion for the first time, but simply renewed. The same people who met here in the North of Scotland had met before in Berlin or Rome, in St. Louis or Geneva. It is undoubted that scientists are at the present time, as they were 300 years ago, the most international of men. This is quite natural, because there is nothing so independent of land, race, and creed as science is. Next to it comes art; but it has always, and must have, the flavor of the soil. Thus the idea of international peace has no stronger promoter than the scientist.

"One great hindrance to this beneficial development is the diversity of languages. It would lead much too far to discuss this question here, so I may limit myself to express my strong conviction that this problem is on the way of being practically solved by means of an international auxiliary language, which shall be the second language for every one. Esperanto has already proved itself very fit for such use.

"Secondly, I want to express my admiration of the perfect success in carrying on the rather complicated machinery of the different ceremonies. Everything was perfectly successful, except, perhaps, the hearing of the toasts, which was impossible to many at the very important concluding dinner owing to the size of the room. The question how to address an auditory of several thousand people, and to be understood by every one, is so urgent in our days that I may be permitted to suggest a possible solution. If the text of the address were projected by means of an optical lantern on a large screen above the speaker, line by line appearing as he proceeds, every one could follow his words, and the acoustical fog which is so hard to get through would not be formed.

"I feel quite sure that these days of Aberdeen will leave a lasting and pleasant impression upon every stranger who had the good fortune to take part in them. May I also express my hope that the personal contact of so many men who have done good work in their several branches of learning has left germs of scientific thought, and that hospitable Aberdeen may see these seeds grow and bear fruit tenfold and a hundredfold."

The story of Marischal College is an interesting one. The site occupied by the present building was formerly occupied by a Franciscan convent, founded in the fifteenth century. At the troubles of the Reformation it came as part of the church spoils into the hands of the fifth Earl Marischal, who devoted it to the purpose of a "gymnasium, academia and collegium" in accordance with the "principles and scheme which he had recommended to the church and government." The new college was meant to be on a residential basis, and "no woman was to be allowed to reside within its walls." It was this same George Keith, Earl Marischal of Scotland, who went to Denmark and completed the match which brought the Princess Anne to Edinburgh to be wife of James the Sixth. Later Anne became Queen of England and was the mother of King Charles the Martyr.

The building that was furnished by the Earl did service until the year 1689, when it was replaced by another. This building did duty until 1837, when a more modern building was erected at the cost of $100,000.

Until the year 1860, Marischal College had a separate university charter, and was a rival of King's College, the old foundation in the Old Town or "Aulton." Marischal College stands, or rather has been buried, among a labyrinth of "mean streets" in the busy east end of the thriving seaport city. But it is a central and progressive east end, and a wide-awake municipality is rapidly sweeping away the slums and rookeries that would hide the handsome new pile of white Kemnay granite. The towers, pinnacles and carvings of the Tudor palace, when seen on a bright day or a moonlight night, present a fairy-like appearance, and are the pride of the "silver city by the sea."

In the year 1860, the union of King's and Marischal into one University of Aberdeen was carried through after much opposition, and the change left Marischal essentially the medical college of the institution. The lord rector of the university is Sir Frederick Freves, physician to King Edward, a fitting occupant of the post at the present time, when its medical school has been so nobly equipped. About $900,000 has been spent on the extension, about half of which was subscribed by the late Dr. Mitchell of Newcastle and his son, and by Lord Strathcona. The grand Mitchell Tower soars 265 feet above the city and stands over the fine Mitchell Hall, with its fan-shaped roof, and noble east window.

HOW DWARFS AND CRIPPLES ARE TAUGHT.

Among the many charities in London there is none more interesting to the American visitor than the factory where girls who are blind, cripples in wheeled chairs, and dwarfs, some of them only a yard high, are taught the art of making artificial flowers, and when they have mastered the rudimentary branches they are paid for their time. The factory is maintained by the Water Cress and Flower Girls' Christian Mission, which was organized forty years ago by the late Earl of Shaftesbury, and it is now under the patronage of the Queen and the Princess of Wales. To give the girls some employment that would help them to feel that, after all, they could be of some use in the world was the desire of the Earl, whose notion of charity was to help others to help themselves, and the idea of making flowers was hit upon as being just the thing, for the work is light, cheerful, and interesting. The experiment was immediately successful. The girls, many of whom were unable to walk or to stand, developed such skill in making high-class flowers, for which there is always a market, that the charity soon became almost self-supporting, and the girls earned wages of from five to ten shillings a week. The cripples' factory soon became famous with dealers, and since its first few years it has prospered to such an extent that the cripples and the blind journey from all parts of the kingdom to enter the school.—[Harriet Quimby in Leslie's Weekly.

T[illegible] short, bright winter days have come, the fog [illegible] drifted away from the morning sky, there is a [illegible] and increasing glow in the sky after sunset, [illegible] the summer crowds have retired inland. Condi[illegible] are now more favorable for observing the ways of [illegible] these birds.

[illegible] are two kinds that at once arrest the attention [illegible] the beach stroller. There is a shovel-billed, black [illegible] that never comes ashore, except when dead or [illegible], but seems to spend its life amid the rollers. [illegible] a high, clear, combing wave breaks, you can some[illegible] see one of these birds apparently fixed in the [illegible] green, like a fly in amber. The bird is, of [illegible] diving through the wave, and odd enough it [illegible] down. There are hundreds of these ducks, [illegible] they always float at the same distance, about a gun[illegible] of shore. As repeating rifles are common and the [illegible] make a tempting mark, it is not surprising that [illegible] places their carcasses litter the beach. It is [illegible] killing, heartless selfishness, for they are [illegible] good for food.

[illegible] there are the gulls, who are as much at home on [illegible] beach as in the water. They do not like the surf, [illegible] instead of diving, they fly over a threatening wave. Attaching themselves to certain quarters of the shore as the gulls do, nevertheless they roam about. Inland they will fly considerable distances, as far as the slaughter-houses on the Short Line, and wherever there are large workmen's camps, there they gather together on account of the garbage. But it is when a large school of fish comes in and the seiners cast their nets, that the pensioners of the beach quite their ordinary patrol of the sands. They seem to have early news of what is going on, and by the time the Japanese fishermen at Santa Monica Cañon are hauling their nets ashore, all the gulls from Venice to the east have assembled. They are there in hundreds. The air is filled with their clamor, the eye dazzled with the intervening curves of their flight. It is easy fishing for them in the shallow water, many little fish are spilled from the net dead and float. A gull, of course, never dives, but it will make a long swooping curve and snatch a fish from the surface. Then there is the offal for them to gorge on, for the Japs must clean their fish for market, and the beach is strewn with heads and entrails. After a great haul of fish and a daylong feast on garbage, the congregation of gulls is for the time replete and satisfied. They will stand around on the beach, stupefied with high feeding, too careless to get out of the way of strollers. But the flocks always return to their particular beats. It is only at the breeding season, about May, that their usual haunts are deserted.

Now and again the beach stroller gets a chance of watching the ways of the pelicans. These great birds are not reguir residents, they follow the movements of the migrating fish along the coast. When they visit the bay, they come four or five together, flapping along in Indian file, just above the surface of the sea. They have come on a tour of inspection, and, if they decide to try the fishing, they separate and ascend to a height of a hundred feet or more in the air. From that elevation anything moving in the water is doubtless plainly visible. They fly to and fro, now beating the air, now skimming with outspread pinions, quartering the fields of air, just as a pointer quests the harvest stubble. Suddenly up goes the tail, the long bill points directly down, and with closed wings the pelican drops into the sea, raising a fountain of spray. It is not a plummet-like fall, however, for the bird makes one corkscrew turn cn his way down, and enters the water obliquely. When he comes up again, the pelican, exhausted perhaps by his long dive, sits motionless for a minute or two. Then he points his bill to the sky, opens it a little, and tilts the contents of his well-filled pouch down his gullet.

When the big diver has made a very successful scoop, a few fish drop from his overloaded bag into the water. Here comes in the opportunity of our friend the gull to work his favorite graft. These wily shore birds know all about the habits of the great fisher. They are as well prepared to exploit him for an easy mark as an experienced pickpocket is to handle a crowd at a race track. When the pelican bobs up, two or three gulls fly at full speed to the spot. They drop just astern of the big fellow, and range themselves by his side, like shore boats against a tall liner, ready to pick up the fish that spill over from his swallowing. Sometimes a gull will rise on the wing and deftly snatch a fish out of the angle of the pelican's bill. The great bird, as a rule, does not resent these attentions, but if the gulls are too troublesome, he may have a movement of his ungainly bill in their direction. But it is no trick for the nimble fliers to avoid the blow. A battleship might as well attempt to ram a torpedo boat. At certain seasons San Diego Bay used to be a capital place for watching the maneuvers of pelicans. They would come in among the wharves, diving and splashing at short range and in full view of the pier fishers and loungers.

On the beach, after a heavy day's fishing, pelicans sometimes come ashore. They squat on the sands among the shore birds, huge feather bags on short, thick legs. Easy as their flight looks, when they are hovering high up in the air, it is quite an effort for them to get under way. They flap and scramble through the sand and shallow water, half running, half flying, till they have acquired sufficient momentum. Then they launch themselves into the air, and with rapid beats of their powerful wings get into their stride.

In marked contrast to the lumbering evolutions of this heavy-weight is the graceful flight of another bird, seen occasionally when fish are plentiful, the long-winged white tern. It flies with the rapid, whirling darts of a swallow. Its wings are unusually long and pointed, resembling in this respect the tropical frigate bird, although it is of course much smaller. This bird dives for its prey. At one moment it may be seen high up, a white speck against the blue sky; in the next it has swooped in a long and beautiful curve, struck the water, and soared again. It reminds one of the bird that never rests: the mysterious Huma, "always on the wing," to which Oliver Wendell Holmes' lecturer too frequently compared himself.

About the piers one may sometimes see a kingfisher, perched on a rail or fluttering like a hawk above the water. This is a larger bird than its namesake of the trout streams, nor has it the same brilliancy of plumage. In color it is of a dull blue, with white underneath, and it sports a black crest. It does not dive, but skins the surface of the water with a bill big enough to accommodate a sardine.

The neighborhood of the piers is the happy hunting ground of the diver, especially of the common slaty black kind called the "hell diver." Whether the name was given the bird on account of its color, its skill in diving, or because it makes itself an infernal nuisance to fishermen by stealing their bait, seems to be undecided. Its dark back and snaky neck just show themselves out of water, like a submarine boat; the next moment it has vanished in search of surf fish, and where it will bob up serenely is hard to say. A hundred yards away, perhaps, where the water is clear, you can follow their dive with the eye, till their web feet disappear in the depths. Occasionally the pier angler hauls one up on his line, with half a dozen hooks in its gullet, and has to kill the bird to free his line.

There is another diver that occasionally shows up in these waters, a bird with a white head and a long neck that carries itself like a swan. Indeed, the common hell diver compares with this handsome kind as a mud hen does with a swan.

Besides the above-mentioned birds, there are the occasional visitors. Ducks, of course, sometimes fly parallel with the shore on their way to the ponds and sloughs. Sometimes a brown curlew will rise from the mud where it has been feeding, and show its peculiar curved bill as it stretches its neck to fly. Or, as you stroll along the sands, at low tide, you put up a flock of sandpipers, tiny little piping birds that seem to change color as they wheel in their flight.

There is always something in the way of bird life for the observant eye to notice on our shores, these brilliant winter days of human interest in the shape of sailing vessels and steamers there is very little to be seen as compared with the Atlantic Coast. The big liners keep too far away. There are only the 'Frisco boats, and the lumber vessels, to help make up a marine picture. As often as not the seascape is a blue and empty blank.

HOW TO BECOME A FARMER.

SUGGESTIONS FOR AMBITIOUS AMATEURS ABOUT TILLING THE SOIL.

By a Special Contributor.

The farmer's calling is the noblest of them all, for the hand that wields the cradle is the hand that feeds the world.

It is therefore a noble aspiration on your part to seek to become a tiller of the soil instead of a $9-a-week soiler of the till.

To make a success at the business of farming, you will need plenty of ambition and get-up. This get-up will come in handy early in the morning when you have to go down stairs and do the farm work before you call the hired man.

In addition to these two inherent qualities, a careful study of the following receipts is all you will need to make a successful farmer. Of course, these instructions are not for wealthy business men in the cities who start in at middle life to own and operate a farm at long distance. They are operatic farmers, who have ideas of their own in addition to what they acquire from books.

In buying a farm, be sure to select a piece of ground. This is a very important matter. The ground should have a gentle slope to prevent water from collecting in pools and destroying the mortgages. Any large hollow or gully can be filled up by dumping into it old rubbish such as tomato cans, book agents, broken dishes, lightning-rod peddlers, campaign literature, worn-out threshing machines, candidates for office, and other things you do not want lying around.

If you wish to plant wheat, potatoes or onions, great care should be taken to see that the ground is plowed before planting. The plowing can easily be done by yourself, the hired man or your wife when she is not busy loading hay or chopping wood. The matter of plowing is a very important one, and great care should be taken to keep incessantly yelling "Gee" and "Whoa, haw," and a continual jerking at the lines, so that if a neighbor happens to see you at work he will not think you are a greenhorn.

On arising in the morning, great care should be taken not to awaken the hired man until after you have finished your chores and are ready for breakfast. By all means, do not call him. Wait until he comes down late for breakfast, and then give him his calling.

Besides, he may have been holding your neighbor's eldest and fattest daughter on his lap for two or three hours the night before, and has earned his rest. You can't tell—and he wouldn't tell if you asked him.

A good time to milk a cow is in the morning and evening. You can then attend to your other work during the day without being interrupted. Do not try to milk a cow by squeezing her horns. Always do your milking at the udder end.

If Bossie has a fashion of sticking her foot into the bucket while you are milking, a good way to break her of the habit is to hang the bucket on her horns and then milk into the bucket. It may appear hard at first to direct the stream into the bucket when hanging in this position, but after a little practice it will become easier.

If you intend to raise a calf, great care should be exercised not to wean it until after it is born.

The best all-around cow for farm purposes is a mixture of Holstein and Maltese. She will give milk like a cow, and at the same time keep the rats out of the corn crib while, by that portion of humanity who love to sleep after midnight, a considerable change in her voice for the better will be noticed.

The best way to overcome bad habits in a mean or fractious horse is by the use of silent prayer accompanied by a dull thud. When you come to, advertise him for sale as a safe family horse.

If hog cholera breaks out among your chickens and other domestic animals, kill them before it has a chance to ruin all the stock on the place.

A good way to keep roosters from crowing during the night is to make them sleep on their right side. It will take some patience to accomplish this, but the reward will be worth the effort.

Eggs can be preserved and made to retain their freshness by laying them on their backs.

If your hens develop a desire to sit when they ought to be laying, you can break them of their inclination by setting them an example.

If you will carefully follow the above advice, it will not be long until your mortgages will be paid off or foreclosed.

If there is anything in the above advice you do not clearly understand, you are at liberty to write me.

CALIFORNIA BRODIAEAS.

CHARACTERISTICS BY WHICH THEY MAY BE IDENTIFIED.

By Ernest Braunton.

BROADIAEAS can be distinguished from any other lily that is likely to be found in Southern California by the fact that its six divisions are united into a tube, only showing themselves as six lobes at the end of the tube. Our commonest species, which blooms so early, and is so abundant everywhere, is often called "California Hyacinth," and its flowers of blue-purple have very much the shape and substance of those of the single garden hyacinth. But instead of being in a spike, they are gathered into a sort of head at the end of the flower stalk. None of our other species have their flowers in such heads, and this capitate way of flowering suggested the botanical name, Brodiaea (Hookera) capitata.

To enable you to identify our other Brodiaeas it will be necessary to ask you to pull the flower open and examine the organs within it. They all have trumpet-shaped flowers, that is tubular, with a flaring mouth. Now if every one of the six stamens has an anther it is the species known as "Grass Nuts" (B. laxa), because the leaves are grass-like and the cone (solid bulb) from which it grows is edible, as, indeed, is the case with all the species I have tried. The flower is about two inches long, violet-purple, and divided almost to the middle. Altogether it is a beautiful species, and in our region a rare one, being found only in the hills near Los Angeles.

SCENE IN HOLLENBECK HOME GROUNDS.

There are three species which have flowers with only three anthers, but alternate with these are three other infertile stamens called staminodia, which are without anthers. It is largely by the shape and length of these staminodia that we are able to recognize the different.

In the Harvest (B. coronaria) the staminodia are shaped something like a willow leaf, and are sharp pointed, and they are shorter than the anthers. This species has a fine violet-purple flower nearly two inches long. It gets its common name from the fact that in the central valleys of the State it flowers at the time of the hay harvest, in May, but with us it retires into the mountains, where it is not very common, and does not flower till midsummer.

The linear-leaved Brodiaea (B. filifolia) has very narrow leaves, dark blue flowers less than an inch long, and the anthers are almost twice the length of the triangular staminodia. As yet it has been found only about San Bernardino, where it grows in meadows.

The smaller Brodiaea (B. minor) perhaps owes its name to a comparison with the Harvest Brodiaea, which it somewhat resembles, but than which it is in every way smaller. Its flower stalk, three to six inches, is but a third as tall as in that species, and the flower is at most an inch long. It is blue in color, and the terminal segments spread widely, or even curve backward; its staminodia are tongue-shaped, not acute at the lip, and are larger than the anthers. It is a plant of the brookside or of the spring hills, and has been found in many places, but appears here to be abundant.

Sleep of Plants.

Nature demands a resting spell for all her children, and even in countries where the frost never comes and flowers bloom all the year round, the trees grow weary, and often drop their leaves for a short nap between times. In the plant, just as in the animal world, there is a great difference between individuals. Some are weak, some are strong, some are rough, some are smooth, some are stolid, some sensitive. In the quiet country they thrive and flourish because there they can sleep at night while in the artificial light and impure air of the city—the gas, the electric glare—they really suffer from insomnia and lack of rest. Even in the growing season they need periods of rest. All day the sap, or life blood, ascends from root to tip of plant, where it evaporates in the sunshine or is absorbed by some vital process and changed into living protoplasm. All day this goes on, but when the sun goes down nature checks the work growing and puts her children to sleep.

Herbaceous Perennials.

Most of these plants will grow where any plant will. Good garden soil, warm and light, rather than cold and heavy, is preferable. They do not do well in wet undrained soil. Fine manure, carefully forked in each spring, pays in better plants and more flowers. In setting plants, break up and mellow the soil for a spade's depth. Fill the hole, which is half deeper than roots are long, with water. Set the plant in, spread the roots well, so that none will remain in a dense mass. Work the soil well in among them, taking care that no hollow places are left. Press the soil firmly in against the roots. Cover with fine rich dirt on top; or better still, with well-rotted manure; water thoroughly. The weeds should be kept down and the soil stirred enough to keep the surface dirt light and open. As the flowers pass their prime the flowering stems should be cut away, not as a matter of neatness, but to prevent the plant from exhausting itself in perfecting seeds. If seeds are wanted, leave a sufficient number of stems.

Amazon Lilies.

A Santa Barbaran has some Eucharis Amazonica which has been "resting" for some time, as advised by a local gardener, and wishes to know where to start them and how to grow to success. Pot into a soil composed of rich garden loam, leaf mould and some most thoroughly decayed cow manure. With plants of this nature, one point should be borne in mind; the assimilation of nutrition takes place only at the end of the roots. There are no numerous lateral fibrous roots all along the main ones that will go on with the work in case the ends are broken off or injured. So the ends must ever be pushing around, in and out, over and under, in order to get what is there in the soil. For this reason the soil should never get hard. Water should not accumulate so as to exclude air or cause sourness but should be given frequently to avoid drying. The pot is best placed on a bench with bottom heat, but spread sphagnum moss around to prevent the heat drying either the leaves or roots, as it may when the pipes are hot and atmospheric humidity low. A temperature of 65 to 75 degrees is necessary. A good crop of leaves will be the first indication of success, after which bloom will come if the proper conditions are maintained. Some fine Eucharis were this year grown by Mr. Gowens at Eastlake Park Conservatory.

There is no work more entrancing than that of the arrangement of the home grounds, location of flower beds, drives and paths; and the proper adjustment in the size, shape and color in the placing of the principal buildings. The country home has the advantage over the cramped grounds of the city, and has ample space for the proper disposition of all the above noted features.

THE OBNOXIOUS BILLBOARD.

HOPE FOR THE MOVEMENT BEGUN BY PUBLIC-SPIRITED WOMEN.

IT REALLY looks as though we are to have a campaign against the unsightly billboard that will be productive of good results. A small band of public-spirited women have inaugurated a warfare that will not cease until these blots upon the landscape belong only to our past history. One of the first necessary steps in making a city beautiful is the removal of all unnecessary unsightly objects, to which class the billboard certainly belongs.

No object of like size is so offensively obtrusive, for its commercial value depends upon its conspicuousness and thereby it is rudely thrust before one's eyes just at the time and place that the traveler is looking for the greatest natural beauty. It really seems that the well-balanced business man would recognize that this is offensive to all beholders and find more respectable means of advertising his wares. Certain it is, if all billboards were removed business would not suffer in the least; this being granted, wherein is the compensation for the prostitution of our choicest landscapes.

Though agitation against these ingeniously-placed disfigurements is yet in its infancy in Los Angeles, we have great faith in the outcome of the battle, fully believing that our people will eventually awaken to the necessity of making our fair land as welcome to the tourist as possible instead of driving him to distraction by these glaring, staring witnesses of municipal stupidity and paucity of appreciation of the beautiful. No business can be promoted by improper means; the number of those who will not patronize billboard advertisers is growing apace, and time, which levels all things, may be trusted to bring about the reaction which will recall our billboard advertisers to their senses. We trust that in some of the most flagrant cases the penalty for these outrages will be keenly felt and the fact clearly established that less obtrusive methods of advertising will bring better results.

Our Peerless Southland.

How Southern California compares with Hawaii is shown by the following from the pen of Charles Mulford Robinson:

"If one could go with his eyes closed from Chicago to the Golden Gate, there certainly would be no sense of disappointment in the first impression made by the vegetation of the Hawaiian Islands after six days of sailing on the ocean. But all the way across the continent one's eyes are very much open, and going as I did, by way of Southern California, with frequent stops of several days at a time—and always saying to one's self, 'Those palms are fine, but wait for Honolulu; these flowers are lovely, but think of the tropical blooms that we shall see; and these green fields, and hillsides verdant beneath the warm rains and brilliant sun of the California winter, are well in their way; but one must be temperate in admiration since the tropics are yet to be seen'—if one could go to Honolulu with none of this experience, there could be no disappointment. But after the roses of California, after the riot of flowers in park and garden, by wayside and in wood and field, which California offers to the winter traveler, the first views of the Hawaiian Islands and of Honolulu are not quite all one hoped.

"The northern side of the island of Oahu, which is the first land seen at close range, is bleak and bare. Rising just into the sea, extinct volcanoes raise bleak sides in a gaunt and naked sternness that the tints of softening distance scarcely hide; and when the end of the island has been rounded, and skirting the southern shore one comes into the harbor, the land is yet so far away that in the larger features of the scene—in the beauty of peak and crater and of shadowy valley, and in the interest of the structures of the city—one quite forgets to notice the cocoanut palms, which in pictures give the necessary touch of tropicalness.

"In the first days there is recognized the beauty of the hills, but they are not quite as high as one had expected—not really mountains, on the island upon which is Honolulu; and one misses a wealth of garden flowers. There are no roses, a Japanese beetle having destroyed them all some years ago and successfully prevented their culture since, and the few flowers raised in gardens—as petunias, geraniums and nasturtiums—seem not more flourishing than in the Eastern States. The banana is stunning but scraggly, and its big leaves have become familiar in California. The graceful pepper tree is not as beautiful here as on the coast; the orange and lemon trees are hardly as good, and for the common date and fan-leaved palm one had no need to cross 2000 miles of ocean. The whole effect is not, in short, the sum of many additions—California plus and plus—and in the first recognition of its algebraic character, that there are deductions to be made, one does feel a pang of disappointment."

School Gardens Abroad.

Sweden has had school gardens for many years past, and their number now amounts to several thousands. Belgium, Switzerland, Austria, France and Germany have all taken up the idea. Wherever it has been carried out the results are recognized as being most valuable, and people wonder that they did not think of it before.

It has been found that the children take up this study with great interest and with such success that they turn every little bit of ground at home to account and provide the family with vegetables. Taught the latest and best systems of agriculture, they develop into really intelligent agriculturists, and are ready, which we are not, to discard old and wasteful methods for the newest and the best.

As an example of what is being done in this way, take the case of Belgium. Here, in the country districts, many schools have plots of ground varying in extent from an acre upward, where a thorough grounding in agriculture science is given. The younger children are taught the use of the spade, hoe, rake, trowel and watering pot, together with such knowledge as suits their young minds regarding peas, beans, cabbages, potatoes, apples, pears, plums, strawberries, cherries carrots onions, parsley and tobacco. This is easy and pleasant work compared with the sums, writing and reading of the indoor school. Such young children, five years old and upward, are also familiarized with the habits of a few of the commoner animals, the swallow, titmouse, sparrow, lark, finch, mole, hedgehog, caterpillar butterfly and May bug.

Street Tree Control.

Undesirable conditions will always exist as long as street trees, although standing within the limit of the highway, are considered and treated as the property of the owners of the adjoining grounds. The property owner looks upon the street trees principally in their relation to his own house and grounds and loses sight of their importance as an ornament to the street.

That municipal ownership alone can remedy such conditions is obvious and the more the value of street trees, as being beneficial and helpful to the general public and ornamental and useful to the community at large, becomes recognized the more will the public become convinced that city authorities should control the shade-giving street trees and that they are as essential to the welfare and attractiveness of the city as the roadways and sidewalks are important to its traffic and Italy's Popular King.

THIRTY-SEVENTH BIRTHDAY ANNIVERSARY OF THIS MONARCH.

By a Special Contributor.

BORN thirty-seven years today—wherefore he is the youngest of Europe's nineteen monarchs, saving only the lately-married Alfonso of Spain, the lately-crowned Haakon of Norway, and Queen Wilhelmina of Holland—Italy's Vittorio Emanuele III is one of the ablest as well as one of the most popular of the continent's "titled figureheads." This last nickname, indeed, applies to him not at all. Coming to his throne a little more than six years ago (July 29, 1900, to be exact), the only son of Margherita and the murdered Humbert, more Austrian than Italian by blood, he has yet proved himself every inch a king. He is truly admirable whether as father, or sportsman, or the sole executive of a state ranking high among the old world "powers."

Italy is Victor's "business house." Most of the schemes for its improvement, in this direction or the other, have been born in his brain, and then guided to success under his eye. He is responsible for the purchase by the state of the railway lines of the peninsula. He is to be thanked for the steady Latinization of the Mediterranean commerce, while the plan of the moment is the creation of a national agricultural department, which is to teach the farmers to raise at least wheat enough for home consumption. Already some steps have been taken in this direction, while in a similar field of labor, vine growing, modern and scientific training is so improving upon the older methods of wine manufacture, that it is beginning to be possible to export that European staple in fairly considerable quantities.

KING VICTOR EMMANUEL

Two hobbies rule this king. He proposes to make Italy's army the best of its size in the world, and he is keen to spy out official extravagance and then quite as keen in pruning it from the budget. One of the first acts of his reign showed this last pointedly. Prinetti, then Minister of Foreign Affairs, had asked for an augmentation of his office force, and Victor had taken the matter under advisement. The very next morning, sharp at 9, he entered the Foreign Offices, where he found just one single clerk, smoking cigarettes. Of this astounded young man the monarch learned that the office hours were from 8 to 12, and that his confreres might be expected in scarcely before 10 or a quarter after.

"Well, I'll not wait," remarked Victor; "when your chief comes in, tell him I called." And Prinetti afterward said that he felt he got off easily merely to be advised to use the clerks he had a little better before asking for more.

The King himself is invariably at his own desk by 9 of a morning, a desk, too, which stands in the most unpretentious of offices. The proprietor is not only a man of simple personal tastes and strict business ideas, but his delicate youth meant for him a very Spartan bringing-up, which is resulting today in sensible living as well as in an almost perfect physique.

Charming Queen Helena is quite at one with "Royal Italy" in this little matter of money-saving. When Victor had finished with his departments, he turned his attention to the Quirinal. First of all he cleared the stables of a small army of useless grooms, and sold eighty horses. Then his eye lit upon the palace kitchens—and with 430 people inhabiting the great building, he there found ample scope for economy. The chef himself was "docked." That awful potentate was so shocked as to be all but ill, but he bore up in order to have revenge. "Roba da bambino" (childish things!) he called the march of saving, and forthwith begged audience of the Queen. It was small comfort he got. "Why should you complain?" asked that clever Montenegrin princess. "You are getting more now than the Minister of War in my country." And the chef found nothing more to say.

King and Queen stand close together in all questions and pursuits. Together, for instance, they do most of their reading, each preferring books dealing with the busy world of today rather than mere novels, and each, too, preferring the monthly and quarterly reviews to daily papers. Their individual tastes send Helena into the realm of verse (she is herself a poetess of real attainments), while Victor is especially fond of the study of languages. He reads and speaks French, German and English quite as well as he does his native Italian, and reads Russian with some readiness.

His people did not need to see their ruler working personally in the region devastated by last spring's earthquake and volcanic eruption to love him dearly. Only the other day a well-known anarchist, Dutto by name, who had gained admission to the Racconigi Palace disguised as a showman, and had there displayed a cinematograph entertainment, for which the royal host had warmly shaken him by the hand, made this remarkable statement: "I had not even ill-intentions upon our good King" (he was speaking to the police who had somewhat tardily arrested him). "He is a wise and sincere man. I just wanted to meet him personally, and knew you would never let me in my own character." Most of Italy feels in just this kindly way.

Their chief executive holds his people the closer to him, too, through his steady warfare against red-tapeism. Only the other day the dispatches told a story to this point. A very poor woman, suffering keenly from an injury, was taken to the hospital of Carmagnola, near the Racconigi Palace. There she was denied admission. She plainly needed immediate care, but she did not live in the district within which the hospital held jurisdiction, and she was painfully carried back home.

Somehow the matter came to the ears of Helena the very next morning, and she lost not a moment in telling it to her husband, who instantly ordered out his motor. The royal pair hurried first to the hamlet where the woman lived, and then, assured that she had been made comfortable, they turned off to the offending hospital, and popular rumor now has it that the director of the erring institution will never again refuse admission to any one from any where.

Many are the stories told of this kingly "bubblist," an expect in all automobile matters, as well able to repair his own car as to drive it. He has been held up by customs officers on the French frontier; he has covered 218 miles in fifteen hours, taking out quite two hours for an al fresco luncheon, and he owns eleven cars of as many makes (which does not suggest economy).

Some two years ago, while driving through the streets of Rome, he turned a corner a bit too rapidly and nearly collided with another motor approaching from the other direction. Pulling up to apologize, he was greeted with a storm of indignation from the threatened driver, an American.

Dressing him down, as the visitor himself might have put it, he ended with: "Scorchers like you should be strung up!"

"What, in front of the very palace?" asked his Majesty, smiling.

"Don't care where," roared the foreigner, "so long as it's done right!"

But this same American was presented at the Quirinal not a week later, and there he saw the motorist he had abused so lavishly. The tension was painful until the King, smiling, and with outstretched hand, remarked: "Are all your countrymen as peppery as you, sir?"

Much the same sense of humor lies in the Queen, who shares so many of these automobile expeditions. During one of the more recent tours, the two had arrived at a tiny town, unannounced and unexpected. It was just at the outlet to the Little St. Bernard Pass. Here a woman remarked to the distinguished-looking but unknown lady, standing by the great red car, that she much resembled "our gracious Queen." Her Majesty smiled, but did not explain matters. "I have been told so many times," was her only comment.

The eldest of the three children of this royal couple, little Yolande, the 5-year-old Princess, not only looks immensely like her beautiful mother, but also is blessed with that lady's distinctly original point of view. At villa Alda, the other day (one of the half-dozen country homes of Vittorio the Third) she arrived full of frank disgust at finding everything so clean. "I declare!" she exclaimed, in her old-fashioned way, "one would think we must be very untidy to have to be so cleaned up every time we move." Whereupon, as if to offset an unsatisfactory condition she went into the garden, plumped down in the first gravel walk handy, and got promptly and thoroughly dirty. Remonstrated with, her only reply was:

"Mafalda and Umberto are babies. They can stay white if they want to. I'm a big girl, and won't."

Umberto is Victor's heir, long-hoped-for, and therefore the more enthusiastically welcomed when he arrived upon the scene on the 15th of September, two years ago. His name in full is quite in keeping with the throne he is some day to occupy. It reads: "Umberto Nicola Tommaso Giovanni Maria, Prince of Piedmont, Heir Apparent."

This little fellow should be able to keep out of debt, as King, for, while most of the villas which in times belonged to his ancestors have been, since 1848, given to the state (the palatial home at Monza, where Humbert I was assassinated, has been the latest so to change hands), he yet will come into a "salary" of $3,080,000. This is more than goes to any other constitutional monarch, and is surpassed in the whole worldwide roster of such "civilists" only by those which are enjoyed by Czar Nicholas, the Sultan Abdul Hamid, and those five "absolute" rulers who pay themselves by taking just what they happen to think they want out of their lands' treasuries—the Shah of Persia, the King of Siam, the Emperor of Abyssinia, and those two mere boys who rule in China and Morocco.

As if this were not enough from which to eke out living expenses, Italy's ruler receives each year from his "dear cousin" on the uneasy dual throne of Austria-Hungary 10,000 cigars. How that odd annual gift originated is not at all clear, but it never fails to materialize.

With that amount of "pocket money," Victor can well afford to indulge in sports and music. He is a regular opera goer, as well as a performer on flute and violin of some accomplishment, and when it is remembered that Italy has far more operahouses, in proportion to the population, than any other country, it is easy to see how the royal enthusiast enjoys himself in this direction.

Out of doors he rides, rows and shoots, his Queen often joining him on gunning expeditions, though she prefers angling to rowing, and walking (and especially mountain climbing) to horseback exercise. But the King "shows up best," so far as sports are concerned, when he is in the water; no better swimmer lives, not even that stout Portuguese monarch, Carlos, whose reputation in this sport is international.

This story is told of Victor. It was just before the birth of his second daughter, now the Princess Mafalda, and he was aboard the royal yacht, lying well out in the harbor. A hard gale was blowing, and the waves were running dangerously, when a wireless message told of the premature confinement of the Queen. A small boat was ordered out, but was smashed against the side of the yacht almost as soon as it had touched the water. The captain then ventured to suggest that his Majesty wait till the weather had calmed a little, but that was not Victor's way of doing things. He said never a word, but his coat was on the deck and he himself was overboard before the astounded officer could make an attempt to hinder him. He swam safely ashore, and next day, there was another thing for all Italy to wonder at and praise.

Perhaps it is quite natural that his people should think so warmly of such a ruler. They are celebrating his birthday this very minute.

BALLOONING AS A SPORT.

SURPRISING SENSATIONS THAT COME TO THE AMATEUR AERONAUT.

The chief of American amateur balloonists is Dr. Julian P. Thomas, who has been persuaded to write a most interesting article on his adventures for Appleton's Magazine. Incidentally he says:

"I have often been asked how ballooning compares with other sports both in cost and in enjoyment. The first cost to those who wish to soar above the clouds is smaller than in automobiling; but each ascension costs some $300. A flight may last less than an hour, or it may continue the better part of a day. The tendency is toward flights of longer duration, as invention helps the aëronaut; and with the multiplication of its devotees, particularly among the amateurs, the records will become longer both in hours and miles.

"The delights of the sport are such that they are hard to describe to one who has never experienced them. They are so intense that in the reaction after they are over, the earth seems tame and not worth while. One has almost to become acclimated on descending from the high altitudes; for a week after an ascension I have no appetite and am depressed. Incidentally I should not recommend ballooning to a person of weak heart or nerves.

"To start an ascension one must already be an enthusiast; one must make one's will, and say good-by to each friends—and withstand the suggestion of ninety-nine out of a hundred of them that he will never come back alive. Inauspicious beginning to the most exhilarating and fascinating of sports!

"When one leaves the earth the impressions come so fast that one can hardly differentiate them. They produce a kaleidoscopic effect. A man must stop and concentrate his mind on certain special sensations, or else on returning to earth he will find that he has no sensation in particular to tell about. There is the impression of the crowd of people shouting and waving their hands. Before you realize it they have vanished, as individuals. The earth sinks from you; the houses become tiny boxes, the streets lines, and large rivers appear brooks that you could easily jump across. The lakes are pools, and marsh land seems solid. (This latter was the cause of my friend Nocquet's landing where he did, and sacrificing his life.) Forests become smooth like pasture land. Railroad trains are like crawling worms, and all the earth sounds eventually cease. At one or two thousand feet you pass the dust line, which is as clearly marked as the line between water and air. As high as 2000 feet there are still frequently seen butterflies, mosquitoes, and other insects. Remarkably beautiful effects of clouds are seen from the balloon, especially when the sun shines on them. They often seem like snow banks, and their edges are always bright like water, and ever give the aëronaut the sensation of approaching the ocean.

"When in the clouds, you can see only the basket and its occupants; and you may suddenly pass out of them to find that you are driving straight into a mountain peak—as we did once. If you stay in the fog there is nothing to warn you of such a danger except the roaring of the wind in the treetops, and a quick casting out of ballast may be necessary to save you from balloon wreck on the crags."

WILLING TO OBLIGE.

Uncle (to little Bertie, aged 5, who is being taken to bed:) Good-night, Bertie. Of course you always remember your aunts and uncles in your prayers?

Bertie: Oh yes, Uncle Felix. Shall I tell you what I say? I say, "God bless Aunty Kitty, and make her thin; and God bless Uncle James, and make him fat; and God bless Uncle Felix, and——" which do you want to be, fat or thin?—[London Punch.

The Stolen Cows.

A Thrilling Adventure With a Ferocious Bear.

By a Special Contributor.

It was the first season we worked the "lead" at Camy's Hollow, six years ago.

Harvey Seitz and I had prospected the "drift" in the hollow the spring before.

We were sure there was gold in the blue gravel, and secured a gang of thirteen miners to work it about the 20th of May. There was a good chance to bring down water from the hill streams above, and there was also plenty of timber. By July we were ready to commence piping on the gravel.

We had a good "head" of water. Our main pond was up in the hills five or six hundred feet above the bed of the hollow. This gave us so stiff a stream through our pipes at the lower end that the water would leave the nozzles in a straight white jet, that shot out full sixty feet. This jet, if struck with a stick, would ring like a steel rod.

The jets were only about four inches in diameter, but I think either one of them would have killed a man at ten feet from the nozzle as surely as a rifle ball. It was amazing how that hard blue clay would melt before the jets which we now began sending into the bank. Squiz-z-z-z-z! and the lumps and stones would fly before it.

Yet the clay here was uncommonly compact and hard, and we found it more expeditious to mine and blow up the banks, thus shattering and breaking it into loose masses before turning on the water.

We first used "rend rock" (mining powder) for blasting, and afterward, as we went deeper, nitro-glycerine. This latter explosive came in cans, of various sizes, each being packed in sawdust in a larger can.

An ordinary safety fuse was inserted in the can, to connect with a small charge of powder. The shock of the powder, when fired by the fuse, was sufficient to discharge the more terrific explosive.

One of these cans set in a tunnel drilled into the lofty gravel bank, when it was exploded would shatter enormous masses of the hard clay, and open fissures which the strong water jet would instantly cut broader and wash down.

We had a number of mule teams to do our carting and for supplying the camp with fresh milk and butter two cows had been driven up from a stock farm twenty miles below; for the hollow was back in a secluded gorge of the Sierras, where as yet nobody had settled.

It was a moist green valley. Springs from the pine-clad flanks of the mountains kept it fresh, and there was water in the creek throughout the dry season, with abundant shade.

To look after the cows, get them up nights and mornings, and milk them, we had a Pike boy, whom we had picked up on the stage road twenty or thirty miles below. His father and mother had "parted," he said, and left him nothing to do but "travel for his health." So he was traveling, ragged and dirty as a "Digger."

This boy's name, so he told us, was America Potter, which certainly bespoke patriotism somewhere among the senior Potters. The miners shortened this to Meck and Mecky. One or two of them called him "Uncle Sam," in allusion to his truly national name; and sometimes I used to hear him summoned as "Here, you Yankee Doodle boy!"

To all or any of these Meck used to answer equally well. "Call me wot you've a mind ter," he used to say, "but don't call me too late to grub."

Mecky was 13 or 14 years old, judging from his looks. He had no accurate statistics on the subject himself. We gave him the job of taking care of the cows.

But there was an older settler in that valley than we were. It was a bear, a grizzy, and a big one, it was just such as they there called a "Boody," from a hunter who had had a most doughty adventure with one single-handed. We had not been long in the valley before this bear introduced himself.

The cows used to go up the creek, feeding along in the open places for a mile or more. "Uncle Sam" had gone to drive them down one night, and I remember that we had just sprung a blast and were looking round it, when his cotton head was seen coming bobbing over the knolls. He was the most excited boy I ever saw—bareheaded and fairly crazy.

"Mister Seitz! Mister Seitz!" he panted out; "she's a gone cow! O Mister Sur, thar's the allfiredest biggest b'ar up yer! and he's jest froze ter ole Lineback, an' he's a munchin' her, an' t'other's made a bolt up the side!"

Two or three of the men took their guns and went with him, and after locking up the explosives, Mr. Seitz and I started after them.

It was a mile certainly up to where the cow had been killed. We saw the traces of the struggle, but bear and cow were gone, and Mecky and the others had followed on after them. A bloody trail, through grass and over bushes, showed where the cow had been dragged. Seitz and I hurried after till we had gone nearly or quite another mile.

Suddenly, as we went on, we heard two shots in quick succession. Then we heard excited shouts, which brought us to a stand, and the next moment we saw the men running back as fast as their legs could carry them.

"What's the matter, Jenks?" Seitz called out to one of them.

"You'll find out if you stay here!" exclaimed Jenks, as he bounded past us.

In a twinkling they rushed by, several of them calling out: "Run! run!"

Seitz and I thought it rather beneath our dignity to run. Instead of that, we stood where we were and cocked our carbines.

But just then we caught sight of the bear coming round a rock ten or twelve rods up the gorge. Of all the ugly-looking bears, he beat everything I had ever seen.

We changed our minds then, and without stopping for a shot, we both ran across the creek and out to the right through some bushes, and climbed a crag.

There we concluded to make a stand and fight.

But the "Boody" went another way. We neither saw nor heard anything more of him that day, and after waiting awhile, we went along down the crest of the ridge and crossed over to our works.

Jenks and the others told us that the bear had followed them half-way to the camp. Bullets, they said, weren't so much as peas with him; but it was doubtful if one of them had hit him.

Some of the gang were for turning out all hands and hunting down that bear at any cost, and some were for setting a pitfall for him. But we had just begun to strike into the "pay dirt," and neither Seitz nor I liked to lose time. We charged Meck, however, to watch the other cow, and not let her go far from camp up the hollow. We had a little corral built, and a shed to turn her into nights.

But our neighbor, the "Boody," had got a taste of free beef, and rather preferred it to jack rabbits. Our interview with him had taken place on Tuesday. Saturday morning early, before anybody was stirring, we heard a rumpus at the cow shed.

What waked me, however, was what seemed to be the firing of a gun. Everybody routed out in a hurry. "Yankee Doodle" came headforemost into our cabin before we were fairly on our feet.

"I say—Mister—Mister—Seitz, he's got t'other!" screamed the boy.

We ran out. True enough, the bear had broken into the corral and throttled the remaining cow. The noise he had made in dragging the poor creature out through the fence was what had woke us.

When we first ran out, the beast had not gone more than a hundred yards with his prize. Apgar, one of the miners, was shooting at him with a carbine, and several of the other workmen were out, or were loading their guns.

It was astonishing how fast the brute made off, dragging the cow at the same time. Before Seitz and I could get our cartridges, and put on our clothes and boots, the animal had gone half a mile.

The way the beast managed was to rest a second or two, then grapple the carcass and go at full leap for ten or fifteen rods as fast as a man could run. If he found the miners coming too near him, he would whirl and rush back at them, with two or three "barks" and then a growl, which sent them all to the right-about in a hurry. Not one of us dared to face him at close quarters.

With all his turnings and halts, the creature went about as fast as we could follow him. Seitz and I got so near that we fired five or six shots, however, some of which must have taken effect. Yet in spite of all the lead we could all of us send after him, the beast dragged off the cow. He was not an hour going three miles, to the place where he had his den, which we had not known of till that morning.

It was about the most singular place for a den I ever saw; for it was not among rocks, but in a large wet hole under a dripping clay bank. I don't think the bear or any creature had dug it. It looked as if it had been made by a brook, which had worked its way into the mountain side above and come out down here.

There was a hole big enough for the bear to get in and drag in the cow, but how far he had gone in nobody could tell, and nobody cared to go up very near at first. We all "prospected" it at a safe distance for a while.

Apgar said that we could easily "set" a gun, heavily loaded and pointing into the hole; but by-and-by one of the miners, named Jordan, said he could tell us a good deal better way to kill the monster.

"Jest hev one of them 'glisenin' cans brought up, Mr. Seitz," said Jordan, "an' put it up inside thet er hole, an' ef thet don't h'ist him, we might's well let him alone!"

"Lucky thought!" exclaimed Seitz. "I shouldn't have hit on that, Jordan. I guess it will 'hoist him.'"

"You bet!" says Jordan. "It's the wostest stuff to h'ist that ever old Split-huff sent inter this world!"

A grin went round the circle of hard, sooty faces.

Jordan was forthwith sent with the key of the shed to fetch a can of glycerine and a coil of fuse. Meanwhile some long poles were cut.

When the glycerine came, the fuse was spliced on, and the can was then shoved back on the end of a pole twenty or thirty-five feet into the cavern. Seitz now lighted the fuse, and we all retreated down into the hollow as fast as possible.

In a few minutes came a low, heavy, rumbling thud, which made the very ground shake under foot.

"Good-by, Boody!" said Jenks.

We went curiously back up the hollow. A great quantity of the wet clay had been thrown out, and all the bank above was broken up and had fallen in great masses, closing up the cavern completely.

If the bear had been within a hundred feet of the can, he was probably killed by the explosion, or crushed under the masses of clay. At any rate, we never saw nor heard anything more of our neighbor and beef-loving "Boody."

"What!" cried the cripple. "A hundred dollars for this wooden leg! Why, man, are you crazy?"

But the dealer shook his head.

"I know the price is high," he said, "but you must remember, sir, that ours is a great town for automobiling."

Our Island Fauna.

Land Animals Inhabiting the Channel Islands.

By a Special Contributor.

II.—CREEPING THINGS.

A LARGE field mouse is common on all the Channel Islands called the "Kangaroo." Rats abound upon the Anacapas.

The little lizards which are ever sunning their beauteous iridescent bodies on the rocks are harmless and lend activity to an otherwise lifeless realm on Catalina's arid heights, which they love well. They are from six to eight inches long, including tail. Sometimes you see one which has lost its tail in the last sad encounter, those members having the propensity of dropping off as necessary to deliver the owners from peril, either piece by piece or entire, as "occasion requires." There are insular species also seen on San Clemente, San Nicolas and Santa Barbara Islands.

There is also a larger species of lizard—but rarely seen. Its body would measure from eight to ten inches and the tail is longer than the body. It has a somewhat triangular flattened head a lá the stingray, and the uncomfortable habit (like the snake) of darting a forked black tongue in and out of its open jaws when "cornered." It is exceedingly wary, and can only be caught by inciting its attention in one direction and then coming down with a stick upon it at the other side; but care must be taken not to strike upon the tail or the prize will glide away and only the tail remain "to cheer the spirit in its pain;" for the tail will part, almost at a touch, very near its joining to the body, leaving the creature sadly bobbed. But it seems not to mind this in the least, nor does the loss impair its activity, and you believe—at least you hope—a new one begins to grow at once.

You may, if you like, touch the tail which is beneath your stick, as no longer any attention need be given to the fleeing creature. At every touch it falls apart anew, and each separate portion squirms and twists like a snake, until you weary of its monotonous exercises.

San Miguel Island possesses a kind of lizard not found elsewhere in the known world. These larger Catalina lizards are also found on Santa Cruz, San Clemente and the Anacapas.

Salamanders, which look like small and naked lizards, are common in Catalina, in wet places under rocks or in loose, damp soil. They have tiny bright eyes set prominently like black pin heads, and slender, negro-skinned bodies, which taper away and run into tails, seemingly not knowing where to stop. You are always glad when they are once more back in their damp homes, for they do not look strong enough to suffer change or to pass through the fiery ordeals with which they are credited, or even to endure acclimation to a dry and sunlit state; besides, they give you the very unpleasant sensation of being undressed.

A salamander new to the world lives on San Miguel and Santa Rosa. The salamanders have for neighbors in their damp abodes snails, which are common on Catalina, but they go walking about with their houses on their backs in wet weather, and although of a roving disposition, appear to be "good providers" and have none of the helplessness and impossibilities of the salamanders about them.

They are aristocratic creatures, moreover, for in all the world their like has never been seen, and there are about a half dozen species over which very wise men have pondered many an hour and concluded that they are distinct from all other species. San Clemente has two or three species also new to the world, but common enough in their island home. This is also true of all of the other Channel Islands.

The largest of all these snails is the one most common on Catalina Island, and, sad to relate, once several gunny sacks were filled with them and sent over to Jerry Illich, who had his chef prepare them for the table. They are said to rival in delicacy of taste the famous snails so relished by the Frenchmen.

Ships laden with snails! What an export were that!

BLANCHE TRASK.

ROBINSON CRUSOE'S ISLAND.

In 1868 H.M.S. Topaze visited Juan Fernandez, which belongs to the Chilean government, and erected a tablet to the memory of Alexander Selkirk. Today there are some sixty persons living on the island, chiefly whalers. Seen from the sea, it has the appearance of a huge barren rock, but inland there are innumerable valleys with smiling flowers. Naturally, the great curiosities of the island are the places where Alexander Selkirk spent the greater part of his days while there. There is the cave or grotto which he used as a house. Around the walls are to this day a number of rusty nails and rude shelves and cupboards. Then there is Lookout Point, a lofty pinnacle which Selkirk is declared to have climbed every day in the hope of attracting the attention of a passing ship. It was only five years ago that a Chilean surveying party discovered here, imbedded in the earth, the remains of the old flagstaff—the very one, it is believed, that Selkirk so often used.—[Westminster Gazette.

NOTHING TO PAY.

In a certain town in the North of England recently, an old couple were driving down a steep hill in their cart.

Somehow the horse was startled, and it set off at full gallop down the hill. This terrified the old lady, who said to her husband:

"Eh, John, I'd give a sovereign to be out o' this!"

"ONE hundred dollars—good grasious!"

This exclamation had reference to a check, payable to Miss Helen Forbes, signed by an individual named Andrew Clement.

Miss Forbes held the slip of white-and-gray paper at arm's length, contemplating it with supreme disgust. Then she let it fall amid the tea things, and, sitting down, burst into tears. At this juncture the door of the drawing-room opened, and a man entered.

"Tears?" he exclaimed; "what is the matter? I am only half an hour late."

The girl looked up, drying her eyes with a very diminutive lace pocket handkerchief. "Arthur, Uncle Andrew has sent his present."

The man knitted his brows.

"Evidently Uncle Andrew has failed to come up to our expectations," he said.

Miss Forbes in silence pointed to the check where it lay amid the teacups.

He picked up the white-and-gray slip of paper and studied it carefully, with the same intentness of expression that might be observed on the face of Mr. Arthur Longdon, lawyer, when engaged in picking out the salient points in a bulky and complicated brief.

"The check is obviously intended to be for neither more nor less than $100," he said, seating himself near the table. "Your uncle writes a hand that is beyond question entirely legible. A small piece of cake, thanks."

"Isn't it dreadful?"

"Did you make it?"

"Did you make it?"

"Don't be silly! I mean about the check."

Mr. Longdon looked quickly at the girl's face, and then stared straight at the fireplace. He spoke in a slow, measured voice, with that elaborate distinctness that was wont to hold the attention of the most inattentive of jurors:

"Well, you see, Helen, when we became engaged I was given most distinctly to understand that your Uncle Andrew would give you a very substantial fortune—$50,000 probably. Your father said it would not be less. Your mother agreed with that opinion. And as your uncle is an old bachelor reputedly worth a million, and you are considered to be his favorite niece, the supposition did not seem to be altogether an unreasonable one."

"It didn't," said the girl, looking curiously at her lover, who kept his face steadily toward the fire.

"On the strength of that supposition we take a flat on Fifth avenue, rent $2500 per annum, and contemplate living in a manner wholly beyond our reach without the money which we both supposed you would receive from your uncle."

"We did rather count too much on uncle's money, I am afraid." Miss Forbes sighed a little, and tried to meet the lawyer's eyes.

"It now appears we did," continued Mr. Longdon, shading his face from the fire with a large, well-shaped hand.

"You see," he continued, "my practice brings in a fair income, and it is increasing; but still a $2500 flat is out of the question, and a home in the suburbs seems to me impossible. So that under the circumstance——" He hesitated.

"You think it would be wiser for us not to get married?"

The girl still tried in vain to meet his eyes.

"Yes." The word came out quick and clear.

There was a slight rustle as Miss Forbes rose and crossed to the window. Then she suddenly felt each of her hands clasped from behind, and, turning half round, encountered a pair of blue eyes looking into hers with suppressed merriment.

"Only we could not do without each other, Helen."

"I don't know!" She struggled in vain to free herself.

"I do. Don't struggle! It is useless."

"I will never believe a word you say again, Arthur."

"You must, at times. Just one before I let you go."

"You don't deserve it. Well, there! And we cannot take the flat."

"Yes, we can. I never counted much on your uncle's money. I think he is a bit of a humorist in his way; and he is welcome to his hundred dollars' worth of fun. I must be off now—have a pile of briefs to read through tonight."

The girl raised her face, and critically regarded the clear-cut features of the youngest lawyer in New York.

"I suppose we couldn't," she sighed half aloud.

"Couldn't what?"

"Do without each other," she said very softly.

And then Mr. Longdon hurried away to his briefs.

He was somewhat surprised to find Mr. Clement waiting for him on his return to his office. Andrew Clement was not a pleasant person to look at; and his appearance derived no advantage whatsoever from his attire, which suggested a considerable affection for antique clothing.

"You are surprised to see me, I suppose, Mr. Longdon?" he inquired, with a grin that ran his yellow, parchment-like skin into deep furrows.

He disliked the lawyer, and took no pains to conceal the fact.

"Not particularly. I see numbers of queer people here at times."

Mr. Clement snarled and chuckled.

"I have sent my niece a check for $100. I always said I would do something for her at her wedding. I intend to give you another for the same amount."

The lawyer lighted a cigar, puffed vigorously for a few minutes in a thoughtful fashion, and then, leaning his back against the wall, regarded his visitor curiously.

"I have just seen your niece," he remarked.

"And my check," chuckled Mr. Clement.

"And your check; and I suggested to your niece the wisdom of our not getting married."

"I was sure you would when you saw my check. That is why I sent it." Mr. Clement grinned horribly.

"Well, Mr. Clement, as a business man I thought it the best course to pursue. You see, I am not a sentimentalist. We should be extremely poor; and, strong as our affection is for each other—I allude, of course, to the feelings which exist between your niece and myself——"

Mr. Clement interrupted. "Pray don't say more. I understand your feelings perfectly. I understood them long ago. You were marrying old Andrew Clement's money, and not his niece.

"You are a common fortune hunter, and I shall have the pleasure, I hope, before another hour is out, of congratulating my niece on her escape from becoming the wife of such a man."

The lawyer laughed—a good, hearty, honest laugh it was.

"You need not laugh, Mr. Longdon. Look here." He stepped close up to the lawyer.

"I mean to give my niece $250,000 the day she marries a man that I know only wants her, because she—she——" the old man's voice shook—"is the truest-hearted girl in America."

The lawyer looked at his visitor steadily for a moment. The old man returned his gaze, but made no further remark.

Then Longdon laid his hand gently on Mr. Clement's shoulder.

"Believe me, such a man will never want your money," he said, and the old man, without replying a word, left the room.

The next day the lawyer received a note from Mr. Clement.

It was brief and to the point: "I have seen my niece. I will give her $250,000 the day she marries you.—A.C."

When Arthur Longdon showed the note to Helen she was silent for a few moments, and then suddenly remarked:

"We could have done without it, Arthur, but——"

"But what, Helen?"

"Not without each other." C. N. P.

The Girl and the Man.

A LITTLE COMEDY OF TWO RESCUES AND A CAPTURE.

By a Special Contributor.

IT was near the close of the tourist season in Southern California, and the peculiar lavender tints of a spring twilight were beginning to steal over the sun-warmed region of Los Angeles. No rain had fallen for several weeks, and out in the country the highways were dusty and dry.

Eastward from the "City of the Angels" the San Gabriel road winds in and out among the hills, describing many abrupt angles and graceful curves. At intervals pretty groves of green pepper and fragrant eucalyptus trees cast their grateful shade upon the dusty highway.

Over this quiet road the twilight fell with softly invigorating coolness—and over a picture such as may frequently be seen during the tourist season. A girl, nattily attired, with a saucy bicycle cap secured by a long, wicked-looking hatpin to the knot of dark brown hair at the top of her head, came spinning swiftly along the winding roadway, her eyes bright and her cheeeks aglow from the exhilarating exercise awheel.

But the lavender twilight also beheld another picture—a man driving his machine over the road with equal speed and vigor, from the opposite direction.

Neither was aware of the other's proximity until, in rounding a sharp curve, the warning clang of the Girl's bell caused the Man to start slightly and, applying his coaster brake, swing to the right, according to recognized rules of bicycle etiquette.

The Girl, a little more startled than the Man, also applied the brake, but in her flurry set it a little too hard, and her wheel immediately proceeded to favor her with some very clever imitations of a bucking horse. It reared up behind, gave a lurch and a plunge sideways, and the fair rider flew suddenly and recklessly into the Man's arms, just as he veered aside for her to pass!

The force of the collision sent both wheels and riders to the earth in a most undignified "spill." By a rare streak of good fortune, however, neither was seriously hurt. In fact, beyond having eyes, ears, mouths, nostrils and clothing well introduced to the dirt and dust of the highway, nothing to cause any physical alarm had resulted from the accident. The Girl's skirt, to be sure, had received a considerable rent down one side, and the Mans cap had been knocked from his head and quite severely sat upon. But in view of what might have happened, these were mere trifles scarcely worth considering.

Scrambling hastily to his feet, the Man gallantly assisted his companion in misfortune to arise and readjust herself as far as the somewhat unsettled circumstances would permit. When the extent of damages had been appraised, he gave an audible sigh of relief.

"A rather unfortunate accident," he remarked, with a smile of cheerful encouragement, "but lucky not to have been more serious in its results. It takes a couple of experts to do a wild tumble of that sort and come out unscathed. Your wheel needs a little repairing, but mine seems to be all right, barring a few scratches. In a few minutes I can have you fixed up as good as new, and ready for a collision with the next man."

He chuckled slightly to himself over this little conceit, and wiping some of the dirt from his face with his handkerchief, started in to fix up the damaged The Girl joined in the laugh, but rather

"I never knew my wheel to behave in that fore," she declared, with a look of severe offending machine. "I can't imagine what got into its head all at once! Oh, pshaw! ness I am talking! A bicycle has no head, I didn't mean——"

Here she stopped with her thread of conversation a hopeless tangle, and ending up with an little giggle, relapsed into silence and fell to tiously watching the Man as he worked over her

He was a strong-looking, well-formed his kind, with blonde hair and sunburned at all bad to look at from feminine eyes. And watched him, a most startling conviction self upon the Girl's mind. Utter stranger was, the astounding assurance that somewhere, time, she had been in this man's arms before, brain like a blow from an unseen hand!

The idea was utterly ridiculous, not to say shocking, and she blushed, unseen, as crimson sunset sky to the westward. But by no effort of reason could she dislodge the strange impression her mind. She wondered if her fall had not her a trifle daft. She had heard of such things pening to people.

The Man soon had her wheel restored to its condition, and they were ready to go their ways.

"You seem to be quite well used to helping of unfortunate positions," the Girl remarked, queer little smile, pausing with her hands bars of her wheel, ready to mount; "you take so naturally."

"Oh, no," he answered, with offhand my reputation as a saving hero is extremely never had but one real serious experience pacity, and of course you would not be at all in hearing about that."

"It might prove very interesting," she "Anyway, I would really like to hear all

"My battle with the waves brought on a my illness, and I was laid up again for several That is all, except——"

"What?" she inquired, with suppressed the Man paused and gazed thoughtfully away the twinkling lights of Los Angeles, which ning to spangle the gathering darkness with brilliant fire.

"Except," he at length went on, in the most fact way, "that I was young and impressionable romantic and all that sort of thing, you know, though she was merely a slip of a school girl hair and freckled face, I fell heels over head her! They told me that I babbled of her during my illness. Regular softy—don't you

"No! I think it was all very romantic," plied, with pointed emphasis. There was a tonation in her voice, and an odd gleam her eyes. But the Man was looking out over vale below in a preoccupied way.

"What was that girl's name?" she inquired slight catch in her voice.

"Oh, I don't mind telling you," he replied, "It was Bessie Livingstone."

A moment of deep silence, then the Girl cleared her throat.

"Did Bessie Livingstone ever thank you her life?"

"Why, er—no, she never did," he responded, little surprised at her words. "Her mother away, that evening, so I learned, and she had tunity to do so, even had she wished."

The Girl's wheel fell unheeded upon the stepping squarely in front of the Man, she tled him by the new expression upon her face.

"Is it too late, now, for her to thank her cuer for saving her life, that day at Newport?" asked, holding out her hand, while a smile with romantic tenderness played about her lips.

"Why, bless my soul! What do you mean?" claimed.

"Nothing; only that I am that freckled whom you pulled out of the surf!"

Otherwise the room has not much to interest, being surrounded by books and the like, as the government service requires.

That, however, is only the beginning of Salem. You step out and across the street to the old wharves, some of which were old even when the customhouse was built, in 1819. There is a schooner at an old dock, whose buildings are in decay, and while the ship made its nine trips round the world, they awaited its coming with a world's produce. In the good old days of the East India traffic, this was a famous harbor indeed, and today the five great cotton mills along the slips of the East India wharf little bear witness to the opulence of those times.

You pass the oldest brick house in Salem, two-storied and with door in center, where a buckeye shades the front, and then thread other of the cheap, unattractive frames of the nether city. There is a three-story colonial home for the aged, its windows encircled by bands of white, down here—the only attraction, if it may be styled such, before one turns to Turner street, on which, at No. 54, the "House of the Seven Gables" stands.

Today the house of the Seven Gables is a modern, three-story, yellow-painted frame—a residence, save that in one of the street windows photographs and the like are exposed for sale. There is a pretty little garden, dotted with old trees at the rear, to which the roof slants from the gable's top to the second story. Then, in one corner of the third floor, there is a little wing, so as to give five gables, and not seven, in all.

There is an old-fashioned boy of 15 who shows you through, at the price of a quarter, first into the large, airy, low-roofed room, in which, according to him, Judge "Pinchimp" died, a room with a blue tint to the whitewash, and a great amount of white panelling. Here, too, are a large grate and a tiny secret closet, in which, today, music is stored, while at the opposite side of the grate, the wine closet opens, the dishes resting on shelves of a shallow, shell-shaped, or better concaved cupboard. In the corners two pianos have place, and green, upholstered chairs stand about. Every window in the house has a window seat, and over one of these, a picture of Hawthorne is hung. Then, inside, the grate, in the summer, a small oil of "Phoebe" rests. This picture was here when the house was sold, but as the last owner did not want it, it was rolled away by some one, and hidden, so that even now its creases are visible. In this fireplace, which should date to 1662, latterly, an old chimney was found, and therein flintlocks and candlesticks.

The boy continues with his tale into the dining-room—this queer, old-fashioned youngster. This room, too, has a low, cosy ceiling, under which Longfellow and Holmes dined with Hawthorne in their day. There is a beam across the center of the ceiling here, and this, the oilcloth on the floor, the chairs about the table of the present tenant, and the desk in one corner, give it an antique air, indeed. A little passage beside the former chimney, the door of white-painted wood, is pointed out as one continues into the present dining-room of the house.

This, in Hawthorne's time, was the shop where the penny gingerbread men were sold, the vender occasionally returning the child its cent, that it might return for another. Now, however, there are electric lights, a gas range, and, on the wall, paper designs in Delft; not to mention a sink at the window where one looks out on the site of the old well, and the elm trees, and the range, where the great old chimney stood, and up-to-date cooking utensils are hung behind the last named object.

Thence, dark steps lead up into an immense bedroom above, a double bed at either side of the room, and place for a third between. Clean matting covers the floor here, while the windows overlook the pretty country garden, stretching to the sea on one hand, and to an orchard on the other. There have been but three different owners here, since Hawthorne's time, and the airy nature of the house has remained unchanged. All the wood in the building is hand-carved, though most of the old fireplaces are now boarded up.

With a peep first at the Seamen's Bethel Church, on the site of land that once stretched to the beach, one descends the stairs into the next room, for one must go up steps, or down, to every room on this floor. This old chamber is divided into two rooms, and from it you descend into the two little rooms at the rear, where you may look out on the playground of Hawthorne's "hand-organ man." A boys' telegraph instrument, a pair of boxing gloves and a metal bedstead, in this room, now remind the visitor of other days "Phoebes' chamber," at the rear, also now with iron bed and immaculate white cover—light and airy, and clean, and hung with modern day photos—send the past a-flying. At its end, beside the wall, a beam goes up, and following this through dark winding stairs, you reach the attic. The bare boards here, in the slanted roof, are full of protruding nails, or else hand-hewn pegs. Three steps lead down into "Holgrade's studio," now filled with old bird cages, chairs and the like, such as any attic might present. Then one is out in the gable, where the three other beams have been removed, but the hand-made lathes still survive. The rustle of the trees and the smell of the sea still comes in here, for part of the roof is now crumbling.

Then you bid adieu to the Uptons, the Salem dancing-school teachers, who live here, and continue your rambles through Salem. Next in the list of sights is the home of Judge Endicott, of witch-day fame, a great white frame; almost in the shadows of a public school. The Second Church of Salem stood close by (though this burned down recently,) and thence one rounds the great, brick Salem institute, to its predecessor, the famous former First Church of Salem. This is planted out in a grass plot, a tiny, one-room structure, it seems, painted red, though this much more recently than 1629, when first it was built. Hawthorne's slant top, a spindle-leg desk at the Courthouse, on which he scratched his name, and an old "settle," or high-backed pew, together with other desks and the like, now monopolize the old building.

If you have time, you step into the Athenaeum; if not, you continue on to the Witch House, where much the same thing will be shown you. Your route now lies among the larger stores and along the electric car lines of modern Salem. You pass, too, the quaint, white East India Hall, and the Town Hall, and then halt at Charter Cemetery. That, too, is one of the survivals of Salem. Tombs are everywhere here, overlooked by the home of Hawthorne's wife, Sophy Peters, of happy memory. Hawthorne himself is interred at Concord; but his grandparents, the grandfather one of the judges of the famous witches, lie together in this place.

Julia Marlowe's Wit.

A COMEDIAN was praising the art of Miss Julia Marlowe.

"And she is as brilliant as she is artistic," he said earnestly. "A wonderful young woman!

"Do you remember her impersonation of Juliet? A doctor saw her as Juliet one night in Pittsburgh, and was tremendously impressed. Only, in the powerful death scene, there was one technical error.

"'Miss Marlowe,' the doctor said at a reception the next day, 'I admired your Juliet profoundly. The impersonation was a work of art. But—pardon me—don't you know that a corpse doesn't stiffen for at least six hours after death?'

"Miss Marlowe answered, in the drawl that she reserves for such speeches:

"'Now, doctor, do you think I'm going to keep my audiences waiting six hours for me to stiffen?'"

A Balloon One.

CAPT. HOMER HEDGE, the president of the Aëro Club, told at a dinner in New York a balloon story.

"A friend of mine," he said, "a very fat gentleman, in walking along the street the other day bumped into a huckster and knocked a half-dozen turnips out of the man's hand.

"'Bad luck to him,' said the huckster, scowling at the receding figure of my vast friend—'bad luck to him.' And they want to say they've made balloons dirigible.'"

AN editor was praising Lord Northcliffe, the young and famous newspaper proprietor of England.

"Lord Northcliffe," he said, "began life as a reporter. At 23 he was rushing to corner-stone layings and lectures and what not for a London journal at a salary of $15 a week.

"Then he started 'Answers,' a little two-cent weekly. It succeeded. He started other weeklies—'Home, Sweet Home,' and 'Forget-Me-Not,' and 'Heartsease'—and they all succeeded. He started the Daily Mail, and soon he was making a million a year out of that.

"This young man, on being elevated to the peerage, found the sleepy atmosphere of the House of Lords very different from the bustling atmosphere of the offices of his innumerable weeklies and monthlies and dailies.

"He lives in Berkeley Square, in a very tall and elegant house of pale stone, and two or three doors distant the Earl of Rosebery lives in a tremendous double house of brick, six stories high, and with ten windows or more on each story fronting the street.

"As Lord Northcliffe was getting out of his motor car one day a little after his accession to the peerage, Lord Rosebery was also getting out of his. The two noblemen shook hands, and Lord Rosebery said:

"'How do you like the House of Lords?'

"'Like it?' exclaimed the active Lord Northcliffe. 'I feel there as though I were dead and buried alive.'

"He paused, and, noting the look of discomfiture on Lord Rosebery's face, added quickly:

"'And in the Land of the Blessed.'"

It Dodged.

SENATOR FLINN, the Republican leader of Pittsburgh, smilingly denied the other day that he was a victim of automobile heart, the new disease.

"Here, though, is an automobile story just as good for you," said Senator Flinn to the reporter who was questioning him.

"A man in Altoona, the owner of a very fine 40-horsepower Limousine motor car, failed last month, and while his affairs were being settled up, the car disappeared. As soon as everything had been adjusted, though, the car reappeared in the Altoona man's garage again.

"This angered one of the creditors, and the first time he saw the bankrupt, he took him bitterly to task.

"'A nice bankrupt!' he said. 'How does it happen, if you're a bankrupt, that you still have that automobile?'

"'Well, you see,' said the other, smiling, 'I went through the bankruptcy court, but the automobile went round.'"

For Sightseers and Relic Hunters.

SECRETARY BONAPARTE, at a dinner in Washington, described with a smile a letter that had come to him in explanation of the exclusion of sailors in uniform from dance halls.

"This letter," said the Secretary, "informed me that the jackies were kept out of these halls because they were too attractive, because they captured all the ladies, and the civilians were left in the cold.

"That reason was amusing, striking, flattering, but somehow it was not quite satisfactory.

"It suggested to me the remark that a stage driver made to a friend of mine.

"My friend, a tremendous admirer of Edgar Allen Poe, boarded the stage to drive to Fordham, where, in a small cottage, Poe wrote 'Bernice,' 'Ligeia,' and other immortal tales.

"The stage driver was of an inquisitive turn. He said to my friend:

"'Why are you so anxious to go to Fordham, sir?'

"'Because Poe lived there,' said my friend.

"The driver grunted.

"'Poe wouldn't ha' been much thought of if he'd only lived at Fordham,' he said. 'It wasn't on that account he's famous; it was on account of them there pomes and tales.'"

A Story of Ristori.

"THE late Mme. Ristori, the famous actress," said a playwright at the Players' Club in New York, "had a great detestation of boasters.

"At a dinner that was given in her honor here, a boastful Italian tenor excited her displeasure. This tenor, a count, said:

"'In my father's palazzo on the Corso in Rome, the dining hall is so lofty that you can't distinguish the paintings on the ceiling without an opera glass."

"Mme. Ristori glared at the boastful tenor. Then she said:

"'How very different from my home! There the dining-room is so low that nothing but soles can be brought on the table, and even they have to be served in a flat dish.'

"The sole," concluded the playwright, "is, you know, the flattest fish in the world—flatter by far than the flounder or plaice."

MAYOR STOY of Atlantic City was describing the cosmopolitan throngs that visit his famous and gay resort.

"Every nationality comes here," he said. "Greeks, Turks, Hindoos, Chinese, Moors—they all come.

"I was talking the other day to one of the physicians of the Pasteur Institute—the hospital, you know, for the prevention and care of hydrophobia. The Pasteur Institute reminded me of Atlantic City, its visitors seemed to be of such a diversified character.

"The physician told me about an Indian chief who had come to him for treatment last year.

"'My name,' said the chief, 'is War Eagle. Please take me in hand. I fear I am getting hydrophobia.'

"'Have you been bitten,' the physician asked, 'by a mad dog?'

"'Not exactly bitten,' War Eagle answered; 'but I have the gravest suspicions about a black poodle that was served to me in a ragout last Friday afternoon.'"

A Football Enthusiast.

W. J. CLOTHIER, the tennis champon of America, said at a dinner in Philadelphia:

"Tennis is all very well in its way, but what is the excitement, what is the enthusiasm of tennis, compared to that of football?

"Perhaps you have heard of that Pennsylvania guard who, coming to at the end of a football game, whispered to the physician bending over him:

"'Did we win, Doctor?'

"'Yes, hands down,' the physician answered.

"The guard flushed with joy.

"'Never mind that fractured thigh, then, Doc,' he said. 'Just take these broken teeth out of my mouth so's I can holler.'"

A Physical Impossibility.

DR. T. D. CROTHERS of Hartford recently declared that drunkards were to a certain extent insane. In describing some of the delusions that are due to mental aberrations, Dr. Crothers told an interesting story.

"A certain aristocratic lady," he said, "got possessed of the delusion that she had swallowed a frog. Her physician, a reputable but prosaic man, pooh-poohed her trouble, and she grew steadily worse. Indeed, at the end of a month, it looked as if the poor deluded woman was going to die.

"In this crisis an eminent specialist was called in. Having been forewarned, the specialist came prepared. He had in his pocket a tiny frog that he had bought at a pet stock dealer's.

"The specialist examined the patient carefully. He listened with sympathy to her tale of the frog hopping about in her interior. At the end he said:

"'Madam, I am convinced that you are right. There is every indication of the presence within you of some reptile of considerable size. Please swallow this bolus.'

"He prepared a bolus for the lady, and at the same time got ready a glass bowl. She swallowed the huge dose, which made her cough and cough till the tears blinded her eyes, and the physician, bending over her, gave a loud cry as her paroxysm was at its height, and at the same time plumped the frog into the bowl and exclaimed:

"'There! I told you! Look at that!'

"The lady opened her eyes, beheld the frog in the bowl, and smiled with relief and gratitude. Then, all of a sudden, she turned paler than ever, and cried in a voice of anguish

"'Oh, Doctor, I am not cured. The frog has left a little one behind.'

"But this wise specialist was not to be stumped. He put on his glasses—looked at the frog in the bowl carefully. Then he said, in a stern and positive tone

"'No, madam; that is an impossibility; for this frog is a male.'"

JOSEPH CHOATE, the famous lawyer, related at a dinner party at Lenox some interesting reminiscences of the bar and bench.

"A striking case," said Mr. Choate, "transpired in the '60's. It was a case of a workman who claimed to have lost the sight of his left eye in an explosion.

"There was no doubt about the explosion, and there was no doubt that the workman's eye had been injured; but the physicians claimed that he could see out of it, while he stoutly declared that the sight was utterly destroyed.

"The judge heard all the evidence, pro and con, then, sending the workman from the courtroom, he said:

REMARKABLE TRAITS AND HABITS OF TURKEY'S RULER.

From P. T. O.

THE condition of the Sultan of Turkey is at last believed, in the inner circle at Constantinople, to be hopeless; but at Yildiz Kiosk the greatest show of optimism is made by the palace entourage as to their august master's health. A polite fiction, current through the ages respecting the health of the Commander of the Faithful, enjoins that the Sultan can never be seriously ill; in fact, that he can never die. Then death or a harem intrigue removes him, and a similar fiction is applied to his successor.

The Palace Doctors.

The physicians forming the medical entourage of the Sultan at Yildiz Kiosk are not without skill. Some, indeed, have studied at Berlin, Vienna, and Paris. But they, as a rule, are severely handicapped in ministering to His Majesty. He takes his medicine badly, and has a morbid dread of the knife. He leans toward charms and exhortations, and at heart has far greater faith in plausible quackery than in genuine medical skill. He would be a splendid subject for the Christian Scientist or for the Mohammedan equivalent of this modern faith healer. His sedentary life has long caused an operation to be necessary; but he has shirked the application of the knife, and has gone on suffering agonies, which ointments and charms have but temporarily removed. It was solely through the earnest representations of the German Ambassador that the Sultan at last consented to the calling in of the celebrated Prof. Bergmann. And, after the consultation, Dr. Bergmann was not allowed to operate. His Majesty is suffering from a complication of diseases. He was to have been operated upon for appendicitis, but the evil day was put off. He is known to have Bright's disease, and now it is understood he is suffering from cancer. I am afraid no operation can now save the Sultan.

The Sultan's Successor.

His Majesty is getting on in years. He was born on September 22, 1842, and has reigned, as from the 31st of August last, thirty years. Who will succeed him? That is the question—a burning question in the near future. The Heir Presumptive is his brother, Mohammed-Rachad, who is two years his junior, having been born on November 3, 1844. But Abdul Hamid is Sultan, and he has a will of his own, and he may, in nominating his successor, pass over the generally-accepted claims of his brother and choose one of his own sons. His eldest son, Mehmed-Selim, has, I believe, no chance of being his father's selection. The favorite son is Abdul-Kadir, born February 28, 1878. But German influence, which today is all-powerful in Constantinople, will have something to say in connection with the succession. It may act for Mohammed-Rachad or for Abdul-Kadir, or for some dark horse among the Sultan's numerous sons; in fact, for the one who will best serve German interests. The Turkish army, it should not be forgotten, has been modelled upon the German plan, and the Kaiser has lent the Sultan some of his most distinguished officers to instruct the Turks in the art of war.

The Sultan as Worker and Linguist.

Abdul Hamid is one of the hardest-working of monarchs. He superintends every important detail of state—especially the diplomatic side thereof. No matter what hour of the night important cables or telegrams arrive, having bearing upon affairs of state, he must at once be made acquainted with their contents. He has a host of secretaries to attend to this work and to keep him hourly informed. Negligence would certainly cost a secretary his place, and maybe his life. These secretaries are conversant with all languages, and every really important article in a newspaper is at once marked out and brought to His Majesty's attention. In this way he knows far more what is going on inside his own realms and outside of them than the Czar of all the Russias. The Sultan knows more languages than is generally believed; but in his conversations with the Corps Diplomatique he, unless any member thereof can converse direct with him in Turkish, always employs an interpreter. Many a time has he fully comprehended the [illegible] in their own tongues of the diplomatists who have met him in audience. The influence of Baron Calice, the Austrian Ambassador and doyen of the Ambassadors, who is retiring from the diplomatic service, with the Sultan was not so much due to his charm of manner and his wonderful tact as to the fact of his being able to converse direct with the Padishah in Turkish. On one occasion when conversing with the late Sir Clare Ford, the British Ambassador at Constantinople, respecting certain representations made to him concerning the Armenians, His Majesty unconsciously let slip a big d——d, Abdul Hamid, by the bye, although on his mother's side, undoubtedly of Armenian descent, has no love whatever for the Armenians. They, to his mind, are not only utterly impossible people, but are the most dangerous politicians and criminals in his empire.

His Easy Side.

Outside of the Armenians, and whom His Majesty dislikes from the political as distinct from the religious standpoint, Abdul Hamid is by no means a religious intolerant. He, in fact, is far more tolerant than a Russian Czar. He allows all within his realms freedom of religious thought so long as they do not use their religion as a means of political propaganda. According to him, a good Mohammedan should remain a good Mohammedan, and a good Christian a good Christian; but politics should be, and must be, left severely alone by all sects within the Turkish empire. His Majesty [illegible] his amusements sadly; but he, as many European entertainers have discovered, is not a bad audience, and, in truth, is a very liberal patron. His tastes, indeed, are peculiar, and he much prefers a tumbler-contortionist show or a good sleight-of-hand exhibition to a first-class dramatic or musical entertainment. The German Ambassador once got the entrée of a German musical prodigy to Yildiz Kiosk. He fiddled and fiddled, and the Sultan sat immovable, and at the end he yawned; but he loaded the prodigy with gifts, and the German Ambassador was under the impression that he had provided His Majesty with a delightful evening's entertainment.

Sarah Bernhardt and the Sultan.

In the days when M. Paul Cambon, the French Ambassador at our own court, represented the interests of the French republic at Constantinople, Mme. Sarah Bernhardt, who had been touring in Eastern Europe, was desirous of giving a dramatic representation at Yildiz Kiosk. The Sultan was willing, and the terms were duly arranged with the keeper of the wardrobe, the worthy Pasha who has the control of all entertainments at Yildiz. But the Pasha held out his hand for more backsheesh than La Belle Sarah felt inclined to give, and so the long-looked-for representation did not take place. Sarah Bernhardt lost by it £1000 and the coveted order of the Chefekat. Hermann, the Austrian conjurer, knowing the ropes better than the great French actress, squared the keeper of the wardrobe, gave his show, and got his thousand pounds.

His Loneliness.

The Sultan's yearning for a friend has often been pathetic. This is brought out by Chedo Mijatovich in an admirable character sketch in the Fortnightly this month. Having heard that King Milan, sad and broken-hearted, was alive in Vienna, the Sultan invited him to come to Constantinople, and he asked the writer to espouse his cause in the following touching words:

"Knowing that King Milan is fond of you and trusts you, I called you to ask you personally to write to him to support my invitation. Write to him that I should feel happy to have him near me. He knows that all my sympathies are with him, and that his friendship is precious to me. Tell him that I have—thank God!—many good and faithful servants, but that I often feel quite lonely, and that I am longing with all my heart and soul to have near me a man to whom, as to a faithful and sincere friend, I could confide what I have in my heart, with whom I could freely exchange thoughts and take counsel, and with whom I could share joy and sorrow. I feel deeply that in Milan I should find such a friend. Write to him to come, that we as friends may help each other to bear bravely the load of our destinies."

Is not this an illuminating record of Abdul's heart-hunger?

"Swallowed Entire Ironclads."

Another story illustrates the Sultan's quiet humor.

"The Grand Vizier gave a grand dinner one evening at which, with the Sultan's sanction, several court officers were present. One of these the next day gave the Sultan a verbal report of the exhibition of magic power by a poor dervish which followed the dinner.

"'Would you believe it, sire,' he said, "that poor dervish swallowed silver spoons one after the other? It was simply marvelous.'

"'Do you say marvelous?' the Sultan asked him. 'I do not see anything so marvelous in the fact that a poor dervish swallowed a few of the Grand Vizier's silver spoons. That feat is as nothing in comparison with the feat which Hassan Pasha, my Minister of the Navy, used to perform. He swallowed entire ironclads without changing the color of his face for a moment.'

"Hassan Pasha was notorious for the boldness with which he diverted moneys, granted for the ironclads, to the needs of his own renowned harem."

Can a Man Escape His Destiny?

The Sultan's grasp of the intricate emotional side of life is emphasized in the same article by his comments on the engagement of Mme. Draga Mashin to King Alexander of Servia. He studies the photo of the handsome woman, admires her fine eyes, and then expresses his wonder that King Alexander should commit such a folly. By and bye he adds:

"But, after all, what right have we to complain? What right have we even to criticize? Can a man escape his destiny? And is it fair to forget what an irresistible power love has? Where is the strong man who is not weak when he finds himself alone with a woman with whom he is in love? And are we not all liable sometimes to commit follies? Does love ever ask what your father and mother will say to that? Does it ever listen to reason? I verily do not think we have a right to laugh at the folly of this young man. Poor Alexander is evidently deeply in love with Draga. All we can do is to wish for him that his love be crowned by true and lasting happiness. I will wire him my best wishes, but you must also let him know that I shall always rejoice to hear of his happiness."

Here one almost recognizes the sympathy and understanding of a woman.

The Sultan's Superstitions.

The Sultan is a mystic of the mystics; never was there in any age a ruler so thoroughly superstitious. He believes in dreams, in omens, the evil eye, and all that sort of thing that go to make a man's life full of unrest. Recently, I believe, in view of the uncertainty surrounding the post of favorite soothsayer, the soothsayers have banded together and agreed upon a general line of prophecy and exhortation, so that when the Sultan, disappointed with this or that wise man, calls in another, he finds him setting forth precisely the same prophetic policy. Even wise men, however inspired, must live. Despiee his superstitious weakness, Abdul Hamid is really a strong ruler, and, from his standpoint, is a just one.

Earthquakes.

READJUSTMENTS OF WEIGHT THAT ALTER THE EARTH'S CRUST.

From the Nineteenth Century.

THE earth's crust is composed of heterogeneous elements; but all possess one important property, flexibility, though in varying degrees. Alike in very moderate elevations and in lofty mountain chains the rocks are seen to have been thrown into arches and troughs and even to have been crumpled and folded like sheets of paper or dislocated or broken up by the enormous strains and stresses they have been subjected to.

Of the conditions prevailing beneath the crust we know far less. When pits are sunk the temperature increases at a progressive rate with the depth, boiling springs are encountered, some making their way to the surface, red-hot stones and ash and molten rock are violently extruded through vents, but most significant of all to the geologist is the metamorphism of rocks, which must have been melted at relatively moderate depths but are now exposed on the surface in every quarter of the globe. There is thus the certainty that the cooled surface is underlain at some not altogether inaccessible depth by rock in a molten state, both fluid and pasty, through heat. Below this is the intensly heated solid sphere, to which astronomers assign the rigidity and density of steel and which is kept solid by compression of the external layers. Between the superheated nucleus, kept solid by compression, and the cool enveloping shell in which lies the compressing force, some intermediate condition must exist. With lessening pressure nearer the surface normal conditions must prevail, and rocks at their melting temperature must be in the liquid state of slag from a smelting furnace.

Our globe would therefore consist of an outer cooled heterogeneous and flexible crust, with a temperature increasing downward and passing into rocks at and above the melting point in a liquid state, which in turn overlie the heated nucleus, kept solid by compression and of the rigidity of steel.

If the crust were undisturbed, the molten layer upon which it rests would be inactive; but atmospheric agencies, frost and rain, are ceaselessly at work transporting weight from the hills and depositing it under the sea, decreasing the pressure here and adding to it there. The rivers debouch into the sea charged with silt, which is eventually deposited outside the influence of the surf, and the breakers acting like a rasp along the base of the cliffs contribute their quota of sediment, eroding and breaking up the coast, the material being carried out by the waves to swell the deposits forming parallel to the shore within the littoral zone. Geology reveals that these deposits may in time reach thousands of feet in thickness. Simultaneously the removal of weight by the breakers impairs the resisting power of the crust along the actual sea margin. Thus two parallel lines are continually forming, the one of increasing pressure and the other of decreasing resistance.

Is the crust so flexible as to be sensible to such readjustments of weight? In a past age when perhaps man was already among its inhabitants the earth suffered in places from a glacial period, when vast ice caps formed over the elevated regions. Many of the great rivers empty into bays sheltered from coast currents, and there form deltas which have been proved by borings to be thousands of feet thick, yet each foot has been formed in water a few feet deep, as proved by the angle of bedding, the fauna, drifted land débris and the sorting action of the waves. In all these cases the crust must have sagged under the increasing load of added material, and did it not similarly give way under the additions of weight along the littoral zone every island and continent would be surrounded for miles by shoals no deeper than the disturbing motion of the waves. When the crust sags out to sea the column of water over it deepens, augmenting the pressure. The pressure acting on the molten layer tends to squeeze it, not seaward where the water is deeper, but toward the shore where a line of least resistance is already prepared by the breakers.

The effect of steadily increasing lateral pressure acting on a long and relatively weak shore line of heterogeneous materials must be extremely complex. The molten matter is able to eat its way upward like a corrosive fluid melting the rocks it successively comes in contact with, until it finds relief in pouring out lava in streams of appalling magnitude. But where the superincumbent strata are still thick and massive, and especially where they have been already arched into lines of hills, as, judging by the watershed, must have been the case along the Pacific Coast of America, the molten matter would continually and irresistibly force the crust upward, producing a chain of montains, volcanic or otherwise, parallel to the coast. Simultaneously, owing to the pressure being lateral, the molten liquid would force itself along existing cleavage planes and lines of bedding of laminated and stratified rocks, for it must not be overlooked that all sedimentary strata upheaved above sea level are bent and strained, dried and shrunk and infiltrated, everywhere presenting lines of fracture and partings, like masonry on a Cyclopean scale. On these the molten matter, capable of dissolving as well as penetrating, presses with ever-increasing insistence, gathering force perhaps for years, until resistance suddenly yields and the fiery liquid is injected with terrific disruptive force along the lines of bedding. Thus the shocks of earthquake which startle civilization and destroy opulent cities are produced at uncertain intervals and without warning. On the west coast of America we are witnessing this majestic action in full force today, for the mighty Pacific is slowly deepening along its eastern margin and raising its long shore line into colossal ridges which now form almost continuous chains of mountains.

Practical Poultry Culture in the Southwest.

DEVOTED TO THE INTERESTS OF STANDARD-BRED POULTRY AND THE PEOPLE WHO GROW IT.

THE INCUBATOR.

SOME OF ITS ADVANTAGES OVER THE MOTHER HEN.

By a Special Contributor.

THE person who has set one hen and raised ten chickens from thirteen eggs has had a chance to study nature with chicks almost at her best. If he has seen a hen steal away to a sheltered forgotten spot, and lay the thirteenth, fourteenth or fifteenth egg, and fail to appear in the flock at night, he knows where to find her spread out happily over the beautiful egg promises. If he has lifted up the spread hen, and heard her scold notes or her little soft cuddle notes, notes of begging to be let alone, he is acquainted with a hen mother. If he has seen her intuitive wisdom in turning her eggs and airing them, he doubts not her intellectual qualities. Seeing her take dust baths assures him of her neatness and her precaution against vermin. Seeing a hen mother raise and wean ten chicks is a lesson to teach an observant person a great deal about poultry.

The person who has set one hen and raised one chick from thirteen eggs has had a study of nature almost at her worst. Hens do set and raise no chicks. One may buy expensive eggs that are all infertile though fresh, and the best mother hen will have to mourn the loss of her labors. One may put thirteen of the finest eggs sold under a poor mother hen and lose. She may be a restless hen and tramp on her eggs, breaking one at a time, and daubing the remainder, making the washing of eggs necessary each day. If she breaks one and eats it, she may eat all the rest. Hens have been known to eat the chicks' heads off as soon as out of the shell. There is no telling a good mother hen by the looks of her. The veteran breeder never kills a good mother hen, if he breeds with hen mothers. The beginner has to trust to luck, and, if he loses, is pretty sure to study incubators; if he succeeds, he is as sure to try the hen mother again; but only one hen in twenty-five is a good mother, so as he branches out for numbers, he will get a "no-good" mother the second time trying, probably, and the question of how good are incubators will come up to him.

I have no use for hen mothers except to study nature's ways for benefiting incubator chicks. One feels a mighty force of respect for the instinctive in the mother hen at her best. She is glorious, but a doubt always goes ahead of her—she may fail you, and the incubator does not fail the faithful. It is as true as mathematics, and like mathematics needs a careful, methodical worker. It is nice to do everything with care and method. A singular consciousness of power possesses me when I put a hundred eggs, in which I believe, into a clean incubator, almost living warm and ready. My faith in them is merited. Either my own hens lay the eggs, the ones I have chosen for breeding, or the hens of some breeder, who has deserved the repose of faith from his fellows by fair dealing. I have tested the eggs, holding them up to a bright light, with an egg tester, and found the air cells to be of equal size, which assures me the eggs are of nearly the same age. It is useless to try to run an incubator with eggs in part three weeks old and part a day old. In the big end of each egg is the air cell. When fresh it is very small, and with age it gets bigger, the egg drying out by being exposed in a porous shell. The air dries an egg through the pores of its shell, and the air cell increases as the egg shrinks. The embryo chick gets air from the cell, and if the egg does not dry out properly, as the chick grows, it will have to drown in its own shell without being able to pick the shell. The incubator ought to run evenly, and dry out the eggs in the nature way, only it cannot discriminate between the old and new eggs as the hen mother can. She airs some eggs longer than she does others to dry them out. Some of us get to be such good hen mothers we keep the fresh eggs, which dry down slowly, in a certain corner of the incubator and air them longer than the older eggs. The incubator has to be run with respect to the oldest eggs which must not dry out too fast.

A nice study of the instructive in the dumb lies in the mother hen. She doesn't hold the egg up and look through it to see the air cells, but by examination with the eggs of a very tame hen, who is much petted, I have found the eggs she has lying out around her are the last eggs she laid. Instinctively she seems to know what eggs to air. The instincts of mother hens are able to excite profound reflections in the minds of the philosophic. A mother hen in a stolen nest will often hatch all her eggs if fertile.

It is mathematically nice to mind the advice which comes with every incubator with precision. Each manufacturer knows what ought to be done with his machine. The better one minds the printed rules the more powerful he feels with his collective charge. To fill the lamp and turn and air the eggs when told becomes a pleasant duty. No careless hen breaks eggs and worries one. If the eggs are fertile and strong, and of nearly the same age, having kept the air cells as directed by airing and turning in the living warmth, with proper moisture, they will all hatch out in a day, even in twelve hours. The lagging chicks are no good. It doesn't pay to let them live. Give them a pert dispatch, and cut short the world agony that might come to them along with your kindest intention and attention prolonged.

A singular consciousness of power possesses one as he sees the little helpless things uneasy against the glass of the incubator, longing for something next—to eat undoubtedly. The chicks are without fear and without lice of any kind. Much of the health of little chicks lies in keeping them tame and free from frights. It is impossible to control the chicks of mother hens, even the most petted of mothers. With the modern chick foods, prepared with scientific incenses, one can easily feed chicks just what they ought to have and only what they should have. It is delightful to do for things so dependent and responsive. As they depend they respond, and the delightful employment may be made with all most remunerative.

Black-tailed Japanese Bantam a Beauty.

With the coming of another show season, the ornamental breeds are enjoying a great deal of popularity.

The Black-tailed Japanese Bantam is one that is coming in for its share, and not without merit; for they are strikingly handsome, being white, with black markings, rich yellow, and very short legs, with their peculiar carriage, place them in the front row as an ornamental fowl.

The standard weights for them follow: Cocks, 26 ounces; hens, 22 ounces.

System in Poultry-raising.

Success in poultry raising is due largely to a systematic consideration of little things. The man or woman who likes detail along with the vast whole, will like poultry raising. One likes the details of a whole because each responds to a need. The details of poultry raising are most responsive, and the affectionate character, longing to be of use to dependencies, finds in it a touching call to usefulness and beauty. The person bored by detail and dependents should look to other pursuits for a successful business. Yet what business does not exact attention to detail and dependents of its head? One goes into poultry business to have his hens lay a great many eggs, and make good table eating. If they add beauty of form and feather, and fancy prices for breeding stock and fancy eggs, he has play with his business. If one is going into a business, why not have play along? Pure-bred hens lay as many eggs as mongrels, and many hens lay more, and pure-bred stock is better meat. I once looked down upon the epicurean, who said his pure-breds were finer meat than barnyard fowls made. Many a farmyarder of fowls had said his mongrels made just as good eating, and layed even more eggs than the pure-breds, but each one admitted he liked a pure-bred cock and was glad many people bred the pure strains. One of these barnyarders was in need of a pure-bred cock, and wanted to exchange the weight of one of his for one of mine, intending that I make use of his for our family table. I had a lot of year-old cocks that were beautiful, and I hated to eat them, yet needed them not. So I traded weight for weight. It was a curious experiment. My fowls were confined to a small run, and his ran free over the ranch. I did suppose that freedom in nature's ways would inculcate a delicacy of meat flavor; but I had to blow away sentiment with waste feathers, when I came to dress the thing. Sentiment is not edible, and nature's ways do make for toughness. Table etiquette was put aside at dinner, and we discussed the roasted thing with roast words. Nature is not in it with a wise man growing table poultry. The scientific breeder has studied the laws of nature which make for fine meat, and called them to co-labor.

The modern hen is a creature of law, has to be what she is intended to be—is a machine to lay eggs and make a fine roast. The details which lead up to her finis are one nicely drawn out sequence of law. A breeder must keep the sequence going, a fulfillment of one law needing the next in operation. Fowls must be fed regularly, and the food in proportion to what is wanted of the fowl. When we make a machine, great care is expended in putting well-made parts together. No machine works well with one weak part. In making the hen machine, one food must gear to the next and other foods and feed the output. If certain foods are fed a hen must lay; if other foods a hen will fatten. Certain foods make muscle, others bone. Feed a pullet one way to make a broiler of her, and another to make her a layer. It is a long story to tell just how to feed to meet a condition. Scientific investigation has decided what foods will do; and is studying conditions all along the line, with betterment of the great industry at heart. Experiment stations all over the country are putting out literature upon the theme, and anybody willing to know the outcome of investigations can easily learn of them.

Prof. Putnam further says: "This variety of dog is apparently identical with the pure-bred Scotch Collie of today. If this is the case, the prehistoric dog in America, Europe and Egypt and its persistence to the present time as a thoroughbred is suggestive of a distinct species of the genus canis, which was domesticated several thousand years ago, and also that the prehistoric dog in America was brought to this continent by very early emigrants from the old world." He further states: "That comparisons have not been made with dogs that have been found in the tribes of the southwest, the ancient Mexicans, and with the Incas."

In the latter part of the fifteenth century Columbus found two kinds of dogs in the West Indies and later Fernandez described three kinds of dogs in Mexico, and as Prof. Lucas has been able to trace the Baum village dog into the far southwest, it is very likely one of the kinds described by Fernandez. However, it must be admitted that comparisons have not been made with sufficient exactness to place the Baum Village dog with any of those described by the early writers. During the entire exploration fifty bones of the dog were removed, representing perhaps as many individuals. Many of the bones showed marks of the flint knife upon them, others were made into ornaments, while others were broken in similar manner to bones of the deer and elk. Seven skulls were found, but all had been broken in order to remove the brain.

Chinese Writing.

ETIQUETTE OF LETTER WRITING COMPLIMENTS.

By a Special Contributor.

THE Chinese have six styles of writing, but most of them write only one style. Nor do they write as they speak, for the written language is different from that which is spoken. Many of them unite two styles. The most learned and the experts write all the styles. The merchants of our local Chinese quarter write what is termed the "pattern style." This is the more modern of all, except the "literary style." The "pattern" is employed in all the Chinese colonies in California, and by the merchants in Canton. The characters somewhat resemble the printed ones—that is, Chinese printed characters, and seem to be patterned after those employed in printing their books.

What is known as the "seal character" style is the commonest and the easiest to learn. The characters resemble hieroglyphics, and it is believed that this writing was evolved from that earliest form of writing. When the children of Chinatown start to make "pot hooks," they begin with the "seal character." The seal style is also used on laundry tickets and on bales of goods sent to the Chinatown at "Fleshno" and to other tributary provinces. Merchants who use the modern "pattern style" of the educated classes also use the seal style. That is, they use the seal instead of signing their names. Sometimes they sign their names in the modern style, and use the seal character also. With this double signature it is almost impossible for any one to forge their names. The seal is stamped in red ink.

The "official style" is used in Chinatown by clerks and the less educated, even by ordinary Chinese. The characters are broad, clear and distinct, and it requires no great mental effort to read them, or to write them. When a little pigtail gets beyond the pot-hook age, he is put to brushing out these characters.

They also have a "running hand," similar to our free-and-easy flowing style, in which the characters are connected like rails at fence corners. The Chinaman scarcely raises his brush from the paper, but moves it along as a painter does his brush in whitewashing a fence. Words are abbreviated, which makes it harder for the reader. This style is used mostly in correspondence, and the freer the running hand the more learned the writer is supposed to be in this art.

The most difficult of all is the "short hand," which is also combined with the "running hand." The words are abbreviated like reporters' notes, and are also written in the "running" style. These shortened characters are connected with each other by lines and flourishes, the brush running from one to another, scarcely being lifted from the paper. This gives a sheet somewhat the appearance of a spider's web. Only the most expert in caligraphy can decipher these notes. When one of the "statesmen" of our "Middle Kingdom" has something important to communicate to the "Council of Eight Statesmen," whose temporary headquarters are at Oakland, he writes it in this cipher. It is a cipher without a key, the only key being a knowledge of reading puzzles. Chinese doctors also use this style so as to humbug their patients into the belief that they are getting something instead of dried lizards or powdered deerhorn.

The "literary" is the most modern style, and is an improvement over even the "pattern style," in that the characters are perfectly square and clearer. In passing along Los Angeles street, a bow-rimmed-spectacled Celestial is seen blocking out characters, slowly and with great mental efforts, evidently. He is writing, or rather brushing, out a "polished essay," or a "classic poem," to be read at the next meeting of his literary club, and for which he expects to win a prize, running all the way from 25 cents to $1. He had invoked the necessary inspiration from a pot of tea at his right, reinforced by a pipe of "dope."

Strangely, the "running hand" is taught to schoolboys, under the belief that this free-hand style the better trains them in the writing of all styles. They are also taught the improved "pattern style." A book is placed before the little pigtail, with characters of each style in parallel columns down the page, and he tries his hand alternately at each. He thus learns, or attempts, two styles at the same time. The boys place thin tracing paper over the copy at first. Sometimes, they first try their hand on a board, so as to save the paper. They give more attention to caligraphy than to learning to read, as the Chinese consider it a greater accomplishment. They even learn to write before they can read.

When the lottery ticket seller is not busy, he takes his brush in hand, and sweeps out characters in his best style. He is either practicing, or making an ornamental inscription to exchange with a friend. Or, perhaps, he is writing and inventing a charm that will keep Satan at a respectful distance, or more likely prevent any one from winning his bank at the next drawing.

As Chinese is not an alphabetical language, the writer does not make letters, but characters, and the writing is composed of simple strokes and dots, perpendiculars and horizontals, lengthened, compressed, or extended, to suit their position with a view to symmetry and picturesqueness. With some of the penmen, or brushmen, it is an art, and their continued practice gives them a readiness of touch and expression like that of a painter. The writer holds his brush of camel's hair in a perpendicular position to the paper, which enables him, from the fineness of its point, to draw lines of the greatest minuteness. The hairs being elastic, he can also make them of a wide breadth. This is done by a broad sweep like that of a painter's brush. The ordinary brush in use in Chinatown is made of the hair of the deer. Merchants and the brushers of "polished essays" use the finer brush of camel's hair or of the sable. The pen is of bamboo, a little longer than the ordinary pen, and has a case to protect the brush, finely tipped, similar to our pen case. The ink-slab is a piece of stone, ground smooth, four inches long and two inches wide. There is a cavity at one end to hold water, which is used to moisten the block of ink. The block of ink is about two inches square, and is made of lamp black and glue. The writers of polished essays and poems put musk in their ink perhaps to give them more expression and sentiment. Some of the merchants have cups carved of jade stone in which to moisten the ink, a tiny spoon being used and their cakes of ink are traced with devices and colored characters, which are soon written away.

The paper most commonly used is of the fiber of the bamboo, is yellowish in appearance, has little strength, and is easily torn.

The paper used in corrrespondence is either white with red lines, red with black lines, or plain red. To use plain white paper is regarded as disrespectful, and as bringing ill-luck to the recipient. White is the Chinese emblem of mourning, is used in the house in case of death, and is worn by the mourners at the funeral. The paper is unruled, generally. But when ruled, the lines are drawn from top to bottom of the sheet. The writing is on the right of these lines, and begins on the right of the page. The lines of writing are read downward, also from right to left. A sheet of letter paper is five inches in width, and is folded in the center. The paper being very thin, only one side can be written upon. The sheets are paged at the bottom. The pages lie fold upon fold, and if the writer thinks he has not said enough, he may pad out the letter by pasting the beginning of a new sheet on the last fold of the one finished. The Chinese letter runs all the way from one foot to five feet in length. In unwinding the letter, the beginning is at what we call the end, and vice versa. Like most women, the Chinese do not punctuate their letters. Even the writers of "polished essays" are short on punctuation, and pass it on to the editors.

A friendly letter opens with high-flown sentiments, sometimes highly colored with initial characters. The writer hands out compliments and expressions of flattery, which he knows the recipient will not take seriously. Yet it is not much more ridiculous than our "My Dear Mr. ——," and "Very sincerely," written to a stranger for whom we care nothing. But the Chinese "ready letter writer" goes further. He wishes that your enemies and the enemies of your ancestors may be condemned to everlasting disgrace.

Ordinarily, each line of a letter is finished to the bottom of the page. But, when the name of the person written to appears, the line is stopped short, and the name begins the next column about one character below the top of the preceding column. This is a mark of respect. When the writer wishes to convey his disrespect to the one he is writing to, a debtor, for instance, he will write the name just as it comes along, with the ordinary reading matter. Sometimes, he will write it in smaller characters. This is the refinement of discourtesy. If it is an aggravated case, he writes the letter on white paper, which is sure to bring ill-luck to the debtor.

WHERE THE UNDERTAKER LOST.

At an undertakers' banquet a man in black told a strange experience.

"This experience," he said, "happened to me in '84. It is a thing that I hope won't happen to none of you; for, gents, it cost me dear.

"I was hired to bury an epileptic of 56 years. He had been rich, and the ceremony was a costly one, running, well up into the hundreds. Well, gents, in the middle of the ceremony we heard inside the gold-mounted coffin a ripping sound. Scared, we opened the coffin, and there was the man, alive, tearing the white satin upholstery in despair and fear.

"He had been in a fit. He hadn't been dead after all. And, if you'll believe me, he refused to pay my funeral bill—said he hadn't ordered no funeral, and he wouldn't pay for none.

"I went to the heirs. They, in their disappointment, were sore and churlish. They were poor, they said, and their uncle was rich. It wasn't for them to pay.

"In fact, though I sued the man who had come back to life, I lost my money. The judge said it wasn't his funeral, and he needn't pay for it. There was no use suing the heirs, since they had nothing. I thought of suing the doctor, but him and me threw a good deal of trade in one another's way professionally, and I refrained."

AN OBSOLETE AWAKENER.

An antiquary of Chicago took down from its hook a strange, old world instrument—an oaken wand ending in a T, one fork of the T a rabbit's tail, the other fork a piece of embossed brass.

"You can't guess what this is," said the antiquary "It is an awakener; it woke up sleepers in church. Nowadays, what with vitascope sermons, phonograph sermons and other latter-day devices, church congregations keep awake better than theater ones, and awakeners are obsolete. But in the past it was not so.

"In the past, men slep so much in church that bequests were made to rouse them. Pious persons left certain sums for the hire of an attendant to tiptoe through the church and call back from dreamland the various worshipers who had gone there. Salem, Gloucester and Boston have had such bequests.

"The attendants carried wands of various kinds. This one here is typical. Its bearer, sneaking upon a woman sleeper, would tickle her face with the rabbit's tail, recalling her from dreamland gently. But a man sleeper he would rap on the head with the embossed brass—a good hard rap that sometimes raised a lump.

"If you want this awakener—it is from Gloucester, and it is dated 1763—I can let you have it for $8."

FIELD NOTES.

The Gum Disease.

AT least one inquiry a week is received by this department upon the cause and cure of the citrus gum disease. Little of amelioration and still less of cure is known about this malady. So long as our most advanced pathologists claim so little knowledge of the cause and cure of the disease the grower will profit more by attempting to prevent than by success in its destruction. In fact the practical farmer should adopt the preventive policy toward all bacterial troubles rather than to neglect the selection of immune stock, the equal feeding of the trees, protection from infection, and the general welfare of his orchard. This is difficult also, yet it at least has some precedent in our knowledge of the treatment conducive to the general health of trees. A majority of the growers recognize that in the steady, even progress of their trees lies some immunity from disease, but there is yet a large deficiency in the results aiming at this end.

The health of a tree depends more upon the character of the food it may use than upon the medicants given to allay and destroy disease. This great principle is being recognized in maintaining the health of mankind with even greater scope, for it is a fact that few remedies provided for plant bacteria are of substantial benefit. As human beings must breathe, drink and feed properly, and be surrounded by the proper sanitary conditions, so must plants have these advantages or they may lose what disease-resistant qualities they may have received from nature. Allowing something, on the other hand, for the ravages of infections and unpreventable maladies it is clear that if a bearing orchard be given all the possible advantages of life for a decade it will have produced sufficient fruit to offset the misfortunes of its individual trees; it will have less disease and possibly its prevalent troubles be more easily controlled by artificial remedies. One great step toward orchard immunity from disease, and orchard improvement will be the recognition of the idea that fertilizers act upon the soil toward its productive fertility rather than directly upon the plant. In other words, the dietary character of the soil, rather than the quantity of food it supplies, must be kept as perfect as possible by cultivation, fertilization and all that pertains to plant feeding in a natural way, to achieve the best result in fruit bearing and in the perpetuity of the tree. An ounce of preventive is worth a yound of cure. How to apply the preventive is almost as perplexing as how to treat bacterial plant disease after it has become established. The problem of soil economics if solved fully may be the end of some of our most threatening orchard troubles.

Typhoid Germs In Milk.

A WOMAN living in the northeastern part of Los Angeles complains of the inefficiency of the dairy inspection of the city and vicinity. She claims to have seen an inspector in action or inaction a short time ago, and that his work was very superficial. In cases like this complaints should be lodged with the higher officials, or with the health office where it might be concerned. The habits that are responsible for dirty practices in the handling of milk may facilitate the spread of disease germs. Should typhoid infection appear, past and present cleanliness of premises and utensils will not prevent spead of the disease unless the origin of the microbes is located and removed. If you are sure that for many months there has not been a case of typhoid fever among the members of the dairyman's family or his employés, that is of greater assurance than immaculate cleanliness alone in handling the milk of his dairy. The most repulsive filth of itself cannot breed typhoid germs, nor can these germs be destroyed by whitewashing the premises. Consequently a certificate from a physician that no typhoid exists among the employés or in the neighborhood of a dairy would be a certificate that no germs were liable to reach the customers through the milk. No one with any refinement would knowingly buy dairy products put forth from filthy surroundings, but there is far too much laxity among consumers in failing to investigate their dairy's conditions. There is more, however, in knowing that the dairy products are handled by healthy people and in providing certificates that there is no germ contamination possible from any of the surroundings.

Vine Disease a Myth.

THE startling statement is made by one of the most eminent viticultural experts in the world that there is no such thing as the Anaheim disease of the grape. The manifestation known as the Anaheim disease is not a malady at all, but simply a weakening of the vine from overbearing. If this be true, it will be easy to recall the fact that no one has claimed to have discovered a specific bacteria or fungoid which would account for the mysterious attack which began at Anaheim, twenty-three years ago, to deplete the famous vineyards there. Since the alleged discovery that the apparent malady is no disease at all, but merely the effects of overproduction of fruits, it is useless to organize against a so-called disease that has its origin in every plant afflicted with overfruitage. If the trouble arises, as claimed, from the fact that the vine puts so much of its strength into the fruit that it has not enough vitality left to support its own life there is a certain remedy for the trouble, namely, cutting away a portion of the crop before the vine reaches a state of decrepitude sufficient to endanger permanently its health.

Mr. Ravoz, the French expert who has advanced this new theory, has certainly done a great thing for viticulture in giving new direction to our vine investigations. Like the study of the walnut disease the field had been pretty well worked over upon the theory that the affectation was a real disease of the vine, as mysterious as it was destructive. Without disparaging one particle the achievements or importance of pathological investigation, if Mr. Ravoz's idea is correct it will have a tendency toward the return of our examinations to soil, pruning and cultivation. I have urged the importance of this view upon the orange growers in another note. There is a possibility that the climate, soil and general environment of California may make necessary a further readjustment of other horticultural views.

Hear, Here!

ONE of the first California fruits of the new pure-food law is the presence of a gentleman from New York whose mission is to investigate the feasibility of establishing a manufactory for the production of pickles, catsups and other vegetable seasonings. He holds that the giving of rebates to the large eastern factories and the adulterations of food stuffs so largely practiced will be so seriously hampered by the pure-food law and the rate bill that it will have a tendency to restore the business of the small concern. Acting on this belief, he is looking for a place in which to manufacture condiments for the local trade. This is in the direction of first principles, and I hope many more seekers of this class and larger will come to Los Angeles, where the materials for certain food preparations may be found fresh practically all the year.

Burdette's Department.

IN passing along with a line of Burdette's hearty handshakers at an entertainment a few evenings ago the Pasadena sage detained me to explain the best way to run a farm department in a newspaper. He had established a charge of this character many years ago in an Iowa journal which was very popular till the farmers began to ask questions. He would write queries to himself and answer them in an offhand manner that astonished and edified the few subscribers to the paper, and so the good work went on until an old farmer wrote for information on "the relation of carbon dioxide to proteolysis in the ripening of Limburger cheese," for the scientific name of the bacteria of common cheddars and how much chloroform it would take to kill the life in the average cheese of a country store. Burdette announced that week that the "patent insides" were all made up when the question was received and thereupon discontinued the agricultural department of the paper.

Apple Crop Lighter.

ALWAYS of interest to the orange grower, the statistics of the apple crop of the country for this season promised to cut unusual figure with the orange business on account of the heavy output of apples they would reveal. But the estimate of apples has been very materially whittled down by later information. For example, the assistant general freight agent of the 'Frisco railroad which taps the greatest apple section of the West reports that the output will fall below the earlier estimates by 4000 carloads. The Secretary of the Missouri Agricultural Society claims that his State will produce but one-third of a crop of marketable apples. From several dozen other reports, the average yield is placed far below the expectations of midsummer. How much these estimates are colored by the growers from whom these reports come is very difficult to determine, but with due allowance for this, the 75,000,000-barrel crop predicted by the buyers is liable to be cut down a few scores-of-millions later. It will require two weeks' time to know with much clearness the extent of the apple crop.

Bisulphide of Carbon.

THIS liquid of foul odor is coming into more general use for the destruction of insects upon small plants and upon seeds. I have another inquiry as to the amount to be used in disinfecting garden seed of weevil. I have answered by letter, but it is a matter upon which there are many seeking information. The fact is, no one, as far as I know, has worked out the dosage for the various insects to be treated. It would be a good subject for investigation by the new Whittier laboratory, for the law under which this institution is operated gives jurisdiction over insect pests as well as over plant diseases. However, for small lots of seed confined in air-tight box a teaspoonful of the fluid to each cubic foot of space will be effective. One pound to 100 cubic feet for larger receptacles is about the right proportions. Use shallow vessels, placed on top of the material to be fumigated. Twenty-four hours of exposure for seeds to be planted is sufficient, a longer exposure being advisable for seeds to be used for food. Remember that this material is explosive.

Failing Pumps.

ORDINARILY, the failure of pumps arise from worn or defective valves, of course in all cases failing if the water supply is incontinent or short. But in the faults of power pumps, inefficient installation may be the cause. In California the farmers attempt to get the most expert service in setting up new pumps, because it is economy in the long run to have the work done by men able and willing to guarantee the satisfactory operation of the machinery. So many thousands of pumps have been put into commission in Southern California within the last ten years that it is not difficult for a well owner to select a successful type from observation of the actual work the machinery in his own neighborhood. For much loss was experienced in weeding out the p that were not suitable for the heavy work of the wells of the State. Select a brand of pump that is ing the work required of it, and see that a compe man is supplied to install it.

Purple Scale Advent.

IN answer to a question as to the time of the appe ance of the purple scale in San Diego county, I c give little information. Presumably about sixteen eighteen years ago, or from the same Florida importa tions of nursery stock they brought this scale into L Angeles county. The pest had gained an alarming h in 1890, as I see by a letter written in April of that y by H. W. Kruckeberg to the Bureau of Entomology Washington. In answer to Mr. Kruckeberg's inquiry to the danger of this pest's spreading, the authori wrote that there was no cause for serious alarm, the scale were being handled with comparative eas Florida. Expert advice is not always good, and sometimes extremely misleading. The policy of the B reau of Entomology at the present time is much radical, the chief never advising that an insect destruc tive in one locality may not be harmful in another.

The worm is the larva of a Tortricid moth known as the Carpocapsa saltitans, a near relative of the common codling moth. The bean is grown in Sonora. Its wonderful movement is caused by the muscular movement of the worm which has sufficient force to propel the seed without volition as to direction. It is the cause of great perplexity in those who have not seen "shows," or who have not had the opportunity of dissecting the bean. The bean is sold as a curiosity occasionally, and during the tenancy of the worm certainly fills the bill in that line.

[illegible] Squash.

I HAVE been given two squashes of fine size and quality which the grower, J. C. Ostergard, calls the Coco-[illegible]. It is said to be a South African plant, but its origin is probably South American. It grows just as the ordinary summer squashes do, requires the same kind of soil and tillage, and begins to bear about June 1. If the soil is deep and rich it will continue to grow and bear, without irrigation, provided the squashes are picked while green. It is used in the green state, and is better than egg plant when nicely fried in butter and well seasoned. It also makes an excellent stew. I have not seen the plant, but it is probably a true egg plant, or "melon squash." The fruit is greatly elongated and [illegible], and it may be the Solanum esculentum, variety [illegible]. At any rate it is one of the most delicious vegetables growing in this section of the country.

Olive Oil Fraud.

IN a letter from Mr. C. White Mortimer, the local British Consul, reference is made to the call for pure olive oil from the East. In it is a quotation from the Bureau of Manufactures which states that a large proportion of the olive oil imported into the United States is composed of that cotton-seed oil which the American people refuse to consume in its honest form, but consume when imported under the several well-known brands of 'the old world's famous olive oils.'" The pure-food law does not prevent the mixing of olive and cotton-seed oils, but it does provide that the label shall state the mixture. Cotton-seed oil is as wholesome as the olive, but no one should be wheedled into paying olive-oil prices for the cheap, common product of the cotton field. Mr. Mortimer states in one of his reports that so many olives are grown in California that it is difficult to use them all, and one of his correspondents asks "why are they not made into oil and sent East?" About 80,000 gallons were made and sent East by one man from his own grove last year, but the oil was sold in Chicago, and little of it probably reached New Haven, whence came the Consul's inquiry. One reason is that as long as the law permitted the selling of adulterants labeled as, and at prices equal to, those of olive oil, the California makers have kept as far from the points of competition as possible. Oils of cotton seed, peanuts, sesame, corn, mustard, and cocoanuts have been found in the importations, and the eastern consumers paying olive-oil prices were not only being buncoed, but indirectly assisting the fraudulent importations in driving the real article out of the markets. I suggest to the Consul's New Haven correspondent, who requested that this matter be discussed in The Times, keep an eye upon the effects of the pure-food law. In the future, if the New England people want pure olive oil it can be had in Los Angeles by the carload, every year when we are blessed with a good crop of olives. The government is taking a hand for purity, and we may expect better results.

We must not assume that rascally impostors are the only sufferers from the application of the new law. The ban will fall equally hard upon the food adulterators of our own country. Representative Mann, in his famous onslaught upon fraudulent foods in the House of Representatives last June, said: "I have here a can of genuine olive oil, bearing the name of the manufacturer. Here is a can bearing the same name, purporting to be made by the same person, sold at the same price, but filled in this country, the whole thing a counterfeit—cotton-seed oil. Here is another package of the same sort, a counterfeit of the same name and the same company, also filled with cotton-seed oil, and gentlemen will notice that the makers of these counterfeits have not only succeeded in reducing the quality of the article, but also the quantity. Both packages are the same size, one containing machinery oil and probably half or two-thirds full, the other containing olive oil, an argument in reference to both quality and quantity."

[illegible] of Melon Aphis.

J. C. OSTERGARD, of Burbank, writes of the insect friends that are making possible the cultivation of melons in this part of the State as follows:

"This very minute insect abounds all over Southern California, and were it not for the presence of its enemies, the ladybirds, not a melon, cucumber, pumpkin or squash could be grown here. The ladybirds, or ladybugs as we call them, are all helpful, but it is only the Hippodamia convergens that control the situation. It is only while in the larval state that they devour the aphids in quantities sufficient to exterminate the pest. The first brood arrives about the first week in April, [illegible] seen. It at once begins work on the aphids and generally exterminates them in a few weeks, and then in turn become themselves exterminated for the want of food. If the aphids are all exterminated, very well, but it sometimes happens that a few survive at some point, and for a time possess wings. They then spread over the surrounding territory with amazing rapidity, and destroy crops almost entirely as was the case this years in the Coachella Valley. But if the convergens are still in the field the ladybirds will multiply as their food is again plenty, and bring out brood after brood till the aphids are again under control and little or no harm will result.

In places where the convergens does not naturally thrive at all times of the year shelter should be provided, their habits and modes of life studied. They dislike windy places, and on a knoll will keep the leeside clear of aphids, but will let the windward side be neglected. During the winter they hibernate in old straw, but prefer corn stalks. A shock of corn with the tops tied down suits them exactly, and here they find shelter from wind and rain. Sometimes in the early spring, before the first brood of ladybirds hatches the aphids multiply at such a rapid rate that the young plants are killed outright. It is then that the sprays are to be applied or the young plants will die. For this purpose an emulsion of "Kill-sure Soap," one pound to six gallons of water, if well applied, is effective. But after the first brood of ladybirds are out (about April 10), spraying does more harm than good, as it is more effective on the young larvae than on the aphids. Another remedy is to put a tablespoonful of bi-sulphid of carbon near each plant and quickly cover with an airtight cloth, covering up the edges so as to confine the gas. This is very effective, but too costly upon a large scale both for labor and material, but suits admirably for small plots. This material is as explosive as gasoline, and should be handled accordingly."

Somebody Lost a Dollar.

AS no adequate answer has been received, up to the time of going to press, to the question put in the September issue by Mrs. J. R. D. regarding her Japanese lily, the editor of this department feels it her duty to give the inquirer an answer, though she would have preferred having it come from some reader of the Magazine who would have received payment for her trouble.

The question was what to do for a Japanese Lily rubrum that refused to grow or bloom after the second year. It is supposed that the Lily speciosum rubrum, a fine Japanese variety, having petals of white spotted with rose is what was meant. If it has stopped growing the best thing to do is to take it up while it is dormant and cleanse the bulb thoroughly. Take away all decayed scales and look for worm nests, which are very likely the cause of the trouble. Sometimes it happens that ants make nests in the bulb and cause it to decay. If this seems to be the trouble, the plant should be lifted, thoroughly cleaned and planted again in a place where there will be no ants. Take care in cleaning the bulbs that you do not injure any of the sound scales, as that will, of course, give a chance for further decay.—[Gentlewoman.

Freesias.

THE Freesia is a native of the Cape of Good Hope, and has been in cultivation for almost a hundred years The original plant, Freesia refracta, appears not to have had the fine, pale blossoms delicately hung on the stem, all drooping in the same direction, that are characteristic of the plant in its present state of cultivation, but it was generally of an ugly greenish or sulphur-yellow color, the few blossoms bulging their tubes unevenly and twisted about so as to point in all directions. The breeders have endeavored to improve the flower toward a standard of pure white, which, however, they have not yet perfectly attained, though the efforts made toward producing plants with blossoms of symmetrical shape evenly arranged on the stems have been better rewarded. The outcome of this long selection are the bulbs of the finest sorts of Freesias, those usually sold under the general name of F. refracta alba.

At the present time millions of the small, tooth-shaped bulbs or corms are grown in Italy, Holland and also in California, and sold by our dealers in the late summer and early autumn to be planted for winter blooming. There is always a tendency for the blossoms to revert to the original yellow, and this color can usually be traced in the blotch of orange in the throats of otherwise pure white specimens. To the novice this appears a beauty, and there seems no reason why it should not be considered so, except that the flower breeders, having set their minds to producing Freesias that shall be pure white, are not satisfied with anything less than the full accomplishment of what they have undertaken to do.

The bulbs grown in California seem to be the ones that are most likely to produce the spotted blossoms and even those that are self-tinted in pale yellow or cream color. The strong sunlight of the Pacific Coast is blamed for this persistence in the color, so that when the whitest blooms possible are desired, it is better to secure foreign-grown stock. As suggested, it is generally the breeder and the florist who are specially anxious to secure the pure white blossoms; the amateur grower is almost quite as well satisfied with yellow sorts. With these growers F. Leichtlinn, which is a yellow sort recently discovered in an Italian botanic garden, is proving quite popular. Its blooms are large and profuse, though the perfume is not as rich as with some other sorts. Another sort, with blossoms lemon or orange colored is F. aurea, which is valuable for hybridization, producing the clear yellow sorts that are frequently offered for sale by the dealers.—[Gentlewoman.

Preparation of Vegetables for the Table.

ALL vegetables should be put into boiling water to cook, whether they grow under or above the ground. If you want to boil a piece of meat, you do not put it into cold water, you put it into boiling water to seal up the outside and retain the juices in the meat. On the other hand, if you wish to draw out the juices for soup, etc., you put the meat into cold water. The same principle holds good for vegetables. If you wish to use them for soups draw out the goodness by putting into cold water, but if you wish to serve the vegetables as a dish, put them into boiling water.

New potatoes if unpeeled, however, are first put into cold water to draw the solanine out of the skin. Boil for ten minutes, quickly peel off the skin, and put into boiling water to finish cooking. Some people actually advise using the water vegetables are boiled in as a foundation for soups, even if they are put into boiling water to cook, because "there is so much of the goodness of the vegetable in the water." If that is so, why not draw out more of it by putting into cold water! Try with beets, put them in cold water, boil them, now see the color of the water, a beautiful deep red. Now examine the beets, a whitish, stringy and tasteless vegetable. The beet is a good illustration, as it shows the result so well, but all other vegetables are affected the same way.

Beets, carrots, and parsnips all contain sugar, which substance is extracted from them by putting into cold water and bringing to the boil. The result is an insipid, flavorless vegetable entirely different from the properly-cooked article. For this reason, also, these vegetables should not be peeled before cooking, except carrots when used for flavoring. The skin then must be scraped, not peeled off, as it is very thin, and in a new carrot merely needs rubbing to peel it.—[Garden Magazine.

Growing Your Own Tulips.

IF you have a lot of old bulbs, separate the offsets from them this fall and grade all your bulbs and offsets roughly into three sizes. The largest, or original bulbs, will give first-class flowers next spring, the largest offsets the year after, and the smaller, in two or three years, depending on the care you give them. Almost every offset, no matter how small, will bloom next spring, provided you detach it from its parent, and these flowers will be surprisingly large considering the size of the offset. But no one wants small tulips, and the object of this article is to explain how to get first-class flowers by growing small bulbs to the largest size in the shortest possible time.

After sorting your bulbs, plant the three grades in separate beds. You need not use a dibble to plant the little ones. Sow them broadcast on a carefully-prepared bed and cover them two inches deep with fine, mellow loam.—[Luke J. Doogue, in Garden Magazine.

The Crimson Rhubarb.

THE great value of crimson winter rhubarb as a vegetable is its earliness; indeed, labor has been spent to originate a variety which would produce stalks even a few days in advance of other early varieties. Crimson winter rhubarb will produce marketable stalks abundantly fully six months earlier than any other rhubarb. The stalks are of medium size, welll grown, often averaging twelve to eighteen inches in length and about three-quarters to an inch in diameter. They are a pale greenish crimson color, turning when cooked to a light clear crimson color, and are the very best quality. The plants are somewhat more inclined to bloom than the older kinds, which is easily remedied by topping.

Crimson winter rhubarb starts to grow vigorously by October, and continues to produce stalks continually until after the common varieties make their appearance some six months later. In our rainless California climate it reluctantly takes a short rest during midsummer, but, if kept moist, will produce stalks abundantly at any season. It is, in fact, absolutely perpetual. For forcing under glass in the cold Northern States, for a constant supply for home use, and for growing in California and the Southern States, for shipping north and east, it promises to become more profitable than anything else which soil produces.

Crimson winter rhubarb is all that could be desired, as the bulk of the crop comes in just at the season when fresh fruits and vegetables are hardly obtainable. Strong young plants set out in April, May or June come into bearing by the 1st of December, and during the season pay for the stock and a small profit besides. The second season the crop is enormous. It has been found that crimson winter rhubarb gives the best results when planted about two and one-half by six feet apart.—[Ernest Braunton, in California Cultivator.

New Tomato-Chalk's Early Jewel.

THE largest, smoothest and finest flavored extra-early bright red tomato. Within a week or ten days as early as Sparks's Earliana, it is even a heavier cropper, with tomatoes of larger size and sweeter flavor—produced throughout the season. It is so hardy and vigorous in growth that a very early planting can be made in the open ground. The plants are well furnished with strong, healthy foliage, which protects the fruits from sun scald, and enables the plant to perfect an enormous crop. The tomatoes come in good-sized clusters and are uniform in size and shape, having a most attractive appearance when packed for market. The fruits are very deep through from stem to blossom end; the solid flesh is entirely free from hard core, streaks, or blemish. The ripe tomatoes are of a brilliant scarlet color, free from rot, and do not crack open in hot weather, if picked as fast as they are ready for market. During the season of 1904 Mr. Chalk gathered a large number of fruits weighing a pound each.—[California Cultivator.

More Sensible Physicians.

AND still the doctors are learning common sense, in regard to the treatment of disease. Here is an extract from an article on "Overindulgence in Food," in the Medical Summary:

"The abuse of the functions of the stomach by the use of an excessive quantity of food, from deliberate, mistaken or ignorant motives, is the basic element of nearly all ailing and valetudinarianism, and the sum of suffering that shows itself in the lighter afflictions and reflex troubles is greater than that produced by more serious and specific diseases, the tendencies of which are inherently more fatal.

"Entirely exclusive of the far graver final results—which will be considered later—if this statement be true, then the science of dietetics presents itself as a great prophylactic factor in the prevention of a human suffering, and medicine can attain the status of a true science only as we recognize and comprehend the intimate inter-relation of the various functions of the human system, and the modifying influence and power that diet exerts on these vital processes. The clinician's mind must be ruled by this fact, or his efforts at making a rational, clear and positive diagnosis will be futile in many cases."

Again, in the Medical Times, Dr. William Colby Cooper, of Cleves, O., has an article on "Medical Errors and Abuses," in the course of which he points out that the difference between a food and a drug is that a food is assimilated, a drug is not assimilated. This, as he says, inexorably cuts out the "tissue food" falacy, for there is no direct way under heaven of feeding a tissue. If you would feed a tissue, you must do it directly, through the ingestion of assimiable material, namely food.

This is exactly what the editor has been preaching for lo these many moons.

Dr. Colby satirizes the folly of trying to put iron into the system by administering chemical iron, when all our foods contain enough iron, and to spare. He also emphasizes the great truth "What will make a well man sick will make a sick man sicker."

Yet again, in England, Sir Victor Horsley is denouncing the use of alcohol by his fellow physicians and showing that, as Prof. Bunge says, alcohol is a pure stimulant, with the inevitable reaction. Yet, as we know, for many, many years doctors have been prescribing alcohol to sick people, "to keep up their strength." Now, think of this, just a minute: If the whole medical fraternity has been admittedly wrong, in the past, in prescribing alcohol to patients, in bleeding them when feverish, in prescribing much mercury, and in many other features of medical practice, that were once considered absolutely necessary, but are now condemned by a majority of intelligent physicians, why then are we not justified in supposing that they are absolutely wrong today, in their administration of coal tar and other poisonous drugs, in the injection of deadly poisons into the system, in the shape of serums, vaccine and anti-vaccine, and in their frequent carving? Why are we not justified in believing that, within a few years, these practices will be as utterly discredited, among intelligent members of the medical fraternity, as bleeding and the administration of large doses of mercury are today?

"Help for Chronic Sufferers" is the title of a book by Dr. H. Valentine Knaggs, M.R.C.S., etc., published by Jarrold & Sons, 10 Warwick Lane, E.C., London. On the title page there appears this sentiment, taken from an American author:

"In order to regain health we must acquire the habit of being properly fed, ventilated, watered, exercised and rested."

In the preface appears the following:

"In the treatment of all obstinate, chronic and apparently incurable diseases the trend of modern medicine is in the direction of proper feeding, correct breathing and increased working of the organs that eliminate impurities from the body.

"Persistent drug taking is gradually going out of fashion, and in its place more attention is being given to diet reform, to the necessity for brisk exercise in the fresh, vital air, to the free use of distilled water for promoting the action of the kidneys, etc. . . .

"Yet, by a thorough reform of the diet, combined with exercises involving the deep breathing of pure air, the two essentials of life—the intake of nourishment and the outgo of the waste—can be made to absolutely balance each other. It is only on such lines that diseases can be permanently cured."

The author states that the purification of the blood, without which no bodily repair can take place, is brought about by the following, which form his chapter headings:

"Efficient digestion, correct breathing, removal of waste products by diet restrictions, the use of water and fruit or vegetable juices to flush the excretory organs, the utilization of the action of light and heat to promote free action of the skin, the stimulation or sedation of disordered nerves, control of the senses."

The author holds that civilization is the cause of disease, that health depends on the due, orderly and rhythmical functioning of all the cell groups, and that this functioning will go on properly provided that food, air and water are properly adjusted to the needs of the body, that wrong eating is a prolific cause of disease, that soft foods are unhealthful, that vaccination is a positive injury and causes many of the ills of childhood, that uncooked foods are beneficial for chronic sufferers, as they supply the natural tissue salts, that water drinking is essential to health and that hard water is injurious, as it produces a calcified condition of the circulatory organs, and that the emotions should be controlled.

As stated, it is encouraging to note that the doctors are learning some common sense, in regard to the treatment of disease, even if we must admit that this learning has been, in a measure, forced upon them, by the refusal of intelligent patients to longer accept unquestioningly their poisonous dope. For this revolution the hygienic press is undoubtedly largely responsible. Without undue boasting, it may justly be claimed that the Los Angeles Times, through the Care of the Body department, has contributed its full share toward this growing reform, a reform that will be the means of saving thousands of lives, and alleviating a vast amount of unnecessary suffering.

The drug superstition is evidently doomed, not because the doctors refuse to administer drugs, but because intelligent patients refuse to take 'em. The demand for drugless doctors is steadily increasing, and will continue to increase. Young medicos should note the handwriting on the wall, and get in out of the wet.

Insomnia.

IT was recently reported that Mrs. John W. Mackay was about to go to Germany, for a new cure for sleeplessness.

What folly! She will go to Germany, and she will carry the cause of her sleeplessness with her. It is quite true that a change of scene and surroundings will often act to some extent beneficially, in a case of insomnia or nervousness, notwithstanding a continuance of the bad habits that cause these troubles, but the only permanent cure is to find out the cause, and remove it.

I shall be very grateful to you and most willing to try anything you suggest."

Falling of the womb, which is so exceedingly common an ailment among women nowadays—not only among married women, but among unmarried women also, something that was almost unknown in former generations—may be cured by frequently assuming a recumbant position on the back, with the lower part of the body higher than the head, combined with osteopathic treatment, and a general toning up of the system, by means of cold sponge baths, fresh air, diet, etc. By all means avoid the knife, or you will rue it to the end of your days.

DR. HERBERT A. PARKYN, editor of Suggestion, announces that he has sold the publication to Henry Clay Hodges of Detroit, who will combine it with his magazine the Stellar Ray. Suggestion, which has been published for eight years, has frequently been quoted from in this department, and has been referred to as one of the sanest of the new-thought publications. The editor will be sorry to note the change, particularly as the new proprietor announces that he will devote a portion of the magazine to the discussion of astral science. The editor believes we have enough conundrums to solve on earth, without reaching out to the stars, the influence of which distant bodies upon terrestrial conditions is, the editor believes, merely a field for the exercise of the imagination, in a direction that can never be of any earthly use.

Dr. Parkyn announces that he will devote himself to the exploitation of a new method of extracting gold and other minerals from black sand, which promises great things for the Pacific Coast.

Shellfish.

THE State Board of Health of Massachusetts has sweepingly condemned all shellfish taken in Boston Harbor, as exposed to danger of contamination with typhoid.

There is no doubt that much danger lurks in the toothsome shellfish. Like hogs and chickens, they are scavengers, and love to feed around sewer outlets and such places. In England, recently, there was quite a scare over poisoning from oysters. Crabs and shrimps are particularly undesirable food. Any one who has seen a ripe corpse pulled out of the water will for some time have no appetite for cracked crab, or shrimp salad.

The Power of Water.

The following dispatch from Santa Barbara was recently published in The Times:

"[illegible] Snow, a rancher in Toro Cañon, about six miles from this city, was bitten by a rattlesnake while at work, and, being alone at the time on his ranch and having no assistance available or antidotes at hand, resorted to the use of pure water to extract the poison from the bite on his leg.

"Cold bandages were applied all night, and he was able to walk three miles to his home next morning. He is now at work, as usual, and his doctor says there is no likelihood of serious consequences from the bite. The fang marks, one-quarter of an inch apart, are barely discernible."

This is another proof of the great power of water—of cold water. Fifty years ago, there was quite a craze in hydropathy, introduced about that time by some simple-minded German laymen. Of late, one has heard so much about it except among the naturopaths. Yet, the fact remains that water, hot or cold, in the shape of compresses of various kinds, is one of the most powerful agencies known to aid nature in restoring normal conditions. A wet bandage around the throat, or chest, worn over night, will effect wonders, and in case of pain a hot, wet compress, frequently applied, alleviates immediately. All kinds of poultices owe their virtues simply to the water they contain, although the material used for a poultice may retain the heat a little longer than simple cloths.

One of the advantages of this treatment is that water is almost always available.

Wine Versus Whisky.

PROF. F. L. BIOLETTI, of the Department of Viticulture of the University of California, attended the recent National Farmers' Congress at Rock Island, Ill., and stated that the most effective cure for intemperance is the moderate drinking of wine.

This is, in a measure, true. The trouble is, however, that Americans appear to be utterly incapable of doing anything in moderation, and secondly, that it is extremely difficult to get pure wines, even in this wine-producing State, most wines being doped with sulphuric acid, salycylic acid, and other deleterious substances.

Hardening the Children.

A MILWAUKEE physician lets his two little daughters run barefooted and bareheaded, in the coldest weather, clad only in cotton garments. It is said they enjoy romping in the snowdrifts, without even a goose flesh on their skins. A sensible man, this. If parents would systematically harden their children, from the time they are born, a vastly greater number of them would grow up to be vigorous, healthy and useful men and women, instead of ailing invalids. In combination with outer hardening, must, however, go inner hardening, avoiding overeating and all stimulating foods and drinks, also foul air.

Dietetic Rules.

[illegible], in an exchange, expresses the opinion that the amateur dieting to which so many are given nowadays is productive of far more ills than it can cure. He says: "One man's diet may be another man's poison." This is true, to a certain extent. It is, as the writer has frequently observed, exceedingly foolish for one to eat something, because he has heard or read that somebody else enjoys it, or to abstain from eating something, because somebody else declares that it does not agree with him. On the other hand, there are certain general rules of diet that apply to everybody. For instance, that animal foods, if eaten at all, should be taken in very small quantities, and only the flesh of healthy animals. That nobody should eat except when really hungry, and that nobody should eat, under any circumstances, when sick, that all food should be eaten slowly and thoroughly chewed, that foods that do not agree with each other should not be consumed at the same meal, and that all fermented foods and minerals should be omitted from the dietary.

These are broad general dietetic truths, that apply to everybody.

Premature Burial.

A WELL-KNOWN citizen of Los Angeles county, a broad-minded man of the world, with nothing of the crank in his make-up, sends the following communication:

"It is the custom in Italy for the poor people who are unable to buy a lot in a cemetery to rent a burial place for their dead, for the term of five years, and if at the expiration of that period they are unable to pay for a renewal, then the dead are summarily ejected, to make room for a paying tenant. Some years ago I was going through the cemetery at Milan, with a very intelligent guide, while this process of ejectment was going on. He explained the custom, and added that these exhumations disclosed the awful fact that no less than two out of 200 had been buried alive. These figures were so appalling that I could not believe that they were true; but in a late number of the New York [illegible] I find them corroborated. I enclose a clipping from the paper.

"[illegible], Fair Haven, Vt.: Are there cases of persons buried alive?

"[illegible] made in a cemetery of New York established the fact that of every 1200 persons buried, six had after their apparent death given signs of life.'

"If these figures are correct, an average of four people are daily buried alive in the United States. What an argument here in favor of cremation, the only safe, sanitary and clean way to dispose of our dead."

There were recently two bills before the Massachusetts Legislature, to require safeguards from premature burial. Commenting upon this subject, the editor of Suggestion recently said:

"In England there is a society whose object is to awaken public opinion on the subject of premature burial and to work for the passage of laws which will make premature burial impossible. Statistics have been prepared to show that in Europe out of every 500 supposed deaths, one person is resuscitated. Although the medical profession refuse to take any interest in the matter, it is unquestionably the case that many persons are buried while in the state of suspended animation. Every day the newspapers chronicle a case in which a person is revived after being given over to the undertaker. Allowing for exaggeration, there are certainly grounds for agitation and enlightenment on this subject. Certainly there should be no unseemly haste in injecting the embalming fluid."

Notwithstanding all these facts—notwithstanding the almost daily report of persons who have narrowly escaped the most awful death that it is possible for the human mind to conceive—we are still gravely informed by the medical fraternity—or, at least, by a majority of them—that premature burial never takes place.

Until some other means of determining whether life remains in a person is discovered, it should be obligatory to keep a corpse until decomposition begins. Meantime, cremation should be universally adopted, in place of our present grewsome and unsanitary method of disposing of the dead, for even if a person is alive, and knows what is going on around him, death by fire is but a momentary pang compared with the hideous tortures of the damned that must be suffered when a living person is entombed in a coffin, and buried underground, to writhe and ineffectually lacerate his fingers against the walls of his narrow prison.

How any sane person can regard this subject with indifference, or even make it the subject of jest, is altogether beyond the power of the editor's comprehension.

An Anti-Noise Crusade.

AN exchange says:

"The anti-noise crusaders of this country will be glad to learn that Sir James Crichton-Brown, the famous neurologist, is pleading their cause in England. He calls attention to the fact that not quantity, but quality, of sleep is important, and that sounds heard, even if not perceived, produce a definite harm. Sleep is murdered, so far as restful quality is concerned, by the blowing of whistles, the rumbling of vehicles, and the like, even though the victim may not be conscious of the injury."

This is a vastly more important question than many people suppose. Much of our modern nervousness and premature breakdown is due to the unnecessary noises of cities.

A Critical Age.

AN English medical man, referring to recent railroad disasters in Great Britain, suggests that in each case the failure of the engineer's judgment, which was the cause of the accidents, may be explained by his age being between 55 and 62, during which period, Dr. Dabbs asserts, a man suffers a temporary failure in will power.

Dr. Dabbs, who says he has collected data to support his theory, attributes some of the costly mistakes made by British generals in the Boer War to this temporary loss of will power. He declares that no man between the ages of 55 and 62 should be allowed to have charge of any exacting enterprise, because he is not "master of that unclouded will which makes the greatest emergency his obedient slave."

This is not quite so bad as the so-called Osler theory, which would end a man's usefulness at 40, and chloroform him at 60. There may be some truth in Dr. Dabbs's idea. The age referred to is a critical period in a man's life—a sort of "change of life," as it were. At this period, it is often decided whether a man is to pursue a pleasant sloping path toward the inevitable end, or to plunge into a yawning abyss, and end his usefulness as a member of society.

In this, as in other things, however, it is unwise to indulge in glittering generalities. If a man has lived a correct life, obeying the laws of nature, there is no reason why he should, for seven years, be mentally incapacitated. On the contrary, many men are at their best during this period.

"As a man sows so shall he reap."

Advertising Quacks.

L. G. B. writes as follows:

"I notice in a late issue you make reference to the 'advertising specialists,' who are to be found in every town of any considerable size. It seems to be your opinion that all doctors who claim to be specialists in treating certain diseases only, and who use the daily press to inform the public of their ability to cure, are, for the reason that they advertise, necessarily quacks and fakers without either the ability or desire to cure. I refer to those who advertise to cure 'lost manhood' and other diseases of 'men only,' so numerous in Los Angeles.

"Is there no merit in the pretensions of this class of doctors at all? Is it possible they are allowed, in this enlightened day and generation, to take in hard-earned dollars without ability or intention to give value received in services? And not only that, but herald the full details of their knavery through the public print so that 'he who runs may read' it every day. I am loth to believe they are all quacks and thieves, or why do

Care of the Body.

the authorities so universally allow them to ply their trade where all the facts are known? How can any reputable newspaper sell its space to aid a thief in nourishing his vile carcass at the expense of the sick and unfortunate? It is revolting to think about, and I would like to have fuller information on the subject."

It is, unfortunately and undoubtedly true that practically all the advertising specialists who promise to cure all kinds of disease are frauds, most of whom, if they had their deserts, would be in the chain gang. This not necessarily because they advertise. These fellows not only do not cure, because they are unable to cure, but they actually prolong an ailment, when a person has money, by rubbing in irritating substances, or giving drugs that will provoke the symptoms. Further than this, they pry into the private affairs of their patients, and if a young man becomes wise, and tries to break away from their clutches, they will threaten him with exposure of his condition, to a girl whom he may be engaged to marry.

These scoundrels seize on any new scientific development, of which they know nothing, to fool the public. Such for instance as radium and the X-Ray. Of late, owing to the growing popularity of the natural cure, they are taking that up also. A correspondent sends the editor a circular of a natural cure system, with headquarters in Cleveland, O. There is offered a correspondence course, and a "natural nerve food" which, of course, is a fake, as there neither is nor can be a "natural nerve food," apart from the foods which nature provides.

In considering this question, it should be remembered that the newspapers are not alone guilty in aiding these scoundrels to ruin thousands of people, physically, mentally and morally. Every one of these men operates with the tacit consent of the medical fraternity, for they must either have a diploma, or, if they themselves are perhaps ex-dishwashers, plumbers or farmers, they must hire some broken-down, conscienceless graduate of the medical profession, to protect them with his diploma. Otherwise, they would be immediately raided by the State Board of Health, which is always ready to prosecute and persecute worthy people, who seek to alleviate suffering, in a simple natural way, having a fund for that purpose, while at the same time these medical tyrants permit such dastardly criminals to operate, without let or hindrance. The mere fact that they possess the totem of a regular diploma appears to be sufficient to insure them from interference.

It is no wonder that the public manifests a growing disrespect for the profession of medicine.

Cuticura.

THE Northwestern Lancet gives the following analysis of the widely-advertised Cuticura ointment:

"The much advertised Cuticura ointment has been found to consist of a base of petroleum jelly, colored green, perfumed with oil of bergamot, and containing 2 percent. of carbolic acid."

This is a simple and a good thing for outward application, but it could be prepared by any individual, within reach of a drug store, for a fraction of the price charged.

Doubtless, one reason why the manufacturers of patent "dope" are making such a strenuous fight against a law such as the new law of North Dakota, for publishing contents of mixtures on the labels, is that, when people see what a small pennyworth they are getting for a dollar and how much they are paying for a name, they will stop buying the compounds.

Raw Rice.

G. E. M. writes: "Where one has not the facilities for cooking, would rice, soaked and well masticated, or eaten with cream (the same as wheat) be beneficial?"

Now, why on earth should you attempt to do such a foolish thing? Why should you take a hard, gritty substance, like this, and try to soak it, when there are available so many other foods, that soak easily, if you don't want to cook them? Besides, rice, being almost entirely starch, is a very poor food—that is to say, the polished rice, as usually eaten in this country. Where rice is consumed, the unpolished rice should always be chosen, if you can get it. That needs more cooking than polished rice.

Starch is an unwholesome food, reqiring a long and tedious process of digestion. It should always be dextrinized, by long cooking, in dry heat. This is another reason why such food as soaked rice would be very unwholesome. It is dietetic ideas like this that tend to bring food reform into disrepute, and make it a laughing stock among the Philistines. When people go so far as this, they are likely to wind up by crawling on their bellies and chewing grass, like Nebuchadnezzar.

If you want to eat raw food, eat what nature offers you—fruit, nuts, salads, grain "in the milk," and an occasional bird's egg, if you will. Don't mess and muss, or try to chew foods that were never intended for man to eat.

Theosophy.

A CORRESPONDENT while warmly indorsing a recent article in this department, under the heading "Hindoo Hocus-pocus," draws attention to the fact that there is theosophy and theosophy. He says, in regard to the Hindoos: "The latter represent a descending circle of evolution while the United States represents the ascending scale." At the same time, the correspondent finds much difference betwen theosophy as theory and theosophy as practice, and points out that there is a vast difference between the theosophy of Plato and Homer, Marcus Aurelius, King Alfred, Bob Lincoln and Roosevelt and the theosophy of psychic jugglers—as great a difference as between a devout Christian who leads the true life and the false calculating business man and Sunday-school teacher who covers his mercenary designs with a cloak of piety. He adds: "Theosophy is as theosophy does—a union of those who love in the service of those who suffer."

A beautiful definition, and one that should surely satisfy the spiritual yearnings of all right-thinking people.

Inunction.

AN Episcopal clergyman in Milwaukee urges that Episcopalians should utilize "the sacrament of holy unction" as a means of cure, in competition with Christian Science treatments.

It would doubtless work as well, provided always—and this is the main thing—that the patient has faith in it, for there is no cure by any such means if faith be lacking. The cure indeed is effected by faith working through various forms.

By the way, this "extreme unction" of the Catholic church, where the priest marks the forehead of the dying person with oil, is simply a religious development of a hygienic practice that has been common in the orient for thousands of years, namely, the oiling of a sick person's body. When the Apostle James wrote: "If any of you be sick, let him send for the elders of the church, anoint him with oil, and pray over him," he did not mean simply marking a cross on his forehead with oil, but the thorough rubbing of oil into the whole body, which is an excellent hygienic measure, reducing the temperature, equalizing the circulation, soothing to the nerves, and to some extent feeding the body, without burdening the stomach. Gradually this was reduced to an empty religious form, just as the weekly supper, commemorating the death of Jesus, at which the disciples sometimes over-ate, has gradually been reduced to a wafer and a few drops of wine, which are supposed to contain the real body and blood of Jesus.

It would be a good thing if more use were made of this oiling process. At present, it is only used occasionally, after a bath. It should always be used after a warm bath, in order to replace the oily substance of the skin, that is removed in bathing. Only pure vegetable oils should be used, and some oils are better for this purpose than others.

Cost of Living.

THE question of the cost of living certainly belongs under the head of the "Care of the Body." The steadily increasing cost of the necessaries of life make it a serious problem for those who are receiving fixed salaries. A salary of $100 a month, five years ago, is only equivalent to $65 a month today. Here the benefit of an intelligent simple dietary comes in, for fortunat[illegible] the best foods are not the most expensive. Strange say, however, an exception must be made in the cas[illegible] fruit, in this, the greatest fruit-producing State of [illegible] Union. The editor has often preached the fruit an[illegible] nut diet, as an ideal dietary. He still believes in it, but when it comes to having to pay 10 cents for three small pears, it looks as if, in practice, he and many others would have to turn to something less expensive. The retail prices of fruit in this, the greatest fruit-producing State in the Union, is such as to make it altogether beyond the reach of persons of moderate means, as an article of regular consumption, and to place it among the luxuries, with chocolate caramels and ice cream. At the price referred to, it would cost a family of two adults and five children over $60 a month to purchase all the fresh fruit they could and should eat.

Meantime, let every one who has a plot of land, however small, plant fruit trees and berry bushes—and then some more. That is the only way the editor sees to get around this situation. By planting fruit trees, with berries in between, and utilizing all bare walls and fences, a family may, within a few years, have all the fruit the members can consume, all the year round, from the surplus space, outside of the buildings, of a lot 50 by 150 feet.

The Deadly Cigarette.

A COMMITTEE of the English House of Lords has been taking evidence on the subject of cigarettes, the English people having become alarmed at the growing degeneracy of the national physical standard. An American witness produced evidence to show that cigarettes made in this country contain opium, chloral and other impurities, also that American tobacco manufacturers employ Italians to pick up filthy tobacco, which has been thrown on the streets.

There is no question that cigarette smoking is the most dangerous form of tobacco using, firstly, because, as stated, the tobacco is largely mixed with other impurities, secondly, because the fumes are frequently inhaled, thirdly, because cigarettes come to be smoked almost incessantly, fourthly, because, being cheap and conveniently carried, they are largely used by boys, and last but not least, because they are often dosed with opium. When charged with using opium in their cigarettes, the manufacturers have been in the habit of stating that they could not afford to use such an expensive drug—or, at least, not in cheap cigarettes. This may have been true when opium sold at $25 a pound, but it is no longer true, when the drug costs only $2.50 a pound. A pound of opium is sufficient to doctor a very large number of cigarettes.

Smoking is especially harmful to those who have not yet attained their growth. A nation in which a majority of the boys regularly smoke cigarettes is on the high road to physical, mental and moral degeneracy. Cigarette smoking is a training school for the use of morphine, cocaine, opium and other deadly drugs. It is a hard job to attempt to cure a boy of cigarette smoking, after the habit has been thoroughly acquired. The best plan is to see that they don't begin. In this, as in other cases, prevention is better than cure.

WHAT MR. MCKENZIE FOUND ON HIS JOURNEY HOME.

From London Mail.

"I HAVE traveled from Port Arthur to Moscow, overland, the journey taking twenty-four days," Mr. F. A. McKenzie said on returning to the Daily Mail office after his tour of investigation in the Far East.

"The railway is open for regular traffic the whole way, except for a gap of 110 miles between Chang-tu and the Russian military boundary at Chang-chung-fu, in Central Manchuria.

"The Japanese service from Dalny to Chang-tu is very slow, less than 400 miles being done in thirty-two hours. The trains are dirty and uncomfortable, and are crowded with hundreds of Japanese prospectors, merchants, and tourists. There are no first-class carriages. The only food obtainable on this section is from coolies, who hawk a few necessaries at the stations.

"Construction trains run for twenty-seven miles beyond Chang-tu, and then comes a short section of seven miles to Suppinje, where the line is wholly broken. North of Teiling, as far as Suppinje, every railway bridge has been blown up by the Russians, every house burned, and the countryside laid waste. From Suppinje to Chang-chung-fu the line is in good condition, save where the Japanese have pulled it up to alter the broad into narrow gauge. There are no locomotives on this last section. I crossed it in a trolley pushed by Chinamen."

The Japanese authorities did everything possible to expedite our correspondent's journey, the officers along the line of route showing the greatest kindness and hospitality.

Terrorized by Bandits.

"The country," he states, "is terror-stricken on account of the large numbers of bandits (Hung-hutzes) roaming the interior. They are splendidly mounted, armed with magazine rifles, and operate in great bands. From Chang-tu the authorities would only allow me to go forward accompanied and almost ringed in by a military escort. On the final section, before joining the Russians, mounted gendarmes were sent ahead to see that no brigands were lurking in the woods or high corn. From the Russian frontier station an escort of Cossacks accompanied me into Chang-chung-fu. A body of Hung-hutzes rode toward us at one point, but turned back when they saw the troops.

"An ordinary Russian train leaves Chang-chung-fu for Harbin twice daily. From there a daily post train and a tri-weekly train de luxe go to Irkutsk. From Irkutsk one can secure either the post train or the tri-weekly train de luxe. This latter has every comfort that could be desired, luxurious food, clean compartments, good service, and easy running.

"On the Japanese side one found perfect organization. The contrast on crossing the boundary line into the Russian sphere was painful. Things were little better than chaos. The military officials seem swallowed up in masses of ill-kept documents that surround them. The postal service is very bad, large numbers of letters being lost. The goods traffic on the railway is hopeless, ordinary merchandise constantly taking six months to travel from Moscow to Irkutsk. Russian bureaucracy has apparently learned nothing from its severe lesson.

Overflowing With Money.

"Harbin is overflowing with money. The great days of the war, when two operas, six theaters, and a hundred music halls and circuses were in full blast in the city are over, but war prices continue. A filthy room in the best Russian hotel cost me 13s. a night, without food, and I paid between 9s. and 10s. for a bath. A mechanic charged 25 roubles (about £2 14s.) for repairing a small spring in my typewriter, more than ten times the proper price. Large numbers of miners could be seen in the town, all apparently with much money to spend.

"The Russians are seemingly genuine in their withdrawal from Manchuria. I was informed that there are now only two divisions (32,000 men) and 18,000 railway guards left in the country, one of the divisions being in Harbin. All that I saw and heard confirmed this statement. Various high Russian officials with whom I discussed matters expressed their sincere desire to hurry out of Manchuria. 'The place has been a curse to us,' one said. 'It has cost us untold millions, crippled our strength, and has benefited no one but Jewish contractors.'

"The Russian administration in Manchuria is more popular with the people than the Japanese. The Russians spent much money, and did not interfere with local administration as the Japanese are doing. 'The Russians came and boxed our ears with one hand,' say the Chinese, 'but with the other hand they gave us many dollars. The Japanese come and box our ears just the same, but with their other hand they take all our dollars.' 'We have driven out the bear, but now the tiger has come and made a home in the old bear's cave,' is a common saying.

"The most amazing stories of corruption are told freely on the Russian side. Men boast of their success in making fortunes out of the war funds. One soldier, who acted as chief cook and purchaser of supplies to his regiment, claimed to have made 60,000 roubles (about [illegible]). 'I bought cattle for 35 roubles each,' he said. 'They were charged in the accounts at 100 roubles. Being only a common soldier, I could keep no more than [illegible] for myself. The colonel kept 25 roubles, and the remaining twenty-five went among others. I bought other things in the same way.'

"Railway men admitted that but for wholesale bribery they would have got nothing through on the railway during the war. One notorious station master removed the stores from 300 cars and sent forward the supplies of private merchants. He received 500 roubles (£54) a car. He implicated so many higher officials that when a military board inquired into the case he had to be promoted instead of punished, to save a scandal.

"There were no signs of disturbances or disorder during my journey, beyond vague inflammatory talk. Most Russians declaimed against the government very bitterly, and on the night when the news of the death of Gen. Trepoff arrived some passengers sent for champagne, and drank to show their triumph, saying that their only regret was due to Trepoff dying in his bed. Officers with whom I talked declared, in more than one case, that come what would they did not mean to fight again under generals in whom they had no confidence. Every independent man agreed that there is no likelihood of a really serious uprising in the immediate future.

Prosperity for Siberia.

"Siberia is clearly entering on a period of great prosperity. The country from Irkutsk to Samara is among the richest and most fertile I have ever seen. The peasant settlers are sturdy, prosperous, and independent. They altogether lack the subservience and fear of officials seen in European Russia.

"All along the line of route I found evidence which convinces me that even political disturbances cannot prevent Siberia from having, within the next few years, a period of rapid growth and prosperity rivaling that of Western America.

"Had it not been for a night's delay at the Russian frontier post at Chang-chung-fu, where my companion, Capt. von Pustau, and myself were detained, and for a breakdown on the railway, I could have done the journey in seventeen days. The Japanese expect to have the final section of their line running before the end of the year, and then will have a station at Chang-chung-fu, within a short distance of the Russian terminus. It should then be possible to do the journey from London to Dalny in seventeen days."

The Coming Eclipse.

ONLY ONE AMERICAN EXPEDITION WILL GO TO ASIA TO SEE IT.

From Philadelphia Ledger.

THE next total eclipse of the sun takes place on January 13, 1907, and will be visible in Central Asia. Although the track of the eclipse is wholly on land, yet the conditions are so unfavorable, both as to weather probabilities and communication with these regions (Russian Turkestan and Mongolia) that scarcely an effort will be made by the astronomers of this country to view the eclipse. No expeditions will be sent from the United States Naval Observatory, Washington; Harvard Observatory, Lick Observatory or the Yerkes Observatory.

Only Prof. David P. Todd, of the Amherst Observatory, Mass., seems to have summoned up enough courage to go in pursuit of the fugitive shadow, though even he has not yet settled definitely whether he will go east to Bokhara or west via Peking to Tsair-osu. A few thousand miles more or less is a mere item apparently in the calculations of the astronomer, when taken into consideration with the attractions offered by a total eclipse of the sun, and no obstacle seems insurmountable in such a case. As Prof. Langley said of this superb sight: "The spectacle is one of which, though the man of science may prosaically state the facts, perhaps only the poet could render the impression."

The best region for observing the eclipse is available by means of railways recently constructed in Russian territory. On this railway and about two-thirds of the way from Tashkent to Samarkand lies Jizah, only a few miles from the exact line of central eclipse. Fortunately, the railroad from Orenburg to Tashkent, practically a branch of the Trans-Siberian Railway, which has been in course of construction, is now completed. Other easily accessible places near Jizah, and well within the belt of totality, are Zaamin, Nau and Ura-Tiube, the last being practically central.

From the United States the best way to reach Jizah is by means of Naples, Constantinople, the Black Sea, Tiflis, the Caspian Sea, Bokhara and Samarkand. From Krasnowovsk, on the Caspian Sea, to Tashkent trains run regularly, there being two trains which leave Krasnowovsk daily at 5 a.m. and 7:15 p.m., respectively. The return trip might be made by way of Tashkent, Orenburg, Samara, Moscow, Warsaw, Berlin, Paris, London, to New York City. This would be an ideal round trip, including the total eclipse of the sun and a glimpse of some of the finest cities of Europe en route.

If we go further east the track of the eclipse leads into a region more and more difficult of access, although the totality lasts a few seconds longer, and the eclipsed sun is a few degrees higher. Only one station in Mongolia, Tsair-osu, seems likely to be considered, and may be the only one finally selected by Prof. Todd. In the American Journal of Science for March, 1906, he has given the position of ten possible observing stations, exact local time of the four phases, durations of totality and other interesting facts.

The middle of the eclipse occurs at sunrise in a region north of the Black Sea, the track crossing the Caspian Sea, where the eclipse begins at sunrise. It reaches Jizah, in Turkestan, about 8:45 and ending at 10:01:55.2, the duration being about two minutes.

Jizah is about thirteen miles south of the central line, while Ura-Tuibe is only two miles south, and practically central. There the eclipse begins at 8:50:52, totality being at 10:06:37.1, and ending at 10:08:40.9, a duration of two minutes and seventeen seconds. At Tsair-osu, in Mongolia, which is two miles north of the central line, the eclipse begins at 12:29:58, with totality at 1:49:41.6, and ends at 1:51:36.7, a duration of about 1 minute and 46 seconds.

Looking at the map, Tsair-osu, in Mongolia, seems the easiest place to get at, compared with the long overland trip to Jizah. To arrive at Tsair-osu means a long ocean trip across the Pacific, but the difficulties in the way of transportation, from Peking to that place are still to be considered, and also the climatic conditions at this season of the year. However, it must be remembered that this will be the last favorable opportunity for observing an eclipse until that of April, 1912, which will be visible for one minute in Brazil, and for a brief interval in Spain.

The next eclipse will be that of January 3, 1908, and will be wholly confined to the Pacific Ocean, with the possibility of observing stations on two islands. A brief account of these islands will show how little they are adapted for such work. One, named Flint Island, is situated west of the Marquesesas Islands. It belongs to the British, and was discovered in 1801. This little island is about two and a half miles long and a half mile broad, and is fringed by a deep coral reef, which dries at low water and extends seaward quite a distance.

It is covered with brushwood and trees, and in the interior of the island are two small lagoons of brackish water. Not a very promising prospect for the most enterprising observer, despite the fact that the duration of totality will be four minutes, and the sun's altitude 74 degrees. In 1880 the island was uninhabited, and the buoys formerly in use were gone. There is no rise and fall of tide, and the landing is said to be very bad, even for surf boats.

The other island within the shadow track is known as Hull Island, and is situated half way between the Marquesas Islands and the Solomon Islands. It is one of the Phoenix group, and was discovered by Wilkes in 1840. A coral reef fringes the island, and landing is difficult except by entering the lagoon by means of the boat passages on the northwest side. There is no anchorage, and in 1899 the island was uninhabited. The winds are favorable from January to May, during which period bad weather is most common. Small chance, then, is there of observing the eclipse with any success, since it occurs on January 3, when squalls prevail. Such is the irony of fate, permitting one of the grandest sights the eye of mortal can ever behold to waste its glory on these almost inaccessible islands.

This reminds one of the illustration given by an astronomer who compares the tip of the shadow trailing along the earth to the point of a lead pencil, marking a line on a whirling ball that represents the earth. It would sometimes seem—to carry the illustration further—that a mischievous imp directed the point of the pencil, causing it to trail aimlessly in the neighborhood of Greenland, where the eclipse occurs in 1909, and in the South Antarctic regions in 1910.

In fact, although a total eclipse of the sun occurs every year between 1907 and 1912, yet no observations of value can be made, because on all these occasions the pathway of shadow lies almost wholy across oceans or inaccessible parts of our planet. That observations of value cannot be made is due to the fact that no device for securing accurate astronomical observations from the deck of a ship has yet been perfected, while to reach these places tedious and expensive expeditions are necessary.

For this reason it seems as though some effort should be made to observe the coming eclipse of January 13, 1907, at one at least of the ten possible stations whose positions have been carefully computed by Prof. David P. Todd. Fortunately, the computer in this case is equal to the emergency and, undaunted by climatic conditions of a tedious journey, braves all obstacles in pursuit of a shadow which enables him for a few moments to obtain a brief glimpse of the sun in all its glory.

What glory's like to thee?
Soul of this world, this universe's eye,
No wonder some made thee a deity.

HOW LINCOLN WON HIS CASE.

The lawyer whose honesty is proved has the confidence of the judge and jury. A story of Abraham Lincoln is an illustration: he was appointed to defend one charged with murder. The crime was a brutal one; the evidence entirely circumstantial; the accused a stranger. Feeling was high and against the friendless defendant. On the trial Lincoln drew from the witnesses full statements of what they saw and knew. There was no effort to confuse, no attempt to place before the jury the facts other than they were. In the argument, after calling attention to the fact that there was no direct testimony, Lincoln reviewed the circumstances, and after conceding that this and that seemed to point to defendant's guilt, closed by saying that he had reflected much on the case, and while it seemed probable that defendant was guilty, he was not sure; and looking the jury straight in the face said, "Are you?" The defendant was acquitted, and afterward the real criminal was detected and punished. How different would have been the conduct of many lawyers! Some would have striven to lead the judge into technical errors with a view to an appeal to a higher court. Others would have become hoarse in denunciation of witnesses, decrying the lack of positive testimony and the marvelous virtue of a reasonable doubt. The simple, straightforward way of Lincoln, backed by the confidence of the jury, won.—[David J. Brewer, in the Atlantic.

RATHER HARD ON BEGGARS.

The Sinclair Socialist, handing the beggar a dime, said:

"The world is in a bad enough way, dear knows; but I am not one of those blind men who say that it goes back instead of forward.

"Take your case, for instance. You are practically unmolested, aren't you? A few months is the most you ever get for begging. And do you know what would have been done to you in the fifteenth century?

"The first time they caught you begging they'd have whipped you at the cart's tail. The second time they caught you they'd have slit your right ear, and bored a hole in your left ear with a hot iron. Catching you a third time, they'd have put you to death as a felon."

"Gee," said the beggar, "who'd 'a' thunk it?"

FOR SALE—"WE SELL THE HILLS."
The State and county elections are over and the "country is saved" again. The fellows who "won out" are "feeling good all over," and the fellows who "got left" are pulling themselves together trying to figure out how it all happened anyway. Through it all Los Angeles is marching grandly on, many hundred of "new homes" are growing where none grew before, and values are appreciating every day; streets that were regarded as of no special importance are coming to the front as business streets, and prices in many cases have doubled again and again, in an incredibly short time.

A few years ago 50-foot lots on Central ave. from Seventh to Pico, went begging at from $700 to $1000; look at them now; seven years ago you could buy the best lots in the Electric Railway Homestead tract on W. Pico st., at from $500 to $700. Look at them now, actually selling at from $8000 to $10,000 and upwards. Look at W. Seventh st. $300 a front foot for frontage near Bonnie Brae; look at W. Washington and West Jefferson; "dead as a door nail" only a short time ago; prices doubled and trebled in the past year, and selling lively at the advance.

Say, don't you want to get in on the ground floor on one of the grandest streets in the most beautiful picturesque part of the city, where a big advance is just about due? Do you like to live in a high, healthy atmosphere, where you can have a magnificent eye view, embracing ocean, mountain, city and country, as far as the eye can reach in every direction. If you do, just investigate the Sunset blvd., 100 feet wide, winding in graceful curves through the beautiful hill country in the northwest to the ocean. We are offering great bargains on this splendid driveway just now, fine 50-foot lots, from $1200 upwards; we have also secured an option for a short time on 20 magnificent lots in Childs Heights near Sunset blvd., graded, graveled, oiled streets, cement curbs and sidewalks. The very best quality of work, $2500; building restrictly; everything strictly first-class; lovely views, best climate, 7-minute car service, close in. We are going to sell these fine lots, 50x147, each for from $1200 to $1500; 1-4 cash, 6, 12 and 18 months. Call on the RANNELLS LAND CO., 127 N. Main. Telephones Home A7781, Sunset Main 5707, or National Realty and Trust Co., 123 S. Broadway. Phone Main 2120, Home A6431. 11

FOR SALE—
THESE ARE EXCEPTIONALLY CHOICE.

6.4 acres at the southwest corner of Vernon and Santa Fe aves., at $500 per acre less than anything in this neighborhood.

Also at the southeast corner of Vernon and Alameda, 3 2-3 acres for $8500.

Please note that negotiations are now pending whereby the S. P. Ry. will extend a spur track through both places mentioned herein, and will thereby enhance the value of this property at least $500 per acre.

THIS IS NO DREAM; I KNOW WHEREOF I SPEAK.

FOR SALE—
We are part owners and owners' agents for lots in the following tracts: Central Arlington Heights, Garfield Heights, Arlington Heights Extension, Crenshaw Boulevard Tract, Country Club Tract and others. Lots in any of these tracts are for sale, one-fourth cash balance 6, 12 and 18 months. All of these properties are located in the west, directly in line with the city's rapid growth and these properties will surely advance in values. All who have bought up to this time have realized from 25 to 100 per cent. on their investment in two years. It will pay you to investigate; it costs nothing to call and get information. FOR SALE—"WE SELL THE HILLS."
Less than 2 miles from the Courthouse in the city of Los Angeles, occupying the crest of a beautiful hill, which is reached by a comparatively easy grade, immediately adjoining one of the most beautifully improved portions of Elysian Park, overlooking almost the entire city of Los Angeles, with fine views of the mountains and all the intervening country and convenient to street car lines. We offer the finest close-in 6-acre tract in the city that up to this time has escaped subdivision. As a site for a palatial home or a magnificent family tourist hotel or for any such purpose where large grounds are desired, there is nothing in the city that will compare with this. Could also be subdivided to good advantage. This property is fairly worth $25,000. However, since we hold it by option, which will expire next month, and it is not convenient for us to take it up, we will sell it for $18,000; $9000 cash, balance one and two years at 6 per cent., with privilege of subdivision and partial releases. Unless taken before option expires it will never be bought for any such price as this. See the RANNELLS LAND CO. about this at once. Office 127 North Main st. Phone Home A7781; Sunset Main 5707. Regular commission to agents. 11

FOR SALE—"WE SELL THE HILLS."
On the summit of that beautiful hill just south of Sunset boulevard, in the Capitol Hill tract, we offer one of the grandest sites in Los Angeles for a fine residence, 193 feet, east front, on 82½-foot graded street by about 200 feet in depth, with graded street on south and west; splendid views of ocean, mountains, city and country. There is no finer site in the city anywhere at any price. Mrs. Elizabeth E. Thomas of Grand avenue and Jefferson street, an old resident of the city, who knows values and appreciates beauty, has just bought a similar site on the west side of this tract and will build a $5000 residence on her purchase. We want a nice house on this site in the eastern part of the tract. You would pay from $5000 upward for desirable lot 50x150 in southwest part of city, same distance from center as this, but we will sell this magnificent site (almost an acre) street work all paid, pure water under pressure, gas and electric lights, 18 minutes by trolley from First and Spring, for $5500, one-fourth cash, 6, 12 and 18 months, 6 per cent. $500 discount to purchaser who will build $5000 house at once. See the RANNELLS LAND CO. about this. Main office 127 North Main street. Phones Home A7781. Main 5707. 11

WITHIN 24 HOURS AFTER YOU READ THIS THE ELECTION FOR ANNEXATION OF A STRIP OF LAND BETWEEN LOS ANGELES AND SAN PEDRO WILL TAKE PLACE.

THIS ELECTION MEANS THAT IMMEDIATELY THERE WILL BE ANOTHER ELECTION FOR THE FURTHER ANNEXATION OF SAN PEDRO ITSELF.

THEN FOLLOWS

LOS ANGELES TO THE SEA.

SAN PEDRO, WHICH HAS NOW SEVEN LARGE FACTORIES, WILL HAVE MANY MORE.

BECAUSE

THE OUTER HARBOR FOR DEEP SEA SHIPPING WILL BE DEVELOPED.

OUR ORIENTAL TRADE WITH CHINA, JAPAN AND THE FAR EAST WILL COME THROUGH SAN PEDRO, THE TERMINUS OF LOS ANGELES TO THE SEA.

IN THE OUTER HARBOR ANY SHIP IN THE WORLD CAN DISCHARGE ITS CARGO AS SOON AS THE WHARVES ARE BUILT.

THIS WILL FOLLOW ANNEXATION VERY RAPIDLY, AS LOS ANGELES MUST HAVE A PORT AND AVOID THE TREMENDOUS FREIGHT RATES.

THINK OF OWNING FRONTAGE ADJOINING THE OUTER HARBOR OF LOS ANGELES TO THE SEA!

THIS BUSINESS PROPERTY WILL INCREASE IN VALUE AS MUCH PER FOOT AS RESIDENCE PROPERTY WILL PER LOT.

THE GOVERNMENT IS NOW SPENDING THREE MILLION, AND TWO DIFFERENT FILLS FOR WHARFAGE HAVE STARTED.

PACIFIC AVE., ABUTTING THIS WORK, IS 100 FT. WIDE, AND HUNTINGTON AVE. ADJOINING, 90 FT. WIDE.

PACIFIC ELECTRIC CARS WILL BE RUNNING IN FRONT OF THIS PROPERTY IN ANOTHER WEEK.

IF YOU HAVE ANY MONEY TO INVEST, DON'T MISS THIS.

THIS IS BUSINESS PROPERTY.

THESE STREETS WILL BE THE NEW BROADWAY AND HILL STS. OF LOS ANGELES TO THE SEA.

FOR THE NEXT FEW DAYS WE WILL SELL COMBINED FRONTAGE ON THESE TWO STREETS

AT

$30 A FOOT FRONTAGE.

$50 A FOOT FRONTAGE.

BUY NOW OR YOU WILL HAVE TO PAY 25 PER CENT. TO 50 PER CENT. MORE AFTER ANNEXATION

IN

A fine corner on Santa Fe ave. one block from Seventh st., with S.P. Co. switch if desired.

This is an exceptionally fine close-in location for warehouse or factory.

Remember, it is only one block from Seventh st., where corners are held at $300 per front foot, and no better corners.

I tell you, investors, that this is a snap that will surely bring you big money by April the first, as the immense improvements that are to take place on 7th st., will make this property easily worth $125 per front foot. Remember that close-in corners are becoming very scare, especially with trackage. Look this up at once.

THE STREET WHERE THINGS ARE DOING.

PERHAPS you will now believe that the GREAT SHRINER AUDITORIUM is a reality, sketchs and views of which, appeared in the Examiner of October 21st. THIS TEMPLE—specifications of which, provide for an area of 44,118 square feet, a little more than an acre of IMPROVEMENTS—is to cost over $100,000. With a MOORISH ENTRANCE OF the Oriental TYPE, this "Architectural" THING OF BEAUTY WILL BE A MONSTER. Preparations are now being made to break the ground and property owners in the immediate vicinity on JEFFERSON ST. are lying awake nights, figuring how much to ask for their holdings. We secured options on several good pieces before those GOOD NEWS were made public, and offer you the following at old time prices, in which you have made a good round profit, and several Christmas present besides, both for yourself and your friends—when you buy.

FOR SALE—SPRING ST. NEAR 4TH.

$6500 PER FOOT.

60x150 FT. TO 20 FT. PAVED ALLEY.

When, on account of the city's growth, the thousands of lots held several years ago at $50 to $500 per foot advance to $150 to $2500 per foot, but little surprise is caused, and it is taken as a matter of course—because $500 to $2500 a foot doesn't "look high.." But when the very best lots, worth about $1500 a foot at the time the other lots sold as above, are advanced to $6500 or $7500, the same proportion as the cheaper ones, then it is you hear "NEW RECORD PRICE!! Why certainly the HIGHEST PRICED lots can't advance with the city's growth without making "new record prices!" And, as it's a price you never heard asked here, why you are just compelled to GET USED TO IT!

And right here is where many capitalists of this city have missed it in the past 5 years. They laugh at the "suckers" who pay any attention to the "high prices" we crazy boomers put on our central business lots, and pride themselves upon the fact that they've been here too long to be caught by any such dope as is handed out by us "Spring and Fourth Idiots! Now don't you begin thinking I'm sore at the fellows who could have bought this lot and haven't! To their "difference of opinion" from mine as to values down there I am indebted for an equity in this lot, big enough to—to—pay my debts when I sell it! I plead with them 2 or 3 years ago, with tears in my voice, to please take it at $2500 a foot—they thought I was joking! I saw other lots sell and resell 20 per cent. higher, so I just marked mine up 20 per cent. to $3000—like the other fellow would have done if he had bought it. Then they thought I was running a bluff to get some fool to offer the $2500. Then I asked $3500 and they thought I didn't want to sell. Then I asked $4000 in about 6 months and they telephoned the Lunacy Commission to "keep an eye on that geezer down at Spring and Fourth!" Then I "yumped" it up to $4500 and they said "why don't you make it even $5000?" I said, all right, I will, and did so, and OFFERED $4500 for a piece down there and they thought I wouldn't make good if it was sold. So, when I put it up to $6000, about a year ago, they got to jollying me on the street and wanted to know if I still expected to get $6500. But when Howe Bros. were offered $7500 per foot a few weeks ago for a corner even further down they began to sit up and take notice.

So, that's all about the record! I owe my present ownership to their refusal to appreciate the location and they've kinder forced me to hold on by my eyebrows till it looks like the growth in value is going to give me a hand hold if some fellow don't take it pretty soon at $6500.

A 16 to 20-story office building on this lot would be its own advertisement and bring rents that would curl your hair! It would only cost $400,000 to $500,000, and 3 or 4 fellows could get in and swing the deal on a syndicate building basis and only have to put about $50,000 apiece to me. As to the "building limit" city ordinance, just see me about that if you really want to build the 16 to 20-story building. I think your plans would be allowed.

So, "get used to $7500," though you can get this while I'm writing this ad. at $6500. "It won't hurt you!"

Another thing, while I'm writing, I have one of the best things in Southern California. It's 1300 ACRES FINE LAND!

Likely to soon have electric road through the center.

It's about one-fourth mile from Hotel Rialto.

Price $100,000. It's a beauty. Do you want to see it? If so, come and see me and we'll talk it over. Finest of orange land, level and rich.

REGULAR COMMISSION to agents on anything I own!

And, say—let me whisper this—because it looks like saying "I told you so." Col. Randolph has done what the greatest engineers in the country in government employ said he couldn't do (but which your Uncle Coufed told you he would do) has accomplished a task that will carry his name down in the big books long after the knockers have quit splitting hairs for Uncle Sam over "impossible rock dams" in quicksand rivers, (at so much per split) and the "Hind Dam" will outlive the name that modesty has given it and will for all time be a "horizontal monument" to the matchless nerve and judgment of that same Randolph, the quiet dauntless "wizard" who can build railroads and dams over routes so difficult that civil engineers can't make 'em hold on tracing paper or blue prints.

But that isn't what I started to say, at all—I only started to whisper that if you have papered a bungalow with any of those old "C. D." (Colorado Dam) bonds—(you wouldn't bring them to me for that purpose when I offered to take them)—just peel them off the wall and bring them along, I'll take 'em, thank you, interest or no interest! Do you see?

If not drop in and I'll be more explicit.

FOR SALE—

You Don't have to smash any machine TOMORROW. The whole of the wonderful VERMONT AVEnue will be voted into town in a walkover. Then just watch this great street soar. Here's the last call on a few extra choice opportunities. See us tomorrow to make sure.

$6500—55x140, near 24th, one of the best business locations on the whole street.

$7500—One of the finest 50-foot corners and one that will sell for $1500 more before this month is out. See if it doesn't.

$12,000—Another extra fine corner, nearly 100 feet, with improvements.

We may not be able to deliver some of the above Tuesday, after the election. If you want to be certain about it, MAKE A DEPOSIT TOMORROW.

FOR SALE—

VERMONT TO THE SEA.

THERE'S NO NECESSITY OF DOING SO MUCH TALKING TODAY ABOUT VERMONT AVENUE. THAT ELECTION TOMORROW WILL TALK SO LOUDLY THAT YOU'LL BE THINKING ABOUT IT FOR MONTHS TO COME.

I've still got that corner at $150 a foot, next to 24th—the THIRD BEST CORNER ON ALL VERMONT AVENUE. I don't know how long it will be at this price, but I do know that all VERMONT will take a big jump in the very near future. There's a profit of $2500 in this in the next few months, or it will yield a fine income on the $10,000 basis if improved at small expense.

WHATEVER YOU DO—REMEMBER THAT THE ANNEXATION ELECTION IS TOMORROW AND THAT VERMONT AVENUE IS RIGHT IN THE CENTER OF IT ALL. NO NEED TO ASK YOU TO VOTE FOR ANNEXATION. EVERY MAN IN LOS ANGELES WHO BELIEVES IN THE FUTURE GROWTH AND GREATNESS AND PROSPERITY OF THE GRANDEST CITY IN ALL CALIFORNIA WILL DO THAT.

FOR SALE—GOODWIN'S BEST BARGAINS.

My experience in the real estate business teaches me that it does not pay to advertise any properties unless they are real bargains, but when we have properties that are under value we find a ready sale. Below are four pieces of properties that are under value and I know that they are sure, safe investments.

$3000.

Nice lot, 44 1-2x130, on E. 9th st. near Alameda, 6-room cottage, street paved. I will put up $100 for 2 months option at $500 profit to buyer.

$7750.

4 modern flats, 1217 Winfield st. near Sentous neighborhood of 12th and Figueroa; fine lot, 50x125. Flats in fine condition. Will rent steadily for $70 month. Owner going to Nevada. This is a sure investment. You can't help but make a profit.

$8000.

Beautiful level lot on Grand ave., close in, walking distance; 60x175; 12-room residence and barn that is worth $3000. Owner needs cash, hence the sacrifice.

$9000.

228 S. Flower, 40x153; 6-room cottage. Others ask $300 ft. for property near Third; here is a lot with two frontages for $225 ft. It's worth $10,000.

Come in and let me show you these bargains.

FOR SALE—

GREATEST BUSINESS BUYS IN GROWING LOS ANGELES.

THE HOTEL LILLIE.

—$135,000—

Positively one of the greatest fortune-making pieces of business property in Los Angeles is the Hotel Lillie. This property touches the throbbing heart of retail Los Angeles. It includes 60x155 feet on Hill, between Fifth and Sixth sts., facing Central Park, the only great public square in the business district; $135,000 (which is today's price) could not be placed to greater advantage than in this magnificent property. Investigate NOW.

ANOTHER REMARKABLE BUY.

Another fortune-producer is the 55x120 feet on Sixth st., adjoining the S.W. corner of Sixth and Olive. There's a cool fortune in this buy if taken at the present low price. Just ripe for improvement.

HERE'S ONE THAT DESERVES YOUR IMMEDIATE INVESTIGATION.

90x120 FEET ON EIGHTH, BETWEEN HILL AND BROADWAY.

This property is directly opposite the great $1,500,000 Hamburger store, now in course of construction. The completion of this enormous building will have a phenomenal effect upon realty values in its immediate vicinity—and think of the proximity of this particular piece of property, which we are offering you. This property is partially improved—enough to easily "carry it."

A GOOD ONE ON OLIVE ST., BETWEEN FIFTH AND SIXTH.

FACING CENTRAL PARK.

This property includes 60x165 feet and we can guarantee that the present price is easily $200 lower per foot than anything else in the block. If you have the money this is easy prey for you.

a thousand million dollars of wealth on top of a thousand million last year, and this wealth is in the hands of the people who created it. Most farmers are independent now. I never saw the West in such good shape." At the same time he says that he noticed everywhere, not especially in Chicago, but all through the West and all through the East, in New York and surrounding cities, the same tendency everywhere to overspeculate in land adjacent to the cities. He points out that if the shifting of centers of population and the newly created wealth prove sufficient to maintain the present prices, which he considers inflated, no harm may be done. But he thinks that it is impossible that these conditions should rule everywhere. If population shifts, it must be from one center to another, and if the shifting is equal in each case in any given city, there is no increase in the population. If there is not everywhere an equal income and outgo, in the same proportion that one city grows in population another must decrease.

Who Is to Get Hurt?

If any crisis should come, Mr. Fish thinks it is the middle class of business young men and young men with salaries who are going to get hurt. An allowance is made that the scattering of population from congested centers to outlying areas is a good thing, which comes from the use of automobiles and the extension of trolley lines.

Where the Danger Lies.

It will open the eyes of Los Angeles real estate men to learn that Mr. Fish thinks the danger lies in selling land near cities for $500 and away up to $1000 a front foot that was selling recently at $100 to $200 an acre. He thinks that where this has taken place buyers are in danger in many cases and that the old story is liable to repeat itself. We have had nothing like this in or around Los Angeles. We have been thinking that our boom was a pretty healthy young Hercules, but the most costly residence property in the city of Los Angeles, not far out from dense centers of population, but right in the heart of the most beautiful residence districts, the price of our real estate is now at the very top only $125 a front foot. In the districts farther out good future residence property can be had for from $20 to $50 a front foot. Right in the densely populated residence centers of the city property now only suitable for flat and apartment purposes is not held at usually above $200 or $250 a front foot. There is property in the Westlake district today within a stone's throw of hotels costing from $100,000 to $200,000 and upward with very little vacant land anywhere around still offered for $100 a front foot.

SECOND AND HILL.

Eight-story Fireproof Hotel to Replace the Locke—Millionaires in the Deal.

The northwest corner of Second and Hill streets has been bought to put on it a fine eight-story fire-proof hotel of 250 rooms. The lot is two full city lots, 120x165 feet. The corner is vacant. The Locke stands on the inside portion.

The buyers have an option on the next lot north, the residence of former Judge A. M. Stephens, being 60x165 feet.

The lot brought $150,000, or $1250 a foot. The inner lot is probably bonded at something like the same figure.

The hotel will cost $350,000. The buyers are heavy capitalists, well known East and West. They are O. S. A. Sprague of Sprague, Warner & Co., Chicago, who is a director in the Pullman Company and in the Santa Fé Railroad Co.; John H. Dwight, vice-president of the State Bank, Chicago, and a multimillionaire; Frank H. Bolt, president of the San Gabriel Valley Bank, Pasadena; Charles H. Frost, owner of the Frost building, corner Second street and Broadway; J. D. Thompson, heavily interested in Pasadena property; Elizabeth G. Reighard, millionairess; Calvin Stewart, builder of Hotel Maryland, Pasadena, and Ernest H. Lockwood, a heavy capitalist of Pasadena, and active operator in real estate. He is said to have put through the whole deal.

HILL STREET SALE.

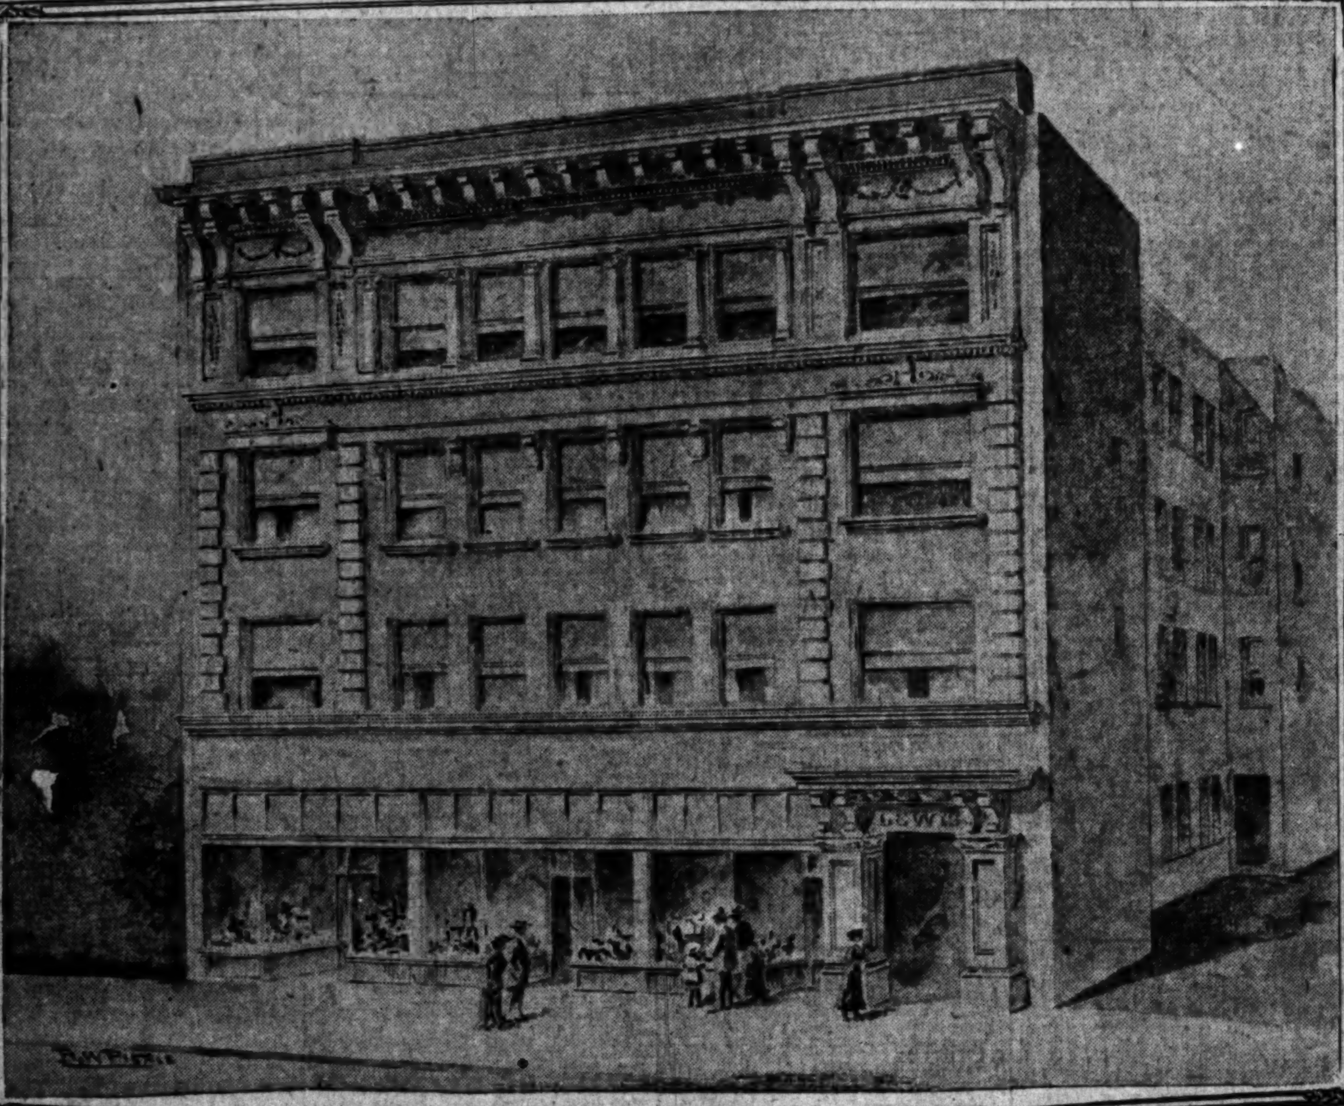
Big Corner Lot Brings Record Price for This Rapidly-Improving Street.

The notable real estate sale of the week was the southwest corner of Sixth and Hill streets, a lot 150x132 feet, for $2760 a front foot, making a total of $415,000. The lot was bought seven months ago for $330,000. A local syndicate sold it to the Consolidated Realty Company, Mines & Farish, and Robert Marsh & Co., conducting the sale. This is believed to be the highest price yet paid for Hill-street property.

The new owners will improve this lot at once with a fine building. It lies just north of the Y.M.C.A. lot, and faces Central Park.

RESIDENCE OF A. W. ROSS.

The illustration herewith is the residence of A. W. Ross, now being built on the southwest corner of Hermosa and Twenty-third streets, under the supervision of F. M. Tyler. It is of wood and brick construction, containing eight large rooms. It is built after the Old English style and has a large brick and cement porch, 10 feet wide by 50 feet long; also back fences, with flower boxes on top on either side. The house is of massive construction inside and out. There are five rooms on the first floor, and three large rooms and bath on the second floor. In the front is a large living room with heavy beam ceiling and massive stone mantel and built-in seats. Adjoining the living room is the den, with brick mantel, bookcases and built-in cosy corner in circular bay. On the Twenty-third-street side, back of the living room is the dining-room, which has beamed ceiling and paneled walls, a circular bay, and a large built-in buffet, 10 feet in width, with art-glass sash over. The second floor has two large bedrooms and a large billiard room. The house is heated by a furnace, and has hardwood floors throughout. This residence will cost $6500 complete, and makes a fine home, being on an 80-foot corner, opposite the west entrance of Berkeley Square.



Apartment building for Mrs. Eliza A. Lewis, Olive street, near Sixth.

LEWIS APARTMENT BUILDING.

Some time ago Robert Marsh & Co. sold to Mrs. Eliza A. Lewis a lot on Olive street, south of Sixth. Mrs. Lewis will improve it at once with a fine apartment house according to plans drawn by Fred A. Dorn. It will be four stories and basement, of pressed brick exterior and beautiful interior finish.

The ground floor will be divided into three large stores, and the upper stories will contain seventy-two rooms connected in suites. Six of these suites will have private baths, and the house will be well supplied with general bath rooms. There will be good elevator service. The cost will be $50,000.

Robert Marsh & Co. lease the premises in advance for a period of ten years.

BIG ONE ON PICO.

Colson, Bryon & Donnell announce that they have sold for L. B. Ziegler to A. M. Jones the property known as No. 126 West Pico street. The lot is 50x150 feet to an alley and there is a small piece on the south side of the alley which goes with it about 50x50. The property is improved with a ten-room house; price $29,000. Mr. Jones three days after he bought this property, sold it to T. S. Coffin for $31,000.

BIG TRACT, BIG PRICE.

Tyler & Co. and J. A. Bowden have just purchased of Benj. Kingsbaker the southeast corner of Vermont and Vernon avenues for a consideration of $60,000. There are seventeen acres of land (more or less) or at the rate of about $3300 per acre. This is by far the highest price ever paid for acreage in that section. It is the intention of the purchasers to immediately subdivide into large lots, with broad streets, plant trees and build a lot of artistic houses.

SELLING ACREAGE.

F. H. Brooks Company report the following sales in El Carmel tract: Five acres on the southeast corner of Vail avenue, and Ash street, to E. A. Pederson. The new owner bought it for speculating purposes, and has already been offered advanced prices. Five acres on the southeast corner of Val avenue and Date street, to C. A. Lindman, $1250. Buyer will build a modern bungalow and otherwise improve the property. Four acres on the southwest corner of Ash and Greenwood streets, to James McGregor, $1600. New owner is improving his property by laying cement irrigating ditches preparing for planting strawberries. Nine acres on the northwest corner of First and Center streets, to W. E. Brown, $3620. He will build a country home some time this winter. Ten acres on the north side of Center between First and Greenwood streets, to H. H. Henderson, $3500. Buyer is planning to subdivide into one-acre lots. The same party purchased five acres on Maple avenue, between Beach and Center streets, $1750, where he will build his home.

GLENDALE SALES.

Cole & Albright at Glendale report the following sales: M. Stubblefield to N. J. Caldwell, lot $500. The purchaser will erect a home on this property. Ralph Rogers to Alice L. Bryant, lot $450. In Glendale Home tract, lot $450, to Anna M. Patch. L. C. Brand and H. E. Huntington to Julius Kranz, lot $2250. L. C. Brand and H. E. Huntington to Pincus A. Kranz, lot $1000. L. C. Brand and H. E. Huntington to Etta Suplee, lot Glendale Boulevard tract, $1000. L. C. Brand and H. E. Huntington to M. L. Albright, lot $1000. L. C. Brand and H. E. Huntington to C. E. Damerell, lot $1000. W. Ray Simpson to Marcus L. Godfrey, lot $1580. C. E. Damerell to G. M. Bartley, lot $650. Mrs. Catlin to C. H. Boyd, lot on Fourth street, $800.

BIG ACREAGE.

C. G. Stanton is reported to have exchanged city property and money for a ranch of 742 acres in San Fernando Valley. The price is given at $100,000. In exchange deals values are often not exact.

WASHINGTON AND VERMONT.

H. H. Cotton has purchased of Miss S. J. Lees the northwest corner of Washington street and Vermont avenue, 49x112 feet, unimproved, for $7250, through Edward D. Silent & Co.

ECHO PARK WAY.

J. W. Hardesty sold to Marie D. Friller 150 feet frontage on Echo Park avenue for $10,500 through the agency of W. B. Creager. The property is to be extensively improved.

REAL ESTATE NOTES.

Emil Firth reports Figueroa Boulevard tract, which he has only recently put on the market, as nearly sold out. The tract consists of 375 lots and is bounded by Figueroa street on the east, Florence avenue on the north and Hoover street is its western boundary. It is one block west of the [illegible] avenue car line and one block east of the Gardena division of the Redondo line and the San Pedro line. The lots are 50x140 feet to alleys and sell from $475 upward. The water mains are laid, wide sidewalks and curbs [illegible] and other street improvements [illegible] completed. This is the tenth [illegible] tract Emil Firth has subdivided and marketed in that district and the seventeenth in this city.

A FINE RESIDENCE.
SMALL PAYMENT DOWN.

This is a fine 8-room, 2-story house, on a 60-foot lot; good location, bordering the Harvard Heights district; good street car facilities, and charming interior. Has customary hardwood floors, mantel, buffet, celar, furnace, front porch and balcony, every modern convenience; also good barn. The unusual thing about this house is the terms. It is not once in a hundred times that such an excellent property can be secured at a payment of $1500. This place is worth about $8000. We can deliver it for a little less. We cannot publish the exact price. It is a splendid house, and an unusual opportunity.

NEAR 24TH AND NORMANDIE.

$4500—$500 cash, modern 7-room house, located on a nice lot 50x135. The block in which this house is located is entirely built up with full two-story houses of artistic design; reception hall, living-room, dining-room, kitchen, pass pantry and screen porch on first floor; on the second floor are four nice bedrooms with large closets; also nice barn, lawn and flowers.

A BEAUTIFUL BUNGALOW.

$3800—This is one of the best bungalows to be had in the S. W. section of the city; it contains six large rooms and reception hall; the lot is 50x135. The entrance is from a large veranda into hall on your right through pretty archway to living-room with handsome brick mantel, built-in bookcases and writing desk; through sliding doors into large dining-room, which is paneled and has a very handsome built-in buffet; three very pretty bedrooms, two of which are finished in white; nice large kitchen with cabinets; also pantry with cabinets and bins. Attic with stairs from screen porch which makes a fine storage room. Fine lawn and flowers. This house has only been completed about four months.

SEVEN PRETTY ROOMS.

A PRETTY EAST-FRONT HOME.

$5500—This home of eight rooms is entirely new and never occupied; located near the W. Adams car line and surrounded by pretty homes. The reception hall, living-room and den occupy the whole front of the house and are only separated by beautiful archways; the living-room and den are paneled with Spanish leather; handsome dining-room which has beamed ceiling, paneled walls and built-in buffet; these rooms have the dark woodwork and oak floors; pretty pass pantry in white enamel; on the second floor are four pretty bedchambers and bath all finished in white enamel and have white maple floors; handsome lighting fixtures; lawn in; lot 50x135.

FURNISHED OR UNFURNISHED.

NEAR BERKELEY SQUARE.

$6500—You may look the city over and not find the equal of this, all things taken in consideration. Nearly new, modern, 7 large rooms and large reception hall; you enter from nice porch into reception hall, on your left through pretty archway into living-room, through sliding doors to dining-room with built-in buffet; all these rooms have the weathered oak finish and hardwood floors; nice kitchen and pass pantry; three fine bedchambers and bath on second floor; lot 50x150 to alley and improved with good lawn and fruit trees; pretty little barn. Remember this house is nicely furnished and this price includes the furniture, but will sell unfurnished.

A FINE NINE-ROOM HOUSE.

$7250—It's located on the heights, near Berkeley Square; large reception hall with built-in hall rack with large mirror; pretty living-room with cove ceilings and decorated walls, library with built-in seats and bookcases; dining-room, panels, walls and beamed ceilings, built-in buffet; all these rooms have the dark finish and oak floors; nice pass pantry, kitchen and screen porch. Upstairs are five nice bedchambers; all have polished floors. Large attic. House heated with furnace. Nice two-story barn; fine lawn; taking into consideration the price of building material and the price of lots in this locality one could not duplicate this place for less than $9000 today.

ON BEACON STREET.

$7500—This modern, 8-room house is located on Beacon st. between Ninth and 10th. Reception hall, living-room, library, dining-room, kitchen, pass pantry and screen porch on first floor; on the second floor are four nice bedchambers and bath; nice lawn front and rear; two mantels, and furnace. This is close in, and in a fine residence district. If you are looking for property in this locality we know it will pay you to investigate this.

HANDSOME NINE-ROOM HOME.

$8500—This beautiful home is entirely new and has never been occupied. The location is S.W. in vicinity of Berkeley Square. From a large veranda one enters reception hall and on right of hall is a large living-room with beamed ceiling, and handsome brick mantel; just back of living-room through sliding doors is the den with built-in bookcases and seat; on left of hall is the dining-room which has large circular bay with five windows; this room is paneled and has pretty built-in buffet; all these rooms have the weathered oak finish and oak floors; very complete kitchen and pass pantry; screen porch with set tubs; on the second floor are four nice bedchambers, sewing-room and bath. Handsome lighting fixtures; lot 50x156 to an alley.

NEAR WILSHIRE PLACE.

$11,500—This beautiful new modern 10-room home is located on a fine east-front lot, just off Wilshire Blvd. Large living-room with handsome brick mantel, built-in bookcases and seats, beamed ceilings and paneled walls; library paneled with Spanish leather; beautiful dining-room with an elegant built-in buffet; a very cozy little den; nice kitchen and pantry; servants' room downstairs; upstairs there are 4 fine bedchambers and bath; hardwood floors throughout the house; furnace; nice lawn; lot 50x170. If you are in the market for a home of this class, let us show you this.

WHY NOT BUY ONE OF THESE REMARKABLE PROPERTIES? IF YOU ARE LOOKING FOR A HOME TODAY YOU COULD NOT DO BETTER THAN SELECT FROM THIS LIST. ALLOW US TO SHOW THEM TO YOU.

THE PRETTIEST BUNGALOW.

It has 6 fine large rooms, with oak floors in 3 rooms and hall; Flemish oak finish in living-rooms and front bedroom; white enamel in two bedrooms and bath; beam ceilings in living-room and hall; cream pressed-brick mantel and outside chimney; front bedroom opens to reception hall by sliding door and is planned as library if desired; dining-room beautifully paneled and finished with elegant buffet, seat, bay window and plate rail; built-in hall tree, bookcases, etc.; very large closets; fine bedrooms; and very spacious living-rooms; the prettiest bungalow—that's it. Large terraced lot on W. 28th st. Price $4300.

SOUTHWEST BARGAIN.

A large home of 8 rooms, besides reception hall and den, located in pretty and quiet street, southwest, near the University of Southern California; all rooms are large; 4 fine bedrooms, large bath and balcony, wide windows. The lot is 50x135 feet, finely improved with shade, flowers, much fruit and berries, chicken corral and house; price only $4650; terms $1000 cash.

ON WEST EIGHTH STREET.

This beautiful home is only 3 blocks from Westlake Park, close to two car lines, and has a view of the mountains that can never be cut off, full-sized lot, 60x135 feet, with cement retaining wall; neighborhood restricted to two-story homes; the house is practically new, a large, substantial, handsome home of 8 rooms, besides halls, large living-room, cozy library, bright dining-room, spacious reception hall, cabinet kitchen, oak floors, Flemish oak finish, basement and furnace pipes complete, four fine large bedrooms and balcony; nothing else like this property in all Westlake section; price $6500.

ON W. ADAMS HEIGHTS.

A finely built 8-room home, brand new and as complete as money can make it. Large living-room, library with seat and bookcases, dining-room paneled and fitted with elegant buffet; beamed ceilings in living and dining-rooms, pass pantry and cabinet kitchen; basement and furnace, laundry trays, etc.; above stairs 4 fine big bedrooms, with big closets and beautifully finished floors. This house leaves nothing lacking from oak floors below stairs to the balcony above. Price $6500, $1500 cash.

HERE'S A BARGAIN.

On a fine east-front lot, 60x135 feet, and in a neighborhood closely restricted to splendid two-story homes, we offer this large, handsome property; the house has stone and cement veranda, imposing entrance, large rooms throughout, especially the music and living-rooms; oak floors and Flemish oak finish, basement, furnace, etc., complete, four large bedrooms and a rear balcony on which two more could be easily built; auto barn, etc., etc.; as complete a home as is to be found anywhere in the city. And it would take $1000 more than the price asked to duplicate this property today. Price only $7500.

AN ELEGANT HOME.

A spacious 10-room residence, located in very closely restricted residence district, adjoining Adams st., in the best of the southwest. Here is a fine corner lot, handsomely and completely improved, and the house is as attractive as anything in the city. The entrance is from a pressed-brick veranda, which adds a striking touch to the beauty of the home. There are hardwood floors upstairs as well as down; Flemish oak finish; built-in appointments very complete; basement and furnace; no stairs; floored attic; five fine sleeping-rooms, partly inclosed large balcony; auto barn and oil-house; many flowers, etc.; just a complete, well-established home ready to move right into; price $8250.

HOME AND INVESTMENT, TOO.

This spacious 9-room mission-style home is located near W. Seventh and Rampart sts., on very large corner lot; the house is now a splendid home, having 5 bedrooms and every convenience; it fronts east and the neighborhood is unexcelled; but values are changing so rapidly that this corner cannot fail to be wanted for business or apartments reasonably soon, so to buy here now will surely make big money for the investor. The property would demand large rent if offered for that today. The price is only $10,500.

NEAR WESTLAKE PARK.

In this charming residence district, one block west of the park, this large 10-room residence may be had today at very low figure; it was built by the present owner for a home; he sells unexpectedly and with regret. The lower floor arrangement includes reception-room, hall, living-room, dining-room, den or servant's room, (as one chooses to so use it,) kitchen and two pantries; large basement, screen porch, etc., and separate rear stairs; oak floors throughout below, and in hall and bath above stairs; four extraordinary bedrooms, big bath and balcony on second floor; the attic is finished to one immense room 18x32 feet, with closets and storeroom; every room in this house is splendid size, equipped with the most modern appointments; there are two mantels, the Flemish oak and white enamel finish, all built-in ideas complete. The veranda is about 12x30 feet, partly glass-enclosed; auto barn in rear; the lot is large and terraced well above the street, with granite retaining wall; price cut to the lowest possible notch is $9000.

ON MAGNOLIA AVENUE.

Here is one of the most beautiful homes it has been our good fortune to offer. It sits in wide grounds, 70x140 feet to alley, and the locality is one of the best the city affords. The lower floor arrangement includes living-room 17x30, with pressed brick mantel and fireplace, seats, etc., dining-room, at the front, with brick mantel, buffet, paneled walls, etc., spacious reception hall, paneled and beamed in harmony with living-room and dining-room, so that it is a splendid addition to the beautiful arrangement of this home; two steps lead down to the den, in the rear of the reception hall, and this apartment is paneled, carefully appointed and has brick mantel. The floors are all oak, the lighting fixtures very fine, every appointment carried out in elegant harmony; above the ornamental stairs are four very large bedrooms, and a floored attic, large enough for two fine rooms. This property is very cheap at $16,000.

WHY LOOK FURTHER?

Here, on Westlake ave., we have just secured this remarkable home of 12 rooms at a figure that should sell it tomorrow. The arrangement of both floors is the very perfection of taste and convenience, the lower being planned with spacious ideas of entertaining and pleasure, that above for pure comfort and ease. On the lower floor the reception-room, den, living-room and dining-room, all splendid apartments, open finely together and occupy the forward two-thirds of a very large floor plan; to the rear are the rear hall, leading to side entrance, the breakfast-room, pantries, laundry and kitchen. Each one of these rooms is fitted with every idea modern invention has conceived to complete the best of homes. There are 3 mantels and fireplaces, all built-in appointments, many broad windows, etc., etc., ad libitum. There are 6 fine bedrooms, opening en suite; 2 baths; lavatories, seats, etc. Oak floors both above and below stairs. The attic is finished to billiard-room and servant's bedroom; spacious closets everywhere. The property is only 2 years old and in splendid condition. Price $12,000.

FOR SALE—

F. W. FLINT, JR.,
205 O. T. JOHNSON BLDG.

$16,000—75x150—$16,000.

The handsomest 12-room residence on a CORNER LOT, 75x150, in all the southwest. This property has been built over a year for a home, and occupied as such. A few of its best features are—

The large, well-kept lawns, pergola and sunken garden.

Elegant ebony finish in the large reception hall and living-rooms.

The immense granite fireplace and inglenook just off reception hall.

The handsome dining-room and its fixtures and adjoining pantries and modern kitchen.

Below, in the big cement basement is a billiard-room, mission style, with great cobble fireplace.

Four spacious, elegantly finished bedrooms, modern baths, toilets, and all other necessary accessories to comfort and taste.

We cannot recommend this too strongly to people of means desiring a lovely home. See us.

$12,500—63x150—$12,500.

Another beautiful home near Alvarado Terrace, on high ground, just south of Pico st. This is also a home, used by owner for a little over a year. The reception hall, living-room and dining-room and den are finished in solid oak. Comfort, elegance and good taste are evident in every room. There are four large, well-lighted bed rooms, a large veranda for lounging on the second floor, rear, and every convenience dear to good livers and the discerning home purchaser. We would not advertise this if the price were not reasonable and the property salable and desirable on its own merits.

$11,000—$11,000.

Now if you want a cottage of nine large, elegant rooms, all on one floor, located on a CORNER, in the Westlake district, we can sell this, and we recommend its unusually good points, which must be seen to be fully enjoyed. The lot alone is becoming more and more valuable every day, and your investment will be fine for a home, and wise and safe as a money maker for you.

$7500—$7500.

Located on Cimarron st. is one of the most artistic, well-built and comfortable homes in this city. Owner asks only 1-3 cash, balance $35 a month, as he wants to use the money in business. The house has nine rooms, birch floors, handsome fire tile and pressed-brick fireplaces, cellar and furnace, four bedrooms, with very large windows and closets, white enamel finish, modern bath and a model kitchen and pass pantry. This is a snap, and the care and personal supervision of the owner in its building are evident everywhere in the first-class material and workmanship.

$6750—$6750.

SNAP—Only $1750 cash and $50 a month for a new and modern 8-room house on high ground southwest. This home has every necessary modern convenience and many very attractive points that will sell it on their own merit. Look at the price and the terms.

$6500—$6500.

We are sole agents for an elegant 7-room new and modern home on Church ave., in a choice neighborhood. One-half cash. This has only to be seen, and it will sell on its own visible merits. Only $6500.

$6300—$6300.

Another SNAP on West 12th st. near Westlake ave. Here is an 8-room, beautiful, modern home in a choice location, quiet, close to Pico car line. This property today could not be duplicated for less than $7000 to $7500.

$5500—$5500.

Only $1500 cash for a modern eight-room house on Fifth avenue, in a location already beautified by large, modern homes. Every convenience an experienced home builder could plan is to be found here. The terms are very easy—$1500 cash and $50 a month, including interest.

$4000—BUNGALOW—$4000.

Only $500 cash necessary to secure a beautiful six-room modern bungalow on West 22d st. Let us show you this; we will not have to talk very much.

$2500—$2500.

The SNAP of Westlake district; fine lot, 50x150, with cottage on rear end. Lots across street selling for $3000. Plenty of room at $2500 to turn at a profit or improve—and better profit.

THIS IS BUT A FEW OF THE VERY DESIRABLE HOMES AT RIGHT PRICES THAT WE HAVE.

BEAUTIFUL
HOLLYWOOD.

LOTS $900 UP—1-3 CASH.

The lots are 70x150, 65x150 and 50x135. The streets are 80 ft. wide, highly improved with cement walks, curbs and gutters, and lined with ornamental trees and palms. Building restrictions of $2000, $2500 and $3000 have been placed upon the lots, thereby insuring good improvements. The property is on the south side of Prospect ave., an 80-ft. boulevard, traversed every 20 minutes by finely appointed electric cars. Get off the car at Willard or Glorietta aves., and you are at the tract, which is only three blocks southwest of the stately mansion of Arthur Letts, proprietor of the Broadway Department Store, which stands as a monument to his faith in this beautiful suburb and which, when completed, will be recognized as the show place of Southern California.

There are only 44 lots in this handsome subdivision, they will not last long.

FOR SALE—
TOO LATE.
I sold that bargain, just as I said I would BUT,
here's another, better still.

Fine built, four-room house on 40x145 lot; shed; chicken corral. And an easy price of Oh, say $100 down.

Then for $200 down, I have several fine new five-room bungalows, southwest. Total price from $2500 to $3000. They have hardwood floors, mission finishings, cove ceilings and the finer touches which your wife likes.

There's that practically new six-room cottage on Defiance street, near South Park, with 4800 feet of land; gas, electricity; the neighborhood is developed and values are increasing. A deposit of $200 takes it, leaving only $3000 more.

A beautiful little five-room house on 40th street; street work done, gas and electricity in, cove ceilings, tinted walls, fine porches; lawn brightened by flowers; everything complete as you want it. You could not regret a five hundred payment for this, because the values are increasing wonderfully all about here.

And here is a ten-room house, duly furnished, on a large lot, corner of Temple and Bellmont, which is so cheap as to be absurd. Perhaps $5500, on the most liberal of terms any one could ask for.

I have other bargains just as wonderful, so you should see me at once.

BARGAIN. BARGAIN.
Two lots in Wilshire Blvd. district.

We can deliver two lots in Forresters' subdivision or Wilshire Harvard Hts. tract, which are two of the highest east front lots in the subdivision, not on the side of a hill, but on top, beautifully located, being the southwest corner and the lot adjoining, making 102 feet of frontage on King street and 135 feet on San Marino street. Until Tuesday night we can sell the two lots separately or together for $1550 and $1400 respectively. If you are acquainted with values in this location, you will appreciate these prices. Remember these lots are on a hill and lots in the low ground are selling for higher prices. Don't overlook these, but see us at once.

MacDermott buys and sells on commission all the Coeur d'Alene stocks listed on the Spokane Stock Exchange. Mr. R. A. MacDermott, the caller and chairman of the Southwest Miners' Stock Exchange starts tomorrow for a tour of all the Nevada mining camps, where he will personally inspect and examine the different companies listed and traded in on the Southwest Miners' Stock Exchange. This he does to see the latest developments.

He is a pioneer of Manhattan and acted as postmaster of that mining camp. He also resided at Tonopah for several years. He has also been in Goldfield, Pillford, and other Nevada camps. Still, every day new strikes are discovered and prospects are becoming mines. Therefore it is the policy of the SOUTHWEST MINERS' STOCK EXCHANGE to keep in touch with the latest developments of Nevada the wonderful. Mr. R. A. MacDermott will return to Los Angeles in about a month's time.

Several new companies have applied to the Exchange for listing. The business of the Exchange has increased and doubled itself this month. The public begins to realize that it is getting a square deal. When they come to the SOUTHWEST MINERS' STOCK EXCHANGE.

Mr. Edward MacDermott, the president will, from time to time, secure blocks of good reliable stock, which he will offer to the investing public. In the face of the bitterest opposition on the enemies of mining, in Los Angeles, he has stood up for the mining industry, when properly carried on.

He stated, a year ago, that we were upon the eve of the greatest mining boom in the history of the world and knew that the broker who dealt honestly with the public would win out. He has proved that honesty pays in the long run and along those lines he has built up the largest stock brokerage business in Los Angeles.

The public has tested him. He retains his old customers and makes new ones every day. The business men of Los Angeles and also the investors know that MacDermott's word is as good as any bond. He still tells you to buy only the good stocks that are managed by practical mining men. Leave those stocks alone that are promoted by Hot Air Securities Companies, Trust Companies and in fact all companies that do not sign their own names to their advertisements. And recollect that the price of stock cannot be raised on paper, today ten cents, tomorrow twenty-five cents, next day fifty cents, such tricks are used by PROMOTION FAKERS. The real value of any stock is what you can sell it for on the open market. Remember that fact and it will save you money and worry.

MacDermott received the following telegram, which speaks for itself. The original can be seen at the office. "Goldfield wires today confirm bonanza strike made by Hassel and Warner on Dick Bland's Fraction of Jumbo Extension seventy-five feet from Mohawk Florence Lease. Big body of shipping ore running into the thousands per ton uncovered." Jumbo Extension stock jumped from eighty cents to one sixty per share. This is the Mohawk Florence ledge, but at a greater depth than we have reached. This makes our reserve fund a financial fact. We expect big over subscription from Mohawk Florence Company stock. Stock selling very rapidly everywhere. Strikes on Florence and C.O.D. Lease holding strong. MacDermott secured another block of the stock before the strike and will supply it at the starting price of twenty cents per share, while it lasts. MacDermott wants the small investor to get some of this fine stock. He can sell them to one party, but refuses to do so. He considers it the best leasing company at the price on the market. BUY IT. Come and get a free MONEY MAP OF GOLDFIELD at the SOUTHWEST MINERS' STOCK EXCHANGE, 314 SOUTH BROADWAY. E. MACDERMOTT, PRESIDENT. PHONES 714. DAILY CALL 11 A.M. 11

Wagons, Carriages and Farm Machinery,
120-122-124 S. Los Angeles St.
WAGONS. WAGONS. WAGONS.

We want every teamster who uses heavy wagons for hauling sand, gravel, bricks, etc., to come in and see what the "WEBER," king of all wagons, looks like. It is far ahead of the average wagon in strength, finish, light running and great carrying capacity. A 3-inch steel skein Weber gear will carry as much as a 3¼-inch of any other make. Come in and satisfy yourself that this is so.

SOLD ON INSTALLMENTS.

We will sell these wagons to responsible parties on monthly payments. If you want a harness, we will sell you one the same way, and sell it for less than you can get it elsewhere.

We want your trade, and will give you a square deal.

WANTED—25 PEOPLE TO JOIN ME ON the ground floor to secure a mine that owing to death of principal owner can be bought on terms that will pay for itself after first payment. This is no prospect, but a mine, with thousands of feet of work already done and rich ores blocked out; also a good mill already on ground. Adjoining property is paying half million dividends year. This is a genuine opportunity; investigate. Address G, box 21, TIMES OFFICE.

FIRST CHANCE—THIS BLOCK ONLY. We are now ready to place a block of first-class copper stock, to equip mines with machinery and put them on ore shipping basis. Railroad 2½ miles, smelter 13 miles. Your chance to make big money while the rush is on, and copper going up. This block only, from 200 to 100,000 shares at 2 cents. This stock will be selling for $1 before 1908. Watch it. We own, by deed, 20 mines, 400 acres of rich mineral land, and are not owing one dollar in debt. Ore vein 20 feet, ore values $30.70 a ton at gross rates, $55.80 a ton at 70 feet. Joining to and surrounded by mines 2000 feet deep and producing 8,000,000 pounds of copper a month. Section west of the Rockies. This stock will make you 700 per cent. in 90 days. Get in now. A ground floor proposition with copper going up. Particulars by calling or addressing THE NACO CONSOLIDATED COPPER CO., 426-8 Mason Bldg., 4th and Broadway. 11

OREGON PROSPECTOR, FINANCIALLY busted, will sell rich interest; ten quartz and placer claims, gold, copper, platinum, silver; Mule Mountain, Rogue River. Address E. COLE, Marial, Or. 11

Classified Liners.

MINING—

WANTED—MINING STOCK FOR REAL ESTATE. For Sale—20 acres near foothills, unimproved, water house; near station and car line, $350 per acre. Half cash, balance in good mining stocks, or will accept rock-bottom ground floor proposition in new company with good prospects. Give full information about what you have, remember half cash. Address RANCH, Monrovia P.O., box 12. 11

GOLD FOR ALL! NO LONG DELAYS. The Forty-niners produced more gold from placers in the early days than has since been produced from quartz in any one year, with all the past experience and modern machinery. It is easier to mine and extract all the values from 1000 tons of "pay dirt" than to mine and treat 25 tons of the average quartz "pay ore"—even 15-cent dirt made a paying proposition in California. In Mexico, just over the border, we have a big proposition, where the surface gravel will average $1.25 per yard, and labor only costs about $1 per day. We are going to make a record on this for quick returns, and we advise our clients to take advantage of the present low price of 6 cents per share. Our free illustrated booklet tells all about Mexico. CONSOLIDATED MINING AND INVESTMENT CO., 324 Citizens' National Bank Bldg., Los Angeles. 11

FOR SALE—FULLY EQUIPPED HYDRAULIC mine, plenty of water, gravel will average 80c per cubic yard; price asked is about one-half actual value; let us give you full particulars. FIXEN BROS., 614-618 L. A. Trust Bldg. 11

OUT FOR SEARCHLIGHT— OUT FOR SEARCHLIGHT. The heart of that marvelously rich mining district in southern Nevada. Santa Fe Railway there by Dec. 1. Forty good mines now. We are offering ANNETTE stock, one of the best, if not the best, of the younger properties. Only treasury stock offered for development purposes. Send for 500 shares now, $75, or 1000 shares $150. Expect large advance in 30 days. Our references the very best. Watch for Perkins Investments and write freely for any information of this district. It is the most wonderful that the annals of mining have yet recorded. PERKINS INVESTMENT CO., Searchlight, Nevada. 11

WANTED— CALIFORNIA-EASTERN SECURITIES CO. We sell mines; that's our business. Can sell yours, if listed with us, accompanied with engineer's report, maps, etc. What have you? GOLD AND COPPER wanted. OIL PROPERTY—

HAVE YOU NOTICED LATELY THE ACCOUNTS in the daily press of the improvement in the condition of the oil business in California; of the large contracts made for future delivery to foreign buyers, of the continued improvement in the price of crude oil, and the fact that it is the opinion of our best informed oil men that the price of oil will continue to advance till it reaches a price entirely satisfactory to the producer? There is a genuine scarcity of oil—more consumed than produced, hence the advance in price; and as consumption is growing faster than is production, prices will continue to advance, making the possession of good oil territory and the production of oil a very profitable and good business; I am an experienced and capable oil man, and have an option of purchase for a body of ABSOLUTELY PROVEN OIL LAND, located in the HEART OF A DEVELOPED OIL FIELD; the price I am to pay for this land is $30,000, NOT ONE-FIFTH ITS VALUE—with easy terms of payment; I will take 1-3 interest, and want some parties to take the balance; this is the only piece of property for sale in this district at any price; property is first-class, and believe it can be sold within one year for five times its cost; title perfect; government patent; bank references; for interview address H, box 75, TIMES OFFICE. 11

PERSONAL—Business.

PERSONAL—
PROFESSOR SHELDON,

THE WORLD'S GREATEST PSYCHIC.
PERMANENTLY LOCATED IN HIS HOME OFFICE, IN THE WINDHAM, 109½ SOUTH BROADWAY.
READ CAREFULLY.
AN HONEST PROPOSITION.
NO FEE IN ADVANCE.
IT IS JUST AS CHEAP TO SEE THE BEST.
REMEMBER THE NAME—SHELDON.
THE NAME SHELDON
A DOUBLE GUARANTEE.

MAN OF PSYCHIC GIFT POWER IS SHELDON.

The most critical test that one who practices a profession must submit to is the crucial test of time. No business that is ever so slightly tinged with fakirism or doubt can withstand the development of time and the interchange of ideas among those who consult, investigate and pass judgment. Professor Sheldon has been in California eighteen years. He has been consulted by thousands. The best evidence of his wonderful power is the testimony of his large clientele, who come from every walk in life; secondary to this is the true and brilliant work of eighteen years of restless activity and without exciting the hostility or failing to secure the admiration of every person who has consulted him. A man should be judged by his works, and so he is. Prof. Sheldon has been tried. He has met every expectation, every advertised promise, and his reputation is established.

I do hereby solemnly agree and guarantee to make no charge if I fail to call you by name in full, names of your friends, enemies or rivals. I promise to tell you whether your husband, wife or sweetheart is true or false, tell you how to gain the love of the one you most desire, even though miles away. How to succeed in business, speculation, lawsuits; how to marry the one of your choice; how to regain youth, health and vitality. Removes evil influences, cures drink habit, locates treasures, cures all nervous diseases.

How can I have good luck?
How can I succeed in business?
How can I make my home happy?
How can I conquer my enemies?
How can I marry the one I choose?
How can I marry well?
How soon can I marry?
How can I conquer my rival?
How can I make any one love me?
How soon will my lover propose?
How can I get a letter?
How can I get a good position?
How can I remove bad influences?
How can I control any one?
How make distant ones think of me?
How can I settle my quarrel?
How can I hold my husband's love?
How can I keep my wife's love?
Sheldon never asks questions?

STANDING CHALLENGE.

SHELDON

has been a native of California for the last eighteen years and is legally ordained to one of the oldest spiritualist societies in the world.

My only reason for calling you by name and what you call for—I do this incidentally as a chain to read by.

He will tell you frankly your condition and what you may expect; if nothing can be done for you he will not take one cent of your money. Has not this honesty on the face of it?

The following list shows purely and simply that Sheldon has been consulted by the most popular and most noted men and women of the world, and his reading of their lives was pronounced most wonderful—Julia Marlowe, Sarah Bernhardt, Helen Gould, Hon. C. H. Harrison, President McKinley, President Harrison, President Cleveland, Senator Depew, Senator Hanna, Senator Foraker, Senator Spooner.

No man has ever been consulted in more notable affairs than he. In Europe and America he has advised thousands in various walks of life, and always to their advantage.

Sheldon stands alone, possessing a force, a power, a gift—call it what you will—that none can explain, none can account for.

During the last ten months I have brought around through this wonderful power of personal control 721 marriages, 142 separations, without any after trouble, came by the mutual consent of opposing parties; located 16 buried treasures; located 19 wills and 11 deeds; success in gaining 510 pensions; reunited 118 separated; have helped 182 investors; there have been 714 cases of such private nature I do not feel like classifying; in fact, it suffices to only say there is no heart so sad or wish too great that your hopes cannot be speedily realized by the force of this wonderful power.

He can relieve your anxiety, care, embarrassment, can astonish, guide, comfort, cheer and strengthen you.

Make no change in business, do not buy or sell a rooming-house, do not buy mining stock, do not buy a lot, a farm, a ranch, or make a lease without first seeing Sheldon. He will advise you to your advantage. He asks no questions.

SUCCESS AWAITS YOU.

of pretenders and partially developed mediums. They copy his advertisement and in many smaller cities use his name. Please remember, Professor Sheldon can be seen only at his home office, in the Windham, 109½ S. Broadway.

My practice and professional reputation are built upon "honor," reasonable charges, fair dealings, faithful service and speedy success for my clients have won for me the largest practice in the State of California. My superior knowledge and power give me advantages which warrant me in guaranteeing safer, surer and more rapid results than can be obtained elsewhere.

MRS. MASSON,

the noted palmist of London, Eng., may be consulted at 322 S. SPRING ST. (Suite 17,)
by those desiring CAREFUL, CONSCIENTIOUS, AND SCIENTIFIC HAND-READINGS FROM ONE OF THE FOREMOST PALMISTS OF THE DAY.

The earnest student and thinker will soon learn, in his investigations along psychological lines, that that which pertains to occult phenomena proper, can readily be distinguished from crude and oft-exposed SLEIGHT-OF-HAND TRICKS, the most common of which is the telling of the subject's name, age, etc., AFTER HE HAS HIMSELF WRITTEN THAT INFORMATION.

PALMISTRY, HONESTLY PRACTICED, WILL NOT tell you your name, but it WILL give you information of considerably greater value in every-day life.

Your vocation, your present line of work, matters of health, marriage and domestic life, financial conditions and ways and means of climbing out of a rut of ill-luck into wide paths of success and prosperity can all be told you through scientific palmistry, WITHOUT A SINGLE QUESTION, WRITTEN OR VERBAL.

MRS. MASSON DOES NOT APPEAL TO IGNORANT SUPERSTITION, BUT TO THE FINEST INTELLIGENCE.

HIGH-CLASS PATRONAGE SOLICITED.
(Daily and evenings; Sundays, 9 to 3.) 11

PERSONAL—
MME. LE PIERRO.

One of the foremost and well-known Scientific palmist and psychic life reader, born with double veil; all hidden mystery revealed; when only a child it was revealed to her that she was endowed to this by Mme. Morrow, of Napoleon fame, and has devoted her entire life to it; will tell your past, present and future; will show you how to overcome your enemies; your vocation and ability; your health, wealth and happiness all depends upon you knowing yourself. No matter what troubles you may have with yourself or others, come and she will guide you. She advises you with certainty by a higher than human power. All who wish a true, accurate, reliable life reading and learn facts and not fictions in place of truth, call at once and consult a reliable palmist and life reader. Psychic teaching and developing.

KNOW THY FUTURE
BY CONSULTING THE WORLD'S GREATEST CLAIRVOYANT, PALMIST AND SPIRIT MEDIUM,

PROF.
MILBURN

PERMANENTLY LOCATED IN HIS OWN HOME, 659 S. HILL ST., 659, CORNER OF SEVENTH ST.

Forty years a practicing psychic, known from ocean to ocean as the marvel of two hemispheres, press and public recognize Prof. Milburn as the foremost and most able clairvoyant and spirit medium now before the public. Where others fail he succeeds with ease and he positively will NOT accept fee for his readings unless you are perfectly satisfied and receive the information you desire. Marvelous demonstrations of second sight, that must be seen to be believed, so be sure and consult him at once. Elevate thyself! Know thy future. Positively no equal on earth in his profession. By his wonderful powers he will tell your full name, tells what you called for, tells what you want to know. If not correct, free, free. So positive am I of my power to tell the past, present and future that I will make NO CHARGE. NO CHARGE, NO CHARGE, unless you obtain the information you desire and find me superior to all clairvoyants, palmists and mediums in this city.

SPECIAL OFFER FOR ONE WEEK ONLY.

Realizing there are many skeptical people in Los Angeles, and that this city has been overrun with pretenders under the guise of clairvoyance, palmistry, etc., and that many of its best citizens would be only too anxious to visit a TRUE clairvoyant medium were they assured of satisfaction, therefore Prof. Milburn will (to convince the public of Los Angeles of his superiority over all clairvoyants) give his full readings to all, for seven days only, at

50C

WHEN CONSULTING A CLAIRVOYANT ALWAYS CONSULT THE BEST. AS A TEST IN THE READING HE WILL TELL YOUR NAME, AGE, OCCUPATION, WHOM AND WHEN YOU WILL MARRY.

ASSISTANCE FOR TROUBLED OR UNFORTUNATE—If you are in trouble of any kind, discontented, unhappy, or not satisfied in life, or have domestic, love or business troubles, you will be told how to overcome all trouble. WHEN OTHERS FAIL HE SUCCEEDS WITH EASE.

HE GIVES ADVICE ON BUSINESS, speculation, investments, insurance, changes, travels, health, sickness, love, divorce, marriage, lawsuits, separations, wills, deeds, mortgages, patents, claims, collections, mining, etc. He will tell you what trade, speculation, or profession you are adapted for.

LAWSUITS, WILLS, DIVORCES—He can render you assistance and give you advice in a way that will bring success in business transactions, property speculation, investments, mining, etc.

LOVE, COURTSHIP, MARRIAGE—Gives truthful revelations of all love affairs, troubles, marriages, restores lost affections, reunites the separated, settles lovers' quarrels, etc.

Tells how to WIN the man or woman you love, and how to make your husband or wife be true to you, and how to overcome all your enemies.

WHY CONSULT AN INFERIOR MEDIUM WHEN PROF. MILBURN, THE ACKNOWLEDGED LEADER OF THEM ALL, IS HERE AND HIS FEE NO HIGHER THAN THOSE LESS COMPETENT.

His past record and strictly honorable dealings are sufficient guaranty for his future work and have won the good will of the press and public.

READING BY MAIL, ONE DOLLAR.
SEND DATE OF BIRTH.
REMEMBER THE REDUCED PRICES FOR ONE WEEK ONLY.

HOURS—10 a.m. to 8 p.m. daily and Sunday. Satisfaction garanteed or no pay. All business sacred and confidential. Lady in attendance. Private parlors and office.

PERSONAL — RENO, THE WORLD'S greatest. Located in his new home, 911 S. Hill. If you are looking for pleasure, don't come, for I am not here for that purpose. I am here to better your conditions, as I have done in hundreds of other cases.

If I do not do just as I say, I solemnly agree not to charge you one cent for the reading.

Ask yourself this question. Why are his parlors crowded all the time? You know it is not on the account of my big advertising, for if you have been to me and I have given you one of my readings, what do you do? Just what all the others do, TELL OTHERS. That is why I do not have to put big ads in the paper.

Now I want to give you all a fair chance, for one week more I shall continue my $2 reading for 25c.

One more week only, $2 reading 25c.

Perfect satisfaction. Call and see me before giving up in despair because others have failed. I have brought about marriages, removed evil influences, reunited the separated when other mediums have said it was impossible.

I do hereby solemnly agree and guarantee to make you no charge if I fail to call you by name. I promise to tell you whether husband, wife or sweetheart is true or false; I will tell you how to gain the love of the one you most desire, even though miles away; in fact, I will tell you every hope, fear or ambition better than you can tell yourself.

How to regain youth, health, vitality; cures all nervous diseases.

Concerning business affairs.

Gives never failing information regarding all kinds of business, lawsuits, claims, collections, investments, speculations, damages, wills, pensions, patents, inventions and all financial difficulties.

I teach Clairvoyance, Hypnotism and Personal Magnetism and Develop Mediums. Call and learn the secret you should know—the power to control others.

Reno has brought about more marriages, reunited more separated than any other medium in America.

I point with pride to my record of successful work in the past year.

Reunited 198 couples.
Brought around 287 marriages.
Gained love of certain ones, 375.
Located five buried treasures.
Located 49 absent persons.
Overcome 846 rivals.

And hundreds of other cases, such as business speculations, lawsuits and transactions of all kinds successfully completed.

CURED 14 cases of drunkenness and bad habits.

CURED 20 CASES OF NERVOUS PROSTRATION.

DEVELOPED SEVEN PSYCHICS WHO ARE BEFORE THE PUBLIC TODAY.

Sixteen years in St. Louis.

PERSONAL—
PROF. C. IRVIN ALTHOUSE,
of 305½ S. Spring st.,

THE CELEBRATED PALMIST (and astrologer) whose work is known throughout this entire land, and who has made a life study of PALMISTRY AND ASTROLOGY, has convinced hundred of the best intellects and persons in all walks of life that his remarkable readings and PREDICTIONS FOR FUTURE EVENTS in their lives are unparalleled.

PROF. ALTHOUSE'S readings, which are thorough and scientific, have nothing in common whatever with the fictitious readings of illiterate, unreliable humbug palmists, psychics, fortune tellers, etc., who scarcely know one line or mount from the other, and who by their disgraceful readings, drag these sciences into the mire of fortune telling and fraud. The humbug reader also CLAIMS TO TELL YOUR NAME, ETC., AND ANSWER QUESTIONS, which you yourself have written. AN ABSOLUTE FAKE SCHEME, GIVING POSITIVELY NOTHING FOR THE FUTURE. A satisfactory reading can only be had from one who has thoroughly mastered the laws of this wonderful science through years of critical study of planetary influences on the lines of the PALM—not the BACK of the hand—(for that gives no details in palmistry whatever;) combined with large experience, trained judgment, etc. All kinds of diseases can be accurately diagnosed. Careful advice given in domestic, love affairs, etc.; also of financial success or failure; changes, deaths, investments, vocation in life, and many other important things you should know, which cannot be mentioned.

PROF. ALTHOUSE stands at the very head of the profession, having read—FROM LIFE—more celebrated people than any other palmist. He does not deceive the public in this respect. HIS READINGS, TOO, MUST IN NO WISE BE CLASSED WITH THOSE OF ANY OTHER READER NOW OPERATING IN THIS PART OF THE COUNTRY, AND HIS SKILLED WORK HAS NO COMPARISON WITH THEIRS WHATSOEVER.

PALMISTRY AND ASTROLOGY, too, like other legitimate professions, are not advertised in a sensational manner; the GENUINE reader holds his profession as sacred as that of your family physician.

E. H. SOTHERN says: "I find your reading coincides with Cheiro's," and "I am greatly interested in Palmistry." Frederick Warde says, "Your reading of my hands was most satisfactory. Your knowledge and skill in palmistry is REMARKABLE, and gave me a much more exalted idea of that science than I have hitherto entertained." Paul Gilmore, actor, says: "I want to express to you my keen appreciation of your reading; it is by far the most scientific I have ever had." Juliet Crosby, actress, says: "Prof. Althouse has given me a most helpful, complete and satisfactory reading." Valerie Bergere, actress, says: "I am greatly pleased with your reading; with you, palmistry is not only a science, but an art." Prof. Althouse also read Admiral Schley, Senator Clark, Gov. Pardee, Gen. Chaffee, Baron Rothschild, Joaquin Miller, Louis James, Ysaye, Sousa, Innes, Chiaffarelli, Creatore, Susan B. Anthony, Nance O'Neil, Calve, Modjeska, Julia Marlowe, Caruso, Sembrich, Gadski, Jefferson, Edison, Nat Goodwin, Maxine Elliott, Lillian Russell, Wm. Desmond, Ellen Beach Yaw, and hundreds of others. These are a few names of PUBLIC persons, and show the class of people being read, as well as the very best people of Los Angeles, WITH WHOM ALL HIS BUSINESS IS STRICTLY CONFIDENTIAL. Intelligent, high-class patronage solicited—those capable of appreciating the superior qualities of a fine reader.

ASTROLOGY AND THE HOROSCOPE.

PROF. ALTHOUSE has also given many years of critical study to and is an experienced practitioner in, the science of MODERN ASTROLOGY—the casting of horoscopes, etc. The HOROSCOPE IS DECIDEDLY A GUIDE IN LIFE, showing remarkable things when properly cast—from the position of the planets at your birth; in fact, tells everything about one's self worth knowing, being in truth one of the best investments the world offers. Your horoscope is also a key to the character of others, and in this respect can be of the utmost use to you.

SCIENTIFIC PREDICTIONS—EMBRACING ALL QUESTIONS OF LIFE, new undertakings, or information desired for the present, immediate future and events up to the close of life, as calculated through these sciences and the trained judgment of Prof. Althouse—will stagger the senses. PROF. ALTHOUSE, IN HIS LARGE AND SUCCESSFUL PRACTICE, has acquired a varied experience of his fellow-men in life. HIS WONDERFUL PROFICIENCY IN HAND READING AND CASTING OF HOROSCOPES ENABLES HIM TO SEE FOR THE FUTURE both the good and evil. His chief aim being to help others and to have all become interested in these useful sciences—the sublimest and noblest studies that ever engrossed the attention of mortals. The most private confidences are reposed in him, and his advice is sought in the most difficult and critical circumstances. Daily and evenings, Sunday 10 to 2.

SPECIAL READINGS

25C

FOR FOUR DAYS ONLY.
Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday.

REGULAR FEE, $2, $3 AND $5.
ALL READINGS REDUCED THIS WEEK.

If you contemplate consulting a life-reader, several things should be taken into consideration, ABILITY, the HONESTY of methods, the FAIRNESS of dealings, the HIGHER degree of work, the ACCURACY of each prediction, the COMMON-SENSE used with it, the INTEREST taken in each case, the RESPECT shown to each caller, the fact of SECRECY in consultation, the FEE charged for services.

These things, taken under consideration, will place a thinking public in a position to judge for themselves and not be misled, imposed upon or their time thrown away.

WONDERFUL—ASTONISHING—CONVINCING.
ST. ELMO WILL

tell you your full name, age, occupation, your mother's maiden name and whom and when you will marry and what you called for, without asking you a question; will tell you the name of your sweetheart, or anything you want to know. He sends you away much wiser and happier than when you called.

IT IS NOT ONLY WHAT CAN BE SAID BY AN ABLE LIFE-READER, BUT WHAT CAN BE DONE, for besides the wonderful gift of second sight, Mr. St. Elmo possesses the secret knowledge of reconstructing unhappy domestic affairs, of making the home happy, of gaining the one you wish in marriage, of making the one you love admire and love you; of overcoming rivals and enemies, gives you the secret power of influencing others (without their knowledge,) into doing your every wish. BUSINESS CHANCES—
Miscellaneous.

WE HAVE THE LARGEST LIST OF GOOD paying grocery stores in the city. Mr. Weaver was for 8 years city salesman for leading wholesalers, and is thoroughly familiar with conditions of trade in every locality in the city and will give true representation; we advertised four groceries last Sunday and sold three of them; this shows that they must have been good. We have some that we can take part and others that we can take all property in exchange. Below are a few of the best chances taken from our large list that we know to be splendid paying propositions.
$425—Dry goods and notions; nice little store for lady who can do plain sewing and dressmaking in connection with business; very good location opposite school; rent $10 month; living-room in rear; should clear about $60 per month; will take good lot in payment; best reason for selling.
$800—Or invoice; grocery; fine corner, Boyle Heights; sales $35; rent $25, including 3 living-rooms, 3-year lease; owner owns property and selling store account of sickness.
$1200—Grocery, splendid business, cheap rent; lease; close in; will invoice $2200; this is the biggest snap we have ever seen. Owner has chance to make big money putting his money in large contract. You will have to hurry on this. Cash trade, no soliciting or delivering.
$1200—Grocery; not such a snap as the above, but full value for your money and a live paying business; owner has $2000 cash on hand, saved out of its earnings; rent $35, including 5 living-rooms, horse, wagon and buggy.
$1600—Grocery; here is a very attractive store, S.W.; owner don't believe in credit business and has worked up a nice cash trade averaging $32 daily; making money, but wants to join father in larger business in the country; cheap rent.
$1700—Grocery; another good one, S.W.; with 6 living-rooms; rent $30; owner sick.
$2500—Grocery; if you have this amount of money come and let us show you this. We can talk all day on the merits of this store; owner owns property and is retiring, but will only sell to a good party who is capable of holding all trade, as it is to his interest to have you make a success of the business, and will give you every assistance.
$5000—Department store; exceptional opportunity; sales for year ending September 1, $70,000.40; cleared 8¼ per cent. net. This is just as represented, and can be made to do better.
If you want a good business come and see us; your confidence will not be misplaced. All of the above stores will invoice if you so desire, and we have a great many others that are good and can find just what you want.
HOLLISTER & WEAVER,
11 302 S. Broadway.

MY MAGAZINE, "INVESTING FOR PROFIT," (which I'll send free) is worth $10 a copy to any man who intends to invest any money, however small; who has money invested unprofitably, or who can save $5 or more per month, but who hasn't learned the art of investing for profit.
It demonstrates the REAL earning power of money—the knowledge financiers and bankers hide from the masses.
It shows how to invest small sums and how to make them grow into fortunes—the actual possibilities of intelligent investments.
It reveals the enormous profits bankers make and shows how one can make the same profits safely.
It explains HOW stupendous fortunes are made and WHY they are made—how $1000 grows to $22,000.
To introduce my magazine write me NOW, mention this paper and I'll send it SIX MONTHS FREE.

GOLD FOR ALL! NO LONG DELAYS! The Forty-Niners produced more gold from placers in the early days than has since been produced from quartz in any one year, wtih all the past experience and modern machinery.

It is easier to mine and extract all the values from 1000 tons of "pay dirt" than to mine and treat 25 tons of the average quartz "pay ore"—even 15 cent dirt made a paying proposition in California. In Mexico, just over the border, we have a big proposition, where the surface gravel will average $1.25 per yard, and labor costs only about $1 per day.

We are going to make a record on this for quick returns, and we advise our clients to take advantage of the present low price of 5 cents per share. Our free illustrated booklet tells all about Mexico.

ALFALFA LAND. WALNUT LAND.
3000 ACRES.

In subdivisions 5, 10, 20-acre lots up, $175 to $250 per acre, ¼ cash, in the famous San Gabriel Valley, the garden spot of Los Angeles county; admittedly the finest walnut and alfalfa section in Southern California; the most abundant water supply; the deepest and richest soil; get in on the ground floor; this is positively our last subdivision of Lucky Baldwin's famous rancho, La Puente, and the last chance to get choice acreage at first cost direct from the owner. During the past 12 months we have sold about $1,000,000 worth of land for Mr. Baldwin in this district, and in nearly every case to practical farmers. And while alfalfa and walnut growing continues to be the chief attraction, this soil is equally adapted to the growing of potatoes, corn, berries, and all other kinds of garden truck; 1600 inches of water have been developed on this great ranch during the past year, and the growing crops of alfalfa, the beautiful young orchards, attest to the richness and fertility of the soil. This tract is close to Los Angeles, traversed by the Southern Pacific, close to the Salt Lake, and convenient to the Los Angeles-Covina branch of the Pacific Electric. Are you aware that Mr. H. E. Huntington has purchased 1000 acres in this district recently. That means quick development and speedy doubling of values. Reader, this is your opportunity. Come into our office and see maps and get further particulars. Remember, the terms, only

FOR SALE—
[illegible]

I have sixty magnificent acres close to railroad depot and in one of the most productive sections of California, with 720 inches of water every month, in runs to suit the owner, at only $30 PER ACRE—CASH.

This snap will go with a rush. Are YOU going to be the lucky buyer?

8000 ACRES OF ORANGE AND ALFALFA LAND.

I have eight thousand acres of the most fertile land in Southern California. 1000 acres is ideal orange land, and the balance is splendid alfalfa land. Plenty of cheap water on the property. This beautiful section of land is just six miles west of Riverside, on the Salt Lake Road, 45 miles from the great city of Los Angeles.

WILL SELL IN PARCELS OF TEN ACRES AND UP, OR WILL SELL AS A WHOLE. Desirable portions of this land can be purchased for as low as $150 per acre.

BEAUTIFUL 40-ACRE TRACT.

I wish to call particular attention to a beautiful 40-acre tract, set this year to alfalfa—fine stand; 480 inches of water every month, delivered in runs to suit owner; this tract immediately adjoins railroad depot; it also adjoins alfalfa fields from which nine tons to the acre were cut this year; can quote low price for cash. This is a remarkable snap for some alert buyer.

40-ACRE TRACT OF ORANGE LAND.

Adjoining large packing-house; this property is all right in the frostless belt—240 inches water every month; I can state unhesitatingly that this buy cannot be duplicated in California today. The property is surrounded on all sides by heavy bearing orange groves. Price $175 per acre.

35-ACRE VALENCIA ORANGE GROVE.

This property is close to railroad depot and packing-house; this is a positive snap; am quoting an actual bargain price.

The above properties are located in the "growing section" of Southern California; they are accessible to good schools and have the advantage of telephone service ond free rural mail delivery; I submit these acreage propositions strictly on their own merits; display advertisements, colored pictures, and attractive literature are not required to sell this class of property. It acts as its own salesmen; if you want the best profit producing acreage in Southern California, at the lowest price consistent with good judgment, call and see me at once.

FOR SALE—
1000 acres high grade ranging land near Lindsay, Cal. It is high-grade but not high priced, only $25 per acre and will sell for $100 per acre in small tracts. This is about one-half the market price for such lands and as it can be handled for one-half cash, balance on easy terms, it affords an exceptional opportunity for someone to make a big killing by subdividing in ten-acre tracts. It is in a splendid orange belt, as shown by groves on either side in fine condition. Has cheap water and plenty of it. No waste land, no hardpan. Just figure out the immense profit which you can make on this during the coming winter; but our option is short and you must call quick.
700 acres best alfalfa land in Southern California, nicely located, close to Los Angeles and close to a projected electric line. Land is level, absolutely no alkali, cheapest water and plenty of it. Property adjoining is yielding nine or ten tons to the acre. We can deliver at $70 per acre on terms so easy that it will surprise you. This land has been overlooked and if you will act quickly before our option expires, you will find this an opportunity which seldom presents itself.

Lake County.

FOR SALE—
MATCHLESS LAKE COUNTY.

Almost in sight of San Francisco and the sea—a county without a railroad, but now to have two.

A land where the land boomer is unknown and the speculator is not. These will come, of course, but as yet—

The homeseeker has his chance. He can get ahead of them if he hurries up.

Broad, smiling valleys.

Beautiful sylvan lakes, deep and clear and cold and teeming with the choicest fish.

Forests alive with game, water courses swift and sparkling that never go dry.

A country of perpetual verdure and perennial delight, and—

Not a mosquito in it! And no fleas!

A great sanatorium, a "garden spot" and a sportman's paradise.

Broad farms, abundant crops, cattle on a thousand hills.

A contented and happy and prosperous people, ready and willing and even—

Eager to divide their surplus acres at a fair price with the stranger who chooses to come among them and make a home.

The Supervisors of Lake county, and the Home Realty Company (Incorporated,) of Lakeport, the county seat, are represented in Los Angeles by S. R. HENDERSON, 703 Trust Bldg., 2nd and Spring, to whom apply for specific information, price lists, etc.

Credentials from the Los Angeles office, will insure concessions in prices that will more than pay traveling expenses.

FOR SALE—
Suburban Property.

FOR SALE—WE HAVE FOR A FEW DAYS a rare opportunity to acquire an ideal site for a gentleman's fine home at a price far below its actual value and on terms that make it a good speculative proposition.

Frontage 381 feet, depth 220 feet, facing wide avenue with cement walks and curbs, only short distance from Huntington Drive, between Monrovia and Alhambra electric lines.

An expenditure of $2000 to $3000 will put it in shape to command easily $15,000 to $20,000 before spring.

There is on the property an old time mansion with solid concrete walls, easily converted into a stately colonial residence in keeping with its majestic surroundings.

The house is sufficiently back from the street to permit of sweeping driveways and walks and artistic treatment of the grounds without the removal of an important tree or plant.

The trees on the place are mostly rare specimens of their kind. Among others are 2 very large oaks, one of them a veritable monarch, probably without a peer in loftly height and wide-spreading branches. There is a rubber tree, older and larger than any in the State, thrifty and superb. It is visited constantly by tourists and others as a botanical marvel. Cypress towering high into the sky-line and other rare trees and plants.

There are rose vines thick as saplings and wildernesses of other roses and flowers and foliage plants, needing only a few weeks work by skilliful hands to convert it into one of the show places of the county.

Surrounding property is now sold with good building restrictions, though there are a few old and cheap houses in the few blocks between this and the finest suburban residence district in California. These old places are too valuable now for inferior residences and another season will probably see the last one disappear, when they property will be worth four times the present price as an investment.

This property can be bought now for $6500, only $2500 cash, balance 2 and 3 years.

As it stands it should bring $10,000 from the seeker of a fine homesite and by a comparatively small expenditure for improvements should bring $15,000. Either way would double or trible the actual cash investment.

FOR EXCHANGE—OR SALE—

About seven months ago, owing to failing health I sold out my business in the city, and purchased the La Crescenta Villa, a beautiful mountain home. I sought this place on account of the altitude and mountain scenery, and the purity of the water, of which latter I hold ten shares, worth $1500; giving a water privilege to the place that is unsurpassed.

I am now well and desire to resume business and will offer my villa home, of 12 rooms, surrounded by 12 acres of very productive soil, 7 acres of which is bearing Zinfandel and assorted table grapes; one and a half acres of fine navel orange trees. The house has modern plumbing, has spacious and airy rooms, and the grounds are dotted with the finest of shade trees. I offer the above for cottage, or one or more lots, or desirable beach property. My cash price $10,000. What have you got of that value in exchange? LOUIS BRAND, owner, La Crescenta Villa, Los Angeles County. Phone Glendale 441. 12

SAVE SAVE
SAVE

If you really want a good piano and want to get the very best for your money we are the people you want to see. Every piano in our store is priced on a basis that means money saved for you. This applies to new pianos as well as the used ones. The great quantity of instruments we handle gives us control of the best makes. Preferring to do a quantity instead of a quality business we make a price lower than any competitor—and of course we win.

This week we call your particular attention to some extra good bargains in used pianos:

An oak case Gibson Piano, in good condition, for $185.

A mahogany finish case Harvard Piano for $150. This is the large size.

A mahogany case Franklin Piano, in splendid shape, for $225.

A $650 Gabler Upright Grand, walnut case, carved front, excellent condition, for $285.

Terms will be made to suit you—we will accept any proposition that's reasonable.

Remember, we sell new pianos as low as $6 down and $6 a month.

CAR KILLS LITTLE GIRL.

UNCONSCIOUS AFTER ACCIDENT AND DEATH FOLLOWS.

Was Playing With Other Children and Suddenly Dashed in Front of Trolley, Which, Witnesses Say, Had no Fender—Only Child of Widow, Whose Grief Is Pitiable.

Engrossed in a game with two other children, Sadie Cooper, the 7-year-old daughter of Mrs. J. Cooper of No. 611½ North Bunker Hill street, was fatally injured by Los Angeles-Pacific car No. 209 at Bunker Hill avenue and Sunset boulevard about 7 o'clock last evening.

As the trolley car sped up the slight incline on Sunset boulevard toward Bunker Hill street, on its inbound course, the little child ran out into the street, circled about several times and then dashed in front of the car. Sadie saw the car just before it struck her, for she uttered a wild scream. The next moment she was being tossed along the ground.

The piercing wail of the little girl reached her mother as she sat on the porch of her home a short distance away, and presently two small boys dashed toward her, crying out that her child had been hurt.

Mrs. Cooper is a widow and Sadie is her only child. She ran to the scene of the accident, and forced her way through the crowd, calling frantically for her little girl.

Chief Claim Agent Kinkelstein of the Los Angeles Railway had picked up the unconscious child and was carrying her to his apartments, which were near by. The mother, in wild grief, followed him to his rooms.

Surgeons from the railway company's office hurried to the scene, but after examining the child, found that it would be necessary to send her to the Receiving Hospital. Every possible was done for the lit but though police and comp geons worked over her for som they could not revive her.

According to witnesses, car No has no fender. It is said that it running at a high rate of speed, no faster than the cars usually run Sunset boulevard.

Mrs. Cooper, the mother of Sadie, employed in a tailor shop on First street. She was allowed to to the Receiving Hospital with child. Later, she became hyste She had the child removed to the eral and Emergency Hospital the evening, although the little had not regained consciousness.

Police surgeons said that the had sustained concussion of the and possibly a fracture of the besides internal injuries.

The little girl died at 11 o'clock the hospital. The mother is with grief, from which serious may ensue.

NEW SYSTEM OF MA

PRINTED MATTER CO OUT STAMPS AFFIX

Business Houses Now U System That Saves Time ing as Well as Cancel Stamps, Also Loss from Falling Off.

The business man has been now and then in his mail for few months circulars, catalo other printed matter with the envelope. In the place stamp usually goes there is closed square of printed ing 1 cent, 2 or 4 cents paid, or some other city, and Permit No. 5 or 50, or some ber. That shows one of new business methods.

The commercial house thousands of circulars or no longer has to stamp each individual pieces. It gets postmaster the amount of necessary for each piece wishes to send out, has the put the necessary form in the corner of the envelope when the matter is presented postoffice, pays the postage sum, saving thereby all the stamping and the possible ing from the falling off of

EFFECT OF NEW SYSTEM.

The right to mail matter was given by an act passed spring of 1904, but it is only the last year that the act put into practice and within months that the custom of matter without stamps affixed come into general use among business concerns throughout the try. Each postoffice issues to mercial house that mails matter way a permit with its own and that permit is permanent changing. No other firm receive that number.

Under the law not less identical third or fourth-class of matter can be mailed in Each mailing is accompanied statement from the business showing the permit number, of matter, the total number in the mailing and the weight single piece. In turn the issues to the sender a receipt, the class of matter, the total of pieces, the weight of a single and the amount of postage paid the total amount paid and of the permit.

SAVES TIME AND MONEY.

Through this new method ness house keeps a check on ber of pieces the printer saves the labor of many hands busied with stamping at the time when catalogues culars are issued, and against the return and remailing matter on account loss of stamps. In great number of circulars for a firm to have as returned on account of the of stamps and the $30, $40, $50 or more is heavier and costs This is the time the postoffice is tising matter sent out houses. The postoffice with heaps of catalogues mailing matter, most the new unstamped vation in the mailing is a saving of labor to the postal clerk the killing of the have to be counted, the sender usually vided carefully the task of counting simple.

This station is powerful, having one 600 dynamo for the purpose cation with South Americ other less powerful for with Mediterranean of the power canal, twenty-five miles above Roosevelt, has been completed and now the Reclamation Service engineers are giving their special attention to the beginning of work on the diversion dam, twenty-five miles above Phoenix.

A construction camp has been established at that point and lumber and cement are arriving daily in large quantities. This dam, it is hoped, will be completed during the coming year, about the same time that the dam at Roosevelt will have assumed height enough for the storage of a considerable quantity of irrigation water.

TO WORK ON CANAL.

In about a week a large dredger will begin operations on the reconstruction of the Florence Canal, at its head on the Gila River, ten miles above Florence. The canal originally was designed to carry 25,000 inches. It is filled up with débris, until its real capacity is only about one-tenth of that amount. It is now designed to enlarge it to a capacity of 100,000 inches, down as far as the reservoir between Florence and Casa Grande. This reservoir, more than three square miles in area, is to be filled to a depth of twenty-two feet. Upon the water thus stored will be the main dependence of the lands to be cultivated in the vicinity of Casa Grande Station on the Southern Pacific road, the river being relied upon in times of low water for the irrigation of the farms on the upper sections of the canal.

PARTY FROM WASHINGTON.

Still another Congressional party is scheduled for a tour of Arizona, especially for the consideration of the never-dying subject of Statehood. The party is to embrace several Congressmen who were here last winter, including Representative James A. Tawney, who voted with the majority in the consideration of joint Statehood, and who may have a second change of mind by the time of the next meeting of Congress. It is understood that Senator Foraker may be a member of the party. If this be so, he will have difficulty in escaping from the proffers of hospitality made by Arizonans, who feel that to him directly is due the amendment of the joint Statehood act which permitted Arizona the expression of its disapproval.

OPENING OF FAIR.

The Territorial Fair will begin in Phoenix next Monday. Not only will there be thousands of Arizonans in attendance, but several hundred visitors are expected from Southern California, drawn by the extremely low excursion rates made by the railroads. One of the most interesting features of the fair will be the Indian display. Friday has been set aside as Indian day. Indians of whatever tribe are to be admitted free and will participate in races, athletic contests and Indian games. This division of the fair is in charge of J. B. Alexander, agent of the Pima reservation. He has expressed the belief that fully 5000 redskins will be present on Friday.

SALOON-KEEPERS ANGRY.

Resentful of restrictions that have been placed upon their occupation by the City Council of Globe, the saloon-keepers of that camp are attempting to break the new city organization on the ground of illegality of incorporation.

A Coroner's jury sat in session for a full week at Globe over the cause of death of Joe Ludwig, a miner who was murdered in a lodging-house, and whose remains afterward were taken into the hills and dismembered by means of giant powder. Absolutely no clew seems to have been found to the identity of the murderers.

ARIZONA NOTES.

The incorporation business still continues a record-breaker in Arizona. Yesterday articles of incorporation of twenty-eight companies were filed in the office of the Territorial Auditor.

S. F. Cravens, one of the well-known musical directors of the United States, died in Phoenix last week of consumption.

Dr. H. H. Stone has been elected president of the Phoenix Country Club.

The members of the Phoenix City Council, acting as individuals, have issued a call for a special election, to be held November 20, to secure expression of the sentiment of the city's voters on the question of licensed gambling. If the vote be in the negative, gambling will be taxed out of existence in this city.

As a rule, Arizona Legislatures have about two clerks to the member, appointed rather because of relationship to the members than for qualification or because of need of their services. Already Gov. Kibbey has announced that he will refuse to sanction any further waste of public funds in this manner and that the number of clerks in the next Legislature must be kept down to the necessities of the body. The more important clerks are paid by the United States.

President Ripley of the Santa Fé, accompanied by the chief officials of the road's operating department, inspected the Arizona and California Railroad yesterday, incidentally conferring with F. H. Newell and L. C. Hill of the Reclamation Service.

The Williams News has changed hands, having been purchased by C. M. Funston of the Flagstaff Sun.

SHOT DOWN A FLUME.

Lumberman Falls Into a Shingle Flume and Shoots Into the Sea 3000 Feet Away.

With a dislocated leg, a twisted ankle, numerous cuts and abrasions and large patches of skin burned off, S. J. Demaresq, a lumberman of Vancouver is thankful that he is alive, after one of the most exciting adventures that a man ever went through and came out alive.

Demaresq was at work at a lumber camp on Hotham Sound when he slipped and fell into a dry shingle flume. Down this, for 3000 feet, he shot at so great a rate that the skin was burned from his body by the friction. From the end of the flume he shot a distance of twenty-five feet into the sea. He managed to keep afloat until he reached some rocks, 150 feet away. He was too weak to clamber upon the rocks, but managed to cling to them until he was rescued by his wife.

His wife was on the island, a quarter of a mile away, and was informed by her frightened children that a man had shot down the flume and was clinging to the rocks and shouting for help. Unaided, the woman launched a heavy boat and put off to the rescue, little dreaming that the imperilled man was her husband. When she reached him her amazement and terror at discovering his identity made her so weak that it was with difficulty she was able to drag him into the boat. Nevertheless, she succeeded in doing so and then managed to get him from the boat to the house. Then she set off to the lumber camp for assistance.

Two camp-mates of the injured man rigged an improvised stretcher in the boat and rowed twenty-five miles through heavy seas until they reached the steamer Kootenay. The injured man was placed on board and brought to the hospital at Vancouver for treatment. The physicians say that he will recover.

King Victor Emmanuel and the Queen of Italy, accompanied by William Marconi, have gone to Coltano to inspect the new station for wireless telegraphic communication with Argentina. This station is exceptionally powerful, having one 600 horse-power dynamo for the purpose of communication with South America and another less powerful for communicating with Mediterranean ports.

GLUED TO BATH-TUB.

Novel and Painful Experience of Man Who Enameled His Own Bath-Tub.

The zinc lining of the bathtub at the County Poor Farm at Portland, Or., became bare of enamel in spots and the other day Superintendent D. D. Jackson sent a man to town to purchase some "white enamel." He received the package of enamel, never thinking that only a special brand is used for bathtubs.

He carefully cleaned the tub and applied a coat of the enamel. It soon dried and left the tub with a snowy interior. Mr. Jackson showed his work to his wife and his mother-in-law, Mrs. Fisher, and modestly received their words of praise.

The next day he desired a bath, and filling the tub with warm water, reclined full length in it. He was tired, and, under the soothing influence of warmth, fell asleep. He awoke with a start, dreaming that an Apache had seized him by the hair and was about to scalp him. To his surprise he could not lift his head.

Then he essayed to move and found that the soles of his feet were glued to the end of the tub and that his limbs were held to the bottom in the same manner. Even his arms were loosened from the side of the tub with difficulty. He managed, after suffering a deal of pain and parting from small patches of cuticle, to extricate his feet, legs and body, but the tub clung tightly to his hair, and he had to howl for help.

In order to get into the bathroom, where her liege lord was held prisoner, Mrs. Jackson had to force a hook off the door. Then she took a pair of scissors and cut the hair which stuck to the paint, after the warm water had softened it. Now Mr. Jackson will have the "enamel" scraped out and the genuine article placed in the tub by an expert.

Picture Post-Cards in Paris.

In Paris alone 1,500,000 picture postcards were delivered daily during the months of July and August. The increase on the daily average between April and July was 500,000, and even with a greatly increased staff there has been much difficulty in sorting and delivering the cards. The average number of picture postcards delivered in Paris daily in the winter is also very high—700,000.

SCHWAB CUTS VISIT SHORT.

Gives Breezy Talk to Scribes But Says Little.

Full of Enthusiasm After His Visit to Mines.

Praises Jonathan Club and Denies Road Rumor.

Charles M. Schwab, one time grocery clerk in Braddock, Pa., and later, the head of the billion-dollar steel trust, spent yesterday in Los Angeles in company with Senator W. A. Clark.

Mr. Schwab has been spending the last few weeks with Senator Clark and a party of eastern friends inspecting some extensive mining properties in Southern Nevada. He came here direct from the wilds of the desert.

With Mr. Schwab and Senator Clark were J. A. Schwab of Loretto, the father of "Charlie;" D. P. Gillis, mining engineer of Tonopah, Dr. W. R. Ward, Mr. Schwab's physician, and a distant relative, W. L. Abbott, a capitalist of Pittsburgh; J. A. Spafford, a manufacturer of woolen goods, and Dr. S. A. Brown of New York, and Oliver Wren of New York.

The party arrived in Los Angeles yesterday morning over the Salt Lake road, and spent the day as guests of friends at the Jonathan Club, except for a short side trip to Pasadena, and a visit to the Ostrich Farm. Last night the party, with the exception of Senator Clark, left in two special cars over the Southern Pacific for San Francisco. Thence they will proceed to New York.

At the age of 45, after having been the leader in some of the most important changes in the industrial world and the center of the whirlwind which followed the downfall of the shipbuilding trust, Mr. Schwab is still a youthful-looking man, with a low voice, a smooth face and a bright eye.

BUBBLING WITH ENTHUSIASM.

His step is light and springy, and his interest in affairs is almost boyish in its enthusiasm. He has reached and passed the apex of industrial preferment in this country and amassed an immense fortune. Still he is the same "Charlie," who added materially to the patronage of A. J. Spigelmire's grocery store in the little town of Braddock twenty years ago, when he received $5 per week and his "keep."

His is just as eager for work now as then. He tells with enthusiasm of the great future of the mining districts of Nevada, and says that he hopes to play a large part in the development of them.

He stated that there was not the slightest ground for belief that he and Senator Clark had planned any sort of a railroad or railroad extension, and then spoke glowingly of the prospects of the Greenwater district, where his principal holdings are.

At the Arcade depot, surrounded by his friends, he talked like a schoolboy to the newspaper men, the while leaning against platform truck half-laden with milk cans.

As he told stories, he kept his back to several enterprising camera men, and chided an artist, who was working like mad, back of a milk can, to get a sketch of him. Then he begged to be shown the sketch when it was finished.

HE'S CAREFUL OF SPEECH.

There seems to be pretense about the man. He simply teems with the energy which in years gone by has been the bane of his rivals.

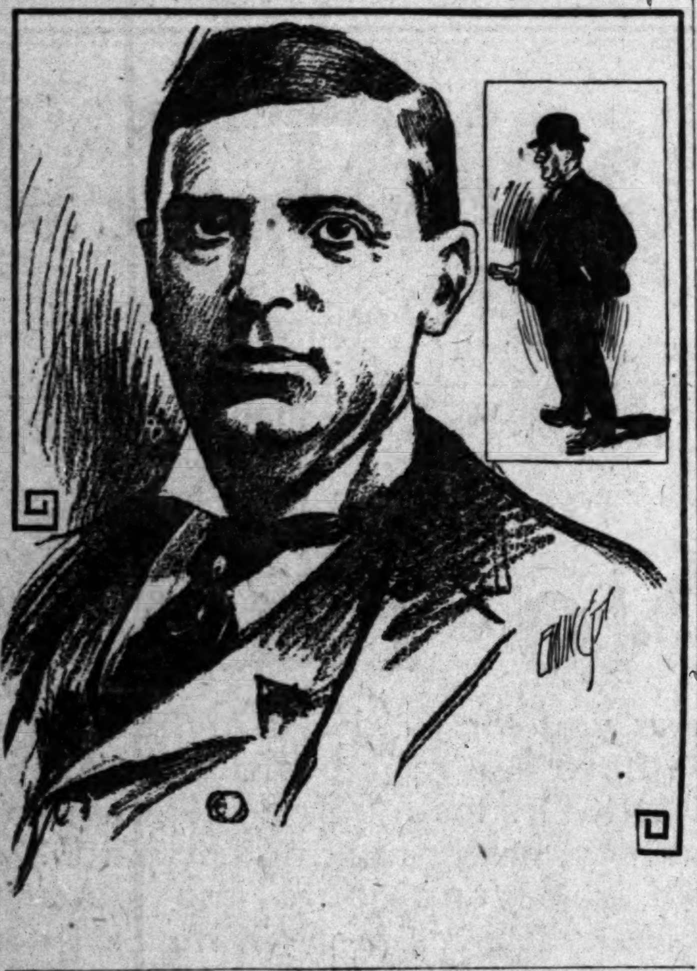
His conversation was light and pleasing. A little of interest escaped from him now and then, but he never gave away any inkling of his real opinion upon any subject. The newspaper men forgot their notes, and "swapped" stories with this jovial young man.

Mr. Schwab took exception to the apathy shown by Los Angeles generally over the gold districts in Nevada. This was about the only one thing of a definite nature that he permited himself to say.

Just before the train started, Mr. Schwab invited the reporters into his private car Loretto. This sumptuous palace upon wheels he took as much pride in as a boy with a new toy.

The engine whistled, and with a hasty good-by, he shook the hand of each of the scribes and, as the train pulled out, waved them a pleasant farewell from the rear platform of his car.

Mr. Schwab always makes the Jonathan Club his headquarters while in this city, and yesterday he said that he considered the club the finest and most hospitable of any that he has ever visited in America. He formally presented his name for membership in the club, and the next time he returns he will probably be enrolled there.



COPPER TRUST RAISES WAGES.

ELEVEN THOUSAND MINERS ARE TO GET MORE PAY.

Order Goes Into Effect November 15 and Will Stand as Long as Electrolytic Copper Sells at 18 Cents Per Pound—Increase Is from $3.50 to $3.75 Per Day; None Less Than $3.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

BUTTE (Mont.) Nov. 10.—All of the large mining corporations of Butte at noon today posted notice at the properties that, beginning November 15, the wages of all underground men would be increased from $3.50 to $3.75 a day. At Anaconda where the works of the Washer smelter are located and at Great Falls where the Boston and Montana smelter is situated, notice was posted that, beginning November 15, all men receiving less than $3 a day will on and after November 15 receive that sum. In each case the notices state that "This notice is made on account of the satisfactory condition of the metal market and it is understood that it will be allowed so long as the price of electrolytic copper remains at 18 cents per pound or over.".

Ten thousand men in Butte alone are affected by the increase and more than 1000 in Anaconda and as many in Great Falls. The increase was made voluntarily. No increase has been requested by the men. John D. Ryan, managing director of the Amalgamated Copper Company, said today his company made the increase at the request of H. H. Rogers.

FT. WORTH SEEKS INDUSTRIES.

FORT WORTH (Tex.) Nov. 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Fort Worth is raising a fund of $20,000 to be expended in bringing new industries to the city and the committee in charge of the work reports very gratifying success, raising over three thousand dollars in the first two hours' soliciting.

STANDARD BUYS SHIPPING STOCK.

BECOMES INTERESTED IN MERCHANT MARINE COMPANY.

New Holdings Are so Large That Oil Syndicate Is Given Representation on Board of Directors by the Election of John Archbold, Who Succeeds Morgan's Agent.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—The Journal of Commerce today says it has been learned from a responsible source that the Standard Oil syndicate has recently acquired a substantial interest in the securities of the International Merchant Marine Company. The interest is so extensive that the Standard Oil people have asked representation on the board of directors of the trust.

In compliance with this request, Thomas W. Jones of the representatives of J. P. Morgan & Co. on the board handed in his resignation early this week, and at a special meeting of the board early yesterday John A. Archbold was elected to fill the vacancy. Archbold is the son of John B. Archbold, vice-president and director of the Standard Oil Company.

INDIAN COMMITTEE MEETS.

Prepares for Tour of Tribes and Investigation of Leases and All Other Matters.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

KANSAS CITY (Mo.) Nov. 10.—The United States Senate Committee on Indian Affairs consisting of Senator C. D. Clark of Wyoming, chairman; Senator Chester I. Long of Kansas, Senator F. B. Brandege of Connecticut, Senator H. M. Teller of Colorado and Senator William A. Clark of Montana will assemble in Kansas City today and Sunday. On Monday morning an official session will be held at the Hotel Baltimore and on Monday afternoon the committee will leave for an extended trip through Indian Territory to hold hearings at Vinita, Muskogee, McAlester, Ardmore, Tulsa and Bartlesville.

At these hearings, which are to be open and public, information will be sought relative to coal lands, asphalt leases, removal of restrictions on Indian lands and other things vital to Indian Territory affairs on which legislation is apt to be had in Congress this winter.

Don't Invest In Mining With Your Eyes Shut

We are making an offering of the third allotment of Heck Gold Mining Company stock at 20c per share, a stock which has never been listed on any exchange in the country and no opportunity has been given manipulators to "bear" nor "bull" the market.

We are simply hammering away on a bonafide mining proposition, which resolves itself into the channel of a good business venture.

This gold property is located in a proven mineral belt; proven beyond adventure, there being nothing suppositional about it.

Surrounding the Heck holdings are developed mines which have produced and can still produce thousands of dollars.

Better than this even—the Heck property itself gives every reasonable indication of becoming a greater producer than many at these neighboring properties, as it is located approximately in the center of this immense gold district.

To the northeast lies the fabulously rich Gold Roads mine, a mine which is showering its golden stream of dividends upon the fortunate holders of its shares. A lucky man stumbled onto its "pay shute" and made possible its chance for enormous wealth.

The Heck has done away with all necessity for this lucky "pay shute stumble." It's on the right lead now, for its

"PAY SHUTE" IS IN SIGHT!

All that is required is to prove its continuity and but few leads in this locality have proven false to the miner's hope.

To the east, and but a short distance, lies the Victor-Virgin, another immense property, with a day and night force working incessantly.

To the south the Iowa is rustling ahead with feverish haste and giving its aid toward making this a land of gold.

To the west, the Leland, with its 40-stamp mill, its huge ore bunkers, and 15 miles of railroad, all calling for an outlay of thousands of dollars, serves to prove the promise of the Heck surroundings.

To the north, the German-American, a property financed and operated by Los Angeles mining men.

PLACED WITHIN THIS CIRCLE OF GOLD, as might a hub be placed within a wheel, lies the modest holdings of the Heck Gold Mining Company. A patch of ground, 120 acres in area; broken, battered and scarred by Nature's mighty force, but holding within its boundaries the possibility of limitless wealth.

Don't ask why we are selling this stock if it's such a good thing. Your butcher would think you peculiar if you asked him why he sold you steak if it was so good, wouldn't he?

He can't eat it all himself and he must sell it to pay his rent.

Neither can the owners of this gold mine furnish all the money necessary to put it on a paying basis; and we'll come back at you in the good old way and ask you if you can place your finger on one lone proposition for which in its prospective state one individual furnished the entire working capital.

LOTS OF BANKS ARE CAPITALIZED AT $1,500,000, or such a matter, and lots of men are possessed of that much money, but do you know of a single bank owned by any one man? And banks are a pretty good investment nowadays, too.

Lots of mining stocks are selling for several dollars per share and paying dividends, which makes them worth it, but they didn't pay dividends from the start, nor were they always worth several dollars per share.

Perhaps you question why you shouldn't buy such stocks instead of a stock with only a prospective value of several dollars.

Well, go to it and buy! But rest assured that not you, but the man who sells has shown himself the sagacious man of business.

He bought in the days of development and now he dances while you may pay! We offer you here a chance to do the dancing.

AND HERE'S ANOTHER POINT—the directorate of the Heck Gold Mining Company is made up of successful business men, men who know what they are doing and why they are doing it, and every "lick" is made to count.

If you were to have your home painted you wouldn't employ a party because of the simple reason that he knew what a paint brush was, would you?

Everybody knows what a piece of ore is, but everybody doesn't know how to tear it from old mother earth, nor how to make it give up its precious values.

BETTER GET IN LINE WITH PEOPLE WHO DO KNOW!

This company might have back of it some party whose name might stand for millions, but it hasn't.

It might have as its superintendent some broadcloth figurehead, but it hasn't.

It might be advertised as having $50,000,000 worth of ore blocked out, but it hasn't.

But it has got as backers sound and substantial business men, who live among you; who have put their own hard cold cash into this proposition and who are determined to win. And that's half the battle.

It has got as superintendent a man of the hills and desert; a weather-beaten, storm-tossed miner with no champagne frills about him, and no flighty theories that cannot be demonstrated by the honest swing of a pick and shovel.

IT HAS GOT AN EXCELLENT SHOWING OF ORE, which can be worked at a profit, but before any mill is erected this ore must be blocked out and made in readiness. This means some expense for labor and material.

This preliminary expense is exactly what we are asking you to come in on, and you are given a chance to make a real profit from a real investment.

Now, sum this opportunity up in a common, sensible way.

HERE'S A GOLD MINE GIVING PROMISE OF DEVELOPING into a tremendously big producer; located in the center of a rich mineral zone and surrounded by proven mines.

At the depth now attained is exposed a gold-bearing vein of ore averaging six (6) feet in width.

Back of it are successful men who believe in its possibilities, and who have invested their money on the strength of that belief, and they haven't acquired to their present position by going into the wrong things.

Today is the day!

You are given the chance to share in this wealth, as it lies imprisoned in its rock-bound vault.

TOMORROW MAY BE TOO LATE.

When it shows before you in glittering grains of gold and serves to the beck of the one who gave it freedom—your chance may be gone!

What's your desire? To ride triumphantly on the crest of prosperity or flounder despairingly in the trough of poverty and want?

It's for you to decide.

If you are interested in making money, and we think perhaps you are, the Heck Gold Mining Comuany would be glad to have your co-operation.

We don't ask you to take our word for any assertion made. Send an expert to the ground, look the property over, learn the history of this district, and then if on your return you can show to us where we have made a mistake of one single word in this article, we will cheerfully hand to you a check covering in full, the expense of the trip. That's fair, isn't it?

Moneta Ave.

Within the past year has been nothing less than marvelous. You are also undoubtedly familiar with the fact that that southwestern section of the city contiguous to this great thoroughfare—Moneta avenue—has grown and is growing faster than any other part of the city.

This leads to the natural conclusion—a fact based upon facts—that investors in lots on or near this street have reaped greater and quicker profits in proportion to the amount invested than those who have bought in any other section. That this growth and development will continue there is no reason to doubt. We had confidence in the future of this ideal home district and bought acreage to such an advantage that we are now enabled to offer you the

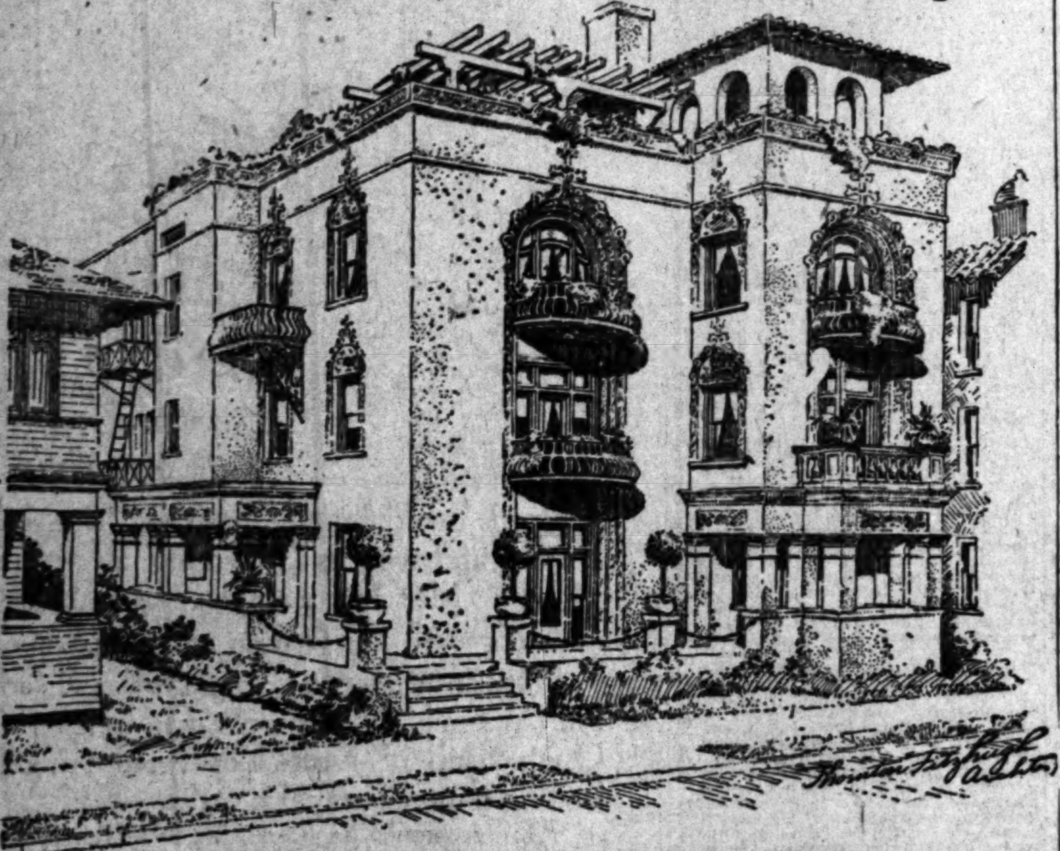
The Most Modern and Artistic Apartment House in Los Angeles



THE MAYFAIR APARTMENTS IN FASHIONABLE ST. JAMES PARK

There will soon be completed and ready for occupancy what will be conceded by every one who sees it, to be the prettiest, most modern and artistic apartment structure in this city, and of which Los Angeles will be justly proud. It will be called the Mayfair Apartments, and the above picture is as they will actually appear when completed, taken from the designs of Architect Thornton Fitzhugh.

The apartments are of the Italian style of architecture, frame expanded metal lath and cement construction. They are intended for Los Angelenos who prefer a high class apartment residence, with the best of hotel accommodations.

The fact that the Mayfair is located in beautiful and fashionable St. James Park is an extraordinary attraction in itself, but in addition, these apartments are complete in every appointment; having suites of from two to seven rooms, steam heated, electric elevator, private telephone; they are all large, spacious rooms with beamed ceilings, polished floors—in fact, everything one can think of and having the most artistic fixtures throughout.

One of the most unique and appreciated appointments is the servants' quarters. On the top floor of the building in the rear are special servants' quarters, with baths, permitting the employment of servants without the necessity of having them live in one's immediate apartments.

The furnishings are the best obtainable, selected for quality and artistic effect. The entire house will be provided with genuine oriental rugs, many of which are antiques and of great value. And the greatest care is being exercised that the color schemes throughout shall be in artistic harmony.

The house will be furnished and operated by Mrs. Virginia H. Macon and her daughter, Miss Addison C. Macon, refined, educated Virginians, who have had years of experience in some of the highest class apartment houses of the East before making Los Angeles their home, and who will spare neither expense nor effort in furnishings and equipment.

The apartments are being leased by the year to permanent Los Angeles residents, and in no sense are they intended for tourists.

McDonald & Stott Company, 312 Lankershim building, acting as agents for the owners, report that the apartments are being rapidly leased, and they have every reason to expect that before January 15th, when the building will be ready for occupancy, every apartment will be under lease for one or more years.

May Los Angeles have more such establishments, which fully illustrate how rapidly we are assuming the proportions of a metropolis. Success to the Mayfair in St. James Park.—[Adv.

FALSEHOODS REFUTED.

Mayor Corning of Concord, N. H., Tells of Interview With Mary Baker G. Eddy—Gen. Streeter Was Present Also—Both Say That Mrs. Eddy Was in Good Health and Fine Spirits— New York Newspaper's Sensationalism Condemned by People Who Know the Facts.

[Published by Authority of Christian Science Publication Committee.]

CONCORD (N. H.) Oct. 28.—The New York World of October 28 covered two pages with a sensational article, absolutely devoid of truth, concerning Mrs. Mary Baker G. Eddy. The publication was received in this city, where its falsity and absurdity were immediately manifest, with indignation, and the following statements in refutation and contradiction of it were given to the press:

"I have known Mrs. Eddy by sight for many years. I have seen her in her carriage many times, and within the last season Mrs. Eddy has passed up Pleasant and down Green street daily, and I know that the sole occupant of the carriage has been Mrs. Eddy. I had never met Mrs. Eddy face to face at her residence at Pleasant View until today.

"Mrs. Eddy received me this afternoon in company with Gen. Frank S. Streeter, who has been an attorney of Mrs. Eddy's for several years.

"As I had heard so much concerning the precarious condition of Mrs. Eddy's health, I feared that there might be some foundation for such reports, but the fact was entirely different. I spoke to Mrs. Eddy and I listened for nearly half an hour to her conversation. She is keen of intellect and strong in memory. She is a surprising illustration of longevity; bright eyes, emphatic expression, and an alertness rarely to be encountered in a person so venerable.

"CHARLES R. CORNING,
"Mayor of Concord, New Hampshire.
"Sunday, October 28, 1906."

"I have been counselor for Mrs. Eddy at various times during the last twelve or fifteen years, and have known her well. I think the last time I saw her at her home before today was in June of last year. I have frequently met her while driving downtown.

"My attention was called to the article in the New York World of this morning and I was asked by my friends to call upon her and be able to speak with reference to her health.

"The charge that Mrs. Eddy has been physically incapacitated and unable to leave her room for all or a considerable part of three years, and that some one, said to be Mrs. Leonard, was impersonating Mrs. Eddy in her carriage was already from personal observation known by me to be false.

"Mayor Charles R. Corning drove out with me to Pleasant View about 4 o'clock this afternoon. I sent a note to Mrs. Eddy that we be permitted to call on her, and the request was almost immediately granted. She arose and most cordially greeted the Mayor and myself, exhibiting no appearance of weariness, but a physical activity not ordinarily to be found in persons many years younger. The conversation covered a variety of subjects. She spoke briefly without bitterness of the false statements being circulated with reference to her health, and even death, and said that she was in the hands of an infinite God, in whom she had perfect trust, and that He would care for her.

"References were made to business transactions some time ago, about which her memory was exact and accurate. She referred to many details of her daily work and her correspondence and study. She also inquired for a personal friend to whom she had recently sent a valuable present and expressed her warm affection. After a very interesting half hour's talk with Mrs. Eddy we returned.

"I can emphatically say that Mrs. Eddy, in spite of her advanced years, is a remarkably well-preserved woman. Her health and appearance is substantially the same as when I last talked with her, some over a year ago. Her mind is not only unimpaired, but she exhibits the same clearness, strength, alertness and vigor which have so long distinguished her.

"FRANK S. STREETER.
"Concord, N. H., Sunday, Oct. 28, 1906."

PLEASANT VIEW, CONCORD (N. H.) Oct. 29, 1906.—The sensational report published in the New York World of Sunday, October 28, 1906, to the effect that Mrs. Eddy is physically and mentally incapacitated, that "for many months she has not left her room," that she does not drive daily, and that she is impersonated in her carriage by Mrs. Pamelia J. Leonard, or by anybody else, is unqualifiedly false.

My position in Mrs. Eddy's household is simply that of a paid employé. She conducts her own affairs, financial and otherwise, today as she always has, and the statement that Mrs. Eddy is dominated or controlled by any sort of a "cabinet" or combination is positively false—absurdly so to any one who is acquainted with Mrs. Eddy's extraordinary ability as an executive.

Mrs. Eddy, as she herself wrote to the Boston Herald on October 19, 1906, is in her usual good health. She is not slowly dying from cancer, nor has she a cancer or any chronic or organic or functional disease. She has never been visited by a cancer specialist, nor do I or anybody else provide "old school surgeons and physicians, dentists and the entire range of pharmacopoeia" for attendance upon Mrs. Eddy, as is stated by the World.

Had the reporters of the World really desired to learn whether Mrs. Leonard impersonated Mrs. Eddy on Mrs. Eddy's drive, it would have been a very simple matter for these reporters to have called at Pleasant View while Mrs. Eddy was driving and asked for Mrs. Leonard. Had they taken this ready way of verification, they would have had no trouble in seeing Mrs. Leonard herself and talking with her.

When the reporters of the New York World called to see Mrs. Eddy personally, what they spoke of as "stimulants" was not in the room at all. There was no galvanic battery nor any stimulants or medicines in the room or in the house. There was simply a small table on which was a silver ice pitcher, a silver mug and a small finger bowl that Mrs. Eddy uses. There was a wood box in the room, but nothing else except Mrs. Eddy's own literary material, books and papers. Mrs. Eddy has never to my knowledge, while I have lived with her, used stimulants of any kind, nor to my knowledge have there ever been any in the house. My service covers a period of twenty-four continuous years.

CALVIN A. FRYE.
October 29, 1906.

State of New Hampshire, Merrimack ss.

Personally appeared before me Calvin A. Frye, who, being duly sworn, deposes and says that the above statement made and signed by him is true.

JOHN E. FERNALD,
Notary public.

I came to Pleasant View on the 29th of January, 1906, and since the middle of March, 1906, one of my duties has been to hand Mrs. Eddy into her carriage daily and adjust the carriage robes about her. Since the middle of March she has not failed but one day personally to go on her drive. She did not go one day on account of the roads breaking up in the early spring.

I have been in the house with Mrs. Leonard day after day while Mrs. Eddy was on her drive, and know that Mrs. Leonard has never in any way, shape or manner impersonated nor attempted to impersonate Mrs. Eddy.

While I have been at Pleasant View, neither Mrs. Eddy nor any one in the house has used any form of stimulant or remedies of a materia medica nature. There is no galvanic battery in Mrs. Eddy's room, in the house or about the premises nor has there ever been while I have been here. Mrs. Eddy herself has never used stimulants while I have been here, and she has never used any sort of an electric battery.

There is no truth in any claim that physicians have been in attendance here or that any specialist of any sort has been called from Boson or elsewhere. Mrs. Eddy is in unusual good health for a woman of her years. She has, as far as my knowledge is concerned (and I have seen her daily, almost hourly during the daytime while I have been at Pleasant View,) no chronic, organic nor functional disease of any sort. Mrs. Eddy is active, about the house more or less daily, goes up and down stairs at least once a day when she goes to her drive and generally more—usually twice a day. She usually goes downstairs in the afternoon.

I was present at the interview with the New York World reporters, Messrs. Slaght and Lithchild and Prof. Kent. Prof. Kent stood between Mrs. Eddy and myself, so that it would have been impossible for me to have reached my arm about Mrs. Eddy to support her as alleged by the article in the New York World.

LEWIS C. STRANG.

State of New Hampshire, Merrimack, ss:

Personally appeared before me Lewis C. Strang who being duly sworn deposes and says that the above statement made and signed by him is true.

JOSIAH E. FERNALD.
Notary Public.

I have been in the home of Mrs. Eddy off and on for the last eight years. Since the 19th day of February, 1906, when last I came to Mrs. Eddy's house, I have not been out of sight of it. I have access to all parts of the house, and go about it, and know absolutely that there are no stimulants anywhere in the house.

The statement that I have impersonated Mrs. Eddy and ridden in her carriage in her place is entirely false, for I have never stepped inside of her carriage and have never even looked inside of it.

"There has not been in Mrs. Eddy's room, nor anywhere in the house, and is not now any sort of galvanic battery.

At the time Mr. Hennessey claimed to identify me as being downtown, I was at home at Pleasant View. Had he taken the pains to have come out here to Pleasant View, I would have gladly seen him.

I deny most emphatically that Mrs. Eddy has any such disease as cancer or that she has any other disease. As I am and have been in daily contact with Mrs. Eddy, seeing her many times each day, I am in a position to know as to what I am stating. And she has not palsy of the hand. The story that a physician from Boston is attending her is without foundation, as there is no physician from anywhere attending Mrs. Eddy, nor has there been while I have been in her home.

MRS. PAMELIA J. LEONARD.

State of New Hampshire, Merrimack, ss:

October 29, 1906.

Personally appeared before me Mrs. Pamelia J. Leonard who being duly sworn deposes and says that the above statement made and signed by her is true.

JOSIAH E. FERNALD.
Notary Public.

"Concord, N. H., Oct. 28, 1906.

"This is to certify that Mrs. Eddy stopped at my residence, 91 North State street, this city, shortly after 1 o'clock today and I had several minutes' conversation with her. The carriage door was open and she shook hands with me cordially. I have known Mrs. Eddy for a number of years and know that she is the same person with whom I spoke today. She was very evidently in excellent health and strength. I have also known Mrs. Pamelia J. Leonard of Brooklyn for a number of years and although I have seen Mrs. Eddy's carriage on State street almost daily I have never seen Mrs. Leonard occupy it. The occupant has always been Mrs. Eddy herself.

"HERMANN S. HERING."

"Having seen and talked to Mrs. Mary Baker G. Eddy today, I am prepared to label as false the sensational reports in today's New York World concerning Mrs. Eddy's state of health.

"I found that Mrs. Eddy was the same active, healthy and mentally alert woman she has always been reported. She moves about with perfect freedom and no sign of suffering or physical disability.

"I was present today when she received and conversed with Mayor Charles R. Corning and Gen. Frank S. Streeter, the latter having known Mrs. Eddy throughout the past fifteen years. Gen. Streeter and Mayor Corning expressed themselves much impressed with the activity and apparent health of Mrs. Eddy.

"While in Mrs. Eddy's home I made inquiry as to the basis of the report that a galvanic battery was in evidence and was used to prepare her for the ordeal of meeeting her inquisitors. I was shown a silver water pitcher which stood on a side table with a goblet and a silver bowl for waste water. Outside of these articles the room is occupied by ordinary furniture and with nothing to indicate a galvanic battery. I was assured that the room was precisely as it had been during the visit of the World reporters and that the water pitcher and other silver pieces which go with it furnished the only foundation upon which to establish the canard.

"This instance, I learn, is illustrative of the grounds for all the other allegations respecting Mrs. Eddy's health, wealth and income.

"As the Christian Science Committee on Publication for the State of New York desire particularly that the facts be presented to the people of New York State. I have gained the truth regarding these questions first hand, and my investigation here in Concord and Mrs. Eddy's home has revealed a state of affairs which leaves nothing upon which the World story can stand.

"Every Mayor of Concord back as far as 1897 has been interviewed today and each has prositively denied ever having acted 'as unofficial treasurer' or having received money or jewels alleged to have been left with them for Mrs. Eddy. The story that Mrs. Eddy received money from those who have visited Concord in years past is without foundation.

"H. CORNELL WILSON,"
Concord, N. H., Oct. 28, 1906.

"I have met and talked with Mrs. Eddy more than once. I know her, she knows me; have been in her home, in her private room, within a few months and discussed with her many things; I have bowed to her in her carriage within forty-eight hours and my salutation has been returned by her.

"If the intent of the World's representative to Concord be carried out in its columns, the World will say in substance that Mrs. Eddy is dead and that a mummy or a substitute and not she is in the carriage each day when it passes through the main streets of our city and its occupant is greeted by our people, or it will say that Mrs. Eddy is enfeebled and decrepit and that those brilliant faculties that in the past made her wonderful accomplishments possible have departed.

"To every such a statement or even insinuation, I as one who knows,say, 'It is not true in whole or in part, but on the contrary, is unqualifiedly false.

"M. MEEHAN,
"Editor Daily Patriot."

"In reference to conversation had with me last evening in regard to statements made to me October 13 by two representatives of the New York World, will say that they stated that they were representatives from the New York Herald, and hearing persistent reports that Mrs. Eddy was dead, and had long been so, they had come to Boston to ascertain whether they could find any one who could state with certainty that Mrs. Eddie was alive; that they had visited every town and hamlet between Boston and Concord, and could not find any one who had ever seen Mrs. Eddy; that they had been unable to find man, woman or child in Concord who had ever seen Mrs. Eddy to know her, except as I personally stated to them, that I had an interview with her in the early part of the summer; that they understood, if Mrs. Eddy were alive, she was so enfeebled and helpless that she was unfit to have any control over her affairs; I made reply to this statement, that if they ever had the honor of meeting Mrs. Eddy, they would at once ascertain that these statements were false; they also stated that they had seen papers showing assignments of all of Mrs. Eddy's property to Calvin A. Frye, her secretary. They said they did not find any one in Concord who believed that Mrs. Eddy was alive. They said that if they did not have an interview with her that they should feel at liberty to print such information as they had received.

"Of course, I denied all of these statements, and said that they were false, and also stated that my mother had played with Mrs. Eddy as a child and had been associated with her and had been near her for more than forty years, but they were determined not to believe any reasonable statements.

"Perhaps it would be well to state that I am not a member of a Christian Science church, but feel it my duty to contradict such false rumors. I have had the honor of being in the presence of Mrs. Eddy several times a year, and most emphatically say that she is in every way capable of conducting her business affairs."

"FRED N. LADD,
"Treasurer Loan and Trust Savings Bank."

"I am informed there is a report in circulation, coming from persons outside of Concord, that the person whom I meet every few days driving and to whom I am always pleased to bow, is not the Rev. Mary Baker Eddy, but some other person.

"Now, I have known Mrs. Eddy for a number of years, and have had business relations with her since she came to Concord, and made her home at Pleasant View, which relations extend up to the present time. I have also visited her in her home, so that I can state from personal knowledge that it is Mrs. Eddy, and no other person, whom I see riding in her carriage. I will also state that she stands high in this community. I do not find those who speak evil of her in this, her home city, and believe those who come here with evil reports come with malicious intentions.

"I am not a follower of the Christian Science faith, but make this statement as a citizen of Concord who wishes to see things that are true, the things that are honest and the things that are just, prevail.

"J. E. FERNALD,
"President National State Capital Bank."

"In the interview with the two gentlemen from the New York World who called on me Saturday, October 13, the statement was made by them that it was reported Mrs. Eddy gave $100,000 for the church in Concord, but that she never gave a dollar toward it. My reply was that they were very much mistaken, as Mr. Josiah E. Dwight, Fred N. Ladd and myself were trustees of that fund and we held the securities, which were given by Mrs. Eddy, in our hands and sold them as the money was needed for the work on the church.

"J. WESLEY PLUMMER,
"Deputy State Treasurer.

"I have had the pleasure of knowing Mrs. Eddy for more than ten years, and I have had frequent occasion to correspond with her and to meet her with reference to matters of public importance in this community. These relations with her still continue, and within a very short time I have received from her long letters written from beginning to end in her own handwriting, which from long acquaintance is perfectly familiar to me, and that she is indubitably alive, both physically and mentally, is well attested by these communications.

"Moreover, I see Mrs. Eddy driving in her carriage through the streets almost every day, and I have within a very few days met her carriage and spoken to her as she drove past. That the occupant of the carriage was Mrs. Eddy in propria persona is accurate testimony which I am very glad to give, and had any of the newspaper representatives to whom you allude taken the trouble to call upon me during their stay in Concord I would freely have told them as I now write you.

"While it would be futile to assert that Mrs. Eddy is wholly without critics or opponents in Concord, it is entirely within the bounds of accuracy to say that by the vast majority of all our people, and most emphatically by those who by their position in the community are most entitled to represent that intangible spirit which we call public opinion, she is regarded easily as our foremost citizen. Her numerous good works, her constant and consistent charities here, her keen interest in all that makes for the betterment of the community, and her blameless, laborious and useful life among us, all contribute to make her beloved and respected by the people of Concord, and we all hope that she may live long in her present full possession of physical, mental and spiritual power to continue her good work among us.

"GEORGE H. MOSES,
"Editor Evening Monitor."

The foregoing statements are freely made in refutation of the allegations of the Sunday World's article, which asserts that Mrs. Eddy is near to death from cancer; that for more than three years she has been unable to leave her home; that she is impersonated in her carriage by a Mrs. Leonard, her companion; that she cannot manage her business affairs; that she has transferred her property to others; and that her gifts and charities are mythical.

It will be noted that the statements made by Concord people in refutation of these assertions are not from Christian Scientists, but from Congregationalists, Unitarians, Universalists and Baptists; and from persons who, by reason of their opportunities to know what takes place in Concord may be relied upon to state facts.

The gist of the World's sensation, however, is summed up in the assertion that Mrs. Eddy is physically broken down and that it is not she but Mrs. Leonard who drives in the Pleasant View carriage through Concord's streets every day. This ought to be easily susceptible of proof if it is true Mrs. Leonard is readily accessible at Pleasant View and it would be an easy matter for anybody to call there any day when the carriage is making its round, to ask for Mrs. Leonard and thus to ascertain whether she was impersonating Mrs. Eddy during the daily drive.

This simple test, however, the World omitted to make.

It was made today, however, and at the time when Mrs. Eddy, in her carriage on Main street, was being seen by hundreds, Mrs. Leonard received callers at Pleasant View.

CONCORD MONITOR EDITORIAL.

The following is a personal statement by the editor of the Concord (N. H.) Monitor:

The editor of this paper has enjoyed the privilege of Mrs. Eddy's friendship for more than ten years. During that time he has met her frequently and has corresponded with her almost continuously. Her conversation and her letters—numbering hundreds and written almost entirely with her own pen—are pulsating with but one desire, the desire to do good, to do good to individuals, to communities, and to the human race. Within a very short time the editor of this paper has seen Mrs. Eddy and with her taken counsel upon public affairs in Concord. She was then in a strength of spirit, mind and body far beyond what anyone would have a right to expect from a woman of her age. Her words were direct and simple, her discernment acute and sympathetic, her manner cordial and unaffected. Since then the writer has met her carriage almost daily upon our streets and its distinguished occupant has never failed to return a smiling greeting of recognition. This has happened within four days, when, in a narrow street where recognition was certain, we met the real Mrs. Eddy, the Mrs. Eddy we have known for years, almost face to face. We knew her and we were known by her.

We are moved to believe that testimony of this sort, which arises spontaneously on every hand in Concord, is more enduring and worthy than that of any newspaper "investigators," whose work shows only too clearly that they trust to their own or to somebody else's imagination for their facts. Concord people may buy the New York World, but they do not believe what it says. When any one tells Concord that Mrs. Eddv is not one of our busiest, most helpful and most beloved and respected citizens, in full possession of her illustrious faculties of mind and in bodily strength beyond what her years warrant, Concord has a prompt and impregnable answer:

We all know better!

The foregoing statements are reprinted from the Concord, N. H. Monitor of October 29th.

MOUNTAIN SUNK INTO THE SEA.

STUPENDOUS CHANGES IN THE JAVA UPHEAVAL.

Mountain Disappears in One Place and One Appears Where None Was Before—Elephants, Leopards and Snakes Were Roasted and Boiled Alive and Washed Away.

Earthquakes and volcanoes are becoming the fad in fashionable scientific circles. It is a good thing to have a variety of earthquakes. Anyone who has been amid the terrors of a genuine upheaval of the earth's crust will never forget it. All the fine spun theories of theological hair-splitters and fake experimenters who dabble with what they call science become rubbish in the presence of the stupendous facts which the earthquakes and volcanoes thunder forth.

In view of what has recently happened in San Francisco and Chili one can more sincerely appreciate the terrors of that awful display of the earth's power when its crusts are broken upward, as was recorded during the great disasters in Java.

It will be remembered at the time of the outbreak in the Straits of Sunda that a spectator standing on a high eminence nearly twenty miles away saw the mountains burst into smoke and steam. When the vapors blew away he looked again and saw the sea sweeping over the place where the mountains had been.

Observing more closely he saw a mountain standing where the sea had swept but a few hours before. A traveler just from Java brings some striking pictures of the many craters and cones dotting the landscape around the mighty volcano of Smeroe.

From these eruptions streaming from the central volcano came rivers of mud and boiling waters. In neighboring outbreaks great forests were upheaved and mountains made.

Serpents, tigers, leopards, elephants and other animals that were roaming the jungle when the earthquake came were seen hours later rolling down the cañons of those mountains, floating in torrents of boiling hot water and roasted alive. Immense pythons and other monstrous serpents from fifty to 100 feet long were among the sights. In some places the skins of leopards and tigers as well as of the serpents were all that could be found except the skeletons within. The flesh had been boiled and washed away.

The inhabitants of Valparaiso and Santiago, if they were old enough, might remember what took place ages ago when the Andes were flung aloft from the great level wilderness of the Amazon, with thousands of wild animals and serpents hurled down the mountain sides in floods of boiling water spouted from volcano geysers.

Not Transferable.

Six-year-old Tommy was sent by his sister to the grocery to buy a pound of lump sugar. He played on his way to the store and by the time he arrived there he had forgotten what kind of sugar he was sent for. So he took a pound of the granulated article and was sent back to exchange it.

"Tommy," said the grocer, as he made the exchange, "I hear you have a new member in your family."

"Yes, sir," replied Tommy, "I've got a little brother."

"Well, how do you like that?"

"Don't like it at all,' said Tommy; "rather had a little sister."

"Then why don't you change him?"

"Well, we would if he could; but I don't suppose we can. You see, we've used him four days."—[Harper's Magazine.

The

Mac Intyre Advertising Service

but then, it makes good

There is this difference between the Mac Intyre Advertising Service and what is known as "ad writing."

The Mac Intyre Service combines management and directing with the writing and preparation of copy.

This institution is recognized as an advertising agency by the American Newspaper Publishers' Association and the Quoin Club of New York City (representing forty of the leading national magazines.)

This recognition implies among other things that after thorough investi-gation, the advertising agency is deemed.

1st.—Competent to plan and manage advertising in a manner that shal promote the best interests of both client and publisher.

2nd.—Financially able to meet all obligations.

The Mac Intyre Advertising Co. has grown continuously, year by year, till today it occupies a position as the great advertising agency of the Southwest.

Look through the pages of the Times this morning and critically examine—

--The full page advertisement of Beverly Hills
--The half page advertisement of David Barry & Co.
--The full page advertisement of J. M. Hale Co.
--The half page advertisement of Jacoby Bros.
--The full page advertisement of E. J. Brent
--The advertisement for Monrovia

The four Silverwood stores use Mac Intyre's advertising—so does Ja Smith & Co., Innes Shoe Co., Bennett Toilet Parlors, W. A. Johnst Co., and twenty other Los Angeles concerns.

These advertisements are examples of studied salesmanship, not statements and claims, but arguments created word by word with a v reaching into human nature and compelling attention, inspiring enthu and finally—clinching things—turning commodities into money.

In this office advertising is a live art. Artists and writers vie with each o striving for newer and better creations.

Plans are formulated, not according to somebody's opinion, but according rate information which has been gathered in spending half a million dollars newspapers of Los Angeles.

The man who formulates campaigns is not a theorist, but himself a busin —successful.

The Mac Intyre Advertising service is distinctly designed to meet the needs larger advertiser. While the cost of this service is, of course, very small in son with the total amounts that large advertisers spend, yet the cost does not small advertiser to engage the service.

It takes as much time to draw pictures of a peanut stand—as much thou describe it—as it does to render the same service to a large mercantile concern, estate tract or a new food product.

The Mac Intyre Advertising Service provides genius and judgment—the bined thought of successful experts—and what is really the most signific MAKES GOOD.

So that's why it costs a little more than others—that's why it is used by larger concerns.

The Bonnie Clare Bullfrog Mining and Milling Company

W. R. McConnell, Sec'y.,
Cuprite Goldfield Mining Co.,
Los Angeles.

Dear Sir:—

I wish emphatically to state that before accepting the position as Consulting Engineer for the Cuprite Goldfield Mining Company, and before becoming interested and serving as a Director and Vice-President of said Company, I investigated the properties owned by said corporation.

The properties are located in the Cuprite Mining District, twelve miles south of the town of Goldfield on the line of the Goldfield and Bullfrog railroad. Good discoveries have been made in this district and a great deal of work is now being done in and adjoining said properties owned by the Cuprite Goldfield Mining Company.

There are several ledges on the New York Claims, 1, [illegible] and a working shaft has been sunk on the property to a depth of 60 feet, which has exposed an ore chute four feet in width. However, in my said investigation I discovered a more suitable place on said property to perform the future development work, and will proceed and have same done at that point. Said point is located on the New York Claim No. 3, where there are several ledges coming together.

The country rocks are Rhyolite and Andesite, the same as the general mineral bearing ledges of Goldfield-Bullfrog, and other known camps in said locality.

I wish further to state that in my capacity as consulting Engineer, and to the best of my ability, I shall endeavor to apply the best and most practical methods that call for skill, technical ability, knowledge and good judgment, to make the Cuprite Goldfield Mining Company's properties take their rank among the great producing mines in the Goldfield-Tonopah District.

Thanking you for the confidence reposed, I am,
Yours very truly,

Fred H. Vahrenkamp

CAPITALIZATION

The Company is capitalized for $1,000,000 shares. Par value One Dollar per share. Treasury stock 400,000 shares. Stock fully paid and non-assessable.

McConnell & Joiner

Presenting the stock of the Culprite-Goldfield Mining Co.

HOLDINGS

Properties of the Company consist of five claims (100 acres) located in the heart of the mineralized zone of Southern Nevada. Geographically this group of claims is situated in Esmeralda County, State of Nevada, 12 miles south of Goldfield, in the famous Cuprite District, on the line of Goldfield-Bull Frog railway, which has lately been completed and is now operating trains within one mile of our properties.

Our properties consist of what is known as the "New York" group, viz: New York No. 1, No. 2, No. 3, No. 4, and No. 5. That we have one of the most valuable properties in the State of Nevada is the opinion of some of the best mining experts, and all others who have seen our properties. We have assays taken from surface showing gold values running from 40c to $280 per ton. We also have copper assays showing the high per centage, 30.4 per cent. These claims lie end on end and the outcropping or ledge shows the entire length of property. On Claim No. 5 we have sunk a vertical shaft 60 feet in depth and have four (4) foot vein of ore in this shaft, which shows average gold value of over one hundred ($100) dollars per ton.

There is no need of further comment on the Cuprite District, it is too well known. Several companies are working on a large scale in the district, among them are such as: Phelps-Dodge people, O. P. Posey & Co., Cuprite Copper Company, and several other well known mining men. We can state emphatically that our claims have the best surface showing in the entire district. The veins as sampled and cropping on surface vary from 2 to 8 feet in width. Our properties being so very near to railroad, gives us big advantages for shipping our ore. We intend pushing active development on these properties at once.

WE DO NOT OFFER A VENTURESOME SPECULATION, TEMPTING ON ACCOUNT OF LARGE ORE RESERVES, BUT A STRICTLY LEGITIMATE BUSINESS PROPOSITION WHICH WILL STAND THE X-RAY OF CRUCIAL INVESTIGATION AND WILL APPEAL TO BUSINESS JUDGMENT OF INTELLIGENT AND CAREFUL INVESTORS.

One of America's leading mining operators has stated that $1,000,000 expended daily under competent practical mining experts to develop minerals of Southern Nevada, would return $10,000,000 to investors.

We have the competent, practical, honest, up-to-date men connected with our enterprise that assures it success.

The real mining operators seldom make failures. They have learned that there are two essentials to success in mining.

First—To be sure that conditions for mine exist.

Second—To conduct development according to proper mining methods. We have these essentials.

OFFICERS AND DIRECTORS

A. W. FORRESTER, President.

Mr. Forrester is well and favorably known in Los Angeles. He is Secretary of E. A. Forrester & Sons (Inc.,) Real Estate, located in Douglass Building, Los Angeles. He is also Vice-President of the Bonnie Clare Bull Frog Mining & Milling Co. Bonnie Clare is one of the biggest mining properties in Nevada. Mr. Forrester is also Vice-President of the American Milling & Water Co., Goldfield, Nevada. He has had years of experience in the mining business and his name connected with enterprises of this kind is guarantee of good faith.

FRED H. VAHRENKAMP, Vice-President.

Mr. Vahrenkamp is recognized to be without a peer as a practical mining engineer. He has been connected with the De La Mars, Butters and the Frieds as Consulting Engineer and in charge of their properties. He will have entire charge of our development.

Los Angeles, Cal. Nov. 7, 1906.

Mr. W. R. McConnell, Sec'y.,
Cuprite Goldfield Mining Co.,
Los Angeles.

Dear Sir:—

It is a pleasant task for me to indorse Mr. Fred H. Vahrenkamp, who is acting as engineer for your properties at Cuprite.

Mr. Vahrenkamp, I consider one of the most able and conscientious mining engineers it has been my fortune to come in contact with, and it is due to his good management as engineer and superintendent that the Bonnie Clare Bullfrog Mining & Milling Co. is today preparing to handle their large bodies of ore through the plant that is now being erected under his supervision. He has had many years of experience and has qualified to the satisfaction of some of the largest operators and the United States Government, and you certainly have been fortunate in identifying yourselves with a live wire free from flaws.

I also at this time take the opportunity of congratulating you upon securing properties that have the merit yours possess in a district where large veins exist and from your assays values are known together, with the continuity of the ore bodies, judicious and conscientious development work seem to be the only lacking feature and under such management, such is assured.

Very respectfully yours,

E. A. Forrester

IN SHIPPING ORE

IS THE

Goldfield Silver Pick Leasing Syndicate,
Operating in the Great "Silver Pick"
Property, the Second Mohawk

Last March we sold our customers "Mohawk" mining stock at 50 cents per share. Now this stock is selling on the Stock Exchanges around $19 per share, yielding to those of our customers who held their stock a gain of $18.50 per share, or the enormous profit of 3700 per cent in eight months. The "Mohawk" property is being worked by leasers who are taking out gold at the rate of $500,000 per week. It is estimated that for the last two months of this year the output of the "Mohawk" will be $6,000,000.00—the record production of AMERICAN MINES.

Our latest telegraphic advices from Goldfield read: "The shaft of the Goldfield Silver Pick Leasing Syndicate is nearing the 150 ft. level, at which point will be commenced cross-cutting and drifting to explore the big ledge stuck at the 80 foot level. At 142 feet a new ledge has been encountered and if present showings indicate its value, ore shipments will begin within thirty days. Goldfield Silver Pick Leasing Syndicate at 50 cents is absolutely the best buy in Goldfield."

Last July our customers bought "Francis-Mohawk" mining stock at 20 cents per share. This stock is now salable around 90 cents per share, has paid one dividend of 5 cents per share, or 25 per cent. on the price our customers bought at, and will pay another on Nov. 15th of 10 cents per share, or 50 per cent. on that price, thus yielding to those who shall have held their stock until Thursday, Nov. 15, a gain of 85 cents per share, or the phenomenal profit of 425 per cent. in four months, considerably over 100 per cent. per month. The "Francis-Mohawk" is working a lease on the "Mohawk" property.

With actual ore shipments, if not before, the sale of treasury stock will be immediately stopped and its price will soar swiftly skyward

PALACE APARTMENTS.

The Palace Apartment building is to be erected at the northwest corner of Figueroa and Ninth streets and the building site is 118 feet on Figueroa by 120 feet on Ninth street. The building will be six stories in height above the basement, and absolutely fireproof.

The ground floor will contain office, lobby and reception parlor and the remainder of the ground floor is to be occupied by what is known as the Palace Department Store, which is to make a specialty of high class ladies' dress goods and furnishings and is to be conducted by a syndicate of eastern parties who are among the largest importers and exporters in this line. The other five floors are to be divided into 190 suites and baths and to be known as the Palace Apartments, with sun parlor, billiard rooms, roof garden and sociable quarters.

The construction of this building will be reinforced concrete, as it is the intention of the builders to make it absolutely fireproof and the best that brains and money can produce. The building will contain several novel and highly commendable features. The arrangement of the apartments is absolutely perfect and only obtainable after long experience with the requirements of the modern apartment building. The rooms are to be large, airy and light. The plumbing, heating, fixtures and decorations will be in keeping with the high class character and location of this building. This building, when completed, will be one of the finest of its kind in the West.

The site which this building is to occupy was purchased some years ago by Mrs. Caroline E. Ricketts for the sum of $9000 and it has required considerable time and patience to acquire this site. Mrs. Caroline E. Ricketts has sold to George H. Rector and others through the firm of A. T. Jergins & Co., the above described corner with lot 56x135 feet facing on Ninth street and improved with a modern flat building of two six-room and four seven-room flats for the consideration of $100,000, and the same syndicate has sold to M. E. Johnson and others through the firm of A. T. Jergins & Co., the lot 56x135 feet, facing on Ninth street, and improved with above described flat building, for the consideration of $25,000, leaving the site upon which the above described building is to occupy, costing this syndicate $75,000.

REAL ESTATE NOTES.

The Southern California Real Estate Investment Company have started quite a unique feature in the way of a closer alliance between agents connected with their company, by giving a banquet each month, at which time all matters pertaining to agency work and other points are brought up and discussed. This week marked the initiative spread, which was given at Levy's Café. W. L. Sly is president, G. A. Collins vice-president and R. L. Holladay secretary and treasurer.

The H. H. McCord Company reports the sale during the week of forty-eight lots in Searchlight, Nev., for $10,200. A number of local investors in the new mining camp visited there this week, and a party composed of B. F. Crews, J. A. Crandall, H. M. Best and M. J. Esberger spent two days in looking over the mines and real estate. Over 200 applications have already been made for electric light and power from the new lighting plant owned by Carl Leonardt of this city. Thirty entries are said to have been made under the homestead act in Peaceful Valley, which adjoins Searchlight on the west, and a movement is now under foot to send a drilling outfit there to make tests of the underground water supply. H. M. Benson, formerly of this city, is now conducting an experimental farm in the valley and is said to have met with success in raising the hardier grains and melons.

The Angelus Realty Company has sold in Florentica Park a lot to O. K. White for Nellie Harris, $600; to H. A. Miller, lot for W. F. Roney, $600; to Byron H. Cook, lot, $850.

The first house to be built on the McCarthy Company's new Florence-avenue Heights tract has been commenced on Monroe street near Vermont avenue, by W. A. Hicks. The plan shows a handsome two-story modern seven-room house of the semi-bungalow type, and is expected to be finished and ready for occupancy by the first of January.

ARBUCKLES' ARIOSA COFFEE
THEY DRANK A DEEP AND OFTEN, AND MADE THEM GREAT

"Our food was good—Bear steak, flapjacks, fresh bread, etc., but nothing seemed to warm and strengthen us as much as a cup of ARIOSA Coffee, which we kept in the original package and ground as needed." From a gentleman now in Bethlehem.

Arbuckles' ARIOSA was the first roasted packaged coffee,—packaged for the consumer's protection and the pores of each berry sealed after the roasting with fresh eggs and sugar to keep the goodness in and make the coffee settle clear and quickly.

Talk about "roasted fresh daily," the way to get a cup of coffee that tastes like coffee, with all the delicious flavor and aroma intact, is to buy Arbuckles' ARIOSA and grind it as you want to use it. Warming it a little develops the flavor and makes the grinding easy. coffee after being ground
